—Help us add 25 new subscribers to our CHRISTIAN SUN list this week. This is easy if friends will help. That was about the number added last week.

—The State Sunday-school Convention of Delaware, met last week with the Christian church, Dover, and the papers report a very largely attended and successful session.

—Rev. Warren H. Denison, D. D., Norfolk, has been appointed a member of the Commission on Foreign Missions of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America. THE SUN's editor has been appointed to the membership on the Commission on Home Missions.

—Greensboro is in the enjoyment of a great religious awakening. All churches and the leading business men of the city are entering into the work of winning souls to Christ. Letters and special invitations are sent out to pastors and laymen over the State, and delegations pour into Greensboro from the various sections. Rev. Dr. Biederwolf is leading the services and is assisted by the National Male Quartette.

—We are reprinting the following from a Dover, Delaware, paper for no earthly reason other than just the pleasure of having to read it again in the proofs, and incidentally to pass it along to our piscatorial friend, Dr. W. W. Staley: "The fishermen along the Delaware Bayshore are catching more trout than they can sell. At Bowers' Beach, the fishermen are selling their trout to city buyers for fifty cents a bushel."

—Rev. R. F. Brown, one of our promising ministers from Alabama, now in Elon College, puts our New Publishing House and THE CHRISTIAN SUN under renewed obligations for securing, recently, renewals and new subscribers, and orders for Bibles from our House for his people. This is the substantial way for the brother pastors to show their appreciation for the improved CHRISTIAN SUN and the great work our Publishing House is doing.

—The face of our good friend W. S. Beamon looked out, fine, fresh and handsome, from a page of the Norfolk Virginian-Pilot, last Sunday, as a newly-elected council-man for the city of Suffolk. The Pilot adds this very deserving and meritorious word, "Mr. Beamon is a member of the firm of Holland-Beamon Company and is president of the board of governors of the Y. M. C. A. He is one of the younger business men of Suffolk, and is known as an aggressive and hustling man of affairs." Suffolk honors herself in making this splendid Christian young man one of its "city fathers."

—Our very generous friend and long time subscriber, Sister Ida C. Ayseue, Henderson, N. C., gives this gracious word, which we trust others share:—"I congratulate you most heartily on the improved CHRISTIAN SUN. We do feel proud of it as our church organ. We know that we are getting more than our money's worth now. I have read with much interest your recent editorial on "Tithing."

I was converted to the "Tithing" system years ago and have never regretted one penny that I have given to the Lord in keeping with this Biblical system. I only wish that I could have given more, much more. Much success to THE CHRISTIAN SUN, its editor, and our Southern Christian Publishing Co."

—Charlotte Observer: "Queried whether motorcycles were luxuries or necessities, Chairman Underwood pronounced that they were neither but simply nuisances. The number of people who agree with Mr. Underwood on this point is enough to elect him President several times over."

Col. Wade Harris, you are a gentleman and a statesman of observation and experience. The great majority of those who drive automobiles are men of some sense and character. But the sap-heads who fly along the high way on these motorcycles care about as much for what becomes of the people they pass or meet driving nervous horses as a pig cares for piety. It was one evil day indeed for man and beast when the motorcycle was invented.

—Rev. J. F. Burnett, D. D., Secretary of The American Christian Convention, in the name of the Convention sends out this deserving word and bit of news relative to our Dr. W. C. Wicker, who is the efficient Sunday School Secretary of the A. C. C.:

"Brother Wicker, the Department Secretary, is doing all he can to forward the interest of our Sunday school work. He is a thoroughly consecrated man, and doing all in his power to meet the demands of his office. He can do nothing unless aided by the schools. This year the Sunday school Board must meet, and we are sending Brother Wicker to the World's Sunday school Convention, which meets in Zurich, Switzerland, in this coming June. He is to study methods of Sunday school work, and will give us all new inspiration in the field of Sunday school service."

—The Greensboro Daily News observes: "Two Pittsburgh churches raised $60,000 on one Sunday, which fact the Pittsburgh Dispatch cites as an "evidence of prosperity." Now, if they'll just spend the money on home missionaries much good may be accomplished and the "Smoky City" made a little better place in which to live."

We do not know why, but about nine times out of ten the brethren of the secular press will hurl their jibes at foreign missions and put in the plea for home missions, when money is at stake. It is a narrow view and a short sighted policy. If Pittsburgh will increase its gifts to foreign missions ten fold we will risk our reputation as a preacher and a Bible student on the prediction that the "Smoky City" will soon witness a wiping out of her dives, a closing up of her saloons, and a progress in all her wholesome industrial enterprises such as she never dreamed of. Listen, contemporary: "The light that shines farthest away shines brightest close by," and glaring, godless evils can't live in the light.

THE NEWS OF A WEEK.

—The American Peace Society has removed the name of Dr. Lyman Abbott from its list of vice-presidents because he signed an appeal for large naval appropriations.

—Prof. William Howard Taft of the Yale Law School, New Haven, Conn., announces that, in addition to his regular class-room instruction in constitutional law he will deliver a course of nine lectures on "Questions of Modern Government."

—The tariff bill, for the consideration of which President Wilson assembled the Congress in extra-ordinary session, has passed the House and now goes to the Senate for discussion.

The bill removes the tariff duty on raw wool, on sugar, and several other commodities.

—Secretary of State Bryan delivered President Wilson's message to the California legislature on the anti-alien land-law, but it seems now to little effect. Californians seem determined to enact a law prohibiting aliens from holding land in that State either in fee simple, or on lease for longer than three years.

ELON'S NEW CATALOGUE.

Two Important Changes.—An Interesting Publication, Containing Valuable Information and Facts.—Fine Workmanship.

The catalogue number of the College Bulletin, the 24th annual number, is just from the press of the Christian Publishing Association. It is larger in extent than any previous issue, containing 178 pages, and showing among other changes, two of singular import.

The first of these changes and the one that will be most welcome in this age that clamors after the practical in education is that which provides for the Bachelor of Science degree, for which no Latin or Greek is required, either for entrance to College or during the College course. Instead of these ancient and honored tongues, German, French, or Spanish, with English, will make up the required language work. This change is expected to be far-reaching in its influence and to result in the preparation of a great many scientific men, who feel that the classical languages are not directly connected with their life-work. Taken in connection with the two excellent laboratories in Physics and Chemistry now nearing completion this hope would appear to be well-founded.

The second of these changes had to do with the inauguration of the custom of teaching for six days in the week, rather than five days. The recitation work will begin at 7:50 in the morning and close at 1:00 in the afternoon. This arrangement will give a much longer time to the gymnasium and laboratory work than has previously been possible.

The catalogue shows that three hundred and fifty-eight students have matriculated during the College year, from thirteen states and more than a hundred counties. There had been talk current on the hill of raising the entrance requirements to fifteen units, or one more than the standard College requires, but the catalogue does not show the change, the requirement of fourteen units as practised for many years being adhered to, in company with the other colleges. The usual sixty-nine hours of College work, with the graduating thesis exhibiting original research, are required for all candidates for the bachelors' degrees.

A cause for special gratification to the Church should be that this handsome book, printed in faultless style, with clear type and enriched with elegant printer's taste, is the work of our own Publishing House. We have seen the fine work done on THE SUN by this new industry of the Church, but many of us did not know it could compete with the old, established printer of the land in book-making. Many spoke discouragingly to the writer about his having given as important a publication, one meaning so much to the patronage of the College, to a new print-shop, but wisdom was displayed in the act, for this catalogue, a great many have voluntarily said, is the best in point of mechanical make-up we have so far had. We congratulate the Publishing House and we congratulate the Church on this happy turning out and commend the Publishing House to all who need the best of service at a reasonable rate.

FROM OUR CONTRIBUTORS

A VERY REMARKABLE WOMAN.

(The following sketch of Mrs. Rebecca Pearce was written by her son-in-law, Rev. W. W. Staley, D. D., of Suffolk, Va.)

Abigail Sugan, a French Huguenot, and said to have been the first white woman to have crossed the Roanoke River, married first, Edward Jones, of Isle of Wight County, Virginia, and they moved to North Carolina and settled on the south side of Shoco Creek, in Warren County, in 1738. "Jones Springs" was a part of a land grant.

Edward Jones was a member of the General Assembly of North Carolina at New Berne, from 1747 to 1751, and up to the time of his death, in October of that year.

Edward and Abigail Sugan Jones were the parents of nine children: Precilla, Sugan, Edward, Sallie, Obedience, James, Rebecca, Daniel, and Robert.

After the death of Edward Jones, his widow, Abigail Sugan, married Thomas Cook, from which marriage there was no issue. After this marriage she was known as "Grandmother Cook," and was buried at "Jones Springs" in Saint John's Parish churchyard.

The eldest daughter by the first marriage, Precilla, wedded twice—the first time, Gideon Macon, from which union sprang Nathaniel Macon, a member of Congress from 1791 to 1815, and speaker of the House from 1801 to 1806; and he was a distinguished United States Senator from North Carolina from 1816 to 1828, and was president pro tem of the Senate in 1825; the second time, as the Widow Macon, she married James Ransom, from which union sprang Mat Ransom, who was a Confederate General in the Civil War, and a United States Senator from North Carolina from 1872 to 1896.

Sallie, the fourth child, married Adkin McLeMore, from which union distinguished persons descended. The eighth child, Daniel, married Mary Houze, and from this branch Daniel R. Goodlow descended, and, also, Daniel W. Jones, who became Governor of Arkansas. Sugan Jones married, left six children, and died in 1762. His son, James, married Charity Alston, settled in Wake County, North Carolina, where he was prominent, and died in 1777. His family moved to Murray County, Tennessee; after his death a son was born and named Solomon Jones, and he became a captain under Andrew Jackson in the War of 1812. He had a son, D. Jones, who was Colonel in the Mexican War and a member of the Tennessee Legislature.

Robert, the youngest son, married the Widow Christmas, and their son, Wm. Duke Jones, was the father of Joseph Speed Jones, whose daughter, Marina, was the schoolmate of Mrs. W. W. Staley, and is now the wife of Judge Alston Cook, of Muskogee, Oklahoma.

It would be a sort of endless chain to trace all the collateral branches of this family, as they are scattered over the entire Union. It is the purpose of this sketch to trace only the line that includes Rebecca Pearce and her offspring.

Starting with Edward and Abigail Sugan Jones, their second child, Sugan Jones, married and his youngest son, Dewey Jones, married Rhoda Denson, who heard the guns at Yorktown, and died in her ninety-third year. This Rhoda was the mother of Elizabeth Henderson Jones, who married Samuel Joyner, of Franklin County, North Carolina. Mr. Joyner was a school-teacher and his widow died in 1880, in her ninety-third year. Samuel and Elizabeth Joyner were the parents of Rebecca Joyner, who married Henry Pearce, who died in 1887. Mr. and Mrs. Pearce had two daughters, Pattie and Annie; the first is now the wife of Rev. W. W. Staley and the second the widow of the late J. L. Mitchell. Mrs. Pearce has been a widow for twenty-five years, and will be ninety the fourteenth of December of this year.

Her daughter, Pattie, married Rev. W. W. Staley, April 30, 1879, and they have three daughters—Bessie, Annie and Willie. Bessie married Thomas F. Cheatham, April 21, 1908, and has two children, William Staley and at the age of ninety years, with one of her great-grandchildren on her lap.

Florence Harvey Cheatham. Willam Staley Cheatham was born August 20, 1909. This brings the genealogy down through eight generations and one hundred and seventy-five years.

Mrs. Pearce was three years old when the second President of the United States died. She was thirteen years old when Halley's Comet appeared, in 1835, and watched it with interest in 1910. She remembers well when the first railroad, of one hundred miles in length, was constructed in 1834-1835, from Portsmouth, Virginia, to Raleigh, North Carolina. It was in two sections: one from Portsmouth, Virginia, to Gaston, on the Roanoke River, and called "The Seaboard and Roanoke R. R.;" the other from Gaston to Raleigh, North Carolina, was named "The Raleigh and Gaston R. R." Mrs. Pearce was twelve years old when these roads were begun and has kept in touch, by reading, with all of the railroad construction in both hemispheres. She has kept abreast with all the discoveries and inventions from the steam railroad to the latest electric convenience.

She has been a student of history and current literature and, being endowed with a retentive and ready memory, has had at her command the world's great events and great persons. She possesses remarkable powers of analysis of great movements and hence has been an interesting and instructive conversationalist. Even down to the present she informs herself and has clear views of the Mexican Revolution, the Balkan War, and the political motives that produce great movements. She is a Democrat in politics and gave a dollar to the Wilson campaign fund.

She is no less interested in religious, philanthropic, and social undertakings, and often contributes in a small way to victims of calamities and famine districts in foreign lands. She is a member of the Christian Church, as her mother before her, and rejoices in all the work and progress of her denomination.

She believes in education, high-grade literature, intensive farming, and lofty moral and social standards. It might be said of her, that she represents old-time ideas of spirituality, frankness, honor, and strength with new-time ideas of progress. No shams, pretences, false colors, or masks appeal to her, though she seizes new improvements, conveniences, methods, and time-savers, with keen appreciation.

Living before the days of railroads, telegraphs, telephones, cotton gins, sewing machines, separators, harvesters, typewriters, adding machines, phonographs, automobiles, and moving pictures, and living through all the progress these and hundreds of other things have made, and possessing Huguenot blood in good measure, Mrs. Pearce embodies breadth of view, strength of will, unshaken faith in the Bible, and hope in God and future glory.

Her Bible, her books and papers, lie open before her much of the time, and she ponders great questions with a philosophers' grasp, a statesman's wisdom, and a Christian's trust. Born in the country before evil had blighted nature's purity, and her father being a school-teacher, she learned in early years to love the printed page and God's sunshine. Her long life has added to her store of knowledge, which has adorned, and, as she says, lengthened out her years with pleasure. She looks back over the long past with retentive memory and keen interest, and into the future with bright hope.

She is spending her last days in the home of her son-in-law, Rev. W. W. Staley, digs on bright days, in the garden where vegetables grow, flowers bloom, and birds sing with the same beauty and sweetness they did when the world was new and she was young.

IVOR, VA.

We began a meeting at Ivor Monday night, April 14th, and continued the meeting for nine days. Rev. I. W. Johnson did the preaching. The congregations were good throughout. The preaching was logical and deeply spiritual, and there were several professions and renewals. Eleven members united with the church. The prospects for this church seem brighter than for some time.

The third Sunday in July has been set apart to dedicate our new church building. The church had only 37 members, including children, when we began our work. The building and furnishings have cost about $2,500.00. About $1,500 of this amount has been paid and promised while the remainder is yet to be secured. Any one desiring to help a worthy cause can do so by helping this church.

R. H. PEEL.

One of the greatest gifts of life is sympathy. We long for the kind word or sympathetic counsel during the time of any great trial of sadness. Our grief is divided when we are able to share it with some sympathetic heart. And by sympathetic I do not mean sentimental. Mere sentiment is weak. True sympathy is divine and comes not with the mere asking, but develops rather as the fruit of deep suffering. "If you would have the priestly gift of sympathy, you must be content to pay the price; like Him—you must suffer."—Sel.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION.

BY REV. MARTYN SUMMERBELL, D. D.

(A Correction, But Yet Thanks! Mr. Editor, you are a nice man, and have paid me an excellent compliment, which I wish so much I deserved. I feel like the old colored woman who was asked to change five dollars. She could not do it, but appreciated the compliment just the same. You should have known, Brother Editor, that this scribe was incapable of writing that article on Religious Education. Why, Brother Editor, that is an article right, by one of the world's greatest scholars, the distinguished Dr. Martyn Summerbell. But how I feel complimented and how loath I am even to have to ask you to make correction in this case. This greatness has been thrust upon me, but for fear some one else might show my unworthiness of the great honor done me, I must decline the glory thereof voluntarily. Again thank you, but please do Dr. Summerbell the credit due his greatness by ascribing the production to him, the real author.—W. A. HARPER.)

(President Harper is welcome to the compliment, and deserves it. Our mistake is a natural one. The article, a most excellent one indeed, was in our box of waiting copy, and was without name, though sent in from President Harper's office and copied on his type-writer.

The article is certainly a pointed and powerful one and we trust our readers have gone closely through the portion printed last week and will read carefully the remainder this week.—ED. SUN.)

And so it may be regarded as established that an education which lacks training in religion is defective. In fact, it is better for a community or a nation to have a weak religion, or one that has some elements of falsehood, than to have no religion at all. For, insomuch as the weak religion, or the religion that is partly false, can stimulate the religious sense, it will impel to some moral acts, and impose some moral restraints. But no-religion is all falsehood, and it imposes no moral restraint whatever. I would not willingly go to a nation that has discarded religion, for nothing in such a region could be safe for a moment; not houses, not persons, not property. Once we knew of a land that had cast away its religion;—it was the land of the daily proscription and guillotine. Yes. Education to be sound must include training in religion, and this training must be carried on continuously for a long period of years, so that it becomes the man's second nature; so that it is as spontaneous in its response as any of his mental furnishings. Let us have our young people educated like that and we may trust them anywhere. They will meet their temptations and trample them under foot. And the future of society and the nation will be secure in their enlightened hands.

It is legitimate now to inquire how religious education of the better type, such as we have been discussing, can best be promoted. Right here it is that we strike one of the most serious problems of the time. For it is a conspicuous fact that by far the larger part of our American youth, both boys and girls, young men and young women, are given a purely secular education; an education in literature, in the arts and sciences, and the rest of it, but withal an education from which religion as such is absolutely eliminated. Under the general system of public schools, from the primary school up to the State College and University, the teacher must not teach religion. In some states of the union the teacher when he opens school must not read from the Bible, and must not recite the Lord's prayer.

But passing these extreme instances of misguided deference to subterranean political influences, let us turn our thought toward the general system of public instruction, and particularly to the great State Universities, in all of which, while art, and science, and history, and mathematics are freely taught, religion is unmentioned. This is not to say that all teachers in the schools, and all professors in the State Universities, are hostile to religion; for many of them are sincere Christians. But for all of their faith in Christ, they are not permitted to give instruction in religion in their classrooms. Right here then is the main question, What is to be the inevitable result upon our impressionable American youth of instructing them for a course of years in history, and science, and literature and the rest of it, with religion during all that time absolutely ignored and unmentioned. Is it not inevitable that they will grow to be interested in the subjects which are impressed on their minds from day to day, and that they will lose interest in the subject that is unmentioned, and that presently they will come to regard it as a by-gone fad, and quite out of date in this live and progressive age? Does it not seem to you that religion in these State Universities is getting the freeze out? I am sure that I would not willingly subject any young person under my care to an influence of scoundrel. In the days of struggle at the birth of this nation, one man who lost his faith was ready to sell his country for British guineas and a pair of golden epaulets, and we remember him, Benedict Arnold, with universal execration. Later another, with all the polish of a man of the world, was unprincipled enough to outrage every law of hospitality by besmirching the chastity of the wife or daughter of any friend, and we know him as Aaron Burr. Just now in New York they have been trying a gang of men for murdering another in the open street, attacking him cowardly four to one. It is said of some of these men that they could shine in polite society. But they had no principle, and their hands bear the murder stain, which no water, cold or hot, can ever wash away. We cannot afford to train up thugs and murderers. We cannot afford to manufacture Aaron Burrs and Benedict Arnolds. And so we cannot afford to place our children under a system of education, no matter how popular, from which instruction and practice in religion is systematically excluded.

Whither then shall the wise parent turn when he reaches the time when he is to send his child to College, and wishes him to get his literary and scientific training under auspices which shall not undermine his religion? Evidently enough he will look to the smaller college, which is free to develop its own courses of instruction, and which can exercise a potential influence in favor of the religious life as the happiest and best for any young man or woman.

Speaking thus of the smaller college, we are to remember that all the earlier colleges of America were established on the religious foundation. Such were Harvard, and Yale, and Princeton, and King's College, now Columbia University, in New York City. Such were Dartmouth in New Hampshire, Williams in Massachusetts and Wesleyan in Connecticut. Several of these indeed had their main object to train men for the Christian ministry, and all of them had clergymen for their first presidents, and the major part of their early professors were of the same cloth. Without any manner of question, the earlier advanced education in this country was under religious auspices. In urging the claim of the smaller colleges with its insistence on the cultivation of the religious principle, we are simply reverting to the original American tradition, and standing fast to the higher American ideal.

And it is from such colleges that the best educational product has come. A great complaint has lately been lifted by some of the largest and most popular universities themselves that they are not arousing the scholastic impulse in their students to the extent that should be expected,—that the influence of their great teacher is lost, dissipated among the thousands of students, who are too numerous to know their own classmates, or to feel the educative touch of their learned instructors. And so some are adopting a new plan, which is no less than to break up the great school into a number of smaller ones,—to set groups of students, reduced to a number small enough to insure mutual acquaintance,—small enough to respond to the personal influence of the teacher who is specially set over the particular group. But do you realize what a proposition like that signifies? It is nothing short of an acknowledgment of the supreme mistake of putting that character, where all other subjects are made impressive by constant repetition and reiteration, and where the main subject of life is shut up in a dark closet, unseen and unheard of. It would be easy to cite specific instances of young people who have been educated in this manner,—trained in the culture and refinement of the schools, and who have emerged with many laurels of scholarship, and yet whose faith in the Gospel, whose moral nature, have suffered utter shipwreck and loss. Where the professor has abandoned religion for the golf-stick, the beer mug and the Sunday auto-car, where will the less sophisticated student appear? The wise parent needs to discriminate as to the brand of education, which he furnishes his child, and the time for discrimination is beforehand and not afterward. Let him realize that an education which relegates religion to the background is in some ways worse than no religion at all. The polish of culture to the man who lacks the mainstay of principle makes him the more unmitigated

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENTS

NORFOLK LETTER.

The other day, being in somewhat of a retrospective mood, I fell to thinking of some of my old school-mates whose careers I have kept up with, more or less, ever since the time we dug out Greek and Latin roots together, and sought to master the mysterious functions of sines and cosines. Now, as then, as I seek to follow as best my information will permit, the paths along which these old-time companions and comrades have trudged their separate and weary ways since our parting, I am impressed by some very salient features by which these paths have been characterized.

First, I am impressed by the fact that those boys who gave, or seemed to give, greatest promise to achievement during their college days, such as some of the first-honor men, brilliant speakers and facile writers, have utterly failed to "make good" after any practical fashion since those times. To my certain knowledge some of them are rank failures in this respect. Others, in dealing with the gnarled, knotty and tangled skein which the world threw out for their unravelling after their graduation, developed some weakness unsuspected while under the tutelage of the professors, and fell short of what had been hoped for from them. All the lionizing and idolizing which was bestowed upon them, because of seemingly exceptional brilliancy and talent, has gone for nothing, or, at least, it would certainly so seem at present.

Upon the contrary, some of the other fellows have astonished me by the way in which they have come up since their hard days of digging, grubbing and plodding. Men who made their "exams" literally by the skin of their teeth, are now forging to the front rapidly. One fellow, whom I especially recall just now, as having been regarded by his classmates as almost too dull and unambitious to find his way about the campus, bids fair to become one of the most famous physicians in the South. Others there are whom I might mention, once reckoned as belonging to the slow plodding crowd, who are surprising both themselves and their friends by the progress which they are making.

In addition to my own observations, I have heard others comment, out of their own experience, upon these same facts as found in connection with the career of men coming from other colleges and Universities. To me they would appear to be indicative of at least two things:

First, they would seem to indicate that precociousness is not a sure indication of guarantee of future ability. It may indeed be, or it may not be, but in any case it is too uncertain to be relied upon. Always it is to be remembered, too, that a collegiate atmosphere, delightful though it be, and the conditions under which men work there, is far different, as a general rule, from that atmosphere and those conditions under which they must do their work out in the world.

In the school and college, generally speaking, one's work is to a greater or less extent planned for him, if not in detail, yet certainly along broad general lines beyond the scope of which we need not wander. Upon the contrary, out in the world, and especially as men ascend to positions of greater and greater responsibility, they find that not only must they do their work, but they must also develop that power of initiative and resourcefulness by which their work may be wisely and prudently planned. And, it appears, it is just at this vital point, the possession of initiative, that so many fall down.

Again, many men come into full possession of their powers comparatively late in life. They mature slowly and gradually. For the first thirty-five or forty years, perhaps, the world hears nothing of them. Then, one day people sit up, rub their eyes, take notice and ask, as they read so-and-so's name in large headlines in their morning paper, "who is this fellow, and where did he come from?"

From all of which things, we may gather only the following: namely, that at best, all young persons are more or less unknown quantities, with reference to whom, regardless of any ability which they may or may not possess, it is difficult to predict anything with absolute certainty, so far as the scope and magnitude of their future work is concerned. Without meaning, in any sense, to reflect upon the potential powers of any young man or woman in our schools or colleges, or to deprecate their talents, or ability, I would still say, however, that none of these will be they who will startle and surprise the world in the years just before us by any great or brilliant achievements. The great man always comes as a complete surprise, for the most part unlooked for and unheralded, unless the abuse and criticism frequently heaped upon him might be said to do so. He has a way of his own, and is one which he never learned in school upon earth. Still, boys and girls, a college education, if gotten in the right college is one of the best things upon earth. Get it if you can, and go to Elon this Fall if possible.

HENRY SPENCER BOOTH.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The Ladies' Benevolent and Social Union of Suffolk Christian church gave a social to the members of the church on Friday night, May 2, 1913, and the occasion seemed to be enjoyed by the people who attended. The ladies sent invitation to all the members enclosing refreshment tickets. Perhaps five hundred came and mingled in social intercourse. The hours were from 8 to 11. A program of instrumental and vocal music furnished entertainment and the time went by on wings of delight. Cream and cake were served in abundance and everybody left saying: "I have had a very pleasant evening." It was a thoughtful and generous plan of the ladies to provide and furnish the church members with such an opportunity to come together in a social way, under circumstances so favorable to intercourse among the members. Modern conditions make it almost impossible for church members in a city to even know one another; and it is sweet to mingle in a social way, even for a few hours.

The Suffolk church, in quarterly conference April 30th, invited the Sunday school Convention of the Eastern Virginia Conference to meet with this church July 23, 24, 25, and we hope to have a great convention. Suffolk is of easy access from all parts of the conference and no doubt the Convention will open with a good attendance from the start.

We live in an age of defalcations, graft, petty thefts, and extravagance. The silly ambition to keep up with others, the lust for power and self-indulgence, the open doors to pleasure all tempt men from the path of social, commercial, and religious integrity. Paul's exhortation in Romans 8:21, "providing for honest things, not only in the sight of the Lord, but also in the sight of men," is the key to the right way. That is the simple, but sure cure for many of the evils that curse society and hinder the church. Young people fall into the current of extravagance unawares, and many of them are caught in the whirlpool of reckless living and lose their place in the kingdom. Young men go from the country to the city, get a position on small salary, and then live at the rate of men who have labored hard and long to save a fortune. They will buy suits on time, have them pressed on credit, run an account at a barbershop, for shaves and shines, keep an honest hard-working boarding house keeper waiting for her money, indulge in cigarettes and ice cream, talk about "old fogies," and neglect the house of God. The sad thing about all this is, that young women will respect such degenerates more than the straightforward young man who "provides things honest in the sight of the Lord and of men." It is high time for young women to appraise young men by their "honesty" and not by the money they spend. There are married men who smoke cigars the year round and then give fifty cents to the enterprises of the church for a whole year. A thoughtful Christian, much less a prayerful Christian, could not do such a thing. The sooner men are respected for what they are and received into society on the merits, and estimated by the standard of common honesty, the better it will be for all.

Mr. Wm. H. Jones, Jr., Cashier of the Farmer's Bank of Nansemond, who has spent a few weeks at Clifton Springs, New York, has returned with his wife and seems to be very much improved.

WINCHESTER LETTER.

The Winchester work is very encouraging. Our congregations are good, the average attendance of our Sunday school for the first quarter of the year was 123. Five members have been received since our last report and more are to join soon.

We are looking forward to the meeting of the annual conference with our church in August. We are planning to dedicate at that time and appeal to our friends to send us a contribution on our indebtedness. Any amount, however small, will be thankfully received and receipted for. Send all contributions to the pastor, W. T. Walters, Winchester, Va.

If it is not convenient for you to send a contribution at this time, send a subscription to be paid later. We are trying to get a number of our friends to give one dollar per year for five years. The response to this proposition has been gratifying. We would be glad to have every one who reads these lines in the list. It will not mean much to you to make this small contribution yearly, but it will mean much to us and will be a good investment for you. If you will do this, it will enable us to have our debt secured when conference meets.

The following has been received since our last report:

Subscription on Indebtedness.
Reported	$1,355.15
Rev. L. F. Johnson	5.00
Rev. J. U. Newman	5.00
Total subscriptions	$1365.15
Cash.
Reported	$6,322.13
C. H. Shade	2.50
Mrs. C. H. Shade	2.50
Edgar Orndorff	1.00
L. Walter Larrick	5.00
Wm. Eaton	1.00
Mrs. Mary E. Grove	5.00
Rev. L. F. Johnson	1.00
Mrs. Mary R. Smith	10.00
F. D. Feight	5.00
Rev. A. H. Andes	1.50
Mrs. A. W. Andes	1.50
Sunday school Offering	12.78

Rev. H. R. Clem	1.00
J. A. Spaid	4.00
Rev. J. U. Newman	1.00
Ladies Aid Society	59.68
Total	$6,436.59

The Lord has blessed us richly through our friends, for which we are very grateful. We are thankful for all these contributions.

ELON COLLEGE NOTES.

Mr. E. P. Hall, General Secretary of Y. M. C. A. Work at the University of North Carolina, spoke to the young men of the College Saturday evening on the Importance of the Y. M. C. A. work, and especially the importance of attending the Black Mountain Conference for Y. M. C. A. workers. Elon Y. M. C. A. will be represented in this country-wide gathering of Christian workers.

The Christian Endeavor Society had its annual business meeting Thursday afternoon of last week. Mr. F. F. Myrick, Bennett, N. C., a member of the Junior class, is to be president next year. The C. E. Society is a living factor in the religious work of the College.

Rev. G. L. Curry, pastor of the Methodist Protestant church, Graham, N. C., filled the College pulpit Sunday and delivered an excellent sermon from the theme, "Utilizing God's Gifts." The speaker's remarks were based on 2 Timothy 1:6, "Wherefore I put thee in remembrance that thou stir up the gift of God, which is in thee by the putting on of my hands."

President Harper spent Saturday in Suffolk, Va., in the interest of the College, and on Sunday delivered the baccalaureate address at Kenly High School, Kenly, N. C., of which Dr. Harper was formerly principal.

The issuing of the College Catalogue last week put on record the first job of great size by the Southern Christian Publishing Co. All who have seen the Bulletin congratulate the new company in the workmanship and general make up. The Catalogue this year is larger by twenty pages; also in length and width.

Many inquiries from young men and young women have already come into the President's office in regard to next term, and the indications point to another successful year.

Mrs. W. H. Griffin, Spring Hope, N. C., spent a few days last week in the village visiting her son, Mr. Willard Griffin, who is a student in the College.

The students and Faculty of the College are looking forward to the coming of Dr. Sargent this week with much pleasure. See the program of his lectures in last week's SUN.

C. B. R.

Mrs. J. W. Patton, Elon College, N. C., has been appointed Superintendent of the Young People's Missionary Societies of the N. C. and Va. Conference. She will be glad to furnish Report Blanks to any society in this Conference and earnestly requests every society in the conference to report all its officers to her that she may get in touch with them.

MRS. W. A. HARPER.

—The United States government has formally recognized the new Republic of China, which means that so far as we are concerned, the old Chinese Empire, existing through unknown centuries, has lapsed into the past, disappeared from the map, and a Republic, now by all odds the biggest and most popular republic on earth, has taken its place.

We are too much haunted by ourselves; we project the central shadow of ourselves on everything around us.—F. W. Robertson.

FROM JAPAN.

March 31, 1913.

Dear Editor:

It does seem as if once in each season, at least, we might let you know something about the progress of the work over here, but I am painfully conscious that the last letter was sent in Autumn days and today the tardy spring has really come. Its warm sunshine opened up the heart of a crocus on my veranda, so we have the first garden flowers of the season today.

Pussy willows and "salt" and the first dandelion came a few days ago, but the winds are damp and cold and snow is on the higher mountain tops.

Pussy willows and last year's everlasting flowers were our decorations at this year's early Easter. It wasn't a matter of choice, and yet were not the latter symbolic of the kind of interest we want to inspire here and in America and not so inappropriate for Easter after all?

The winter has been the coldest for 26 years. We had good roads thereby and perhaps no more sickness because the days were not so changeable.

Bible study with Christians and enquirers has been our program for the larger part of the time. Some young men come every morning before their work in the Court House or electric light factory or steamship company to study English and Japanese Bible.

We have nearly finished Genesis, but whether they could pass a creditable examination in it according to Elon College standards, is a question.

Genesis is the newest thing they ever heard of and must be compared with Japanese ancient history and Chinese lore. The two will not agree in detail, but the account of the flood and hints of our creator can be found.

Cain's offering can be understood for it is what the more religious here are doing every day. But that a good God should be pleased with the offering of a slain beast is not at first comprehensible to a Buddhist or to those surrounded by Buddhist influence.

A vicarious atonement is not pleasing to the natural man. In Inai village after that S. S. lesson on Cain and Abel there was a vigorous discussion of that theme among the adults.

Those who believe in 8,000,000 gods speak lightly of a "good God" or a "bad god."

The god who preferred a slain lamb to the fruit of the ground must be a "bad god," some of them said, Mrs. Abe and her uncle do not think so—the people in whose house the S. S. is held.

Mrs. Abe's husband sent her back home for some reason. Her mind was deranged for a time and the doctors would not treat her, but she found peace and comfort in Christianity.

Her family are most interestedly reading and learning of this new faith. Even the old Buddhist grandmother is very friendly.

Sometimes we are forcibly reminded of the bigness of our church geographically, when we see different conclusions reached because of different locations.

We appreciate the courtesy of our editor's position in not favoring the sending of a visitor abroad if the better thing—new missionaries, new equipment, the payment of the Mission debt, can be accomplished.

Contact sometimes produces energy and power. There has not been enough contact with our Home and Foreign Missions on the part of the average church member.

The note passed in Japan last year laid emphasis on inducing some lay member of our churches to visit Japan at his own expense, as enroute for the World's S. S. Convention or in some similarly planned excursion.

The American Business Men's party of about 30 members visited Sendai and Utsunomiya last week. In Sendai one of the business men referred to the welcome Mrs. Fry planned at Utsunomiya as exceptional, also referring to the girls of our Girl's School in complementary terms.

We have members of the Christian Church in the Philippine Islands and on the western coast as well as in the less accessible places (like the proprietors of cotton fields and peanut fields of Virginia and North Carolina; we also have members who are planning trips abroad or hope some day to circle the globe, but so far we have not succeeded in persuading one of them to do it, at just this time.

Thus resource was made to the less desired plan of asking the church unitedly to send a delegate. Word has come that a certain teacher in Elon College is to attend the Switzerland World's S. S. Convention. If he takes the Western route from North Carolina as was hinted in a letter from America, we shall not let him escape us at Anniversary time.

One of North Carolina's famous sons, now occupying a London pulpit, said one day to a class of prospective missionaries, "I tell my wife if she always agreed with me, I should lose my love for her." We're willing even to differ with you, brethren, if you'll continue to have enough Christian love for this mission work to support our county evangelistic tours, and two schools—one for training evangelists and one for training the girls of Japan. There is no other way to sustain a work in any mission field.

In the spring there is always an exodus of young people to the largest cities. One of our members enters a Christian hospital in Tokyo as a nurse, two Iinogawa members have already entered the same hospital as Doctors' assistants. Because they are Christians, they have the opportunity and recommendation, and perhaps the ambition. In April one Christian goes to Korea. In a few months the principal of the Kindergarten, baptized last year, follows, to become his bride.

We feel as if we were called to give the gospel, like James "to the twelve tribes which are of the Dispersion" sometimes, so many of our Christians move away, but every church in Northern Japan has the same experience. To send them away from us "rooted and grounded in the faith" is no small opportunity.

Our best musician has returned, with his bride from Yokohama, to again live here permanently. So we sometimes have compensation, for they return broadened and better able to discriminate between essentials and non-essentials.

Those supporting Mrs. Watanabe at Iinogawa will be glad to know that two new enquirers have taken the place in numbers of the two Christians who went to Tokyo and, busy as the young folks are, they still do much Bible study, practically holding a prayer meeting every night at Mrs. Watanabe's home.

Yours gratefully,

ALICE M. TRUE.

"JOSEPH MADE RULER OF EGYPT."

Notes on Sunday School Lesson For Sunday,

Scripture.—Gen. 41:25-40.

"The river" of Pharaoh's dream was the Nile, the river of Egypt. Extending for four thousand miles, it furnishes fertility and life for the nation.

The cow was a sacred animal in Egypt, and cows coming up from the Nile would be a fit symbol of good harvests.

The wheat of Pharaoh's vision was the many-eared variety, called "mummy wheat," still grown in the Delta. The "east wind" was the hot, searing, sand-laden sirocco.

The "magicians" and "wise-men" for whom Pharaoh sent to interpret his dreams were two classes of Egyptian priests, relying for their influence largely on superstition.

Joseph shaved himself before entering Pharaoh's presence because, though the Hebrews were proud of their beards, Egyptians regarded beards as unclean, and kept their faces smooth. The large beards with which the Pharaoh's are pictured on the monuments were false.

Such famines as Joseph foretold were of not uncommon occurrence in Egypt when the Nile floods were late or insufficient in amount, though a famine of seven years' duration would of course be a terrible calamity, perhaps unprecedented. There was a seven-year famine in the eleventh century A. D.

Such rapid promotions as that given to Joseph are not rare in the East, nor was it very exceptional for a Hebrew to be thus honored, especially by the Hyksos Pharaohs, themselves a foreign dynasty.

The seal given Joseph was a ring with a large engraved stone, used to seal and certify the king's orders. The fine linen was made of the Nile flax or byssus, so delicate that it was practically transparent. The gold chain for the neck was a badge of office, such as is still worn by British Mayors. Joseph's change of name was to mark his Egyptian adoption, as was the bestowal of an Egyptian wife,—Asenath, the daughter of the high priest, who ranked next to Pharaoh. She gave birth to Ephraim and Mannasseh, whose tribes in later years represented Joseph in Canaan.

LESSON CONTRASTS.

In our last lesson we saw Joseph in a prison. In this lesson we see him in a palace. In that lesson he interpreted the dreams of his fellow prisoners; in this lesson he interprets the dream of Pharaoh. The dreams of the butler and the baker were personal, the dream of Pharaoh relates to a matter concerning the whole nation. Their dreams were fulfilled in a few days; Pharaoh's dream will take years in its fulfillment. For the prisoners, there was nothing to do but to wait patiently for the fulfillment of their dreams; for Pharaoh there is much to do that he may heed this warning of God and wisely prepare for the salvation of his people.

OBJECT LESSONS.

A promotion certificate or diploma. This bit of paper is greatly prized by the owner because it stands for merit—for a promotion earned by hard work. There is just one way to get a promotion, and that is to earn it. Only those who are faithful in learning present lessons and doing present duties are deserving of higher duties and honors. Whoever does his best in every circumstance is surely earning a promotion to a higher place. To-day's story is about Joseph's promotion because of his fitness.

An acorn. Can this acorn surely become a great oak? How? By growing a little at a time? Every beautiful oak tree has grown inch by inch a little each day, from a small acorn. Every great man of the present day and every great man in history grew into greatness by doing day by day the duties which came. To-day's story tells of Joseph's high honors which came as a result of his faithful-ness day by day.

An electric light. There is one thing absolutely necessary to make this lamp give light. It must be connected with the electric power. Without the connection there is no shining. Our past stories of Joseph and the one we study to-day show clearly that Joseph's shining character was the result of having God in his life. (Ask someone to read v. 38.)

QUESTION REVIEW.

1. Last Sunday we saw Joseph in prison. To-day we have seen him where?
2. What man furnished for Joseph the connecting link between the prison and the palace?
3. What ability on the part of Joseph was wanted in the palace?
4. Who had a double dream?
5. What, according to Joseph's interpretation, did the seven fat cows and the seven good heads of wheat prefigure?
6. What the lean cows and poor heads of wheat?
7. What gave Joseph and Pharaoh this glimpse into the future?
8. What was the only wise thing to do in view of the coming famine?
9. Who was wise enough and good enough to undertake this great work?—Leonard.

LESSON ANNOUNCEMENT.

Several weeks ago we had the story of Joseph's visit to his cruel-hearted brothers and of their putting him in the pit and selling him into slavery. In all the years he had been in Egypt he had never seen any of his own family. Next Sunday's lesson tells of Joseph's brothers coming to Egypt and how he treated them.

I wish the boys would find out something about the annual overflow of the Nile and its effect on the farms. I would like the girls to find out about some recent famines, where they occurred and the cause.

I would like to have all of the pupils during this week try to think what would be the result to wrongdoers if their sins never brought any harm or suffering to themselves. Try to decide whether penalties of wrongdoings are meant for punishment or for cure. This will help in understanding next Sunday's lesson.—Hageman.

NOTES ON C. E. TOPIC FOR MAY 18.

Subject—"The Stature of Christ"—Growing up in it. Eph. 4:11-16.

A few people have said scornfully that religion does not pay, because they are not talking about the real article. There is a cantish thing which spends itself in empty rituals and displays, that is certainly not worth what it costs. The Pharisees got a reward for their showy, heartless religion, but in the end the game was not worth the candle. The Bible defines religion, so far as its manifestations are concerned, as being merciful and gracious treatment of the needy and freedom from the contamination of the world. This, of course, is possibly only where the heart is consecrated.

When some men consider the question as to whether or not the service of God pays, they reach false conclusions, because they do not take a sufficiently extended view of the matter. It is all very well to think of today, but today is of little importance compared with what it may produce. Remember when you study spiritual profit and loss that life also means eternity. Only those who take the longer look at the matter are able to bear hardship with grace and fortitude. If small gain today means great loss for to-morrow, then it is no gain.

Sometimes there seems to be a conflict between the assurance that godliness is profitable and what we see in actual life. The wicked often prosper, while the righteous remain poor. The reason is, of course, easily discerned. The absence of scruples about injuring others, or dealing other than honestly, allows the former to make money where the latter can not. But there are several things that are to be considered aside from this. All gain, even so far as the present life is concerned, is not to be expressed in figures. Happiness is gain, and it may come with wealth or without it.

The religious man is the man who has regard to the law of his Maker. Common reasons ought to tell a man that he will be at his best physically and mentally when he comes nearest to living as his Creator intended he should live. The machine that is out of order will injure itself in the running. Every life that is out of harmony with God is out of order. The sins of intemperance are not the mere violations of arbitrary law. It pays a man to keep in harmony with the laws of his members.

Suggestive Illustrations.

If a child belongs to a tall family, he is inspired by the thought that he also will probably be tall. We are to grow up to the height of our Elder Brother!

The growing child has height marked off from time to time upon a door-frame or in some such place, and is proud of the rising marks. Have we such a series of rising marks for our spiritual growth?

One plain sign that a child is growing is that his clothes become too small for him. So the growing Christian outgrows his work, continually taking up harder tasks.

Nothing is sadder than a child that ceases to grow when it is little—nothing, that is, except a soul that ceases to grow.

REPORT OF THE VIRGINIA VALLEY CENTRAL WOMAN'S BOARD.

The Woman's Home and Foreign Mission Board of the Virginia Valley Central Christian Conference met in Winchester, April 16th, with the president, Mrs. W. T. Walters, in the chair.

After scripture reading and prayer, the Board entered into earnest discussions of plans of work.

It was decided that the churches of the conference be apportioned to the members of the Board as follows: An effort to be made to organize the women into a missionary society wherever possible and otherwise the use of mite-boxes to be urged—

Mrs. W. T. Walters—Winchester, Timber Mountain, Timber Ridge, Palmyra.

Mrs. M. E. Grove—Leaksville, Newport, East Liberty, Mt. Lebanon.

Miss H. C. O. Martz—Bethlehem, Concord, Mayland, Wood's Chapel, Whistler's Chapel.

Mrs. Samuel Earman—New Hope, Beulah, Mt. Olivet (R), Bethel.

Miss Ivie Andes—Antioch, Joppa, Dry Run, Island Ford.

Mrs. J. K. Ruebush—Linville, Christian Chapel, High Point, Mt. Olivet (G).

It was decided that a better setting forth the urgent need of funds be sent to all the women in the conference. It was moved and carried that Mrs. J. K. Ruebush represent the Board at the Mass Meeting at Elon, May 27th.

The following program was framed for the Conference of 1913, which will meet in Winchester:

Hymn.

Scripture Reading, Mrs. Samuel Earman.

Prayer—Mrs. M. E. Grove.

Solo—Mrs. Boyd R. Richards.

"Our Work and Aim," Miss H. C. O. Martz.

"Our Finances," Miss Ivie Andes.

Solo—Mrs. W. A. Harper.

Individual Responsibility in Mission Work—Mrs. W. T. Walters.

Hymn.

Benediction.

The Board was organized last August and is just beginning to get things a little under way. The work has long been neglected but let us all pull hard, and all pull together.

MRS. J. K. RUEBUSH, Sec. pro tem.

DOES THE MASS MEETING AT ELON CONCERN OUR YOUNG PEOPLE'S MISSIONS?

The immediate answer to that question is: Very much, indeed. It is important for Glad Gleaners' Superintendents' and other representatives of Young People's Societies to attend, because—

1. This is to be an inspirational meeting for missions in general. All those who attend with earnest purpose will be sure to gain much in knowledge of conditions and needs, and in enthusiasm to work for the cause more than ever before.

2. The young people's work is to be discussed as well as the women's work. An exchange of ideas will be helpful in solving the problems our Young People's Societies and Glad Gleaners' Superintendents are from time to time facing.

3. It is important that every opportunity be used to develop the growth of our Young People's department. We have responsibilities to meet. One of these, and a most important one, is the support of the Santa Isabel field. The work there is prospering now under the leadership of a sincere, earnest Christian, a Porto Rican. Shall we not encourage him by meeting promptly and gladly our responsibility of supporting the field? To do this, we shall need more societies, more contributors, more people enthusiastic and determined that the work must succeed.

MARGARET H. BRICKHOUSE.

WELL! SOMETHING UNUSUAL!

February 8th the Mission Treasurer received fifty dollars for foreign missions from Memorial Temple, Norfolk, Va., Sunday-school. Nothing unusual about this, for that Sunday-school is used to contributing in a generous way for missions. Remembering that just about one month previous we had received fifty dollars from the same church for the same cause, led us to note closely the following from our good Brother Pitt's letter that brought the fifty, that brings the fifties from that church:

"Our Sunday-school has adopted the rule that as soon as $50.00 is in hand for foreign missions, the same be forwarded." That explains. We read on: "This sum is to be credited to the foreign mission pledge of Memorial Christian Temple for the year 1913." Now mark, here is the unusual feature about it: "Our school has raised this amount in advance of the annual pledge which will be made June 8, 1913."

Think of it, this Sunday-school, just one department of the church, has contributed and sent in fifty dollars, on, and four months in advance, of the time when the pledge is to be made. Yes; this is not only "unusual," but it is simply grand.

How does the Memorial Temple Sunday-school succeed in raising so much for missions and keeping it up so long? (For this is only a beginning of what they will add to that pledge). This is the secret of it, I am sure: Beginning back some twelve years or more when our good Brother, Dr. Barrett, was pastor, they were taught and trained to contribute every Sunday for missions. How do I know? In November, 1900, I spent a Sunday in that church and parsonage. They had just handed me a cheque for One Thousand Dollars for foreign missions, to which the Sunday-school had contributed about three hundred dollars. Were they tired of giving, and glad to get the burden off their hands? Not at all. This Sunday that I was there was the first after completing and paying their former pledge, and as I saw with my own eyes and had explained to me, they went right on that day taking the mission offering as they had been accustomed to do, and doing it with joy and gladness. The next year the cheque was one thousand three dollars and sixty-seven cents.

On, and on;—and still the Norfolk church and Sunday-school had stood nearly every year at the head of all our churches in the matter of contributing for foreign missions, at least so far as has been reported to the mission treasury.

TWO DEDUCTIONS.

1. The possibilities of our Sunday-schools for the cause of missions. Their undeveloped resources for the cause; the necessity for their development, for the benefit not only of the cause of missions for the present and the future, but for the blessing and the development of the Christ-like benevolent faculty of the individual members of the schools. (Fact is much of the giving in our Sunday-schools has a tendency to cultivate the spirit of selfishness more than that of benevolence—giving simply for themselves, their own school); and how is, or can, this development be brought about? Who will write it up, preach it up, teach it up, and how keep it up?

Oh, why are not more of our preachers, Sunday-school Superintendents and teachers teaching and training the children and young people in the interest of Christian Missions? What the Sunday-school of the Norfolk Memorial Temple church is and has been doing every year other Sunday-schools, in proportion to its ability, can do.

Heavy responsibility somewhere. Where is it? Read James 4:17.

2. The present lesson and example of the Norfolk church and Sunday school is to be commended to all our churches, schools, societies and boards,—not to defer too long the sending of the offerings in order to send in larger bulks. Our family needs are daily, constantly through the year. We scarcely think of laying in the supplies simply once or twice a year. This would be hard to do unless we were well supplied with ready cash in advance. As our family needs require constant supplies, so with our missionaries and mission workers. In our appropriations from the mission treasury, payments are due quarterly; in the Foreign Department payments are due monthly; in the administrative department there are more or less expenses occurring almost daily. It is plainly to be seen that an almost constant inflow to the mission treasury is needed.

The lesson—frequent remittances.

The following is a copy of a letter sent out by the Woman's Board of the Virginia Valley Central Board:

Winchester, Va., April 16, 1913.

DEAR SISTER:

The Woman's Home and Foreign Mission Board of the Virginia Valley Central Christian Conference, in session, send Christian greetings and love to you.

We are anxious that the women in every church within the bounds of this Conference be organized into a missionary society; therefore we urge that you use your influence in your own local church in getting a society organized and in working order.

For information and literature write to Miss H. C. O. Martz, Lacy Spring, Va.

All of us realize that as a denomination we have not measured up to our opportunities along this line. Will you help remedy this condition? We need you.

The Board of the Southern Christian Convention asks us to raise $100 by May 19th. We have in hand $37.18. What will you do to help raise the remaining $62.82?

Any amount, however small, will be gratefully received by our treasurer, Miss Ivie D. Andes, Harrisonburg, Va.

Be sure to send all contributions by May 19th.

Thanking you, we remain,

MRS. W. T. WALTERS, President,
MISS H. C. O. MARTZ, Secretary.

Sylvia Pankhurst, daughter of the leader of the British suffragettes, was released from prison on March 21 after serving half of a two months' sentence, on the ground that further to detain her would endanger her life. She went on hunger strike, and had to be fed by means of a tube forcibly injected into her stomach.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION.

ting thousands of students into one college;—nothing short of the admission that by and large the smaller college is better for the student, better for his mental culture and vastly better for his culture in morals. And experience is proving the value of the smaller college in these very respects. If you start inquiry as to the men of mark in the nation, you will be surprised at the numbers who have come from the smaller colleges. Our beloved Longfellow was trained at Bowdoin College, a small college in Brunswick, Me. Pres. Garfield was trained at Williams, a small college in the north-western corner of Massachusetts. Secretary Root was one of the ablest men in President Taft's cabinet. He was trained at Hamilton, a small college in the hills of central New York. We might continue that list indefinitely, but the few examples suffice.

"Ex pede Herculem," From his foot we know Hercules.

In the smaller college every professor knows every student by his name. Acquaintance is mutual and it is intimate. The best traits of the teacher are impressed upon the students' habit of thought irradicably. And the regular result is plain living, high thinking and lofty ideals, which the students cherish as the standard for all their lives.

WAKEFIELD, VA., NOTES.

It has been so long, and so many things have happened, since I last wrote to THE SUN I hardly know where to begin; but any way the birds are singing, and the flowers are blooming as the spring wears away. A few Sunday nights ago we held an ordination service at Dendron Christian church, during which time brethren J. H. Barrett, and Luther Williams were ordained Deacons of said church. These brethren are well known among the several churches of Dendron, and in the community, and all feel that a suitable selection was made, and we hope and pray that the Deacons and all the membership will keep in pace with the leadership of the Holy Spirit. The Ladies' Aid Society of the Dendron church has recently beautified the church by covering the main auditorium floor with a new and expensive carpet. Those Dendron people believe in doing things. Last year a handsome department of two Sunday school rooms was added to the church, and a very substantial furnace was installed to heat the entire building. With all these improvements, and with a loyal people to keep the good work on the move it is a joy to the pastor to serve here in the Master's name.

On the fifth Sunday in March Mrs. Jones and myself were in Newport News, and the writer had the pleasure of preaching for our Newport News people. We had a very pleasant service and found brother Harward and his good wife heartily in the work. They are very popular there, and are doing a very excellent work. The few days there with the church people and my Uncle were much enjoyed.

Saturday before the fourth Sunday in April the writer had the great pleasure of visiting Berea (Nansemond) community. The first night there was most pleasantly spent at the home of our old friend and brother, R. B. Odom. He has a cosy home just on the bank of Nansemond river, and a very fertile farm, and a beautiful crop. Brother Odom has done well. He first got a good wife, then with a spirit of manhood, and the love of God, he has moved on to success and honor. The two bright boys and sweet little girl of his home cheer parents and visitors alike. On Sunday as brother I. W. Johnson, the pastor of Berea was called to Dendron, Va., to preach an Odd Fellow sermon to the Lodge at that place, I was asked to preach for him at Berea, which was done with the greatest of pleasure. It had been fifteen years since the writer had been in that church, and as he stood and looked over the congregation our dear Col. Savage, Thomas Gaskins, E. J. Driver, and wife, and many others that were there years ago were absent, and the congregation was changed so much. The church is in a good working condition and brother Johnson is popular among those good people and is doing a good work there. Sunday night was spent at the magnificent home of brother and sister W. J. Lee. While we sat and talked of the by gone days, and of the many things that had happened since my first visit to that home, we could but praise the Lord, since the many changes were for the best.

Brother and sister Lee are kind hearted, thoughtful, enterprising, and appreciative of all those who are trying to do something worth while in life. We shall ever remember the pleasant visit to that home. Monday morning brother Lee took the writer to brother and sister George Rawles', where the day was spent very pleasantly. Brother and sister Rawles stay young and cheerful. May God bless this happy pair. Monday night found the writer at the home of brother Frank Winner. He and his good family gave bountiful hospitality, and as the hours passed away too fast, there were many things left unsaid. The great care of the afflicted daughter and of the two little grand children, with the fifteen years added, gave sister Winner's hair a few beautiful silver locks, yet she and brother Winner look young and cheerful. We love to visit these dear friends. Tuesday brother Winner took the writer to brother Reps Williamson's where the night was spent most pleasantly. Brother T. Williamson, and his dear sweet little girl were there and we had a lovely time talking over old school days. Brother and sister Williamson are dear good folks. The writer came home on Wednesday feeling glad to have had the privilege of visiting such a good people as those mentioned above. We hope to have the good fortune soon to visit them again.

CHEERED THROUGH SUFFERING.

This would be a cheerless world if it were not for sorrow and suffering. It is easy to forget this when the suffering bears in hard upon us. And it is also easy to forget it when we are enjoying the blessings of health and happiness. For, as has been well said, "The greatest blessing in the world is health—except sickness." With the world as it is, we need the experience of weakness in order that God's power may be made perfect in us. And our sympathy for others would, it is to be feared, be a light and superficial thing if it sprang only from our understanding of ease and happiness, and never from the deeper places of weakness and pain. Often God can reveal his love to us through an experience of suffering as through no other way; and often we can reveal our love to others after we have suffered as we never could have done otherwise. So let us count it all joy when we are blessed through pain, and let us gladly claim the greater riches that God would thus give us. Better still, let us see to it that others shall be blessed because we have suffered.—S. S. Times.

The daily blessings of life ought to be constant reminders of Him from whom cometh down every good gift and every perfect gift.

Children's Missionary Stories

STORIES are—yes, must be—used by every wide-awake worker among, or leader or teacher of, children.

MISSIONARY STORIES seem to have been the one field well-nigh overlooked until Mrs. Alice Moreton Burnett, Corresponding Secretary for the Woman's Board for Home Missions of the Christian Church, made a compilation of thirty interesting, instructive stories pertaining especially and directly to missions that are sure to be appreciated by workers, teachers, leaders, pastors, fathers, mothers—and the children.

Some of the Important Events of both Home Missions and Foreign Missions are also included, together with Suggestions For Junior Leaders.

They make a book 5 x 7 inches in size, 128 pages, red cloth binding—a handsome, attractive volume. Price 35c per copy postpaid.

SUMMER MISSIONARY CONFERENCES.

For some ten years the Missionary Education Movement, with headquarters in New York City, has been holding several conferences throughout the United States and they have been wonderful places of education, inspiration, prayer, instruction. Three are to be held this summer, and I wish many of our young people and pastors and church workers could get in touch with one of them. Some are held in Canada each summer. These conferences are for ten days and the strongest of leaders and speakers are secured. Such conferences are held each summer at Blue Ridge, (Black Mountain P. O.) N. C., Silver Bay, Lake George, N. Y., and Lake Geneva, Wisconsin. The North Carolina conference will be held in June 27-July 6; the Silver Bay conference July 11-20; the Lake Geneva one August 1-10. The spiritual uplift, the ten days of prayer, conference, beautiful environment, the opportunity of rubbing up against strong missionary leaders make it well worth the while of any who may plan to attend. They are surely days of uplift. I have attended the Lake Geneva and the Silver Bay conference and have been amply repaid for time and small expense.

The forenoons are given to intercession, mission study classes, normal classes, and open parliaments on methods and problems. The afternoons given over to open-air vesper services, and addresses on devotional, inspirational by speakers of recognized authority on missionary, social, general religious problems. There are special conferences for ministers, laymen, with missionary exhibits etc. It is a vacation worth while.

Many churches are now putting a sum in their annual budget to help send one or two of their best workers for this training for their church benefit.

Further information can be secured of our mission office at Dayton, Ohio, or of the Missionary Education Movement, 156 Fifth Avenue, New York City. I am of the opinion that any of our men who can attend the one near Asheville, N. C., will not regret it.

THE HOPE OF A DARKENED WORLD.

Sin can turn even the words of God into things of squalor. And only Christ can redeem this sin-corrupted creation back to the glory that God still purposes. The best of Christ's present work in the created world is going to be made infinitely better when he returns to take personal possession of his world. Peter, writing of this word, beautiful though it is, "the power and coming of our Lord Jesus Christ," and testifying of his personal eye-witness of the coming majesty when he saw our Lord transfigured in the mount, tells us that we do well to take heed unto this word of prophecy, "as unto a lamp in a squalid place until the day dawn." "Squalid" is given as the Greek meaning of the word rendered dark in the English versions. So of his world. Peter, writing of this word, beautiful though it is, while still in the bondage of cor-

WHEN LOVED ONES DIE.

It is always best for our loved ones in Christ to die just when they do. For them it is very much better to depart and be with Christ. An aged saint was speaking in a prayer-meeting on the joy he had had in looking to Jesus in the hour of bereavement when his wife was called Home. Then he said: "I wonder when our loved ones would get to heaven if we had the choosing of the time that they should go." Shall we rejoice that the time is not within our choosing, and, remembering that the death of his saints is precious in the sight of the Lord, share His gladness at their victory over death?—S. S. Times.

GOOD EXAMPLE SET IN OFFICIAL CIRCLES.

The wife of the Vice President, Hon. Thomas R. Marshall, is quoted as saying: "Never but once since our marriage have we attended a social affair on the Sabbath, and then Mr. Marshall announced on returning home that he had not enjoyed it, because he did not think it was right. He would never attend another." Verily strange things have come to pass in official circles in Washington. Social drinking is under ban in official circles, the President will not work on Sunday, and the Vice President will not participate in social functions on the Sabbath. The nation will be none the worse for this official recognition of the moral obligations of Christianity.—Baltimore-Richmond Christian Advocate.

Do your lungs ever bleed?
Do you have night sweats?
Have you pains in chest and sides?
Do you spit yellow and black matter?
Are you continually hawking and coughing?
Do you have pains under your shoulder blades?

These are Regarded Symptoms of Lung Trouble and

CONSUMPTION

You should take immediate steps to check the progress of these symptoms. The longer you allow them to advance and develop, the more deep seated and serious your condition becomes.

We Stand Ready to Prove to You absolutely, that Lung Germeine, the German Treatment, has cured completely and permanently cases after cases of Consumption (Tuberculosis), Chronic Bronchitis, Catarrh of the Lungs, Catarrh of the Bronchial Tubes and other lung troubles. Many sufferers who had lost all hope and who had been given up by physicians have been permanently cured by Lung Germeine. It is not only a cure for Consumption, but a preventative. If your lungs are merely weak and the disease has not yet manifested itself, you can prevent its development, you can build up your lungs and system to their normal strength and capacity. Lung Germeine has cured advanced Consumption, in many cases over five years ago, and the patients remain strong and in splendid health today.

It was our happy privilege to attend the Tri-State Convention of Orphanage Workers, which met with the Georgia Baptist Home, Hopeville, Ga., last week. There were twenty-eight representatives from the several institutions of the Carolinas and Georgia—one from Alabama. All the subjects received due consideration and the meeting was inspiring from beginning to end. But your unworthy servant was a patient listener through it all. So many good things were said by those of more experience than myself, I acted as a student.

THE SILK FISH.

BY VIRGINIA FARLEY.

"Uncle Charles, I saw a real silk worm today," said Claudia, proudly. "Our teacher brought one to the kindergarten, and let all of us look at it under a glass."

"I once saw a silk fish," said Uncle Charles.

"Now, Uncle Charles, is there such a thing as a silk fish?" Claudia asked.

"If a worm that spins silk is a silk worm, then surely a fish that spins silk is a silk fish," answered Uncle Charles.

"There is, Claudia," he went on, "a fish that is an excellent silk-spinner."

"I want to hear about it," declared Claudia.

"I am interested too," said Helen, putting aside her school-books to listen closely.

"It is a shell-fish," began Uncle Charles. "It lives in the Mediterranean Sea, and pinna is its real name. The strong, pretty silken thread for which the pinna is prized are secreted by a gland at the base of the little creature's foot."

"It is the nature of the pinna to tie itself to rocks or other objects, and for a fastening it uses long, silk threads, and spins the thread itself."

"When, after a while, it gets tired, and wants to move to some other place, it pulls loose, and leaves the wonderful silk threads behind."

"It does not take them along, because when it gets ready to fasten itself to another rock it can easily spin more good silk threads. These delicate cast-off silk threads are called 'byssus.'"

"They are carefully gathered by fishermen, and are woven into beautiful cloth, shawls, stockings, and other things. Soft, fine, shiny fabrics can be woven from byssus."

"The silk spinning pinna, though, has become so rare that articles made of byssus are very costly."

"I can hardly wait for morning to come," said Claudia. "It will be such fun to tell everybody at the kindergarten about the silk fish. I hope that I can remember all about it."—Selected.

HOW THE "BILLY" SUNDAY REVIVAL STRUCK THE WYOMING VALLEY.

BY CHARLES E. GUTHRIE.

On Sunday night, April 13, there was brought to a close in the tabernacle built for the purpose in Wilkes-Barre, Pa., the most remarkable religious awakening that ever occurred in northeastern Pennsylvania. The leader of the campaign was the Rev. "Billy" Sunday, ex-baseball player and evangelist, assisted by ten special workers. On Sunday morning, February 23, the meetings began, and with three services every Sunday and two every week day, they continued with increasing interest, for seven weeks and eight Sundays. The total attendance at the tabernacle was 668,300, an average of a little over 7,300 for each of the ninety-four services. The total number of those who "went forward," by which is meant they arose, went forward, shook hands with Mr. Sunday and publicly expressed their acceptance of Jesus Christ as their Personal Saviour and signed addresses and church preferences—the total number of such was 16,584. Quite a goodly proportion of these were members of church already, who either confessed that they had never been converted or had experienced a decline in their Christian life and desired to begin over again. The quickening of the churches is as remarkable as the conversion of the unchurched people. The number of small children included in the total is not large.

Some idea of the breadth of the appeal made by Mr. Sunday's preaching may be gained from a study of the distribution of the signers of cards among the churches. The latest classification gives the following, using only the churches of Wilkes-Barre for illustration:

Baptist, 521; Disciples, 214; Congregational, 366; Evangelical, 547; Methodist, 2,919; Presbyterian, 1,862; Reformed 281; Catholic, 104; Hebrew, 4; Lutheran, 240; Salvation Army, 39; Grace Mission, 9; Universalist, 1, Protestant Episcopal, 183; undecided, 65.

The largest number of cards signed for any one congregation was 760; the second, 562; the third, 511.

The revival campaign was not only a union movement of the churches, as seen in the figures given above. It was also a union movement of the Wyoming Valley, with Wilkes-Barre as headquarters. Wilkes-Barre is environed by towns ranging in size from small cities to tiny villages nestling over the mountains, some of them twenty-six miles away. Six thousand four hundred and twelve persons signed cards for churches in these outlying centers, as follows:

Ashley, 682; Courtdale, 71; Dorranceton, 411, Edwardsville, 524; Forty Fort, 372; Hudson,

Facing Opposition

The finest effort of one's imagination—with these figures before him—can give but a poor idea, at best, of the significance and power of the religious impact upon this valley, steeped in political corruption, beer drinking and Sabbath desecration. The beer bill for this (Luzerne) county last year was $17,000,000. The inter-related interests of liquor, politics and business had resulted in producing a timidity in the business community and even in the churches that was appalling. So impudent had these "interests" become that at least one emissary of the brewers sought an interview with the ministers in the hope of convincing them that Mr. Sunday was not a fit man to be brought into our highly respectable community. The ministers promptly and indignantly refused to discuss the character of any minister with such self-appointed defenders of ecclesiastical regularity! It is common report that banks and other lines of business—some of whose officers were identified with the evangelistic campaign—were threatened with a withdrawal of heavy deposits and a loss of trade if they persevered in their efforts to bring Mr. Sunday here. One instance is known where a bank officer hurled back his defiance with the threat that certain "paper" might be called suddenly, and, if so, certain people would be greatly embarrassed. Thereupon the "chatter" ceased. Month by month a disreputable sheet, devoted mainly to abuse of Mr. Sunday, was sown broadcast throughout this region; but the very exaggeration of its emphasis produced the inevitable reaction and resulted in no harm being done.

From Curiosity to Wonder and Awe

The change produced in seven weeks was well expressed to the writer by a young business man, a university graduate, who said: "The thing that has impressed me most of all in this campaign has been the change from good-natured curiosity at the start to wonder as it progressed, and to awe at its close." This is not an individual observation. It describes exactly the general feeling of the public. For, in a manner that surpassed the greatest expectations of its promoters, and even extorted from Mr. Sunday himself the confession that it exceeded anything experienced in his career, the revival won its way until it included all classes, from the day laborer, messenger boy and servant girl to educators, cultured people of wealth and leisure, corporation heads and the most conservative ministers of the gospel. The Mayor, a Roman Catholic, gave publicity to a letter to Mr.

BRANCHES IN ALL PRINCIPAL CITIES

Sunday commending him to the great work accomplished for the uplift of the city. Mr. Bertels, executive head of the Federated Charities, bore eloquent testimony to the effects wrought among the poor, the drinking classes, wife-beaters, wife-deserters and "ne'er-do-wells" generally. Father Curran, Roman Catholic priest, in a public letter on the front page of an evening daily, extolled the work in the strongest language he could command. President Sprague of our Wyoming Seminary and Superintendent Coughlin of our public school cooperated enthusiastically with the entire program. "And what shall I say more?" Time would fail me to tell of dignified bank officers, city and county officials, contractors, merchants, office girls, called "business women," newspaper editors and re-professors, mill, shop, store and porters and press men who have helped to change the face of this beautiful valley. The changed "atmosphere" is evident everywhere.

What is the secret of Mr. Sunday's success? Who can tell! His preaching is orthodox to the core. No cheap-John clap-trap methods are used to advertise or catch anybody. Themes like the second coming of Christ; Hell; the Bible; nuts for skeptics to crack; "Booze—or—get on the water wagon"; sin and its punishment—these and kindred themes were dealt with day after day. Mr. Sunday's personality cannot account for the results, for there was, and is, an aloofness about him which forbids comradeship, or more than very limited contact. Said one prominent worker, "Why, I count myself favored, for I shook hands with Mr. Sunday three times!"

The splendid organization he maintains and dominates covers every part of a city's life: Mr. Peacock, the shop meetings at noon; Miss Miller, the business woman; Miss Saxe, Bible study and district prayer meetings; Messrs. Rodeheaver and Ackley, the chorus work; Miss McLaren, the soloist and general substitute; Mrs. Asher, companion and counselor to inquirers and great personal worker; and Mrs. Sunday, the real "power behind the throne" of all the rest.

Two splendid achievements marked the campaign as it progressed. One was the demonstration of church unity in an actual task without preliminary discussion and unimpeded by red-tape; the other was the splendid social spirit aroused—which gives strong promise of permanence.

Follow-Up Work

Two products already at work justify hope both of the success of the follow-up work and of the continuance of the evangelistic passion: one is the organization of a personal workers' league, consisting of men only, with noonday meetings at the Young Men's Christian Association, and the formation of teams for work where needed; the other is the organization of district Bible classes covering the city and valley entire. In pointing to these one does not and should not forget that the by-products are as extraordinary in many ways as those mentioned. Anti-cursing clubs, sober men, untangled alliances, better Sabbath observance, the raiding of speak-easies and clubs by a converted sheriff, the release unto joy of lives sordid, selfish and sad impel one to the utterance of what is paradoxical and yet literally true, in saying the impossible has come to pass, the unheard of is here.—N. Y. Christian Advocate.

A SPLENDID TONIC.

Cora, Ky.—Mrs. Iva Moore, of this place, says, "I was so weak, I could hardly walk. I tried Cardui. and was greatly relieved. It is a splendid tonic. I have recommended Cardui to many friends, who tried it with good results." Testimony like this comes unsolicited, from thousands of earnest women, who have been benefited by the timely use of that successful tonic medicine, Cardui. Purely vegetable, mild, but reliable, Cardui well merits its high place in the esteem of those who have tried it. It relieves women's pains, and strengthens weak women. It is certainly worth a trial. Your druggist sells Cardui.

TWO BOYS IN A COUNTRY CHURCH.

There is a Baptist Church in the country near Murfreesboro, Tenn., where a number of years ago a rural shepherd met his appointments one Saturday and Sunday each month. It was not an eventful pastorate as the world reckons, though the flock grew under his ministry and there were several additions in the special meetings that were held from time to time. But among those who joined under his preaching and were by him led into baptismal waters were two boys who are now honored professors in the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary—Drs. W. O. Carver and B. H. DeMent. The faithful pastor of the little Church in the country—Rev. J. T. Oakley—did his work and went elsewhere to minister, not knowing at the time how far reaching was his influence. And so it is with many another pastor in town and country.—The Biblical Recorder.

HERE'S SOMETHING WORTH YOUR WHILE.

The J. Van Lindley Nursery Co., Pomona, N. C., is giving away 10,000 copies of their book "How to Plant and Grow Fruits and Ornamentals." It tells all about the planting, cultivation and care of fruit and ornamental trees, shrubs, vines, etc. If you have a lawn, garden, orchard or flower yard, you should apply for one of these books before the edition is exhausted. It answers nearly every question necessary to be known in successful flower, fruit and lawn culture. Every home owner should have one as a guide to making the home beautiful and the orchard and garden profitable.

Write immediately for your free copy to J. Van Lindley Nursery Co., Pomona, N. C.

Cornell University boasts of a hen, "Cornell Supreme," that has laid 660 eggs in three years. Poultry men claim this is the best record ever made. The eggs weigh 86 pounds, nearly 26 times as much as the hen.

The Vaterland, a steamship of the Hamburg-American line recently launched, is 950 feet long and 100 feet wide. It will carry a search light that will throw a beam of light seven miles and will carry enough life-boats for every passenger.

Buy an Engine with Reserve Power

FARM power needs are seldom the same for any two days together. You never can tell when extra work is going to come up, or extra power will be needed. For this reason it is best to buy an engine a little larger than you ordinarily need. The engine with ten to twenty per cent of reserve power will often save enough to pay for itself just by its capacity for carrying you through emergencies.

I H C Oil and Gas Engines

are large for their rated capacity. They are designed to run at the lowest possible speed to develop their power because that increases the durability of the engine. A speed changing mechanism enables you to vary the speed at will. Any I H C engine will develop from ten to twenty per cent more than its rated horse power. You can use it to run your feed grinder, pump, grindstone, repair shop tools, cream separator or any farm machine to which power can be applied.

I H C engines are made in all approved styles, vertical, horizontal, stationary, portable, skidded, air cooled and water cooled, and in 1 to 50-horse power sizes. They operate on gas, gasoline, kerosene, naphtha, distillate or alcohol. I H C tractors are built in sizes from 12 to 60-horse power. See the I H C local dealer. OUT OF THE FIRE.

Wanted: One Thousand New Daily Subscribers to The Old Reliable.

The News and Observer plant was destroyed by fire on April 24th. But it did not miss a single issue. It appeared the morning after the fire, fresh and resolved to give the news to North Carolina folks.

Work begins at once to rebuild, new machinery has been ordered, and the News and Observer will be better than ever, and try more than ever to serve the people of North Carolina.

The News and Observer needs one thousand new subscribers. The price is six dollars a year. Will YOU not help that paper to rise from its ashes superior to the flames by enrolling yourself as a subscriber?

Address News and Observer, Raleigh, N. C.

THE REASON WHY

The man was a carpenter. His hammer made a merry tune as it pounded the nails, and I saw from the expression of his face that something was giving him inspiration and courage. "Are you a student?" asked the old man, as he reached for another nail, and to my "Yes sir," he paused and wiped the perspiration from his face and asked, "What are you going to do when you get through college?" "Preach," I replied. The old gentleman quickly said, "I have three boys preaching the gospel," and lifted his hammer and continued his work. Then I knew why his hammer gave music to the air and why his face was all aglow.—C. B. RIDDLE.

Both branches of the Vermont legislature have passed a bill appropriating $15,000 for a statue to Franklin Pierce, the only President of the United States Vermont ever had. Pierce was a pro-slavery man, and a Democrat, and all bills heretofore appropriating money for a monument to his memory have been killed, the present legislature being the first Democratic one in 40 years.

THIS WILL INTEREST MANY.

F. W. Parkhurst, the Boston publisher, says that if anyone afflicted with rheumatism in any form, neuralgia or kidney trouble, will send their address to him at 701 Carney Building, Boston, Mass., he will direct them to a permanent cure. DEATHS

Hancock.

Mrs. Lucy V. Hancock, wife of Bro. J. Q. Hancock, of Dory, Va., died at Richmond, Va., April 18, 1913, aged 45 years and 8 months. For several weeks before her death she had suffered intensely and was carried to the hospital for an operation, but died before she returned.

She had been a member of Barretts church for several years and lived a consistent Christian life. She died in the triumphs of this same faith.

She leaves to mourn her departure an aged mother, a devoted husband, one daughter, four brothers and one sister.

Funeral services were conducted by the writer in the presence of a large gathering of friends.

A READING NEIGHBORHOOD.

The Progressive Farmer, in an article on "Some Things You Can Do" to help your neighborhood, has this paragraph:

If there ever was a time when our farmers needed education more than at any other time, that time is right now. Vast problems, involving perhaps the veritable remaking of our rural civilization, are pressing for solution. See that your children are as well educated as possible, and help the cause of education in your neighborhood by getting your neighbors to read the best papers you know. Thousands of farmers have educated themselves by reading good papers. "Make your neighborhood a reading neighborhood," and it will be an intelligent neighborhood, and cooperation will follow.

Fifty years ago there was a neighborhood in one of the counties of North Carolina that was derided for miles around because the people who lived there kept themselves poor buying books, and educating their children. Some of the farmers actually sent their sons—nay, their daughters—to college, to the amused contempt of the rest of the county. They kept an excellent high school going for years; they even organized a debating society, and built a modest but neat brick hall for it to meet in. It was a genuine scandal to their thrifty neighbors the way these people wasted their money on such things as magazines and newspapers, every house in that community was full of them, and high-class, expensive ones too. But the inhabitants of that community were obstinate and held to their career through jeers and jibes.

Out of that community, which never held more than 50 or 75 souls, there have come at least half a dozen men who have reached state-wide eminence; among the sons of those stubborn pioneers are lawyers, doctors, preachers, editors and teachers galore. Some of them have returned to the farms and are now showing the surrounding country what scientific agriculture means. Out of the last generation there has not gone out a single one who has made a failure in life; and several have had brilliant careers. And through its great sons the community itself has come to have a name known all over North Carolina; many a reader of the Daily News will recognize it by no better description than is given here.

"Make your neighborhood and it will be an intelligent neighborhood." Yes, indeed. The chances are that it will become in the course of time a great neighborhood.—Ed. Greensboro Daily News.

OUR PRINCIPLES.

- (1.) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the church.
- (2.) Christian is a sufficient name for the church.
- (3.) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
- (4.) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of church membership.
- (5.) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

They Arrived.

They did quite differently from most people. They arrived. All of us start: just keep on starting. Our trouble is that, before we arrive, we go elsewhere. Some of the brightest and best people you know have this one failing. They do not arrive. They are certainly different from Abraham and the company that went with him. "And they went forth to go into the land of Canaan; and into the land of Canaan they came." (Gen 12:5.) For literary expression, and for a philosophy of life, you can't beat that.

Napoleon said something like it. "The best way to take Vienna is to go and take Vienna." Many start; but few arrive. When dangers, or difficulties, or hindrances come we give up, falter by the way, turn back. Abraham, and all the world's faithful arrive.

Putting God First.

We sometimes get the idea that bad examples, and bad deeds, and sinful acts only are transmitted from father to son.

The papers have been printing far and wide the pious words, emblems of simple trust and faith, found in the will of the late J. Pierpont Morgan. A Boston paper relates that while Mr. Morgan would not often make a public address, on his last visit to Boston he did make a short public address in which the great financier used these words: "My father, in bidding me farewell, when I left him to begin a business career said, Always be true to your country. Next to loyalty to God, make that your supreme endeavor. Be faithful to the government, and in all your transactions see to it that it suffers no detriment at your hands." The father who, in dealing with his son and talking to his son, puts God first, and keeps the divine idea uppermost, will see the fruits thereof in after years.

Prefers Water.

This government is spending millions of money to get water, pure, plentiful water in and through the Panama Canal. But before its wholesome work was done, the saloon men, eager, as they are, for the destruction of life, limb, and character, rushed in with thirty-five saloons to supply the thirst. But our Secretary of War Garrison prefers pure water for our Canal Zone and his order moving every saloon out of the Zone has gone forth.

All hail, Secretary Garrison! May your kind multiply. Your chief, our President, refused to serve wine at his table. Your colleague, our Secretary of State, declined to allow any liquors on his table when he gave a dinner to the diplomats. And now, Mr. Garrison, our Secretary of War, you wipe out all saloons in the Canal Zone. Somehow these things make us feel comfortable and very glad. As the Christian Endeavor World (Boston) remarks: "The wife of the Vice-President declares that she also has never served intoxicants at her table, and does not intend to begin. This is indeed a cold-water administration."

He Loved His Mother.

Rev. Dr. Peck relates that, the memorable morning in Manila Harbor, a signal for action was given. A powder boy and permission to dive for him, which he had dropped overboard. Being recalled, he rushed to the opposite side of the ship and leaped into the sea. The boat was rescued, but the lad was thrown into prison for disobeying orders. Being court martialed, he related to Admiral Dewey that his mother's picture was in his coat pocket, and he was taking a last look at that when his coat went overboard. With tears in his eyes Admiral Dewey ordered the boy's release. When a boy loves his mother well enough to risk his life, and hazard all, for her picture, you may count on him as having that in him which is worth while.

But our Savior not only risked, He gave his life that "whosoever would believe on Him should have life everlasting." No boy ever loved his mother in all this world like the Savior loves the poorest, the sinfullest, and the most wayward. Multiply any incident of human love by ten thousand, and then you will not have so much as touched the shallowest currents of His immeasurable love.

Feeding The Hungry.

There would not be any hungry people in the world, who could not be immediately fed, if all would hear and heed the gospel. Our Savior did not intend, our Creator did not design, that men and women should be hungry without having wherewithal to appease hunger. "I have been young, and now am old," observed David, "but this one thing I have never seen, the righteous forsaken, nor his seed begging bread."

Hunger, poorly cooked food, inadequate diet, lead to many ills in this life and are the foundations of many domestic trials and tribulations. Jesus understood this and so refused to send the multitudes away in a hungry condition, when they had spent hours with Him. They would be in a critical and unwholesome frame of mind. A Supreme Court Justice in New York a few days ago, trying to settle a difficulty between a man and his wife, sent them away to a restaurant, while the Court adjourned. He ordered a bountiful repast for the unhappy pair, and that they should talk over their difficulties while they ate heartily together. When Court convened the man and wife announced that they had made up. The Judge extended his congratulations and the two went off home together apparently happy. It is hard to be happy on an empty stomach. Pure food, and properly prepared food, are together the source of untold human ills, woes, and miseries. "Give ye them to eat."

A National Danger.

We had been expecting that the total abstainers in authority would draw fire. They have. The liquor folks are alarmed. This cold-water and grape-juice business looks too much like sanity, safety and sobriety to them. We felt sure the howl would come sooner or later. It comes by way of The Brewer's Review in these words, "Prohibition is no longer a local issue. The last stage has been reached. Prohibition is a national danger. The enemy has shown that he is the controlling power in Washington. The enemy is not resting on his laurels. He is already marching forward to the next battle. He knows what the next step is." So the liquor people are alarmed and are mad—because our officers at Washington are ruling liquor out. All right. Let the fight go on and may the Lord help us.

The Temperance Wave.

The map prepared recently, and sent out, by the Anti-Saloon League, shows that the cause of temperance sweeps on toward triumph. There is now in the United States a population of 46,000,000 living in no-license territory. Of the 2,856 counties in the United States over 1,700, nearly two-thirds, have no saloons. More than 500 cities with a population of 5,000 or more each are dry, and nine States have state-wide prohibition. The Michigan legislature has recently asked Congress to submit to a vote of the people an amendment to our Constitution prohibiting the sale of liquor anywhere in the United States. If the people get a chance at nation-wide prohibition, it is highly probable that they will banish the saloon, as already more than half the whole population now live in prohibition territory.

And all this has come about by education, agitation, and organization, in the past few years. He is short-sighted indeed, who thinks the temperance tide is receding. It is rising higher and gaining volume and velocity every day. Have you a son, a brother, a husband who has fallen into the clutches of the saloon? Preach temperance, and pray the God of our fathers that the tidal wave may sweep on.

There are always those whose eyes are holden so that they cannot see the beauty and holiness that wait in any place where men live, but must go to the ends of the earth in a vain search for that which stands at their doors. Sir Launfal leaves the Christ at his gates when he goes on the long and idle quest and finds his Master only when he has learned that the divine is always close at hand. The illusion of the remote, complex, and obscure is the thinnest of veils to those who have once seen life face to face and passed through the process to the reality.—The Outlook.

EXALTING MAN.

What is man, that thou art mindful of him? Thou has crowned him with glory and honor. Psalms 8:4-5.

There are many ways in which God seeks to honor and exalt man. He made man in His own image; He gives man the power of abstract thought; He permits man to see, realize, and enjoy the good, the true, and the beautiful.

These are high privileges which God does not grant to any other being other than man. While these are high and exalted privileges, there is another different from these and higher and more honorable than either.

This highest of all privileges given of God to man is the privilege of giving to advance the kingdom of God.

There are three things we may give: Ourselves, our time, and our substance.

The minister gives himself; the mother gives her time; the philanthropist gives his substance. This is honor, this is exaltation; to be allowed to contribute to the salvation of men, the building up of the church and the advancement of the kingdom of Christ. God did not need, from His lack and want, that men should give themselves to preach. He could have dispatched the holy angels and they would have proclaimed the gospel message.

God did not need, from His lack and want, that the mother should waste her strength bending over the frail form of her delicate child. But God wanted to create a new sort of heavenly sympathy, of divine tenderness, of loving interest here on earth; and so he permitted this earth to sound far and loud with the meaning of Mother. God did not need, from His lack and want, that men should contribute their dollars to buy bread for the hungry, shelter for the homeless, and to send the gospel to the heathen. But man needed to know the depth of human want, the height of human hope, and the joy of seeing others saved. God wanted to honor and exalt man; that is the reason man is permitted to give to advance the kingdom.

God is not poor that He needs your money. God is rich. The cattle upon a thousand hills is his. At His command the mountains bring forth treasures, and the fields smile with golden harvests. At God's utterance every stone would turn to gold, every pebble be transformed into diamonds. God does not need your dollars, but you need the joy, the honor, the exaltation of sharing your dollars with God in the betterment of the world, in the salvation of men.

The reason why God lets us give of our substance to further His cause is because He loves us so. He wants us to feel that "we are co-laborers together with God."

It is as much some men's duty to make money as it is that of others to preach, to teach, to go as a missionary. God has given to some the peculiar ability to make money. Now He certainly did not give this talent to some because He wanted some to be rich, and lavish recklessly upon themselves. Nay, verily, God is no respecter of persons. But God gave the ability to some to make money more than He did to others, because He wanted them to enjoy with Him the work of relieving human suffering, spreading His glorious gospel, doing His divine work. The rich man ought to be the happiest man in all the community. He has the privilege of sharing in a marked manner heaven's joy in the salvation of souls.

I know a rich man who is enjoying life to a wonderful degree. He is sharing heaven's joy about fourteen times as much as any other one man. He supports fourteen missionaries in the foreign field from his own private purse. (And this is only a small part of his gifts to the Lord's cause).

The Lord has given this man a talent for making money. The man has discovered his talent, has made several millions, and enjoys the exaltation, the distinction and the honor wherewith God hath honored him. He gives of his substance with a liberal hand to advance God's kingdom. God does not need the man's money; but through his money the man is working with God for the salvation of souls.

No man knows the joy of living until he has discovered the grace of giving.

"The liberal soul shall be made fat," because it feeds in God's banquet hall. Pity the man who gives grudgingly, or does not give at all. He is cheating himself out of the honor that God wants to confer upon him.

A WORTHY CAUSE.

The Christian Orphanage is the creation of our sacrifices, the child of our care, and the institution of our affections. We have done well to build and equip. A half-hundred and more fatherless and motherless ones have been gathered there, and our liberality must supply them food and raiment.

It takes every dollar our Sunday-schools and churches give, through the usual channels, to supply current expenses to buy daily bread.

Every extra need calls for extra contributions, extra gifts and liberality.

This is why, now and then, the Superintendent in his department makes appeals for special donations.

Now, beloved, we have really and truly come to a necessity which must be provided, save to a necessity which must be provided, and there are no funds with which to provide, save those that are contributed in a special way, as special individual gifts.

The necessity of which we speak is a water and sewerage system. The time has come when this is no longer a matter of choice—it must be provided.

Many a SUN reader will possibly say "We have no water or sewerage system in our house." Possibly. But between sixty and seventy-five people do not live in your house either.

It is positively dangerous, really and truly threatening for this number mostly children, to live under one roof without a water system.

The Trustees have ordered this system put in at a cost of about $900.00. There is only about $335.00 on hand. The rest must come in by special gifts; or it will have to be borrowed. Don't let us go deeper in debt. Help us with this needed charity today.

Rev. E. M. Carter, our worthy superintendent is practicing every economy he knows; is using well every dollar he gets, is doing all he can to maintain and build up this worthy charity. He deserves and should have the sympathy, and hearty cooperation of the brotherhood everywhere. He asks, he deserves, he needs, just now in his great undertaking, every dollar he can get, outside of enough for current expenses, to put in this water system. If you can spare a dollar, reader, send it to him. He needs it; the institution must have it. The call is urgent; the necessity pressing, and the cause a most worthy one indeed.

Will not many SUN readers send checks and save the embarrassment of having to further burden the institution with debt?

THE ART OF LOAFING.

The alert Charlotte Observer knows a great many things very well, but when it does fall it tumbles. We quote, to convict, from a recent editorial utterance:

"In his installation address at Washington and Lee University Dr. Henry Louis Smith declared that the institution should 'teach future citizens to loaf wisely and to play happily as well as to work efficiently and study diligently.' This is all right except the word 'loaf.' It does not convey accurately to the average reader's mind what Doctor Smith meant."

Dr. Smith is a scholar and a philosopher, and evidently meant what he said. He may have gone to the limit, and stepped on the border in the use of his word "loaf," but all really great speakers and thinkers do that. Failure is just one short step removed from success, defeat only one inch from victory. But back to "loaf." Surely our esteemed must know that the art of taking time, being at ease, not worrying, failing to fret and fuss, is a lost art, one that has been buried beneath the mad whirl and furious rush of this nervous age. It is far easier now to work and worry than it is to loaf and rest. Electricity fills the air. Our brain and nerves have caught the fever. Nobody stops. Time was when men could take a day off and visit their neighbors. That day is gone. We knew the time when farmers and business men could stop awhile with their families every day and have family prayers. The man who tries that now is likely to be disturbed every minute by the 'phone bell, or a half dozen callers on business. Men do not even stop work now when they go to church. A minister related recently that he approached a business man of his church, just after the sermon, and thanked him for the straight look and unbroken attention given to the sermon. "You did not take your eye from me," said the minister, "the whole time I was preaching, and your close attention was inspiring." The business man, who occupied the front seat, frankly replied, "I am ashamed, Sir, but really I did not hear one word of your sermon, from text to benediction. I have been on a big business deal the past week and had not finished it when Sunday came, and I was going over it all in my mind as you preached."

Dr. Smith was evidently speaking in his inaugural of the inability to stop awhile and think a bit about more weighty matters. While we write there falls under our eye this paragraph from The Biblical Recorder, of Raleigh:

"One of the sins of our time is the rush and swirl of our life. We have so little time for the real things that minister to our happiness and usefulness. Some one has made the striking observation that the evil one has no better aide-de-camp in this generation than hurry. And one of the evils of hurry is the inevitable tendency to neglect the weightier matters. For instance: 'You cannot treat God as a passing acquaintance dismissed by a nod; you cannot starve your soul and choke it off from quiet communion with Him and hope to write autobiography fit for the library of heaven.'"

Christianity removes the attraction of the earth; and this is one way in which it diminishes man's burdens. It makes them citizens of another world.—Henry Drummond.

NOTES AND PERSONALS.

—Rev. A. M. Hanson changes his address from Princeton, N. J., where he has been doing University work for the past year, to 618 Boone St., Marshalltown, Iowa.

—"It is a waste of politeness to be courteous to the Devil," said Garrison. A maxim worth remembering provided you are sure it is the Devil to whom you are paying your discourtesies.

—Mrs. J. T. Weldon, D. F. D. 5, Louisburg, N. C.: "I am really glad of the great improvement in THE CHRISTIAN SUN. The print is so much better and the size is fine. I wish you much success."

—Editor Clarence Poe, of The Progressive Farmer, Raleigh, N. C.: "I congratulate you upon the greatly improved form and appearance of THE CHRISTIAN SUN. I am glad to note such progress and wish you good luck."

—We deeply sympathize with our brother R. T. Kernodle, and his dear family, of Union Ridge, N. C., in their recent bereavement. The wife and mother, a most noble and devoted Christian soul, passed out to the spirit land May 9th.

—The new Elon College catalogue of 178 pages is a masterpiece of the printers' art, and certainly reflects credit upon our Southern Christian Publishing Company and proves its ability to get out the very best sort of book and job work.

—Dr. J. F. McCulloch, Greensboro, Says: "The Biederwolf's meetings are great. The attendance is great, the singing is great, the preaching is great, the results are great. It has been a long time since our city was so stirred religiously."

—Alonza C. Hall, Columbia University, New York: "I am pleased with the opportunity of seeing the bright, happy, CHRISTIAN SUN in a dress that is withal becoming and satisfying. Form and matter are congenial now, and THE SUN will shine more brightly."

—Rev. J. W. Harrell, pastor Washington St. Christian church, Portsmouth, Va., preached a special sermon commemorative of "Mother's Day" to the Junior Order of American Mechanics of the city who went in a body to hear him last Sunday night. His subject was "Mother's Place."

—The Smithfield Herald says of President Harper's baccalaureate address before the Kenly High School on Sunday, the 4th inst. "Dr. Harper, being a former teacher of the Kenly school, made of his address a heart to heart talk. He made a most vital impression on the people of Kenly."

—Since forwarding cashier's check for $101.67 to Rev. J. G. Bishop, D. D., Dayton, April 29th, we have received the following additional: Master Kenneth P. Maddox, $1.00; Rev. P. T. Klapp, $1.00; L. S. Parker, $1.00; Berea (Nansemond) Church, Drivers, Va., $15.00; H. D. Lambeth, $1.00.

—Our friend, Mr. De Roy Fonville, an Elon College honor graduate and a very successful practitioner, announces under date of May the 1st that he has opened an office for the practice of law in the town of Burlington, N. C. We wish for our friend, Mr. Fonville, all the success which he so richly deserves.

—His physician has advised that Rev. J. M. Roberts, pastor Main St. church, Berkley, Va., take a seven months rest in the open air in the mountains. Brother Roberts has not decided where he will go, but will leave as soon as able. He is sitting up some about the house and expects to be able to travel shortly. He has our best wishes for complete and early recovery.

—Rev. W. L. Wells, Columbus, Ga.: "Enclosed is my renewal to THE SUN for another year. THE CHRISTIAN SUN is no longer in partial eclipse, but is shining more brilliantly than ever before. To say the least, I am delighted with it. Heartiest congratulations. You may expect some new subscriptions from my field soon."

—We are certainly grateful for the scores of messages congratulating our Publishing House on presenting the people each week now THE CHRISTIAN SUN in such improved, enlarged, and readable form. Kindly speak to your neighbor, dear friend, about your church paper, and ask him to subscribe for it—he needs it in his family.

—Mrs. J. M. Roberts, Windsor, Va., writes: "The physician finds no dull spots in husband's lungs. Respiration about the same all over both lungs. The main trouble is with his throat. He will consult a specialist and will spend some time in the mountains taking a complete rest, after which our physician thinks he will be sound again."

—Our often esteemed neighbor, the Greensboro Daily News, had as the headlines of a recent editorial: "What Will Be the Next Issue In National Politics?" Oh! brother and beloved, please don't. We haven't got over this issue yet. Let us rest six months at any rate and then you may pump us with "platforms," and "platforms" again.

—Word comes that Rev. L. E. Smith, formerly pastor of First church, Greensboro, but now doing theological work at Princeton University, has passed successfully first year work and has been advanced to the work of the second year. Bro. Smith is a man of bright mind, and success in study goes easily with him. He is to remain at Princeton another year.

—Rev. P. T. Klapp: "I am encouraged and delighted with THE SUN in its present form, size, and condition. I wish it may soon be found in every home of our church. I hand you herewith two new subscriptions, and I trust to hand you others shortly. You have my best wishes in this great undertaking to give us a first-class denominational paper."

—J. Beale Johnson, Cardenas, N. C.: "You must accept my congratulations on the greatly improved and now exceedingly handsome CHRISTIAN SUN. It is the most beautiful church paper I have seen. Enclosed find check for $3.00 for two new subscribers. Wish I could get a thousand. THE SUN deserves them." Thanks. (That is almost as good as going a-fishing, but shall not prove a substitute).

—Rev. W. D. Harward, Newport News, Va., May 10: "Enclosed find check for renewal and a new subscriber. I have been late in saying so, but I am pleased with the improvement in THE SUN, our church paper. I am hoping to send in some new subscriptions soon. Please send me some sample copies." We are pleased to furnish sample copies for free distribution to those wishing to solicit subscriptions.

—Rev. G. D. Hunt, Wadley, Ala.: "Please publish that the Missionary Association of the Alabama Christian Conference will meet with Antioch church embracing the 5th Sunday in June. Program will appear at early date." THE SUN's editor regrets that he will not enjoy the high privilege that fell to his lot last year of attending this Association. The subject of Missions is given right of way with this body and the discussions are helpful.

—The Sunday School Convention of the Eastern Virginia Conference has been invited to meet with the Suffolk Christian Church July 23-24-25, which means that the Sunday school workers in this great Conference will have about the best and biggest convention ever. Suffolk will do the entertaining act in regal style; is easy access and has Sunday school workers, who will help in a practical way to make the convention a great success.

—Rev. L. F. Johnson, Raleigh, N. C.: "There has never been such profound interest in the Raleigh work as there is at present. God has wonderfully blessed us in our efforts here. The work is a singular blessing. Our new Annex will be ready for use by June the 1st. We desire your prayers and co-operation in future efforts. I am pressing all that I can in order to get matters in excellent shape here before the appointed time for my leaving, July the 1st."

—Sister Nannie L. Hawkins, Hurdle's Mill, N. C.: "I am delighted with the improvement in THE SUN. You may count on my subscription as long as I live, unless providentially prevented from being able to pay for it. I am so glad we have a publishing House. I wanted to help build it and regret that I did not. I am far removed from any church of my denomination and my church paper is all I have to keep me in touch with the church I so much love."

—Now is the time, this is the very day, and immediately the very moment for 500 CHRISTIAN SUN subscribers to show their appreciation of the new and improved SUN by doing as a good friend who writes: "Enclosed find check for renewal to THE SUN. I am ashamed to have an old date on my paper, which has on such a fine dress now." Thanks, good friend and sister. If all SUN subscribers will show their appreciation in like manner, how happy, indeed, we shall be.

—Rev. W. C. Wicker was called by telegram to conduct the funeral last Sunday of Bro. John I. Kelly of Shallow Well Church, Jonesboro. Bro. Kelly was a leading member in his church and will be greatly missed. The Sunday-school went in a body to the grave of the one they loved, and every member carried flowers to place upon the mound. Dr. Wicker was in Harnett County at the dedication of Pleasant Union church and so could not respond to the wire for his services.

—Rev. S. B. Klapp, Greensboro: "I send check for $3.00 covering two renewals for THE SUN. I assure you that I present the claims of THE CHRISTIAN SUN every Sunday to my people in some of my congregations. I congratulate you on the great improvement in the appearance of THE SUN. My work seems to be in good condition. We had a good day at Pleasant Grove (Randolph) last Sunday. The congregation was very large, more than the house could hold. Offering for missions was good. We have placed a good organ in the church."

—Burlington News, May the 7th: "At a meeting of the Trustees of the Burlington Graded School last Friday night, Rev. Dr. P. H. Fleming was elected superintendent of the school for the coming year. Mr. Fleming needs no introduction to our people, as he was a resident here for twenty years and removed only two years ago. He is known as a most cultured and polished man and a great educator, having been County Superintendent of Education at two different times. This is a great opportunity for Dr. Fleming, and we are sure he will measure up to it."

We congratulate Dr. Fleming on his success in being elected to the position of his desire, and sincerely trust that this will not interfere with the great work he is doing as minister and pastor. His usefulness and devotion are well known amongst us.

FROM OUR CONTRIBUTORS

DR. SARGENT AT ELON COLLEGE.

The Educational Secretary Charms His Southern Brethren.

Few men can combine scholarship with preaching ability as Secretary Dr. W. G. Sargent, Providence, R. I., does and did during his five days just concluded here. Dr. Sargent believes in the ministry and believes that scholarship is necessary to the minister if he is to bring forth the finest fruitage of life and service.

"You cannot accomplish great things for Christ in the Christian Church nor any other Church, without an adequately trained ministry" seemed to be the burden of his every message and of his conversation. Our Colleges are the backbone of our future prosperity—the sentence that has appeared in connection with his departmental work in the Herald of Gospel Liberty and elsewhere—has a deeper meaning now that it has the background of his earnestness to enforce it.

"I am really proud of our great social program, but I wish to remind you that Christ is the only salvation for this age or any other age." The need of this age of investigation and doubt is the personal Christ presented in such manner as to bring knowledge of Him, love for Him, and service in His cause. "Culture—the only true culture is Christian." These are characteristic sentences that clustered the diadems in a crown and sparkled like jewels all through his lectures, discourses, and sermons.

Dr. Sargent is a Christian scholar, by which I mean he is a Christian first and a scholar second, and there is a great difference which of these two comes first in the emphasis of thought and attitude of life and mind. He is ready for the truth, for the truth shall make us free, but is open-minded and ready also for new interpretations of the truth. He is of the opinion that much of the disagreement between the new theology and the old theology is merely a confusion of terms and a restatement of the old truth under new conditions. He is a progressive-conservative, and that should be the attitude of the religious leader instituting on the doctrines of the faith as they have been delivered to us and ready for a new light on those same doctrines, so that they shall have the influence of hallowedness and yet be swept clear of their mustiness and debris.

The first lecture was to the entire student body and the public, and treated of Tennyson as An Interpreter of the Spiritual Life. The address exhibited wide and accurate knowledge of the great Englishman's writings and keen insight into their meaning. It was plainly shown that Tennyson was an epitome of the religious struggle in the nineteenth century and while he managed to hold on to his faith and to believe that doubt was devil-born, he yet never got further than the ability to "say we cannot prove; we can but hope," and so great as he was, he was not and is not a safe guide in matters generally.

Dr. Sargent the next morning began an institute of six masterful lectures of two and one-half hours each on the Revelation, in which he is a specialist that needeth not to be ashamed. The thirty-five young ministers, who are here preparing for the ministry, were delighted and instructed by these deliverances, in substance what he had already published to the world, but revised and enlarged and carried further by the addition of two entirely new lectures. It is hoped that these lectures will find permanent form in a book.

Another delightful lecture to the ministers was that whose title was, The Modern Minister and His Bible, with which the young men were exceedingly well-pleased.

Sunday morning the sermon was entitled, The Culture of the Spirit, in which he pleaded for greater attention to the devotional side of the Christian life and deplored the paucity of books treating on that theme. The evening sermon was on the New Vision, which he interpreted to be Militant Service and in which he declared that the greatest modern statesmen are our foreign missionaries and the officers that man our foreign mission boards.

Monday morning Dr. Sargent left for Franklinton, where he will visit Franklinton Christian College for the Colored race and thence for Providence.

MEMORIAL CHRISTIAN TEMPLE ITEMS.

Our "Church paper" week was productive of good and we had the pleasure of sending in eight new subscriptions to THE SUN and the same number to the Herald. We have a few more promises for both of them soon.

Mrs C. L. Guynn is very ill. Loving hearts and kind hands are doing all they can to lengthen out the brittle threads of life that she may be with us as long as possible.

We celebrated the quarter-centennial anniversary of the beginning of our work in Japan as requested by our Japanese brethren on the evening of April 24th. A splendid program was given, with a history of the work, and this was followed with a delightful social hour. The social room was neatly decorated and in one corner was a booth in which many Japanese curios were displayed and explained, in another missionary literature was distributed, in another light refreshments were served, and in another some maps and drawings were shown. We have prayed much lately for our work here.

Rev. Marinus James of the Norfolk Naval Y. M. C. A. will preach for us Sunday morning the 18th while the pastor preaches the baccalaureate sermon before the High school class and their friends at Wakefield, Va.

Mrs. L. W. Stagg, Mrs. Denison and myself expect to attend the missionary mass meeting at Elon College, May 27 and 28.

The church will have a treat Sunday June first when the pastor will be absent, and for the morning service he has secured Rev Yutaka Minakuchi a noted Japanese Christian worker and orator. Mr. Minakuchi is one of the most interesting and cultured missionary speakers to be found; in the evening Mr. David H. Brown of Richmond, State Secretary of the Laymen's Missionary Movement will speak. Mr. Brown is a strong man with a message to thrill. He is a layman who gave up a successful business life to enter the work and speaks with an earnestness that wins.

The Temple is looking forward with much interest to the second Sunday in June when the church makes its annual special offering for foreign missions. The Lord has richly blessed us and we hope to show our appreciation by a generous offering of money, and consecration of life. We are hoping for a day of great spiritual blessing. Morning prayer meetings will be held May 25, June 1, and 8 for the cause. The church missionary committee is very busy these days in preparation for the work. Letters are being sent to every family asking their prayers and help in every way.

I would like to see the pastor who has any better or more generous hearted people than the pastor of Memorial Christian Temple. Their kindnesses all the year since we came to them have been many. The last overt and open act was to present the pastor with a fine suit of clothes and they do not do things by halves either.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL AS A SOCIAL AGENCY.

BY REV. F. A. CROUCH.

One of the most vital questions of the present day is how to socialize education. We have for generations been preparing pupils for individual success, in terms of money, power, fame and position. This must be displaced with the newer and better ideal of social service.

This has an immediate bearing on the problem of the Sunday school. We have been using the methods used in secular education, but now realize the need of change in the curriculum. We must make use of the altruistic impulses of adolescence and lay emphasis on motor education—the education of the brain cells whose functioning produces action. Therefore social instruction and opportunity for at least elementary social service, are alike vital to present day religious education. We must teach the pupils their duty to society and give them an opportunity to perform it.

In our social institutions we must give the social aspects of the Biblical material. We have been emphasizing religion as the relation of the individual to God without reference to its relation to our fellows. In other words, let us for the benefit of the growing boys and girls, interpret the prophets in terms of his own day. Let us see how the prophet received religion, not in terms of ritual or ceremonial; not in terms of fasting and services; but in terms of actual service of one's fellow men.

Let us see the Son of Man engaged in a crusade not only against the powers of the personal, individual evil which alone we are prone to call sin, but against the iniquities of the established order of His day.

To give social instruction, the teacher must be inoculated with the social gospel. The teacher who has caught the social vision and who brings that vision to the study and presentation of the Bible will prepare the pupil for social duties and responsibilities which are, at the same time, religious.

All teacher training courses should include discussion of social problems in the light of a social gospel. Only as they have learned this new point of view can they impart the truth to others. Advanced pupils should receive specific instructions in the nature and phases of the social problem with reference to local community needs, and some method of service planned that will allow actual service.

All this has as its aim, the teaching of Christianity in the social as well as in its industrial aspects.

The ultimate result of social service will be the reinterpretation of Christianity in relation to life.

NOTICE!

The next session of the Eastern Virginia Sunday School Convention will meet at the usual time in July with the Christian Church in Suffolk. The matter was recently decided at a business meeting of the church and the invitation extended to the executive committee of the convention. The invitation has been accepted and the Sunday schools of the Eastern Virginia Convention are hereby notified.

S. M. SMITH, General Secretary.

Central Y. M. C. A., Norfolk, Va.

I WILL.

I will start anew this morning with a higher, fairer creed;
 I will cease to stand complaining of my ruthless neighbor's greed;
 I will cease to sit repining when my duty's call is clear;
 I will waste no moment whining and my heart shall know no fear.

I will look sometimes about me for the things that merit praise;
 I will search for hidden beauties that elude the grumbler's gaze;
 I will try to find contentment in the paths that I must tread;
 I will cease to have resentment when another moves ahead.

I will not be swayed by envy when my rival's strength is shown;
 I will not deny his merits, but I'll strive to prove my own;
 I will try to see the beauty spread before me, rain or shine;
 I will cease to preach thy duty and be more concerned with mine.

—S. E. Kiser, in Chicago Record-Herald.

"CATCH MY PAL."

Fifty years ago a schoolboy in Armagh City, Ireland, was laughingly called "Roast Missionary" by his companions, who knew of his desire to go to Africa when he became a man. Their good-natured taunts did not make him less anxious to go as a missionary, but circumstances made the fulfillment of his boyhood dream an impossibility.

But he became a missionary of another sort, and right in his home town. As pastor of a church he was much disturbed by the drinking habits of most of the men of Armagh. He gave much thought to devising plans to start an effective temperance crusade among them, but his efforts were unsuccessful until one evening in July 1909, his attention was called to six men who stood talking around a lamp-post on the main street. A passer-by laughingly challenged him to persuade those men to sign the pledge. He accepted the challenge, and approached the men, one of whom had been drinking liberally, as the day before had been a holiday.

He was a man who knew how to persuade others, so it was not long till they agreed to take the pledge. But he would not allow them to do it as they wished. They must not come to him at once, and they must not come alone. He felt that if they would take time to think of the act they proposed, and would then come to him together and sign in the presence of one another, there might be more hope of their keeping the pledge. Reluctantly they agreed to this plan, and promised to be at his home three nights later.

Anxiously the minister waited for the time appointed. Would the men come? If they should come together, he felt there would be some assurance that his work with them would be of permanent value.

To his delight, the six men came on Friday evening. When they were ready to take the pledge, he had an inspiration.

"Men, I'll not let any one of you take the pledge to-night unless each one of you undertakes to go out and catch another fellow and come back with him on to-morrow night week at nine o'clock. There are six of you to-night; and there will be twelve the next night; and there will be twenty-four the next; forty-eight the next; and ninety-six the next; and in a few weeks we shall have the whole countryside."

Eagerly the six men agreed to the terms proposed, signed the pledge, and went out.

Then followed an anxious week, which came to an end when there was a knock at the door. On the step stood eleven men. One of the first six was detained at home by illness, but he had secured his man, according to promise. The six newcomers were among the greatest drinkers in the new city. But they all signed the pledge, and agreed, each one, to bring in his man.

The eleven men were formed into a society that night, and the name chosen was "The Armagh Protestant Total Abstinence Union." While this was the dress-parade name, "Catch-my-pal" became the popular name. It was accepted in consequence of the leader's appeal to the eleven men to go out and catch their pals and bring them to him on the following Monday night at half past nine o'clock. At once he saw that his men had caught fire. Around the table in the dining-room they knelt down and asked God's blessings on their efforts.

The prayer was answered. On Monday evening there was again a knock at the door. The men walked in in Indian file. A woman member of the church was calling at the time, when she heard the sound of the tread of marching feet in the hall. She came to the door of the room and stood there while thirty-one men wheeled around her into the room and took up positions all around it. She learned what they were there for, and she hurried out to tell the news. Next day the whole town knew what was going on.

The next meeting was appointed for the school-room, as the dining-room had become too small for the crowd.

Four nights later one hundred and five men in a body walked to the schoolroom. Every newcomer took the pledge. Then, at the call of their leader, they stood with clenched fists and spoke the battle-cry of the new movement, "We will see this thing through."

They have been seeing it through. The enthusiasm. Nearly every man in Armagh was brought in. The county became interested. Surrounding towns caught the fever. England and Scotland caught the fever from Ireland. The minister had to resign his church and give his entire time to the campaign.

Within three years one hundred and fifty thousand men signed the pledge. Perhaps half of these were drinking men. The abstinence of these wage-earners has transformed villages and towns.

And all because of God's blessing on the efforts of men to work for one another. The minister's geometrical progression proposition had done its work.—The Adult Class.

POSSESSING THE NEW LAND.

When Christ offers us a new life in himself, he means that it shall be really new and wholly new. "Behold, I make all things new," is his offer and promise to us. But we must make it possible for him to do this by a sweeping abandonment, in his strength, of everything that has wrongfully had a place in our life hitherto. We must make no provision for any return to the old life. As Dr. Campbell Morgan says to the young convert: "Mark your determination to press on into possession of the new land by burning every bridge behind you. Make no provision for going back." This is unconditional surrender. This is complete trust. And it is not strange that Christ cannot completely bless us with the fulness of his life until we thus completely trust him. If we have been holding on to some one relic of the old life of disease and death, let us this day break with it forever. Our Lord will make every provision for our moving forward when we make no provision for moving backward.—S. S. Times.

The proper way to make an estimate of ourselves is to consider seriously what we value or despise in others.—Ex.

INFLUENCE BY OBEDIENCE.

I suspect that a very large number of Christians do not realize the fact that they exert a far greater influence upon other people than they have any conception of. This is especially true of those Christians who have a very modest estimate of themselves and who fancy that they do not count for much in their community. Nevertheless, it is true that the Christian whose leading purpose is to obey God in relation to every known duty, does thereby exert a good deal of influence upon men who see evidences of such obedience. In Paul's letter to the Roman Christians he says: "Your obedience is come abroad unto all men. I rejoice, therefore, over you." We may believe that those Christians were greatly surprised when they read such words from Paul. While they were diligently obeying God, thus fulfilling their duty, it is not at all probable that they had the least thought of influencing others by their example. But it appears that they made a very favorable reputation by such a course. They did not boast of their obedience, but others told about it, and the story spread abroad to many people. A writer says: "A member of the household of a certain well-known Christian worker of this generation, who had an opportunity to see him in the hum drum of house life, as well as in his place of prominence before the public, said of him to a friend: 'He is the most obedient man I have ever known.' It was a blessed tribute, and his 'obedience is come abroad unto all men.' O, the joy and peace and power of just doing the will of God, constantly, in quiet, swift, sensitive obedience; especially in the thousand and one seemingly little things of the daily routine in home, or school, or office." The Christian who is known to be obedient to God, as a matter of principle, is far more respected in society than is the professor of religion who manifests a disobedient spirit. His example is a rebuke to all disobedient ones. Remember, also that the person who is strictly obedient to God, is honest and truthful toward all who deal with him. All have faith in him.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S CONVENTION.

As the time is approaching for our Young People's Convention, our pastors and Sunday school Superintendents should be busy in seeing that we get a good delegation.

With the rush of work in the Southern Christian Convention there is not time to devote to the Sunday school and Christian Endeavor in order to bring them before our people as they should be. If our church is to grow or even hold its own, the young people must be cared for and looked after.

It is important that all the pastors, superintendents, and teachers attend with as many delegates as possible. Every Sunday school and Christian Endeavor should be represented. The nearness to the College will give delegates from a distance a good opportunity to attend the Commencement exercises. If the Convention is a success the people of the Southern Christian Convention must make it so. Let us work and pray for a great Convention.

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENTS

SUFFOLK LETTER.

This is May 9, 1913, and it is evening. I would not give the date, but it may serve some day to settle a point of time in history. Many a time I have read an article and wanted to know the date of its composition, but could find no clue to it.

I sometimes feel like a caterer; yes, a plain cook, who has to prepare meals when weather is dry and markets are bare. It must require ingenuity to prepare a meal when weather and markets and purse array themselves against the kitchen. Writers, just common correspondents, (I do not mean editors) have the same sort of trials. The day is approaching, the printer is in waiting, copy must be reeled off an empty loom. It may be hash and bread pudding, or toast and tongue. No matter you must fill a column and if thoughts will not come words must take the place of both. And all must be wholesome. A scrap dinner may be good and odds and ends of thoughts may suggest something very useful.

It has been "Memorial Day" in Suffolk. The cemetery lots have been cleaned up and the mounds covered with rare flowers. The graveyard looks and smells like a garden. The new leaves on the trees and the new grass springing out of the ground remind one of resurrection. The thing was great. The Band played, the Woodmen marched, the "Vets" were in automobiles! Think of it! Confederate soldiers, the soldiers of a "lost cause," riding in automobiles, free! Does that look like defeat? No: and many Christians that seem defeated in the spiritual fight may sometime ride in the celestial procession in God's chariots! There is no defeat on the side of the right. Well, it was a bright day. At the Confederate monument, in Cedar Hill Cemetery, Rev. R. M. Maxey offered prayer, Rev. R. A. McFarland introduced Rev. W. A. Hall who delivered the oration. Rev. W. W. Staley pronounced the benediction and the soldiers fired the salute. The great assembly dispersed and the city of the dead was silent again.

Now, there is a small cemetery, containing sixty graves, on the other side of town. It is "Willow Hill." It is the church graveyard where Rev. W. B. Wellons, his family, Rev. J. N. Manning and his daughter were buried. This cemetery is somewhat neglected when compared with "Cedar Hill" owned and kept by the city. There are no new graves in it. Most of those who buried their dead there twenty-five years ago are gone. The "Tom Smith Camp of Confederate Veterans" marched to this cemetery to pay their respect to Dr. Wellon's grave, on every Memorial Day, until they grew too feeble to march to both cemeteries. I always accompanied them and offered a prayer. Last year I went alone and offered a prayer. Today Rev. H. H. Butler and I went together and both of us offered prayer beside the Wellon's monument. We carried roses and placed one on each of fourteen graves. Two of them were the graves of Boston Bryant and his wife, in the colored cemetery near by. Boston was our sexton for twenty-five years. He was Dr. Wellon's carriage driver before the Civil War. I said to a colored man as I laid the roses on the good old sexton's grave: "that is what I would like to teach the world—to put one rose where they cannot afford a floral design." But so many people are unwilling to do small good things; but that is just what Jesus wants. "Thou has been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things."

As brother Butler and I stood, mused, and prayed by the monument erected by the many friends of Dr. Wellons, we did not forget the last living member of that great family, brother James W. Wellons. We seemed to be in touch with two worlds, and our thoughts climbed the ladder of imagination till we reached the portal where good departed ones enter heaven. There was no throng. There was no music save the song of birds. There was no oration. No sound of human voices. No volley of soldiers' guns. But there was the silence of nature, the glory of sunlight, the presence of angels, and the still small voice. You have felt it, reader, when you did the best thing you could not to be seen of men.

NORFOLK LETTER.

"What will he spring on us next?" Such is the query which, in view of his precedent-smashing record, since his inauguration, the people are asking with reference to President Wilson. The impression is gaining in the mind of the public that in the person of our chief executive, we have, instead of a simple-minded Schoolmaster, a character of unknown quantity, likely to develop at any time, any number of surprising and unsuspected traits. Without doubt, our President has us all guessing, and if he has done nothing more he has aroused our intense interest in the sort and type of personality he possesses.

His disregard of much that has been conventional and time-honored, by which previous presidents have held themselves bound, has aroused a great deal of criticism, as might have been expected. With untold thousands of people precedent and tradition, no matter how senseless or baseless they may be, still have all the sanctity of immutable and inviolable laws, and those who have the temerity to set them aside are regarded as heretics and renegades. To do a thing different from the way in which it is generally done is an offense which the conformists will hardly pardon.

Not that precedent and conventionality are not fine things in their places. They certainly act as safeguards very frequently against hasty and unwise measures, and constitute a protection for society against fanatics and social freebooters. Where essentials are involved, they ought not to be lightly disregarded.

But, and here is where the trivial and amusing part of all the gossip which has been stirred up comes in, Mr. Wilson seems to have broken precedent only in non-essential matters which involve his private taste, which any sensible person will agree he had a perfect right to do. No great principle of statesmanship has been disregarded or ignored. But, presto, the whole country is agog with excitement and shocked with amazement because, forsooth, he cuts out the inaugural ball, his wife and daughters do not care to mix up too much with Washington Society, he and Mr. Bryan dispense with wine at receptions, he decides that he will read his own messages to Congress and, most scandalous of all, he shaves himself. Hear ye this, oh people of this mighty Republic, the president SHAVES HIMSELF.

But now, he has just handed us the last straw; Mr. Wilson is going to become a newspaper contributor, and over his own signature he means to talk directly to the people about the affairs in which we are all supposed to be concerned, a thing which never has been done before. We gasp with consternation at such a thing and cry with turgid and throaty voices,

Of course, such a manifestation of individuality upon the part of the new president has already brought its harvest of anathemas and censure. Many are predicting the failure of his administration, and dubbing him a notoriety-seeker. As a rule, the public is not very discriminating in its strictures.

But, personally, and without the slightest regard to party affiliations, we still believe that so far as it is humanly possible to be so, the country is entirely safe in the hands of Mr. Wilson, and those who are associated with him despite the fact that he shaves himself and occasionally writes an article for the press. This last determination is, we are forced to admit, the one which is most fraught with danger of any he has so far made, and still we admire him for his courage. I think it quite likely that he will not write many, but the experience will do him good.

For, it must be remembered, Mr. Wilson has a way of getting by with whatever he undertakes, all grousing prophets to the contrary, notwithstanding. He has not proven nearly so pliant as many thought he would be. For instance, down there in New Jersey, he just about put "Boss" Smith, considered invincible, out of business. Later on, when he turned down the support of George Harvey, editor of Harper's Weekly, who was boosting him as a candidate for the presidential nomination, nearly everybody called him a fool and said that after that he might as well quit. No man, they said, could be nominated who wanted the support of Harper's Weekly. But Mr. Wilson is president today just the same.

The thing to do is to give Mr. Wilson a chance, instead of judging his case beforehand. This is but merely fair and just. A few months are all too brief in which to determine anything certain as to the place which he may be finally able to make in the life and thought of the nation. Without doubt the temper of the American people will ultimately adjust itself to the strong individual traits of the new executive and accord a full meed of praise to him for his evident straightforwardness and his sincere desire to promote the most widely-extended welfare of the nation.

HENRY SPENCER BOOTH.

COLUMBUS, GA. LETTER.

On the 17th and 18th of April we had the good fortune of having a "Laymen's Missionary movement" to hold its convention here in Columbus, and it was indeed a great convention. Men of great talent came to talk to us about the task of winning the world to Christ. Some of the subjects and speakers are as follows: "The Awakening World," Rev. C. F. Reid, D. D., "Success Impossible Without Prayer," Mr. W. E. Doughty. "The Challenge of a Great Task," Mr. W. E. Doughty. "Christian Stewardship," Mr. H. A. Etheridge. "Organizing for Victory," Rev. E. C. Crank. "How it Works," Rev. R. W. Patton. Closing Message, "One Fixed Purpose," Mr. W. E. Doughty. As I sat and listened to these spirit filled men on these great subjects, my heart was thrilled and I only wished that every body could have been there and shared in the many good things that were said. It was good to be there. The convention left impressions upon the minds and hearts of the Columbus people that will be long remembered. As a result of the convention, many of the Columbus churches are now working on every member canvass for foreign missions. The First Presbyterian church here, I was told yesterday, has raised $5,000. Other churches are doing equally as well in proportion to their membership and financial standing. The every member canvass will work. Try it. We are going to try it here at Rose Hill now in a few days, and I feel quite sure we are going to meet with success.

The mission cause is a worthy one, and it should have the hearty support of every follower of Christ. In fact I don't believe a man can be a true follower of Christ and not give support to the mission cause. A man can give without loving, but he can't love without giving.

We have just recently closed a revival at Rose Hill. The meeting was not what we would have liked to have seen it, but I feel that it was a success, for there was one little boy who professed saving faith in Christ and united with the church. Others were reclaimed and resolved to live a better life. To God we give the praise. We are planning to hold another revival here some time in the near future. We believe that God has even greater blessings in store for us, and we are praying that there yet may come a great revival in our midst.

Last Sunday was a good day with us. The morning services were interesting and inspiring. At the evening services one member was received.

A few Saturday nights ago our good people gave the pastor and his wife a very pleasant surprise by bringing us in many good things for the pantry, too numerous to mention, and to the givers we wish to express our sincere thanks and pray God's blessing upon them.

ELON COLLEGE NOTES.

Prof. N. F. Brannock is erecting a nice dwelling in the eastern side of the village.

Mrs. J. P. Barrett, Dayton, Ohio, is spending a few days with her daughter, Miss Ethel, who is in school. Friends are exceedingly glad to see Mrs. Barrett, for she was among the fortunate in the recent Dayton flood.

Prof. Russell A. Campbell delivered the Literary Address at the closing of the Jefferson Academy, McLeansville, N. C., Thursday of last week. Prof. Campbell is not accused of being an orator, but when he consents to make an address he is heard with much pleasure and never fails to uplift those in his audience.

The certificate pupils of Miss Wilson's music class gave their recital in the College Auditorium Saturday evening to an attentive audience. Those on the program were: Misses Hattie Belle Smith, Elon College, Minnie Riedel, Holland, Va., Annie Bagwell, Durham, N. C., Beatrice Mason, Nashville, N. C., Pearl Fogleman, Burlington, N. C., and Ethel Barrett, Dayton, Ohio.

As a result of the town election on last Tuesday, the following were elected to govern: Mayor, W. P. Lawrence; Chief of Police, W. B. Fuller; Commissioners, Messrs. H. D. Lambeth, D. W. Brown, W. C. Michael, C. A. Hughes, and Dr. J. U. Newman.

The proposition to further the building of concrete side walks passed almost without a dissenting vote, showing that the community has the progressive spirit and means to bring things to pass.

The College and College community shared from Wednesday until Monday last in a spiritual uplift and intellectual blessing in the visit of Rev. William G. Sargent, D. D., Providence, R. I. Dr. Sargent delivered six lectures to the ministerial class, two to the student body, and filled the College pulpit Sunday morning and evening. The Doctor is a man of great personality, a speaker of power, and a thinker of the progressive type. This being his first visit to the South, we trust his impressions of our climate, conditions, and life are such as to induce him to come this way again, for this scholarly gentleman has been duly enrolled among Elon's favorites.

Elon's commencement this year bids fair to draw a large concourse of people from every quarter. The senior class is large and widely scattered, which will mean a representation of considerable size from many places for class day exercises on Saturday, May 31st, and on Wednesday June 4, Graduation Day. Six representatives of the senior class will speak on Commencement Day.

The literary society representatives will speak on Monday evening, June 2nd, while the Expression, Music, and Art Departments will have their annual recitals or exhibits on Tuesday afternoon and evening, and Wednesday afternoon respectively. The Baccalaureate address of the President of the College will be given on Sunday evening of the Commencement season. Dr. Warren H. Denison, Norfolk, Va., one of the most progressive pastors of that city, will preach the Baccalaureate Sermon on Sunday morning at 11:30. Dr. Denison is secretary of the Mission Board of the American Christian Convention and a man of national reputation. He is always heard with gladness. The Literary Address will be given by Dr. Charles W. Kent, Professor of English in the University of Virginia, and one of the great scholars of the South. Dr. Kent has made a special study of Southern Literature and has done more than any living man to perpetuate the charming literature of the always charming South. He is one of the most popular of public speakers and never fails to delight and uplift an audience. His theme will be "The Sovereignty of Life" and the address will occur on Tuesday morning, June 3rd.

NOTES AND PERSONALS.

—Dr. Carlyle Summerbell, Fall River, Mass.: "The First church, Fall River recently took a collection for the Western flood sufferers, and gave the Red Cross $111.06. We took another offering for our own church people in Dayton who had suffered from flood, and have just sent in $71.00 making a total of 182.

—The following program was rendered at Shallow Ford church memorial service last Sunday: 10:30 A. M.—Opening exercise; 10:45—Welcome Address, C. E. Geringer; Response, Rev. E. M. Carter; Scripture Lesson; Offering; Duet, Poythress and Knight; 11:00—Sermon by pastor, J. V. Knight; Song, "Mother and Home," eight voices; Distribution of Flowers; 12:00 M.—Address by Rev. R. F. Brown; Song by Choir, "Will You Miss Me?"; Refreshment; 1:30 P. M.—Song Service; 2:00—Sermon, Rev. E. M. Carter; Adjournment.

—Pres W. A. Harper, of Elon College, is in great demand as a speaker. In addition to his many activities as President, and in connection with Sunday school work, (He is chairman of the Executive Committee of the North Carolina Sunday School Convention.) he has delivered numerous commencement addresses this Spring. How one man packs so much good work into seven short days of the flying weeks passes our comprehension. (It must be that his good wife writes and teaches to him a number of his best addresses. She is certainly capable of doing so.)

—Rev. J. G. Bishop, D. D., Dayton, Ohio, May 6: 'Yours containing draft for $101.67 for our personal use in flood repairs from various churches and individuals in response to your notice in THE CHRISTIAN SUN has been received. The word 'thanks' is too feeble, entirely inadequate to express our feelings of gratitude. This is not intended for publication, but as a simple acknowledgement of the receipt of the money. I will acknowledge publicly as soon as the press I am working under will allow.' We have a few more dollars to send in shortly. If any others wish to help the way is still open. Dr. Bishop's loss was a thousand dollars or more.

—The writer enjoyed the privilege of participating in memorial services at Mt. Auburn church, Warren County, N. C., last Sunday. This is not only memorial day, but home coming day, for the community, and peoples foregather from every quarter. There were four sermons, two in the church and two at the same hour out under the oaks to the immense multitude whom the large new church could not accommodate. The pastor, Rev. C. E. Newman preached in the grove at the eleven o'clock hour and the writer at the same hour spoke in the church. In the afternoon Rev. P. H. Fleming, D. D., spoke in the house, and the writer spoke to the people in the grove. The flowers which the children carried to the cemetery, were abundant. Bro. L. R. Crocker made a very practical and wholesome talk in the cemetery and Dr. Fleming led in prayer. The people of Mt. Auburn have built a spacious church which they hope to have completed and furnished by the meeting time of the annual Conference which is to convene there early in November.

INCIDENTS OF A WEEK.

—King Alfonso recently signed a decree ordering the continuance of obligatory teaching of Christianity (by the Catholics) in the public schools of Spain, but excepting the children of non-Catholics.

—Judge Foster of a New York City court put it on to the jury in straight terms the other day when a drunken chauffeur who had in his mad career rundown and killed a woman, was told by the court to "Go home, get another taxicab, and kill some one else. The jury has given you permission to do so."

—King Nicholas whose fame is well fixed in the minds of the civilized world is 72 years old and has ruled his State of Montenegro since 1860. His entire country covers only 3,600 square miles and contains a population of 250,000 souls. It is not the size of a man's kingdom that makes him great: it is how well and nobly he rules that kingdom.

—Harrisonburg, Pa., May 13.—Secretary of State William J. Bryan addressed the Pennsylvania Legislature this evening on the distinction between Democracy and aristocracy. He predicted that before another general election the presidential primary will be so general that there will be no need to hold National conventions and that presidential nominees will be named not by party leaders or bosses but by the people.

—"We are in a position to state that the effects, thus far observed, do not justify the confidence in his new remedy, which has been inspired by the widespread publicity given it." This was the carefully prepared report and the final judgment passed on the Friedmann anti-tuberculosis serum by the United States public health service, as voiced in the official finding of Surgeon John F. Anderson, who was assigned by the government to make the investigation into the merits of the German scientist's culture.

FOR SALE.

I offer my two story, six room dwelling, and farm of 53 acres, almost adjacent to College campus, for sale at reasonable price. A fine location for those wishing to educate their children. Correspondence solicited.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON, MAY 18.

The Forgiving Spirit of a Wronged Brother Shown.

Subject.—"Joseph meets his brethren."

Scripture.—Gen. 42:3-7.

Time.—Various estimates from B. C. 2100 to 1500. Ussher gives about B. C. 1707.

Places.—Canaan, the capital of Egypt. See last lesson.

Persons.—Joseph, his brothers, father, Egyptians.

Golden Text.—Whatever a man soweth, that shall he also reap.—Gal. 6:7.

Leading Thought.—Many of our sorrows are the result of our own sins.

After several months, the grain brought from Egypt by the nine brothers was nearly all eaten, and Judah reminded his father of the necessity of going to Egypt for more. He himself agrees to be responsible for the safe return of Benjamin, whom Joseph had demanded to see.

Jacob knew that Judah would be helpless against the powerful prime minister of Pharaoh, but it would be foolish to keep Benjamin to starve, so he let him go. With his customary reliance on gifts, Jacob sent with his sons a present for the prime minister: a little balm of balsam, the resin of the mastic tree, a healing drug; a little wild-bee honey; a little spice, or gum tragacanth, with medicinal properties; a little myrrh, or laudanum; some pistachio and almond nuts. Also they were to take back the money for the grain first obtained, and an equal sum of money for the grain they would buy.

Jacob's expression, "If I be bereaved of my children, I am bereaved," is generally supposed to be an expression of surrender to God's will: "If I am to lose my children, then I am to lose them!"

When Joseph invited his brothers to dine in his palace they suspected a plot to capture and imprison them all, and were greatly disturbed. They took the first opportunity to hand over to Joseph's steward the money which they had found in their sacks, weighing it out, since the precious metals were not then coined, but circulated only in rings and ingots. The steward quieted their fears, and Simeon was brought in to them, none the worse for his confinement—if, indeed, he had been confined at all.

Joseph did not recognize Benjamin, for he had left him a mere boy in Hebron twenty years before.

Joseph sat apart from the others perhaps because he had been admitted to the caste of priests, who did not eat with laymen. The Egyptians would not eat with foreigners because of their long beards, which the Egyptians regarded as ceremonially unclean, and because they had probably slain cows, animals considered sacred by the Egyptians.

Lesson Contrasts.

In Lesson 6 we heard a wise plan of national procedure mapped out; in Lesson 7 we see the plan outworking and its wisdom confirmed. In that lesson a dread famine was in the distant future; in this lesson it is present, and its severity is felt far and wide. In the last lesson our friend Joseph was suddenly promoted; in this lesson he is showing himself "every inch a king." In that lesson Joseph was surrounded wholly by people of another race and tongue; in this lesson he is gladdened by the occasional sight of Canaanites and the sound of the language of his native land, and at last the sight of his own brothers. When summoned before Pharaoh Joseph showed great wisdom and discretion; when meeting his brothers, the same wisdom keeps natural impulses in check. In the last lesson we saw a prisoner suddenly set free; in this lesson free men are imprisoned.

Object Lessons.

A thistle. Here is a plant which is a great pest to farmers. It crowds out good plants wherever it gets started. In many places there is a rule that thistles must be cut before the first of July, so no seed can ripen and become scattered. When thistle seed is scattered thistles are sure to grow. This is a law of nature. To-day's Golden Text tells how this law of sowing and reaping holds good in regard to conduct. (Repeat the Golden Text.)

Make a dot on the board and draw concentric circles around it. You have all seen the circles widen and widen around a stone dropped into the water. The particles set in motion touch others, on and on, until the tiny circles become wide, far reaching, ones. What you and I do now, sets in motion influences that reach to far-away times and places. When Joseph's brothers sold him into Egypt, they little knew the result of their actions. To-day's lesson tells about a consequence which came twenty years later in a distant land.

Question Review.

1. Who got into prison in this lesson?
2. Who put the sons of Jacob in prison?
3. Did he do it to "pay them back"?
4. Instead of three years, how long were they kept in prison?
5. Did they know who put them there?
6. Why had these men of Canaan come to Egypt?
7. How did they fulfill Joseph's early dreams?
8. What did these brothers believe was the real cause of all their troubles?
9. What does a New Testament writer say about the fruit of one's doings? (G. T.)—(Leonard).

A CLASS "INITIATIVE."

The next time you need a teacher ask each member of the class to write on a slip of paper the name of a person whom he would like to have for a teacher. Make it clear that they are at liberty to suggest anyone, whether in the school or not. Such a method may bring about several real "discoveries." All boys and girls have favorites among their elders. Have them think of such persons before they write the name.

Collect these names and during the week investigate each one. It is conceivable, of course, that some might be mentioned who are quite unfit for the work. But the fact that they are favorites among the boys and girls is an indication of necessary pedagogical qualities.

When you have found out about them interview those who are possible. It can be left even more to the class and have the members vote for the candidates you have selected. You can use this in your efforts to get the person. Few persons without good reasons will resist this appeal. This method will many times bring to light a person whom you have never heard of, and who may prove to be an excellent teacher and worker among the young people.

SECURING THE ATTENDANCE OF PARENTS.

At one time our superintendent was not satisfied with the interest and attendance of the older people. After several suggestions had been tried out he finally left it to the boys and girls. Teachers were requested to credit each pupil when one or both parents were present. At the end of the month this report was read to the class. The superintendent soon heard some favorable things from parents. Parents were being coaxed to come to Sunday-school. In some of the larger families, it meant that the children were more helpful about the house on Sunday mornings in order to have the parents attend. It was also found that the missionary work done at home reacted on the boys and girls and made their own attendance more regular.

SUGGESTIONS FOR C. E. MEETING, MAY 25.

Topic.—"Mission Work at Home and Abroad. V. Industrial Missions. Acts 18:1-6.

Try to make this meeting an extremely practical one. A week beforehand, ask four or five members to tell something of industrial conditions in as many different countries. Have one tell what the conditions are on farms in India, in the shops of China, the industrial pursuits of South America. Are all heathen countries peopled by indolent people? If not, in what countries are the people progressive and in which are they lazy?

Have missionaries raised the condition of women, have education and the gospel made people more industrious and more thrifty? If so, give examples found in missionary books.

What are some of the trades taught in industrial missions?

What industrial mission work is carried on in Africa? In Japan? In China? In the West Indies? In India?

If Missionary work gave only mental education, it would encourage the idea that work with the hands is degrading. It has been found that industrial schools are better for the negro than purely literary training. Just so with the people of many other countries. They need practical education; the sort of training that will put them actively at work is required.

Give an African a bright new tool and he will do the work that women have been doing before and do it much better.

It has been peculiarly necessary in parts of Africa for the missionaries to undertake the industrial training of the people because the civilized white people there find it easier to keep the natives in subjection when they are left untrained, and so would do nothing to elevate them.

In Japan it has been hard for the Christian working man to gain the weekly day for rest and worship. Industrial education helps under such conditions by fitting the man to be more independent and to be able to gain his support without the temptation to Sunday work.

One of the results of Christianity is to raise the standard of living among its followers. Among savage and barbarous peoples, and among the degraded and thriftless classes in civilized countries, the converts will have ambitions for better dwellings, clothing, and surroundings. With the arousing desire for improved conditions there needs to go the training that will make it possible to attain this improvement, which can hardly be done on the ordinary wages.

EXTRACTS FROM A LETTER FROM MISS ALICE TRUE OF ISHINOWAKI, JAPAN.

"We are thankful, indeed, that Mrs Fry is still kept busy with the Girl's School. A piano has recently been purchased for it. With the several organs they already have they are able to make a specialty of music and also of painting, which was Mrs. Fry's specialty at Union Christian College. The Bible is the special, but the other matters add to the happiness of the girls. Last Saturday we sent one of our girls down to the school. She went gladly, yet with tears in her eyes because it was the first separation from home. She wrote an earnest and grateful and contented letter after arriving at Utsunomiya. We hope much from her because she is so thoughtful and capable in anything she does. Two years ago she was baptized.

Mrs. Watanabe came down to help in the Woman's meeting Tuesday. She spoke very earnestly on the gift of Mary to Jesus of her precious and costly ointment. Then the next day she went with me to the Doctor's wife with whom I read the Bible four times a week. The Doctor's wife was in school when Mrs. Watanabe taught sewing and music in the public school twenty years ago. Today Mrs. Sasaki showed the passage in John XV, which Mrs. Watanabe read and explained to her, to a caller and said: "Anybody would listen to her, for she has experience." Mrs. Watanabe did talk more directly than I would have dared to do, for Mrs. Sasaki is quick and critical and not over humble, but Mrs. Watanabe had the privilege of an old teacher.

Grandmother Kato, our oldest church member, called on Miss Ito, where Mrs. Watanabe talked to the father and mother, who all live together in one room and the father makes tubs and casks in the entrance way, filled up the morning. The father stopped his work, the daughter ran to the store to buy banana candy for us and of course, they gave us tea. They listened too, which gives us much pleasure and, as Miss Ito is their only daughter, and comes earnestly to church, I hope we may reach them too. Mrs. Watanabe returned by boat, and I hope to go up there next Sunday evening.

TWO OTHER CHURCHES ENLISTED.

The women of Bethlehem (E. Va.) church have adopted the use of Mite-Boxes to raise their money for Woman's work. Mrs. Upton Savage is Superintendent and she is placing something like seventy-five boxes among the women. There are many churches that could work this plan to a good advantage. What church will be the next to report such?

At Waverly, Va., a Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Society has been organized. Although they haven't a large membership, they are interested and enthusiastic and are wanting to take up some special work. They are planning for a Mission service in June with a program by the children and a contribution for Woman's work. We bespeak for Mrs. Foster and her associates much success.

among the women of the Christian church in New England and was organized in the nineties. The Woman's Board of Home Missions was organized about the same time and grew out of home mission interest among the women of the Christian church in the Middle West. In the early history of these Boards, they employed jointly a field secretary or organizer, Miss Orpha Adkins, who worked among the churches of the Middle West for the purpose of organizing local Woman's Missionary Societies. What appears to have been the first annual Woman's Home Mission Board meeting was held in Dayton, Ohio, June 22, 1897. The treasurer reported on hand at that time $70.73. A resolution was adopted setting $500.00 as the mark to be reached in collections for the coming year. It appears that Miss Adkins was paid $20.00 a month, the salary being shared equally by the two Boards. Her reports show that she organized on an average three local societies a month. Here is a brief summary of her report for December 1897: Days worked, 30; calls, 100; meetings, 22; societies visited, 1; societies organized, 1; active members, 47; associate members, 8; missionary committees appointed, 6; collections, $14.37. Besides organizing societies, Miss Adkins took subscriptions for the Christian Missionary and distributed missionary literature, tracts and the like. Her work was a seed sowing that is now yielding a harvest.

As these Women's Boards exist primarily for the purpose of raising money the amounts raised each year for the last twelve years will be of interest to our society, just now where some of these older societies were fifteen years ago.

The collections by years, 1900-1912 inclusive were as follows:

Home missions for 1900	$ 339.80
Foreign missions for 1900	1,249.20
Home missions for 1901	376.11
Foreign Missions for 1901	592.65
Home missions for 1902	587.70
Foreign missions for 1902	1,827.51
Home missions for 1903	614.49
Foreign missions for 1903	1,300.00
Home missions for 1904	701.49
Foreign missions for 1904	1,496.29
Home missions for 1905	862.53
Foreign missions for 1905	1,797.36
Home missions for 1906	1,401.84
Foreign missions for 1906	2,236.80
Home missions for 1907	944.44
Foreign missions for 1907	1,638.23
Home missions for 1908	1,244.34
Foreign missions for 1908	2,168.19
Home missions for 1909	1,191.71
Foreign missions for 1909	1,925.10
Home missions for 1910	1,245.75
Foreign missions for 1910	1,834.95
Home missions for 1911	1,313.40
Foreign missions for 1911	2,036.47
Home missions for 1912	1,458.25
Foreign Missions for 1912	2,725.42

The gain through these years was generally constant, the total gain in the twelve years from 1901 to 1912 being over four hundred per cent.

This remarkable showing should encourage us who are just beginning an organized effort to aid the mission enterprises of the church.

NOTICE!

All ministers, delegates and visitors who expect to attend the Young Peoples' Convention to be held at Timber Ridge Christian Church, June 11-13, should write to R. A. Larrick, High View, W. Va., so that arrangements can be made to meet them at the station at Winchester, and also that the entertainment committee can have arrangements made for homes for all who come.

NOTICE! NOTICE!

The Young People's Convention of the Western North Carolina Christian Conference will hold its annual meeting with the Randleman Christian church July 25-27, 1913.

The Sunday school at this church has extended to the convention a cordial invitation to meet there, which invitation the executive committee has gladly accepted; and we feel sure that with Randleman as our meeting place we can have one of the best conventions ever held in the Western Conference. That the convention may be a success I want to ask that every pastor and also every Sunday school superintendent begin now to make plans and have every school within the bounds of the conference represented. A large delegation is one of the very necessary things that go to make a convention a success. Brethren, please see that your school is represented in the Randleman Convention.

Yours in the work,

J. F. MORGAN, President.

WANTED AT THE ORPHANAGE.

There is needed at the Christian Orphanage, more help both in the kitchen and house work. The larger girls assist and do much, but women of experience in cooking, in house keeping, in sewing etc., are needed. Applicants should address Rev. E. M. Carter, Supt., Elon College, N. C.

President Butler of Columbia University received during the past twelve months more than $2,000,000 as gifts to his great institution, and has issued an appeal for $16,000,000 more to meet the present needs of the university. He urges the wisdom of giving to institutions already established, rather than founding new institutions out of vanity or ambition. He also protests against gifts which burden the colleges by imposing additional requirements rather than helping with the burdens the institutions are already under.

"The surest way of making the world better is to begin with ourselves. Until we have fought our own sins, and combated the deceitfulness of our own hearts, we cannot be wise warriors for the right."

A TYPE OF THE PAST.

At the First Christian church Sunday Rev. Dr. Carlyle Summerbell preached on the will of J. Pierpont Morgan, speaking as follows:

To those of us who delight in studying human character in the present generation, the personality of the great financier, John Pierpont Morgan, is most interesting. He was, first of all, a man of deeds, and not words. While others of our wealthy and aristocratic scions of commercialism have lectured us, and sometimes even written books, Mr. Morgan has given very little of his ideas through words to the world. Yet, what he has said is most suggestive.

In the inquiry of the Pujo committee, Mr. Morgan, you may remember, contended that credit in the commercial world depends upon the character.

As reported, he said, "I know lots of men, business men, too, who can borrow any amount, whose credit is unquestioned."

And when the question was asked, "Is it not because it is believed that they have the money back of them?" he answered, "No, sir; it is because people believe in the man." And furthermore, Mr. Morgan said, "I have known a man to come into my office and I have given him a check for a million dollars, when I knew he had not a cent in the world."

Mr. Morgan contended in answer to clear, searching questions as to what a man gets money on, his face, or his character, that "He gets it on his character."

Far be it from me to say that this is not so, or to put my experience with others as a small borrower against Mr. Morgan's experience as a great lender. But one thing very apparent is, that Mr. Morgan as lender is the judge of who has a sufficiently strong character. For if a man had a million-dollar character borrowing capacity, it might yet be necessary to know the "powers that be" to have this character to be of great money leverage. Mr. Morgan was certainly an optimist in the business world. He was pretty well satisfied with things as they are. He had that old-fashioned contentment that is becoming more rare in this day of unrest, except to the people that are on top. They are conservatives. Why should they not be?

Mr. Morgan's will follows out this philosophy. It starts with a beautiful statement of faith, which he entreats his children to uphold. Perhaps he feels that this belief may not be so secure as it once was. But, at any rate, no one can doubt that it really states the firm faith of a satisfied, well established man. And Mr. Morgan is respected by many people for his financial power alone, if for no other. And this statement will call the attention of many business men, who do not seem to have time to formulate or believe anything concerning the spiritual world, to the most interesting question of existence, Who am I and where am I going?

The will leaves very little to charity, compared with what it places in the hands of the head of the house of Morgan. He seems to feel that his son will administer this great trust, and fails to trust the people, with which and from which this great and phenomenal fortune was made.

He does not pass back to the people, but passes on to the house of Morgan, almost unparalleled power. It is a fine type of the mediaeval baron, who takes and bestows with a royal wave of hand, never doubting that the whole belongs to him.

This is a type of the past, an anachronism that survives at the present day. Even the secular papers are astounded that a man so great in finance and appreciation of art should be so behind in his sociological ethics.

Children's Missionary Stories

STORIES are—yes, must be—used by every wide-awake worker among, or leader or teacher of, children.

MISSIONARY STORIES seem to have been the one field well-nigh overlooked until Mrs. Alice Moreton Burnett, Corresponding Secretary for the Woman's Board for Home Missions of the Christian Church, made a compilation of thirty interesting, instructive stories pertaining especially and directly to missions that are sure to be appreciated by workers, teachers, leaders, pastors, fathers, mothers—and the children.

Some of the Important Events of both Home Missions and Foreign Missions are also included, together with Suggestions For Junior Leaders.

They make a book 5 x 7 inches in size, 128 pages, red cloth binding—a handsome, attractive volume. Price 35c per copy postpaid.

A great daily paper says: "The last will and testament of J. Pierpont Morgan will be a great disappointment to anyone who thought he saw beneath Mr. Morgan's tremendous financial activities the outlines of a larger purpose than that of piling up an enormous structure of money. The will bequeaths an utterly insignificant amount to charity—less than 1 per cent. of his estimated fortune—and nothing to public use. The claim of friends that he gave liberally, though secretly, during his lifetime does not absolve. The spirit displayed offers a striking contrast to the huge and enlightened public giving of John D. Rockefeller, or even of other Americans of great wealth. It indicates that Mr. Morgan had an inadequate sense of the debt he owed to the people whose energies and abilities contributed to his own acquisitions."

But the question naturally arises, Why should we expect Mr. Morgan's will to be any different from his life? It shows that he was a sincere man, that he believed thoroughly in his individualistic conception of society and religion. He is a fine type of the Middle Ages, but away behind the best spirit of our own times. He puts off the kingdom of God—to come upon earth, as it is in heaven. At least, I will challenge any man to believe that Mr. Morgan contemplated while on earth the carrying out of all his policies, however honest they were, into the newer and better land. Did he ever dream of having much in heaven, while others had little, of comforts, while others were in need of the things for peace and rest? Did Mr. Morgan ever catch a Christ vision that it was more blessed to give than it was to receive? I fear not, for then he could not have heaped himself treasures upon the earth and kept them, while millions of his fellow creatures were in want.

Mr. Morgan was a sincere man; yes, a good man, who lived up to his ideals. But his ideals are hopelessly behind the glorious dawning of the democracy of God.—Fall River News

THE HAPPINESS OF GIVING.

"It seems that Mrs. Willis doesn't look very well," young Mrs. Willis' caller said out in the hall, as she glanced back at the old lady who sat listlessly by the window.

"I don't know what is the matter with her," young Mrs. Willis answered, with a touch of impatience in her voice. "I'm sure nobody could be kinder to his mother than Fred is. She has the sunniest bedroom, and we always try to have her old friends in whenever she wants to see them. Of course it must be hard to give up her own home after she has been mistress of it for over forty years, but what else can we do?"

As the caller went down the steps the postman came up. There was only one letter, and that was for old Mrs. Willis. Her daughter-in-law handed it to her and then went off about some household task. When she came back, fifteen minutes later, old Mrs. Willis, excited and eager, was trying on her bonnet.

"I've got to go down-town, Julia," she said. "I'll be back in time for dinner."

She came back at exactly six o'clock. Her bonnet had slipped to one side and there was a tired flush on her face, but her arms were full of bundles and her eyes were sparkling joyously.

"I've got those towels you wanted, Julia," she announced, "and there's a box of preserved ginger for Fred—you didn't know he loved it, did you? And there's a handkerchief for Norah; and the rest are little things for other people."

"But—I don't understand," Julia stammered.

Old Mrs. Willis lifted her shining face. "Isn't that like me to forget to tell you! Why, 'twas an old debt I'd forgotten about—ten dollars—that came today from Mary Dodson. Think of it—ten dollars of my own to spend as I pleased! My, but I've had a good time! I've got three dollars left, and I'm going to give Lydy Baker a treat tomorrow!"

Julia's eyes met her husband's with sudden comprehension. Three years without a dollar of her own with which to give any one a treat—mother, to whom giving had been the very breath of life!

"Oh," Julia cried, under her breath, "how could we—how could we!"—Youth's Companion.

CHRISTIAN SUN PIANO CLUB PRESENTS DISSATISFACTION.

One of the strongest features of the Christian Sun Piano Club is that it makes piano buying absolutely safe. No Club member can possibly be dissatisfied or have any cause for regrets. The first principle we fixed upon in the organization of the Club was that every member must be delighted, otherwise the piano must be returned and any payments refunded.

"Delighted" is the favorite adjective of our Club members in describing their appreciation of the Club and its superb instruments. They are "delighted" with their artistic cases; "delighted" with the beautiful finish; "delighted" with the sweet, full and sympathetic tone; "delighted" with the big saving in price; "delighted" with the convenient terms of payment; "delighted" with the courteous treatment, etc., etc.

When the Club was being organized we realized that in order to make it a grand success we would have to make every Club member "delighted." Thus far, we have been unanimously successful.

Write for your copy of the Club's catalogue and see how carefully we have planned to meet your needs and merit your approval. Address the Managers, Ludden & Bates, Christian Sun Piano Club Dept., Atlanta, Ga.

"Pure religion and undefiled—is to visit the fatherless."

Some of the good sisters are remembering us with their donations for the stove. This is a mighty good time for you to send yours, while you are thinking of it.

We have the tank, boiler, and most all the fixtures for the bath rooms here, already, but on account of not having more money the arrangements to begin the work have not been made. What are we to do with this matter? The water and sewerage system is very much needed; but there is a rule in the business world, and it is a fixed one too, and that is that we are unable to get materials and work without the money. Since the Board decided to do this, I have written to seven hundred schools, and five hundred pastors and if you have taken time to notice you know something of the success—"full" effort. I have enrolled some new schools for Monthly Offerings, but more of them which were enrolled have dropped out. So the number at the present is sixty-one; tho' I say of that number, almost every one is right up with the offerings. So

I believe I can depend on those who are enrolled now. What about your school, can't you be one of that number?

Now, don't think I am complaining nor am I begging. I am trying to tell you, in a measure, what the conditions are; and, there is not an orphanage in the three States that begs. Certainly I would not get out of the ring. It is considered that, to beg for a church institution, especially one that ranks as high in Christian service as does the orphanage of the land, is beyond its dignity. It is to stand or fall on its merits. There are, in this work, some of the best men in the country; great men, they are accomplishing great things for the church. One village school—don't remember now whether in North or South Carolina—is giving $900.00 a year to the Baptist orphanage. Some one may say that that is a reason we should beg for ours; it is young. It is a reason we should not want for a thing, rather it ought to be the greatest institution of the Christian church—being the only one of its kind. Before this gets too long I will quit; rather I feel that a suggestion is sufficient if we will act as we are impressed of the needs of the work.

You ought to see how we are enjoying milk and butter these days: Mr. Woodard has, with the cows we started with, increased the quantity of butter from 65 pounds a month to 300 pounds and, milk in proportion. I don't mean this has been done with all the cows we have sold, for we have sold a number of dry ones, but by exchanging the milch cows we had for better ones, and an additional sum of $15.00.

Rev. J. L. Foster, Executor of the Kate Holmes estate made his report to the Executive Board at its last meeting and with it turned in a $200.00 mortgage. This mortgage, when collected, is to go to the Endowment Fund.

Dear Uncle Emory:

Daddy's school has closed, and his commencement is over with, and I am mighty glad of it too. Mamma and I are so glad to have him about the house this week while he is resting a little from teaching, and working in our garden.

I hope you, Aunt Louie, and all the cousins are getting along all right. Here is my dime for April.

THE POOL EXPERT.

He could play pool. He was the champion pool-player of the ward. Indeed, his reputation had extended to nearly every saloon in town.

The saloon-keepers sometimes arranged exhibition games for him, advertising them on big posters. He enjoyed seeing his name in display letters over the saloon windows. He was pleased with the complimentary remarks of the audience.

He didn't get very much else out of it, excepting a few drinks and some indifferent cigars, but—he COULD play pool.

I saw his two little girls one morning. One of them—as pretty a little thing as I had ever seen—was sick. She was burning up with fever. He hadn't come home the previous night. He had given an exhibition game away off in another section of the city, and—well, for several reasons, he didn't get back. The little one needed a doctor. One was quickly found. Yes, he could play pool.

A few days later I called again. He had been in two or three times during the day to get a meal. He hadn't been home nights since the last "big" exhibition game. Most of his meals he got at the free-lunch counter, and there seemed always somebody who was willing to stand treat. He had lost his job, but—he could play pool.

The doctor told me that both his children were now sick. "Lack of proper nourishment," was the doctor's brief comment when I asked him the cause of their illness. His wife had become the bread-winner for the family. Soon afterward I was sent for. The children were better, but she was now in bed. They had found her early that morning in an alley on the way to the back door of a saloon, where she was to have done a day's washing. But, as she told me, she was compelled to go without any breakfast, or the children would have had none. She wasn't equal to it, however, and had collapsed even before she began her day's work. But he could play pool.

A month later I met him on the street. He was wonderfully braced up. His clothes were fresh-looking. The flush had left his face. There was a steadiness in his gaze which pleased me.

I stopped him with a cheery salute. "O, I've got a job," he said with a little confusion, but as if that were the most important event of his life. "I've cut out the exhibition pool, too. I'll no longer be any man's fool."—C. E. World.

THE DRAG ON MODERN CIVILIZATION.

We have made tremendous advance in our discoveries and inventions, but have not made much in folks. About the only realm of which we can think that man has not made a serious effort to master is the realm of self. Not until our day has man's attention been turned seriously to the scientific development of the race, or the improvement of the human species.

We are looking for the line of advance. Is it possible that there are forces which are in man's reach which intelligently utilized would bring about as sweeping, far reaching and beneficent changes as any of those which have taken place in the past? I think so. I believe that it is quite possible though it may be difficult for us to project humanity upon its tenth period. Let me call attention to only three things, a discovery, an idea and a method, which I believe are either now working, or can be made to work, toward the advance for which I speak.

First, a discovery, I refer to flying machines. I look upon them as discoveries of such importance that they may be characterized as world revolutionizing.

The second is an idea. It is not a new idea, I refer to humanitarianism. I speak of this as having been reborn in recent years. There has been a tremendous movement manward since those days. Great missionary movements have swept around the earth.

The third thing is the method. I refer to eugenics. We have been and are still trying to drive the human race uphill with the brakes on. Of all the drags upon the human race today, the heaviest are war and bad germ plasms, the reproduction of the unfit.

From 1890 to 1910, the insane persons in the asylums of the United States increased from 74,000 to 250,000. Four per cent. of our population belong to this class of insane. We are spending every year in the United States thirty millions of dollars for the maintenance of hospitals and such institutions for the care of these dependents.

What is the remedy? The first thing I would suggest is the diffusion of the knowledge of these conditions. It is a matter that must be taken up by all the schools of the state, public and private.

PRODUCTS OF THE HOME.

The following tribute to David Livingstone is one of the most wholesome lessons of his life to the people of our luxurious and self-indulging day: "It is good in these days of wasting luxury to emphasize the noble product of a simple, poor, and pious home, where education had to be fought for and saved for and stinted for; where it was accounted a greater prize to buy a book than to see a football match; and where the extension of the kingdom of God was of far more real and intense interest than what was 'on' at a theater. It is worth remembering that no home life and no home training can be narrow where the vision includes God and humanity, and where the governing ideals are of sacrifice and service, not for one land only, but for the world."—Presbyterian Examiner.

WHAT WOULD JESUS DO WITH THE POLICE?

That's a question which Dr. "In His Steps" Sheldon (as he is probably best known in American homes) will soon have an opportunity to investigate. Dr. Sheldon has become a member of the Civil Service Commission in Topeka, Kans., where he has been an influential citizen and pastor for so many years. According to an interview, Dr. Sheldon accepts his new appointment chiefly because of "the opportunity it would offer for showing how police methods can be improved." He is a convert to the newer policy of adding women to the police force, and, as his friends will at once surmise, will be much more concerned over methods and means of crime prevention than over its punishment.—Congregationalist.

PIANOS OF QUALITY FOR THE CHRISTIAN SUN PIANO CLUB.

The superior quality of the Ludden & Bates pianos which are being supplied to members of the Christian Sun Piano Club is evidenced by the fact that for nearly half a century they have enjoyed the favor of the most discriminating musicians throughout the South. You will find them in the homes of the best musicians, in conservatories of music, in schools, colleges, churches and Sunday Schools, in auditoriums, public buildings, hotels, etc. The Ludden & Bates instruments are beautiful in design and finish; sweet, pure and full in tone; responsive in action; permanent in durability. Each Ludden & Bates piano is guaranteed for a lifetime, which means that if it should develop any defect either of workmanship or material the firm will make it good or will replace it with a new instrument.

Such is the quality of the pianos and player pianos in which the Club is offering its members a saving equivalent to approximately one-third the price. If you wish a piano of real quality at a price lower than you would have to pay for an inferior instrument, write for your copy of the Club's catalogue today. Address the managers Ludden & Bates, Christian Sun Piano Club Dept., Atlanta, Ga.,

DREAD OF AN OPERATION.

N. Manchester, Ind.—Mrs. Eva Bashore, of this place, says, "I suffered female misery of every description. Two doctors attended me, and advised an operation. I lost weight until I weighed only ninety pounds. I dreaded an operation, and, instead, began to take Cardui. In a short time, I gained 25 pounds, and feel as well as I ever did. Cardui, I am sure, saved my life." Cardui is today used in thousands of homes, where it relieves pain and brings back strength and ambition. It is a woman's medicine, for women's ailments, and you are urged to try it for your troubles. Ask your druggist. He will tell you about Cardui.

HERE'S SOMETHING WORTH YOUR WHILE.

The J. Van Lindley Nursery Co., Pomona, N. C., is giving away 10,000 copies of their book "How to Plant and Grow Fruits and Ornamentals." It tells all about the planting, cultivation and care of fruit and ornamental trees, shrubs, vines, etc. If you have a lawn, garden, orchard or flower yard, you should apply for one of these books before the edition is exhausted. It answers nearly every question necessary to be known in successful flower, fruit and lawn culture. Every home owner should have one as a guide to making the home beautiful and the orchard and garden profitable.

You Will Need Extra Power

WHEN you buy your engine, get it big enough to do more than your present work. If it's an IHC engine it will last a long time. Your farm work is bound to increase in volume. Very likely you can save yourself the price of another engine four or five years from now, by getting an engine a size larger than you need now.

Over-speeding and straining harm any engine. There is one correct speed for each IHC engine, a speed at which the parts balance and at which the engine runs without harmful vibration. When you buy an engine powerful enough to handle your work easily while running at the correct speed you add years to its life. Get your engine big enough and buy an

IHC Oil and Gas Engine

An IHC oil and gas engine will deliver 10 to 30 per cent above its rated horse power when occasion requires, but it gives the longest service when carrying a normal load. All parts are carefully, accurately ground and perfectly balanced. The best material obtainable is used. Combustion is perfect and the maximum power is secured.

Sizes—1 to 50-horse power. Styles—stationary, portable, skidded, vertical, horizontal, tank-cooled, hopper-cooled, air-cooled. Fuels—gas, gasoline, naphtha, kerosene, distillate or alcohol. Kerosene-gasoline tractors, 12 to 60-horse power.

"The conviction of the achievability of universal valid satisfaction of the human personality." Do you know what this is? Prof. George B. Foster, of the University of Chicago, gives it as a definition of religion. A brother editor avers that "nobody ought to talk about religion like that." As for our part, we prefer as a definition that statement made by James: "Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this, To visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and to keep himself unspotted from the world."—Nashville Christian Advocate.

AN INTERESTING OLD BOOK.

We were in New Bern the other day attending the Neuse-Atlantic Association. While there we carried out a long-cherished desire to look upon a certain book from which a significant page had been torn out. This book was an old volume of court records in which had been entered an account of the trial, imprisonment and whipping of three Baptist preachers at the instance of the established church because they insisted on preaching their own convictions as to what God in His word taught that men should be and do. Some one cut the page out afterwards and perhaps burned it. No wonder that they became ashamed of such a record. But the fact remains nevertheless.

The names of these men were Brinson, Purefy, and Fulshire. Our visit to the court house was in company with Hon. Samuel Brinson, a lineal descendant of one of the persecuted heroes. The Purefy, who was beaten for his faith, was an ancestor of the well-known Purefys of Wake Forest.

We should be profoundly grateful that all this has changed, but at the same time we should be vigilant in maintaining and spreading through all the earth the precious legacy which cost our fathers their blood to hand down to us. Persecution today takes a different form from what it did in those days; but the disposition to silence the faithful witness of the truth has, has by no means, passed out of the hearts of many among us.—Central Messenger.

MIGHT BE DEAD TODAY.

Garden City, Kans.—In a letter from Mrs. James Hamner, of this city, she says, "I firmly believe that I would not be alive today, if it were not for Cardui. I had been a sufferer from womanly troubles all my life, until I found that great remedy. I feel that I can't praise it too highly." Are you a woman, suffering from some of the troubles, to which a woman is peculiarly liable? If so, why not try Cardui, the woman's tonic? You can rely on Cardui. It is purely vegetable, perfectly harmless, and acts gently but surely, without bad after-effects. 'Twill help you. Ask your druggist.

HE REDUCED 57 POUNDS

New Method of Flesh Reduction Proves Astonishingly Successful

Johnstown, Pa., Special: Investigation has fully established that Hon. H. T. Stettler, of this city, has reduced his weight fifty-seven pounds in an incredibly short time by wearing a simple, invisible device, weighing less than an ounce. This, when worn as directed, acts as an infallible flesh reducer, dispensing entirely with dieting, medicines, and exercises. Many prominent men and women have adopted this easy means of reducing superfluous flesh, and it is stated the inventor, Prof. G. X. Burns, of No. 17 West Thirty-eight street, New York, is sending these outfits on free trial to all who write him.

DEATHS

Kernodle.

Martha Elizabeth Kernodle, wife of Robt. T. Kernodle, departed this life May the 9th, 1913, after an illness of nearly one year, at the age of 56 years, 2 months and 13 days. Her husband, three daughters and one son, and eleven grand children are left to mourn her death. Sister Kernodle had been a member of Union church about 37 years, and lived most consistently the religion she professed. A beautiful life came to a close when she died. A large congregation of friends and relatives attended her funeral and burial services. As her body was being carried from the church to the cemetery at Union, the procession was led by twelve women friends bearing their arms full of the most beautiful floral tribute sent by friends to be placed upon her grave. Funeral and burial services by her pastor.

J. W. HOLT.

DO I LOVE MY CHURCH?

If I do not, I should. With all her blemishes, the church has meant more to many of us than we can ever tell.

While we were yet children it was to her sacred portals that our feet were turned by our loving parents, and there we received those hallowed impressions which still linger, and which shall outlast the corroding touch of Time.

There, in our more mature lives, we have received courage to fight our battles, strength for our daily needs, wisdom for our perplexity, inspiration for better living and Hope for the Road that stretches on in darkness beyond the grave.

I ought to love the church.

My church. I wonder how many of us say "my church."

Perhaps someone may read this who cannot truly say that they have a church, for they do not "belong."

In that case I would urge you to join. You are missing a great deal. You are cutting yourself off from the best, sweetest influence that earth knows.

Some day you will realize this. Upon that darksome time when bitter sorrows shall fall like a ghostly shadow across your door, your broken heart will know not where else to turn save to the church and her Lord Christ. Then, indeed, you will regret that you have been a stranger to God's people.

You are wasting precious time. Come to church. Let us make you welcome. Learn to live for others and you will be surprised to find how much more life will mean to you.—Selected.

YOU AND THE FLY.

Are you bald? Did you ever have a fly crawl across your head? Or did you ever have one crawl over your face and wake you up? Nuisance, isn't it? Well, that's only the smallest part of the quarrel we have with flies.

Flies are scavengers. Do you know what a buzzard does? A buzzard is a large loathsome bird which eats dead and decaying animals. They are not nice to have around. What buzzards are to birds flies are to insects.

Flies hatch from eggs. The eggs are laid in filth. Fly eggs are not nice. Another name for them is fly-blows. But about the only harm which fly eggs do is to make more flies. After a few days the fly eggs hatch into maggots. Maggots are not nice, but they do not do much harm except that they make flies. The maggots crawl into dirt and in a few days they come out flies.

Flies are very busy insects. They are active all day long, and at night, too, if you have a light in the room. During dry days they like to stay out in the grass in the yard. They can feel a rain coming before you can, so they always try to get in the house before a rainstorm. They are not fools. They like the light. If a room is dark they do not like to go in it. If there are flies in the room a good way to get rid of them is to darken the room and leave one window open and bright. The flies will fly out of this window. On a warm day you can persuade them to walk out into the yard or to stroll around the block. If it getting cold in the fall or if a rain is coming up they will stick to the house like a hungry dog to a frankfurter.

But what can we do about it? Don't let any garbage accumu-

OUR PRINCIPLES.

- (1.) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the church.
- (2.) Christian is a sufficient name for the church.
- (3.) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
- (4.) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of church membership.
- (5.) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

Editorial Briefs

Refreshed By Tears.

There is a commercial worth in tears, when they are timely and sincere. You would not care to buy tears; you should not wish to sell them. Yet they have real value; are worth more than their weight in diamonds, the right sort of tears are. "Refreshed by the tears of the American people, Ohio stands ready from today to meet the crisis alone," rings out the courageous voice of Governor Cox of Ohio, standing as he does amid an estimated loss from flood of a hundred million dollars.

Refreshed by the tears of Jesus, even the Jews were inspired to believe in a Savior's great love. (Jno. 11:36.)

The Way of the Word.

All who count in doing the world's work feel their littleness, their insignificance, their unworthiness, because they do not seem to be or to do any very good, or very great thing. But it is not the great things that tell. God sees fit to take the littles that many willing, but unworthy, hands bring, and carry forward His work with these. Isaiah, the great prophet, wrote it this way: "The word of the Lord was unto them precept upon precept, precept upon precept; line upon line, line upon line; here a little, and there a little." (Isa. 28:13). It is not the big things that the few do that tell: it is the little things the many do that are moving this world on toward the kingdom of heaven.

Points of Worth.

The New York Herald, writing of traits and characteristics of members of President Wilson's cabinet, points out, and holds up for consideration, the following among others, from the life of Secretary of the Navy, Josephus Daniels:

- "He does not smoke drink, chew, nor swear.
- He is infatuated with hard work.
- He hasn't much money and doesn't care.
- He is one of the best liked men in the cabinet.
- Walk right up and slap him on the back. He is not warlike despite his belligerent title.
- There were no silver spoons in the Daniels family when Josephus arrived. His parents were in a position to give him a name; and that is about all.
- He is of the likable, old-fashioned, easy going type, but there is no use trying to bluff him. He won't stand for that.
- What the best dressers are wearing does not bother him. He dresses for comfort.
- This man looks for the moral side of every question, and then gets on that side."
- These may not seem to be points of much worth and weight in the making of character, still they have stood this man in good stead, and may help others who are trying to climb.

Soul to Soul.

Things artificial do not appeal. It takes the real to reach the real. You cannot reach the soul of a man by any other means than from your own soul. "Nay," said Emerson, "a man preaching from his earnest soul into the earnest souls of men: is not a virtually the essence of all churches whatsoever. The nakedest, savagest reality, I say, is preferable to any semblance, however dignified." One reason why much preaching is vain is because it is trying to conform rather than to transform. There is no soul in it. It is dignified and orderly semblance. When the soul speaks other souls take notice. "Deep calleth unto deep at the noise of thy water-spouts." (Psa. 42:7). The only way for deep to hear is for deep to call. And when the depths call, there is sure to be an answer. If we would reach the souls of men we must call to them from the depths of our own souls.

The Empire of Silence.

The great, deep stream flows on in silence. The mighty earth, the majestic planets all move on in silence. The truly great forces and factors of earth are silent. They do their noble work in silence. If we would understand the truly great and the noble good, we must be silent and let our souls have converse with heaven and holiness and God. Ralph Waldo Emerson put this fine word to the credit of the silent: "Looking round on the noisy inanity of the world, words with little meaning, actions with little worth, one loves to reflect on the great Empire of Silence. The noble silent men scattered here and there, each in his department; silently thinking, silently working; whom no morning newspaper makes mention of! They are the salt of the Earth. A country that has none or few of these is in a bad way. Like a forest which has no roots; which had all turned into leaves and boughs which must soon wither and be no forest. Woe for us if we had nothing but what we can show or speak. Silence, the great Empire of Silence; higher than the stars; deeper than the Kingdoms of Death! It alone is great; all else is small."

The soul that does not catch the inspiration of silence, is not itself silent, now and then, is poor, profitless and pitiable indeed. "Be silent, O all flesh, before the Lord." (Zech. 2:13).

Peace.

A movement of promising proportions is on foot to celebrate in 1915, the one hundredth anniversary of peace between the English speaking nations of the world. Nations of different tongues have engaged each other in deadly conflict in these hundred years; but no two nations speaking the English tongue have warred against each other in this one hundred years. Already delegates are in this country from England, Australia, Newfoundland, and Canada conferring with a committee of fifty from our government as to a suitable celebration of this friendly feeling between those who speak English. And rapidly the nationalities of the world, even in the far East are learning to speak our language. And may be through this medium of common language is to be brought about that universal peace whose advent the Prophet Isaiah declared in that superb sentence (Isa. 2:4). "Nations shall beat their swords into plowshares, and spears into pruning-hooks; nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war anymore." That day will come, and it is the part not only of English speaking people, but of all professed followers of Christ everywhere to hasten the glad day, and to pray earnestly and work diligently for its early dawning.

THE GREAT DESTROYER.

BY HON. RICHMOND P. HOBSON OF ALABAMA.

Comparative figures show the appalling fact that alcohol is killing off as many Americans a year as all the wars of the world have killed in battle in 2,300 years.

Applied to the whole white race, we find that alcohol is killing 3,500,000 white men every year, five times as many as have been killed in war in 2,300 years; so, that mathematically, alcohol is 10,000 times more destructive than all wars combined.

Looking upon a nation as climbing a ladder of evolution, alcohol, like a mill-stone, drags it half way to the bottom. The full significance of this drug appears when we realize that upon the average standard of character of its citizens must rest the institutions of a nation. As young as our nation is, the deadly work of alcohol has already blighted liberty in our greatest cities.

At the present rate of the growth of cities over country life, if no check is put upon the spread of alcoholic degeneracy, the day cannot be far distant when liberty in great states must go under. From the standpoint of the state, there is but one decision. This great destroyer must be destroyed.

The people have a right to vote on such a vital question and a majority have the right to rule. The scope of this principle must extend from the smallest political unit to the largest. Therefore, the constitution of a state is the true, ultimate abiding place for prohibition for the state. The constitution of the United States is the true abiding place for prohibition of the nation.

We can all go forward in the great war with a song in our hearts, each to do his full duty, whether as an officer or as a private in the ranks, knowing that whatever betide, whether the heavens fall or the earth melt away, whether we see the victory or die in the conflict, that "the Lord of Hosts is with us"—that "The God of Jacob is our refuge."

Riches deceive men by making them think themselves other than they are. It was a favorite saying of Francis of Assisi that what a man is in the sight of God, that, and only that, and nothing else, he really is. Now riches are unquestionably a great hindrance in the way of seeing ourselves as God sees us.—W. R. Huntington.

"THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH OF CHINA."

There has been, in previous years, vanity and vexation of spirit amongst the missionaries in China, because of denominational differences. The Chinese mind could not understand why, if Christ was Christ, and His followers Christians there should be so many different artificial and dividing names. They could not, and did not, see why Christians should be, as bodies, separate and distinct one from the other, even going to the extent of holding names differing one from the other, and human creeds not preached in winning them to Christ.

Seeing the difficulty, the missionaries have taken counsel together and have agreed that they will, at least, not fight out their denominational battles on foreign territory—that they will leave this pleasant (?) duty to be performed by the people in the home land; that in the foreign field they will fight the devil of paganism, and not spend their time and strength fighting one another, even if the denominations that send them out fight one another at home.

This seems to us a very wise thing for missionaries to do. It would seem to us a very wise thing for us of the home land to do. But this matter aside now.

So the missionaries of China, have in person or by delegation, held a council. In this council it was decided that the denominations would not fight each other on Chinese territory. That they would not cross territory, one with the other; that if one denomination had a foothold and was doing a good work in a field, or district, that other denominations would not crowd into that field, but find a field for preaching the gospel elsewhere. There was plenty of room for all in China, and that all would work, not to tear down each other, but to build up the Kingdom of Christ. That also seems exceedingly becoming.

Furthermore and finally, brethren, this council of the different evangelical churches in China decided that they would adopt one name under which all could operate, and by which all China could know what the missionaries stood for and were doing.

And the name that the council adopted, as being the proper name for all denominations in China to wear, and be known by is, The Christian Church of China. We move, brethren and beloved, that we of the home land take a lesson from our missionaries in foreign lands, and drop the names that have always hindered, and never helped, and just wear one and all sufficient name, The Christian Church of America; and then, as the Christian nations follow the lead of their missionaries, we will have one name and one only, for all the followers of our blessed Christ, the name which signifies His sovereignty and lordship, The Christian Church of the World. Is not that sufficient?

"LOVE LIFTED ME."

Harper's Weekly, discussing last week a political condition in New Jersey, which condition is deplorable, but which nevertheless, the Weekly thinks, should be let alone, closes an argument with these words: When a sinner does not want to be saved "what," asked the Hindu, "can do?"

We opine that the brilliant editor referred to has hardly learned the deepest and most salient truth of our Christian teaching.

When a sinner does not want to be saved, what can be done?

Why, man, go to work, by the grace, favor, and help of God, to save him. That is what the gospel is given for—to reach and reclaim and redeem those who are lost and do not want to be saved.

To save those who want to be saved is easy: it is pleasant; it is agreeable. But to save those who do not want to be saved, that is hard: it is frequently unpleasant; it is often very disagreeable.

When you save one who wants to be saved, all you have done is to reach out your hand and take hold on another hand already outstretched.

When you save one who does not want to be saved then you have done love's perfect work; you have lifted one. "Love lifted me," says the glorious gospel song; took hold on me—not merely stretched its hand out to me when I was stretching my hand out to it—but lifted me up when I was down and wanted to stay down.

"Love," said Paul, "seeketh not her own, is not easily provoked; hopeth all things, endureth all things," and blessed be God it "never faileth." (I Cor. 15:5-8.)

It lifted you when you were allured by sin and pleased with sin. What can be done? Begin in God's strength to extend the hand of love to the one who is out and wants to be out.

OUR ONLY CREED.

When any man, however professedly learned, or scholarly, he may seem to be, asserts that his denomination is the only one that takes the Bible as its sufficient and only creed, and that man is not speaking for the Christian denomination, put him down as displaying unpardonable ignorance, or as wilfully misrepresenting the facts. For a hundred years ago, when the people who regarded the name Christian as sufficient for any church to wear, were getting together on that common ground, a sagacious and godly man arose in that Christian church council and said:

"I move you, sirs, that we take the Bible, the scriptures of the Old and New Testaments as our only creed, and as a sufficient rule of faith and practice." And from that good hour till this glad day we of the Christian church have considered that motion adopted, its spirit binding, and its ratification inviolable.

The Christian denomination from its inception has always considered the Bible its only creed; and if men about us have not learned that fact it is due to their ignorance of the history or to our indifference in making the great fact known.

Every man expects good to come of his deeds. Therefore, no matter how unholy or worthless the act, one justifies it before one performs it. "I am trying to do my duty," or "I meant to do right" is no justification for an act. The criminal, the coward and the cunning first justify, in their own mind, their crime, and then commit it. No man is a law unto himself. He must refer his deeds to a higher authority than himself, measure his conduct by the standard, not of his own making, but of the divine type. Jesus went straight to the rule of right living, and gave the standard of human conduct when He said, "My meat is to do the will of him that sent me, and to finish his work." (John 4:34.)

The greatest joys in life do not come from the taking of one's ease and from release from responsibilities. We are so constituted that joy is a reaction from effort. Happiness is the reflex of energy. Whittier expressed a truth when he said: "There is life alone in duty done, and rest alone in striving."

NOTES & PERSONALS.

—"Meet me at the Young People's Convention next week," should be the pass-word.

—The Young People's Convention at Burlington next week. See the promising program page 8.

—Who will not work, save with gloves on, deserves but little credit for keeping his hands clean.—Emerson.

—Rev. A. B. Kendall, Burlington, writes a most wholesome and happy article on "Happy Old Age." It is well worth reading even by those not yet old.

—Delegates to the Young People's General Convention to meet at Burlington May 28-30 should notify Miss Bessie I. Holt, Burlington, N. C., if they wish entertainment.

—Principal O. W. Johnson Stonewall Jackson High School, Dendron, Va: "I think THE SUN in its new form and dress very good and every member of the Christian church ought to be proud of it."

—Rev. P. T. Klapp, Elon College, N. C., handed in this week his second list of four new subscribers to THE SUN since its enlargement. Other pastors who will mention the matter to their people can do likewise.

—Don't miss reading the introduction, by Prof. W. P. Lawrence, to his "Little Journeys Into Mission Lands." There are to be twelve of these journeys and SUN readers who follow Prof. Lawrence on this excursion have a great treat in store.

—Brethren, yes, we are all busy. But can't we manage in some way to lay aside our work for a few days and lend our hand and heart and presence in making the Young People's Convention at Burlington next week a success? It is worth our while, whether on the program or not, to attend this Convention.

—Rev. W. W. Staley, D. D., Suffolk: "THE SUN disproves the Osler theory for papers if not for men. It has more than renewed its youth; it has been regenerated and is growing in grace. I hope its evangelistic visits will have a transforming effect upon the church. I go to the Delmarvia Conference May 24-25."

—Rev. O. W. Powers, D. D., Dayton, Ohio: "I have been so busy since March 25th that I have not had time to say what was in my heart to say about the new form and appearance of THE CHRISTIAN SUN. You have a splendid paper in appearance and with larger opportunity given by the increased size I know you will increase its usefulness."

—Rev. H. Scholz, Macon, N. C.: "I am glad you have succeeded in enlarging THE SUN to its present size and excellent print, and sincerely hope that the reward may be to you in something more substantial than congratulations and felicitations." Thanks, beloved. Some new subscriptions are coming in and others will, we believe, as our people learn of the paper's improvement.

—Rev. P. T. Klapp, Elon College had the misfortune, one night last week to have his smoke house broken into and every pound of his meat stolen. Several chickens, some milk and other valuables were carried away by the thieves the same night. Bro. Klapp, who by the way has been under treatment for some time by a Greensboro physician and is far from well, has our deepest sympathy.

—Miss Edith Elizabeth Carroll, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Carroll, Burlington, is among the favored and fortunate who graduate from the Salem College at its 111th annual commencement May 30-June 3rd, and our fair young friend will accept thanks for an invitation to attend the graduating exercises. Miss Carroll is the honored president of her class of thirty-eight graduates.

—A package of love letters that passed between Robert Browning and the lady he eloped with, Elizabeth Barrett Browning, sold the other day in London for $34,000. The finest and best love letter ever yet penned can be had for the asking. Turn to Paul's love letter to the Corinthians (I Cor. 13) and read it. Neither poet, prophet nor philosopher has ever penned its equal. Read it, and be convinced.

—Rev. J. Lee Johnson, Cardenas, N. C., sends us another list of four new subscribers to THE CHRISTIAN SUN with a check for $6.00 to help show his appreciation of the larger and much improved paper. Bro. Johnson is presenting the matter to the people of each of his churches. Try this plan, Bro. Pastor. Your people will appreciate it; you will do them good, and will help your own work, besides being of help to THE SUN.

—The Jacksonville Times-Union inquires: "What is more ridiculous than a man trying to thread a needle?" To which the Norfolk Virginian-Pilot makes reply: "The Bible answers that: A man trying to live as though he could carry his money with him into the next world." No, esteemed, that is not ridiculous, and the Bible does not say it is. That is pathetic, that is sad, that is pitiable—that is folly—that is anything but "ridiculous."

—Dr. Ivey in Nashville Christian Advocate: "We can measure the usefulness and progress of any church by the interest which the people of the Church take in its papers." Measured by such a standard we do wonder how much some pastors care about the usefulness and progress of their Church? Brother pastor, since when have you given even one hour to putting your church paper into the homes of your people where now the paper does not go?

—We are indebted to friend O. B. Williams, a former Elon College student and candidate for the ministry in the M. P. Church for an invitation to attend Trinity College commencement June 1-4th. The Rev. Geo. P. Eckman, D. D., of New York, is to preach the baccalaureate sermon Tuesday, 3rd, at 11 A. M., and on Wednesday, June 4, at 11:30 A. M. the annual address is to be given by Rear-Admiral, Robert E. Peary, North-Pole discoverer, etc.

—Our friend A. C. Hall, not unfamiliar to SUN readers as a writer of fine repute has successfully passed off his Master of Arts examination in Columbia University, has two years of his Doctor of Philosophy degree behind him and is to teach in Columbus, Ga., the coming year as Head of the English Department in the city High Schools. Whereupon we congratulate the pupils of said schools and felicitate our friend on his upward journey.

—We present in this issue the program for the third biennial session of the Young People's Convention to be held at Burlington, Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday, May 28-30, 1913. This convention should be well attended. It undertakes to lay plans for our general Sunday school and Christian Endeavor work and is important. It is comparatively new amongst us as an organization, but should have attention, prayer and deep consideration by all who care for reaching and interesting the young people of the church. An excellent program is presented, and if properly executed must prove of inestimable worth to the church.

—Rev. H. E. Rountree, who with the other pastors of Greensboro, has worked faithfully in the great Biederwolf revival in that city, and in which revival nearly 1,000 people either made profession of faith in Christ or reconsecrated themselves to Christian service, writes this thrilling note under date of May 17: "I will give you a write up of our great revival for THE SUN for next week, but must send you this item now: Thursday night at the close of the meeting 43 young men gave themselves to the ministry if they should ever feel the call of God. About two hundred or more young ladies gave themselves to the missionary field if God should call them. This meeting seemed to me worth our effort during the whole two and a half weeks. They all did so at the altar."

—Thus the Norfolk Virginian Pilot: "The professor who advises students to borrow the money to take them through college evidently overlooks the fact that it takes two to consummate a loan." That professor did not overlook anything of the sort, beloved, and was himself very likely among the vast number of those who did borrow money to go through college on, a very easy thing to do if the young candidate for college has so conducted himself in manners, morals, studies and dress as to merit the approval of some well disposed business man of the community. It is easy for a really deserving, meritorious boy or girl to get the money by loan, in almost any community, to go through college with. The upstarts, and the trifling sort do not land—and they ought not to.

—The lines were cast for us in pleasant places last week, if they ever were. We went fishing. When Peter was at his wit's end he went fishing. Therein he showed his wisdom. If there is any sport, pleasure, or pastime in this wicked world as wholesome, happy, exhilarating as fishing with a hook, line, and rod we have never found it. If that will not rest and refresh a body then that body better go to a hospital and engage two or more physicians. After fishing a day we slept all night long without waking or even turning over. Catch any? Four "chub," a bucket of beautiful "speckles," some "brim" and two "flyers." We pity any tired mortal on this mundane who does not take a day off, now and then, and go fishing. It makes the world seem younger, and troubles vanish as a dream. Think of it! a fishing and a pounding all in the same week! Editors certainly do have (some) happy times.

—Somebody has sent us, for which thanks are expressed, a very neatly engraved invitation to the commencement exercises of the Bible Teachers' Training School, May 25th-28th, at New York City. The program interests us. Sunday, May 25, 11 A. M., Annual Sermon. Monday, May 26, 10:30 A. M., Prize Contest in Scripture and Hymn Reading. Tuesday, May 27, 10:30 A. M., Closing Report and Prayer Hour. Address of President to Graduating Class. 3:00 P. M., Senior Class Day Exercises. 5:45 P. M., Alumni Banquet.

What particularly attracts is that prize contest for best Bible and Hymn reading. Every one of us preachers ought to take training and have a trial at that prize, for how some of us murder our Bible and Hymn reading by slovenly, bunglesome, indifferent methods is a caution. Reading the Bible and reading the hymns may be made the most impressive and beautiful part of the church service. We preachers certainly pay too little attention to our public and pulpit reading.

—Of the great revival that has been sweeping Greensboro for some weeks past, all the churches joining in, and the meetings being held in a great ware-house, Dr. J. F. McCulloch thus writes in the Methodist Protestant Herald:

The Biederwolf meetings continue with unabated interest. Several hundred people have gone forward and committed themselves to a Christian life. Mr. Biederwolf's method is this: After preaching in his powerful manner, concluding his discourse in a way to affect the feelings, he asks all to bow their heads in prayer. He then asks those who wish to begin a Christian life to hold up their hands, he continuing to appeal to them. After a few minutes, he asks the congregation to stand, and then asks those who have held up their hands and any others who wish to become Christians to come down to the platform and give him their hands. He appeals to Christians to speak to those near them, and has previously arranged with Christian workers to be scattered through the congregation for this purpose. After a few minutes spent in this way, he calls on some brother to pray for those who have come forward and asks Christians to gather round them at the altar. He then leads them in a prayer of confession and consecration, which they repeat sentence by sentence after him. He then has cards passed to the converts on which they place their names and indicate the church of their preference.

—Brethren and beloved, preachers and laity, please take note; come and rejoice with us. This editor has been pounded. It was not any of your half-hearted 2 by 4 affairs. It was a pounding right. We doubt if Dr. Staley would have secured as a total half so much, even if we had allowed him 20 per cent. commission. Three—brethren let that number three soak into your mental cranium—three great, glad, good, sweet, wholesome Virginia hams; not your Smithfield dried up, shrunken together sort—three giant fellows that told you there were more in plenty where these came from. A whole bursting, brimming, bulging coop of fine, fat spring chickens. (W. H. Jones, Jr., Cashier of the Farmer's Bank of Nansemond says that any body who owns a coop of spring chickens these times is a capitalist). As we were going on to say, a coop of chickens: a bucket of honey, as white as snow and as sweet as sweet itself; a bucket of butter, as yellow as gold itself; sugar, coffee, cream of wheat—oh! go long! you can't enumerate a pounding like that. And about the only people who could give such poundings that we know any thing about are Pleasant Grove, Halifax County, Virginia people. God bless every one of them and all their kind and kins-folks. If they are not the salt of the earth it is because they have decided that the earth needs a little sunshine and sweetness, and they will help supply that. We would say more about this pounding; but we never have envied any body who got a pounding, and we don't want any body to envy us. However, this must be said: If any of our friends are coming to see us this year, please come within the next month or six weeks. My! but we certainly are happy at our house now.

FOR SALE.

I offer my two story, six room dwelling, and farm of 53 acres, almost adjacent to College campus, for sale at reasonable price. A fine location for those wishing to educate their children. Correspondence solicited.

"Sanctify what you have by what you give." Dost thou see a soul that has the image of God in him? Love him! love him! Say, this man must go to heaven some day. Do good to one another, and if any wrong you, pray to God to right you and love the brotherhood.—John Bunyan.

To be hindered in the work and yet not be impatient with God's way or doubtful that the work is going on—that was the exile's problem on the little dry island of Patmos. And it has been the problem of a man who was tempted to think himself forsaken ever since.—Hiram Jones.

BEAUTIFUL OLD AGE.

To some this may sound at least like a paradoxical statement, and they may feel inclined to take exception to the subject. If any of the readers of this article have this thought, even in subconsciousness, let me tell you that the reason for your thus thinking is because your mind has been too much dazzled by the bright vision of radiant youth, and the wondrous glory of calm, peaceful, beautiful old age has not been borne to your inner vision as yet.

I love the springtime. Don't you? Yes I know that is a rather strong verb I have used, but it conveys the idea better than any other of which I can think at this time. I love the spring warmth and sunshine, when the ear is ravished with the happy song of the birds, and the melody of murmuring brooklets; when the eye is enchanted with a thousand beautiful visions of swelling buds and opening blossoms, nesting birds, skipping lambs, and contented, happy cattle browsing and feeding on the succulent grass in the velvet-carpeted pasture as they roam over God's thousand-hilled range.

The olfactory nerve is assailed and bombarded with a multitude of delightful odors from flower and field and tree; and although some have seen the miracle of the springtime repeated over and over again, forty, fifty, sixty, seventy times, it still seems all new and like a scene slipped from the pages of our favorite childhood fairy book.

We delight in the springtime because it is the season of anticipation, the season of hope. Every nodding plant stalk, every swelling bud, every fresh nest in the old apple tree in the orchard is a prophecy pointing to a fulfillment.

Every ray of spring sunshine, every warm, whispering breeze, every rushing, murmuring brooklet is telling a secret of a harvest-time by-and-by.

It is the time of activity. Bird, beast, man, all nature alive, awake, astir, throbbing, pulsating with strong active life. Beautiful? Oh, yes, I am sure all will agree that the spring is beautiful.

But who doesn't love the autumn? Ah, those glorious, golden days, those calm, still days, when a holy hush seems to fall upon one who has been sitting in some cathedral listening to the inspiring tones of the great organ, and now the organ is stilled and you are sitting up, enchanted, alone and your soul is on its knees.

Days when the fruit hangs golden on the boughs or purpling on the vines; days when the wealth of gleaming wheat and cornfields is being gathered into the already bursting granaries and cribs. The modestly clothed maple has put on her gala robes of crimson and gold, the regal oak has donned his royal purple and every bush and tree is aglow with the glory of the harvest.

It is the season of realization. It is the season of fruition. Its joy is the joy of the harvest.

REV. A. B. KENDALL,
Pastor Christian Church,
Burlington, N. C.

Spring is the time of happy anticipation, the time of blessed hope, the time of aggressive activity. Beautiful, beautiful springtime.

Autumn, the harvest time, the time of fruition, the time of realization, the time of calm. Beautiful? Ah, yes, so beautiful with a beauty and a glory all its own.

Are not these mornings beautiful? Who can arise early these mornings and behold the sun in his majesty and power come flashing over the hills with his banners of crimson and gold flung athwart the sky and driving with his spears of light the hosts of darkness like a beaten, routed, retreating, shattered army before his victorious car, and not feel the heart bound and the pulses thrill and strength seem to vibrate in every part of their being?

Who does not prize and delight in the beauty of the morning? It too is the time of activity. All nature bestirs itself. The birds wake up in the trees in the orchard and sing, the cattle arise from their night's rest and begin to feed, and man goes to his day's labor refreshed and strengthened and eager for the toil of the day. Beautiful morning, glorious morning, who would not worship at thy shrine. But morning is not the only beautiful time of the day.

There is a beauty of the sunset. An indefinable, intangible beauty in the close of the day after the heat and the toil and the burden, to rest calmly, meditatively as the purple shadows of the twilight gather and fall, shutting out the vision of the flowery mead, wooded upland and winding river, and at the same time opening the eyes of the soul and granting far more splendid visions to the delight of the "inner man." To sit and muse and meditate over the joys, the sorrows, the trials and triumphs of the day that has gone, and anticipate the joys of the morrow after the dark of the night has passed, who can tell the bliss and the beauty of it?

The streamlet laughing over the rocks, dancing amid the ferns, singing through the meadows, flashing back the rays of the sun as it slips o'er the shallows is beautiful, no one with any sense of the beautiful in nature whatever would deny this; but how about the beauty of the broad, majestic river as it nears the great ocean, bearing in its bosom memories of helpful experiences as it swept through town and hamlet, turning the wheels of the great factories and bearing on its bosom the white fleets of a people's commerce? Do you not think that it has a beauty that the little dimpled, dancing, laughing rivulet did not possess?

A castle has been builded; it is bright, it is new; music and laughter, song and shout echo through its halls and people beholding it say, "Beautiful, beautiful."

A thousand years sweep by, a thousand years of sorrow and struggle, battle and conquest, victory and defeat. Oh, the stories the old castle could tell: its halls have echoed and re-echoed to the sobs of the sorrowing and the groans of the dying. Laughter and tears, joy and sorrow have been the oft entertained guests within its walls. The clank of the arms of brave men has resounded through its time-stained halls. It has stood many a siege, in some places the walls are broken and crumbling. It is grey with age. The ivy, centuries old, mantles its falling turrets. Has it not a beauty that is not of the new castle but a beauty all its own? Ah, yes, it has a beauty that has been imparted by the experiences through which it has passed and that could have been acquired in no other way.

A flag is being hoisted and as it furls and unfurls in the morning light the wind whispers softly to it and the sun kisses its glorious folds and the people cheer. Is it not beautiful in its newness?

A flag is being carried down the street. It is not unfurled; they cannot unfurl it. It is tattered and torn and riddled with shot; here and there are dark stains, the silent yet eloquent token of the life blood of brave men poured out in its defence. Oh, beautiful old flag; we bow before thee and we hallow thee with our tears.

A vessel has been constructed and is being launched; as it slips from its stays into the embrace of old ocean cheer after cheer arises. Is it not beautiful in its new coat of paint, with white sails and fluttering flags?

A vessel is entering the harbor with tattered sails, with mast gone, great rents are in its side, made by the cruel shell of the enemy; but it is flying the flag of victory. It has held on its way in spite of enemy, in spite of wrath of old ocean, in spite of the storms which howled and whistled through its rigging and now it is nearing port. Oh, beautiful old vessel, our hats off to thee.

What are all these but analogies of the human life.

Youth is the springtime of hope and promise and seedtime. Old age is intended to be the fulfillment and fruition. As the autumn is the crowning of the year so old age is the crowning of the life. "The hoary head is a crown of glory; if it be found in the way of righteousness." It has a beauty of its own. Youth is the morning of activity and toil. Old age the twilight of meditation and retrospection. "The young men shall see visions and the old men shall dream dreams." Visions are of the morning; dreams, of the twilight. Visions call for action. Dreams for meditation. Visions are given to stir the will, dreams to arouse the memory.

Oh, the dreams of the twilight of life, how they come trooping, stirring old memories, bringing back the loved faces which the years have buried from our sight. Recalling old sights and scenes until the heart is mellowed and softened and the soul is aglow with the rich light known only to the twilight.

And let us not forget that the twilight of life has its visions as well as the morning, for mingling with these dreams of the twilight are the most glorious visions of the morrow when we shall begin life anew in our Father's country.

Youth is the murmuring streamlet. Old age the river broad, calm, deep. It laughed among the moss-covered rocks in the quiet dell, it watered the thirsty, it cheered the discouraged, it has borne the burdens of home and church and state, and now calmly, beautifully, transfigured by these experiences it is nearing the great ocean of God's eternal love.

Youth is the castle with its songs and laughter. Old age is the castle glorified with a thousand experiences of love and pain, joy and sorrow, battle, defeat, victory. Beautiful old age.

Youth is the vessel launched amid cheers and song. Old age is the ship beautiful and glorious with its storm-torn sails and its battle-scarred sides.

It has been tossed and rocked and battered. The waves of sorrow have beaten against it: the vast shadowy abysses of temptation have yawned beneath to engulf it, but it has weathered the storms and defeated the enemy and is nearing the haven of eternal rest. Beautiful old age.

Youth is the flag in its newness. Old age the flag baptized in the blood of the patriot. The beauty of the old is of a higher type than the beauty of the new. A spiritual element has entered into its beauty.

But not all autumns are marked by beauty, not all twilights are charming, not all rivers are attractive; not all vessels elicit our admiration; not all old castles fill us with awe, and we do not reverence every old flag alike.

Not all old age is beautiful. I have seen old age that was disgusting, repulsive; old age that was awful. Old age in sin. Old age in degradation, and dishonor. Old age in the horror of the harvest of ears of vicious living. That kind of old age is not beautiful.

But there is old age, and I have seen it, so glorified, so purified, so holy that it has compelled my heart to fall on its knees before it. Old age that has caused the tears to spring to my eyes and sent me to my Father's throne with this petition: "Father, grant that, if I live to be old, my life in old age may be like that life."

It is to that kind of old age that Browning invites us.

"Come, grow old along with me,
The best of life is yet to be;
The last for which the first was made."

How may one have that kind of an old age? By living for it. How does the farmer get a beautiful harvest? By sowing the right kind of seed, then by nourishing and caring for the growing grain or by pruning and strengthening the vines or the trees. It is just the same with life. In the springtime of life, youth, sow the seed of righteous living, get the Word of God in the heart, and let it grow out in the daily life, and when the autumn comes you will have a harvest that will bring joy and satisfaction, and you will have a beautiful old age.

In life's morning and during life's day live for others, cheer the discouraged, bear the burden of some one weaker than yourself. Throw your life, with all its powers, into a splendid work for God and humanity, then, when the twilight falls, God's promise will be fulfilled to you, "At the evening time it shall be light."

Your life may be radiant from the experiences of God's love and mercy, his Providences, his fellowship.

This kind of old age will be trustful. As you have trusted Him through the heat and toil of the morning, and noonday, you will be able to trust Him in the twilight. As you trusted Him through the struggle up the hill of life you will be able to trust Him now that your natural powers are failing and your steps feeble. And you will be able to trust Him to hold, keep, and guide you all along the lone pathway that we must travel, without the presence of earthly friends to comfort and cheer.

God gives such a cheering promise for old age. "Even to old age I am he, and even to hoar hairs will I carry you: I have made, and I will bear; yea, I will carry, and will deliver." (Isa. 46:4.) Is not this a most precious promise for old age to rest upon.

Beautiful old age is fruit-bearing. "They (the righteous, see context) shall still bring forth fruit in old age." Psalm 92:14.

Out of their wide experience of life, and God's goodness, and mercy, and grace, they will be fittest to counsel the ignorant, strengthen the weak, comfort the sorrowing, admonish the wayward, and thus bring forth fruit in the lives of others to the glory of God the Father.

Beautiful old age will be full of anticipation. Anticipations of the meeting with the loved ones whom they "have loved long since, lost awhile." Anticipations of the heavenly home in "the land that is fairer than day."

Every tick of the clock, every grain of sand falling in the hour glass, every sunrise and every sunset will bring you that much nearer

"the home of the soul," that much nearer the blissful moment,

"When you shall gaze upon the face of Him Who did for you, with eyes no longer dim." Beautiful old age will be hopeful.

Two strangers meeting upon the road, and entering into conversation, one remarked to the other, "You must be on the wrong side of fifty?" "On the wrong side of fifty," answered the other. "No sir, I am on the right side of fifty." "Surely" replied the other, "you must be turned fifty?" "Yes sir," was the answer, "but I am on the right side of fifty; for, every year I live, I am nearer my crown of glory."

"The hoary head is a crown of glory; if it be found in the way of righteousness." "See that no man take your crown."

LITTLE JOURNEYS INTO MISSION LANDS.

BY PROF. W. P. LAWRENCE.

Literature of travel has come to be an important part of our reading matter. Descriptions, incidents, and stories of peoples in other lands have a wide appeal because we are interested in present day conditions. There is vital interest in peoples and their doings, not a hundred years ago but today, around the world. Everybody will read what a war correspondent writes about the war in the near East. A traveler from Norway or from South Africa or from any other distant land has an audience when he talks. It has been so since the days of Herodotus, the Greek traveler and historian, who was the world's first great travel lecturer. He was the John L. Stoddard of his distant century, and people hung on his words as he vividly described experiences, as a venturer, in the borders of the civilized world.

W. P. LAWRENCE, M. A.,

But these "Little Journeys into Mission Lands," twelve of them, (and this is but the preparation) are not to be made simply for the purpose of sight-seeing. They are to be made for the purpose, rather, of investigating the conditions of the warring forces between Christianity and the inferior religions of the world. There are many Christian soldiers on picket duty in the vast unconquered lands. The hundred years' war in Europe was a long and bloody struggle, but insignificant in courage, daring, and sacrifice in comparison with the war of Christianity upon sin and false religion for nineteen hundred years. This war, starting at Jerusalem, has been steadily and aggressively waged until the battlefield is now the world with nearly half the territory won. It will be interesting to get out on the firing line in various parts of this great battlefield. I have never been especially anxious to go to the front in any of the sanguinary struggles between nations. The issues in these struggles are usually gain or gold or prestige or power. But I shall enjoy a look into the Christian camps and talk with veterans and the newly enlisted privates, by the camp-fires in distant lands. This is a terrible war, this struggle to conquer the world for Christ. He is a great and good Captain. His army is vast and courageous. From the little handful yonder at Jerusalem to whom he committed this great undertaking nineteen centuries ago, He has constantly had recruits. It is now a magnificent host that marches under his blood-stained banner. The music of marching hosts, with all stringed and wind instruments, and innumerable human voices is an earnest of final victory. Let us journey together out on the firing line, for the Son of God goeth forth to war.

The Son of God goes forth to war—
His blood-red banner streams afar.
Who follows in his train?
Who best can drink his cup of woe
Triumphant over pain,
Who patient bears his cross below
He follows in His train.

CONFIDENCE IN THE BIBLE.

It is a contradiction of terms to say that one may have confidence in God, and yet not confidence in the Bible. One had as well say that he has confidence in a certain man, but has no confidence in his word. And yet there are professedly religious people who say that they believe in God, but do not believe in much of what the Bible says. My reply is, if one believe only partly in the Bible, he believes only partly in God. To assume that the Bible is not worthy of one's fullest confidence, is to assume that God was not capable of producing a Book of such merit and reliability as would entitle it to human confidence. I am now thinking of the fact that many theological teachers and also not a few preachers, are so treating the Bible that a large number of common people are led to lose confidence in its history and its teachings. Those men are playing into the hands of the devil. Nothing suits him better than to cause people to have no confidence in the Bible. He is willing to have all people confide in all other books, and especially bad ones. He has influenced thousands of people to put confidence in many of the most absurd stories that novelists could invent. They have confidence in narratives which have no good authority, and no foundation. But when it comes to the question of confiding in the statements of the Bible, then those people asked to be excused. Some people seem to prefer to put confidence in a human lie, rather than to have confidence in God's truth. The devil once tried to get Christ to confide in his own word, but he failed, and observe the fact that Christ had the utmost confidence in the ancient Scriptures. He never doubted any part of it. If we cannot safely and continuously confide in the Bible, then what book can we have confidence in? We all know, by bitter experience, that many persons, whom we once confided in, we can no longer put confidence in, for they have forfeited our confidence. Let us be most thankful that we have a Bible which is worthy of our complete confidence. It is a priceless privilege.

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENTS

SUFFOLK LETTER.

There seems to be a growing fear in many quarters that Christianity is not keeping pace with the world's present day progress. It seems to me that Christianity has produced the world's present day progress instead of being in the race with present day progress. When you see a young man living in a better home than his father and spending more money than his father, it looks like his father was not keeping up with his son; at that very time the son is doing these great things with money saved by his father. His father is not in the race with his son; he is making it possible for his son to do these things that count in the progress of the community. Christianity is not a competitor of the world; Christianity inspires the world to make progress. Have the nations without Christianity made great progress? Have the centuries without Christianity made great progress? The world reminds one of Nebuchadnezzar: "Is not this great Babylon, that I have built for the house of the kingdom by the might of my power, and for the honor of my majesty?" The blood of martyrs is in every stone in the temple of modern civilization, and human character is in every permanent advancement for human welfare. The son does not outstrip his father; he builds on his father's heart and warms himself by the fire of his father's love.

Christianity works in these days not only by co-operation, but by group specializations. There are Christian organizations within organizations: Missionary societies, Christian Endeavor societies, many groups of men, women, young people, and children, each studying and trying to develop some special phase of Christian study and work. If it were possible to make a Balance sheet of all these organizations, showing their thought, their prayers, their plans, their meetings, their offerings, and their faith, the sum total would no doubt show a large increase in church interests and endeavor. If the attendance could be known it would be found that the attendance upon Christian service was never so great. The crowds at political meetings are not so large as they once were; but the people think more, know more, and do more in shaping legislation than at any period in American history. It is the absence of old forms of religious manifestation that discourages thoughtful Christians. The old fire-place is gone, but our homes are still heated. The old mill on the creek has disappeared, but the people still have bread. The old stage coach is no more, but people travel in greater numbers. The "good old days" were good for their time, but they would not be best in this age. Religion is not losing out; it is finding new expression. War Secretary says "no saloon" in the Panama Canal Zone. That order would have been impossible a hundred years ago; but great moral ideas are working like leaven in high places and speaking from the platform, the bench, the corporation office, the White House, and not simply from the pulpit; though its first utterance is through the sermon. In the triumphal entry of Jesus into Jerusalem, when His disciples said, "Blessed be the King that cometh in the name of the Lord," the Pharisees asked the Master to rebuke them; but he answered, "If these should hold their peace, the stones would immediately cry out." You cannot stop the mouth of the preacher, nor hush the voice of the choir, not make the organ keep silence. The age is full of voices that make a great chorus louder than the voice of many waters. Christianity marches on to victory!

NORFOLK LETTER.

Elon Commencement, the Young People's Convention at Burlington, and the Women's Missionary gathering; all these important occasions coming in such close conjunction form a trinity of inducements to those who love the various causes represented, to begin the packing of one's grip, satchel, suit-case, or whatever else he may have for the hasty and convenient transportation of his personal effects and make ready to hie himself off to the places where these gatherings will soon take place. To one who, for years, has been used to the inspiration derived from such yearly gatherings, the thought of again soon being in touch with the choice spirits comprising the personnel of these meetings is, within itself, inspiring and invigorating.

At each and all these gatherings, the Third Church expects to be represented. At the Women's Missionary Conference, Mrs. J. W. Manning and Mrs. A. Savage will be present, possibly, as well, at Commencement and the Young People's Convention. Others of our membership may also be able to attend. Without doubt a treat is in store for all who go prepared to enter into the real spirit of the meetings. We need the mental and spiritual exhilaration which such occasions generate for the better doing of the work at home. They have a wholesome tonic effect and revive the faded enthusiasm which even the most ardent workers in the Master's cause sometimes experience. Let everyone go who can.

I suppose that the boys and girls at Elon are now passing through all the various and complicated thrills, pleasures and agonies incident to the approach of the commencement season. How vividly it all comes back to me, as memory carries me over the years to my own days on the campus. How, about the middle of the session, we all looked forward to the close of school and the freedom of vacation. And then, as vacation really drew near, we somehow found that after all, we were sorry that it was at hand. For, we realized that it meant the probable breaking up of some of the happiest, most helpful friendships we had ever known. Many of our schoolmates, with whom, for four years we had travelled hand in hand and heart to heart, we should have to say goodbye to, with all the chances in favor of the fact that we should not see them again here, at least. Dear old school and class-mates, no matter where you are today, nor how far you have wandered, here is a toast to you. Most of you were the truest and best friends that we have ever known. Big-hearted, generous, trustful, filled with ideals, longing and yearning to be at the World, with its challenge, we today remember you, hoping that in the din and confusion of the battle you have not wavered, not shown the white feather. If any of you have been defeated, we are sure that it has not been because you were not brave. You went down before superior odds, with all colors still run up to the breeze as became good soldiers and true men. After all, we honor alike those courageous ones who fall, and those who survive. It's the spirit, boys and girls, that determines the esteem in which our fellows shall hold us, finally.

Then, there were those dreadful, soul-racking examinations, that is, they were so if we were not prepared for them. Really, this may not be exactly believed, but I have seen examinations which I truly enjoyed, because I had prepared well for them and was glad of the chance to show just what I could do. But—please excuse me for mentioning them—I almost suffered heart-failure over those for which I had not prepared.

I will venture to assert that just about this time of the year, especially, I can name, without fear of contradiction a certain firm of publishers which is by far the most popular among college boys and girls in the United States. I wonder how many of my young friends ever heard of Hinds and Noble, of New York City. "Nuf sed."

It is marvellous how zealous certain little brown-backed books which these gentlemen handle, are studied by the students as they "cram" for examinations. I can truthfully say that, personally, I never had much recourse to the said books, called "ponies," in the student vernacular, for I always felt that their use militated against mental vigor and robustness, but among my friends were boys who boasted of whole "stables" of these "ponies," which they would surreptitiously bring forth and use when the lynx-eyed professors were not about. Such use was always deplored and discouraged by the Faculty, and rightly, but never altogether eliminated.

I am looking forward to the Young People's Convention with the greatest pleasure, not because I shall try to make a speech myself, but because of the fact that I shall hear others speak. It was indeed kind of the Program Committee to invite me to address the gathering upon the subject, "Young People, Their Perils and Ideals" and I shall do the best I can, and yet, I am sure that I will get a great deal more from them than they will get from me.

By all means let every reader of THE SUN who can do so attend these gatherings. If you feel that you must be selective, and that it will be impossible for you to attend more than one of them, then choose that one from which you feel that you may derive the most inspiration and go to it. You will return to your work with greater zeal and a larger vision of what is possible in the Master's cause.

HENRY SPENCER BOOTH.

RALEIGH LETTER.

We have made splendid progress on the new building since my letter to THE SUN in March. We hope to get into our new Sunday school building the second Sunday in June. The new work is causing to be created new interest, as we expected. The Sunday school has increased twenty-five per cent. in attendance since the work on building started. We hope for an increase of one hundred per cent. during the year. It looks as though we will reach it at the present rate of progress. Let us hear from the friends who have made up their minds to help us. The work on the church has progressed to a stage where we need all the available help possible.

Rev. J. Lee Johnson is with me in what promises to be a good revival. Attendance and interest are increasing at every service. Bro. Johnson will be called to succeed me at Raleigh. It is hoped by the friends of the work that he will accept.

In a few weeks I will leave Raleigh for the summer term in Dr. White's Bible School, New York, thence I go to Northfield for the Bible Conference. It is my purpose to continue in Home Mission work. The place for me will be selected at an early date. I desire to thank the many friends who have given me their support in the upbuilding of our Raleigh church. We have made a hundred per cent. gain in church membership and Sunday school attendance since I took charge of the work. My gratitude to the friends who have helped to make it possible is more than I can express. I have the utmost confidence in the outlook for the Raleigh work. I thank God for what has been accomplished. My heart will turn back to this dear people when I am far away. I cannot forget their love, patience, sacrifice and co-operation. Our lives have been blessed in our struggle for better conditions. I thank God for the better day that has come to the struggling little church, with the new equipment, the new spirit and the enlarged faith. May she make herself a great blessing to the city, to the conference, and to the world.

Sincerely,

L. F. JOHNSON.

ELON COLLEGE NOTES.

Senior examinations are in vogue this week. Students of all other classes will have examinations next week.

Dr. William S. Long, Elon's first President, filled the College pulpit Sunday morning and evening and delivered each time a masterful message of truth direct from the Book. Dr. Long, while being a man of years, has the disposition of a young man and finds a welcome in the presence of both young and old.

Dr. C. E. Forlines, professor of Systematic Theology in Western Maryland Theological Seminary, Westminster, Maryland was the guest of Dr. T. C. Amick Saturday last. Dr. Forlines is well remembered by all of the College and village as having filled the College pulpit with great acceptance both morning and evening services the third Sunday in last November. Dr. Forlines will spend his vacation in North Carolina in interest of a certain project of his church.

The annual reception given by the President and his wife to the members of the Senior Class was held Thursday evening in the hospitable home of Dr. and Mrs. W. A. Harper. Those participating were members of the Senior Class, unmarried professors and a few others by special invitation. The evening was given over to fun, wit, music and a general relaxation of the problems of life.

The guests were received by Mrs. Harper, assisted by Miss Annie Watson and Mrs. J. O. Atkinson, while Mesdames Lawrence and McNally gracefully presided at the punch bowl. All who attended the reception report a most happy and delightful time.

Word has just reached the College that the Francis Asbury Palmer Board, of which Dr. Martyn Summerbell is president and Dr. Frank S. Child, Secretary, has granted $1,500 to the College for current expenses this spring. This same Board last fall voted the College $2,000.

The President is also glad to announce that the late Dr. J. J. Summerbell, Dayton, Ohio, left a bequest of $1,500 to the College to be used in its own discretion to the best advantage of the College. It has been decided to create out of this bequest the J. J. Summerbell Fund, the income of which shall be used as the Board of Trustees shall from time to time direct.

One of the great questions which the Board of Trustees will be called upon to decide this June will be provision for a Building for the Young Ladies' Hall, the organization which provides board and living expenses to young women at cost. It is hoped that a nice building will be provided for this purpose on the southwest corner of the campus.

THE HOPE OF A POOR CHRISTIAN.

Not long ago in a prayer meeting a friend of mine spoke of himself as "a poor Christian," but ventured to hope that, as he was trying hard, he might ultimately develop into a better man. This showed that he was really getting along. It is those who think themselves good Christians who are really in a bad way. There was little of justification in the case of the Pharisee who thanked the Lord that he was "not as other men." We are "all John Thompson's bairns." Not one of us is any better than he ought to be. The best we can say for ourselves is that our faces are set right and we are trying to be good. But I would rather be the weakest and most stumbling Christian in the ranks of those who endeavor to follow Christ than to be the strongest and most self-confident unbeliever in the world. For if God be for us, who shall be against us? Heaven is full of men and women who were once poor Christians, but there are no unbelievers there. And there is not one among them who was saved by his own merit; all have triumphed through the blood of Christ and by the grace of God. "There is no condemnation to them that are in Christ Jesus." He that believeth shall be saved. Only believe! Faith is the vital bond that holds us to our Lord. As Rowland Hill was wont to say:

We two are so joined

He can't go to heaven and leave me behind.

A poor Christian, if only he have faith—a little, but a growing faith, faith "as a grain of mustard seed"—may grow into a good Christian by sitting at the feet of Christ. There is no university like this. Growth is the evidence of life. If our lives are hid with Christ in God, no matter how feebly they began, we are bound to develop more and more into his likeness. It is oftentimes a slow growth. The fable of Minerva, who sprang full panoplied from the forehead of Jove, is never realized in the Christian life. Our development is like the process of germination in nature: it is "first the blade, then the ear, then the full corn in the ear."

Let us, therefore, not be impatient. "Bide a wee and dinna weary." We may take courage from the experience of Peter. It is a notable fact that he, in whose early life there was so little of promise, grew to be preeminently the apostle of character. No one of the sacred writers insists as earnestly as he on the importance of a symmetrical cultivation of the graces. It is he who sets for us that great "sum in addition" which is really the most difficult problem of life: "Add to your faith virtue; and to virtue knowledge; and to knowledge temperance; and to temperance patience; and to patience godliness; and to godliness brotherly kindness; and to brotherly kindness charity. For if these things be in you, and abound, they make you that ye shall neither be barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ."

It is not an easy matter to live a Christian life. We are called into a close grapple with "the lust of the flesh, and the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life." But who wants to live an easy life? "The north wind makes Vikings."

"Must I be carried to the skies

On flowery beds of ease,
While others fought to win the prize,
And sailed through bloody seas?

Sure I must fight, if I would reign;

Increase my courage, Lord;
I'll bear the toil, endure the pain,
Supported by thy word."

If a man choose to struggle on alone, he can do so. In that event, however, let him not complain if the issue is against him. But blessed is the man who can go with fortitude into the fiery furnace, if need be, to be tried as gold is tried. Nor need he fear the final outcome if in that furnace, like the three youths of Babylon, he can realize the presence of the Son of God.—David James Burwell, D. D., in the Presbyterian.

WE SHALL KNOW LATER.

Let us not be too anxious to know, in this world, how much or how little the results of our work for the Lord are or may be. We may already know enough about them to give us all of the encouragement that we actually need. If we were to know the total results of all the good work which we have done and are doing, we would be under great temptation to glory in them and take too much credit to ourselves. Perhaps even now, with our limited knowledge of such results, we praise ourselves and forget to give all honor to God. What we do not know now we will know later if we shall enter the heavenly world. In that state we will not be disposed to take to ourselves any credit for what God has enabled us to do in this world. And then we will have many surprises as the result of labor in behalf of God and humanity of which we knew nothing before.

From an editorial in Sabbath Reading I take the following words: "Although we may not see any fruit of our labor in this life or any compensation for the defeats and disappointments and discouragements which we encounter, yet we shall find in the end that even our apparently futile efforts have helped to win the kingdom for the King of kings. And one smile from him will be sufficient reward for any service that we can render."

This is indeed true. It is also true that we now know that our labor is not in vain in the Lord. We are pleasing him now if we do whatsoever he commandeth us to perform. In thus doing we are succeeding finely. If we are sowing that good seed, we are warranted in believing that in due time it will result in fruit which will abide forever. Heaven is the great storehouse. Keep serving!—C. H. Wetherbe, in Ram's Horn.

THINK OF THIS.

Someone asked a famous musician: "What is your favorite composition?"

The answer was: "Whatever I am playing."

That is the feeling that will cause a musician to throw his whole soul into his playing, and a workman to do his best work.

We have to like our work, or we shall not do our level best at it.

It may be that our present task is disagreeable, but it is possible to take a deep pride in doing it thoroughly and in leaving no rough odds and ends to worry others.

To slight the music one is playing is a poor preparation for further music. If one makes up his mind that, whatever be the composition, he will handle the keys like a master, many things are possible to him.

Promotions nowadays comes to few men unless they like the present work well enough to do their work as masters.—Onward.

WANTED AT THE ORPHANAGE.

There is needed at the Christian Orphanage, more help both in the kitchen and house work. The larger girls assist and do much, but women of experience in cooking, in house keeping, in sewing etc., are needed. Applicants should address Rev. E. M. Carter, Supt., Elon College, N. C.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON, MAY 25.

Continuing the Study of the Forgiving Spirit of Joseph.

Subject.—"Joseph and Benjamin."

Time, place.—Same as last lesson.

Golden Text.—"He that loveth his brother abideth in the light." 1 John 2:10.

Leading Thought.—God is love.

Scripture connections.—Direct.

The famine, described in the last lesson, continued. The grain brought from Egypt did not last long. Soon Jacob and his family were in as great need as ever. So one day the old man called together his sons, and said: "Go again, buy us a little food."

Regarding the conditions on which they might secure more grain, also the release of Simeon, Jacob had been told. He and Reuben had quite a controversy about the matter. Lesson 7, verses 37 and 38.

Now Judah came forward as representative of the brothers. He referred pathetically to the fact that they must have food or perish, but he said very plainly that there was no use for them to go to Egypt unless Benjamin went with them, and that accordingly they would not go without him. For the safety of their younger brother he gave his father a solemn personal pledge. Their necessity was so urgent that, after some distrustful complainings, Jacob yielded.

According to the custom of the times, he prepared a present of some of the delicacies of the land, for the governor. These delicacies may have been some that had been kept from the years of plenty, or it may be fruit trees and spice plants continued, during the years of famine, to produce a part of a crop. These delicacies were prized, but even such as were edible could not take the place of grain for food. He told them to return the money that they had so strangely found in their sacks, also other money to make further purchases. "Take also your brother."

Again Joseph's brethren appeared in Egypt and again he recognized them. He saw at once that Benjamin was among them. He was pleased and ordered that a big feast be spread for him and them.

The first verse of the text says "The men were afraid." The cold treatment of the former occasion filled them with awe. No doubt in little groups they discussed the matter. They dared not to refuse and yet they were afraid to partake of the meal. No doubt their consciences were at work. Back to their memories came the matter of the money returned in their sacks. Was a plan of punishment being prepared. The penalty then for theft was slavery.

Gradually those fears are relieved by the reassuring words of the steward. Every care is shown them. Note the obedience to Joseph. Observe the interest of Joseph in his father.

Joseph weeps. Who knows the years of yearning and longing to see his younger brother and his father. At the feast Benjamin was the honor guest. Joseph probably helped with the serving.

Because it is said that "they drank, and were merry," does not necessarily mean intoxicants were used. In fact, the opposite was the case. It was not the riotous, noisy feast of drunkards, but the wholesome, joyous feast of a happy family. Their fears had been relieved, Simeon had been restored to them. There was occasion for real joy and merriment, without alcoholic stimulants.

LESSON CONTRASTS.

Last week we studied of Jacob's sons making their first visit to Egypt; this week we study of their second visit to that historic land. On their first visit they came with confidence; on the second visit they come with fear and trembling. On their first visit Joseph met and recognized his ten older brothers; at this second coming he rejoices to see the whole band of eleven brothers. At the first visit of which we learned in our last lesson the men were treated with suspicion; at their visit of which we learn in this lesson they are treated with kindness. Then they were almost denied the food they came to buy; now even their asses are fed and themselves feasted. Then they were consigned to a prison; now they are invited to a palace. Then they were treated as spies; now they are welcomed as brothers. At that meeting the governor showed strange interest in the strangers; at this meeting he reveals that he also has unaccountable knowledge of them, even of their ages.

ARE YOU PLANNING TO ATTEND?

We present the program for the Young People's Convention in this issue of THE SUN. This biennial session will be held May 28th-30th with the Burlington, N. C., Christian church. Every society, class and Sunday school that has not already done so should elect delegates next Sunday. These organizations should pay the railroad fare of delegates.

Many attractive and interesting speakers will address the convention and it will be a meeting of inspiration and help to all workers. We trust no class, school or society will overlook this matter. Send as many delegates as you can. They will be given homes.

The future of the work rests upon the enthusiasm, spirit and success of this convention. Will you be represented?

NOTES ON C. E. TOPIC, JUNE 1.

Subject.—“The Ideal Christian. VI. His Bible Study.” Deut. 6:1-9.

Have this meeting begin on time. Procrastination is, strange to say, an accelerating habit. Close the meeting on time; if interest lags, close it before time. Many, many meetings have been spoiled by starting late, holding late, and letting things drag while the meeting was going on. Get this out of your society.

The Christian Endeavor World outlines plans for this meeting and calls it a staff meeting. I take it that every society gets the Christian Endeavor World (it certainly should) and I try not to reprint too much what it has in the way of plans. It is my desire to supplement this paper rather than to fill its place.

NEED FOR MEN IN THE WORK.

In a recent address before the North Carolina Baraca-Philathea convention, President Hudson, the father of the Baraca and Philathea movements, said that he could place sixteen efficient and capable young men as organizers in different parts of the country if he could find the men.

There is a genuine demand for this sort of work. Why do not our colleges, especially our Christian and denominational schools, make a specialty of preparing men for definite work of this kind instead of leading them through a course that is too much of “glittering generalities?”

THE YOUNG PEOPLE'S CONVENTION.

We need to bestir ourselves about our young people. It is easy to drift, but when we neglect our young people they drift to other churches where they will be looked after. I trust we are to have a great Convention at Burlington, and if we do our part we will. Let all pastors and churches pull together for a great work.

C. H. ROWLAND.

Franklin Va., May 12, 1913.

The birth rate in the city of Paris, France, was during 1912 the lowest in its history, according to a municipal report made public a few days ago. There was only one birth for every thirty families.

REMEMBER THE MISSIONARY MASS MEETING

At Elon, May 27-28.—Every Church Should Send at Least One Woman.—All Pastors Urgently Invited.—A Last Appeal.

As the time of our Missionary Mass Meeting draws near, it is hoped that many of our women are planning to attend. The meeting can be a most helpful one if all combine to make it so. There are matters of great importance to be considered, your counsel and help will be needed. There will be inspiration and enthusiasm to be gained—you should have a share in this. Let every one interested in the work feel it her duty to be present, even if it should mean some inconvenience and sacrifice. We must not neglect the King's business.

There have been no more loyal supporters in the establishment of this work in our churches than our faithful pastors—and without their co-operation and support it is well-nigh impossible to interest the women. They must espouse and uphold the cause if it is to have a hearty response. And so, it is earnestly desired that as many of our pastors as can do so, will be present. Their counsel and good cheer will be helpful; and they will be brought in closer touch with the work, its aims and aspirations, and better enabled to foster it in their respective fields.

Again, remember the meeting, by your prayers now and by your presence and prayers May 27-28.

HOW THE TRUTH TOOK HOLD OF ONE MAN.

BY MISS ALICE M. TRUE.

A soldier peddler who had lost one arm in battle, came to the house (Mrs. Watanabe's) selling various small wares and entered into conversation with a Christian, Mr. Kajitsuka, who happened to be there.

The soldier had heard of Christianity in the hospital and also in various places as he in his business called at pastor's homes. He expressed his interest in it but pulled out a cheap tobacco bag in which tobacco fibre is kept and an ordinary tiny pipe to light his fire at Mrs. Watanabe's charcoal brazier, “That is not good for you,” said Mr. Kajitsuka. “If you want God's blessing you have to keep your body pure,” and then followed a two hours' talk with the soldier, who said: “Why, here I am, gazed at like a strange creature, by children and strangers, because of my one arm, as I go to unknown places every day. Often I sell little. The only way I can get a feeling of happiness is by smoking at night. My nerves feel better and a pleasurable feeling comes.”

“I, too, am a soldier,” said the Christian, “I have much sympathy for you,” and he talked on, so earnestly that the soldier, with a thud, threw the tobacco case, pipe, pouch, tobacco and all across Mrs. Watanabe's room, much to her surprise. “Since I was 13 years old, that is for 16 years, I've smoked tobacco, but now I give it up. I've given it up,” he said. “Different preachers have told me that it was bad for me and I have joined the Temperance Society, but I couldn't stop. By your kind teaching I have done what I could not before.”

Some time after Mr. Kajitsuka thought the man may have another tobacco set or smoke cigarettes. How can one trust a stranger! So he went to a hotel near, whither the man had gone.

The landlady repeated the statement that her lodger told her he had quit smoking and that he told her to throw away his cigarettes, two of which remained.

Mr. Kajitsuka went softly to the room, saying, “Excuse me.” (Japanese never knock at doors.) He quickly and suddenly opened the door. The man was sitting beside the Bible and the Prodigal Son tract which he had received at Mrs. Watanabe's home, as if he, like the prodigal, were thinking of his sins.

He bowed his head to the floor and thanked Mr. Kajitsuka for his former kind advice. So Mr. Kajitsuka tried to bring another kind of happiness to the poor soldier, knowing that he had been quite truthful in his decision and promise.

We missionaries do not say much about tobacco but the Japanese Christians say more. It is well known that it injures the body. “It makes a good starting point for the changed life.” Dr. de Forest used to say, “One must begin somewhere to mortify the flesh.”

AN OPEN LETTER.

To the Editor of The Herald of Gospel Liberty, Editor of Christian Sun, and Others Interested.

Circumstances often create conditions that carry with them obligations; but for this fact this letter, which is so personal, would not now be written. As it is the statement of the facts herein seem not only to be justified but called for.

In the issue of The Herald of April 10, in Dr. Barrett's editorial on the great flood that caused such terrible havoc in our city he made special mention of ourselves among those who had suffered property damage and loss, and suggested that some brethren might send something to help repair or make up for said loss. He was careful to say that what he had written was without any knowledge on our part. And surely it was wholly unexpected and a surprise to Mrs. Bishop and myself. But what he had written he had written.

Surprise No. 2 came when we saw in the next number of THE CHRISTIAN SUN that Dr. Atkinson, its editor, had quoted from Dr. Barrett, approving and emphasizing the idea, even opening the columns of THE SUN and offering himself to receive such gifts as might be sent and forward same to us. Seeing that both of our editors had taken us thus in hand what could we do but to hold our peace?

Surprise No. 3 is the number and character of the responses of the brief but soul-earnest appeals of these editorial brethren. We are now in receipt of check from Dr. Atkinson for $101.67, covering offerings that had been sent to him. Some has come also by the hand of Dr. Barrett; some has come to us direct through their appeals; some from relatives and friends of previous years.

And now what shall we say, what can we say? Language is lame, entirely inadequate to express our thanks. To our brethren, the editors, and to one and all who have in any way sent us financial help we beg you to accept this assurance of our heart-felt, time-lasting GRATITUDE.

Refreshing and cheering to our spirits, also, have been the breathings of a sweet fellowship of friends of former years as well as of some whom we have not seen in the flesh, and the kindly words that came in letters, of appreciation of the labors and sacrifices (as some term it) of past years of our service, especially our service in connection with our missionary work.

We know that occasions of great calamities tend to arouse the sympathies and prompt the benevolences of the people in general; but what means this special effort voluntarily put forth by our editors, and the responses to the present needs of the denomination's ex-mission secretary (and present treasurer) and his wife? We think there is something more than mere sentiment back of this, and that this something is couched in the following words in the printed suggestion or appeals given to the public: "Dr. Bishop is now almost eighty years old and his wife is not very far behind him. He has always worked on a small salary and lived economically.  These two have literally worn themselves out working for the Christian Church and the advancement of God's kingdom."

As to our ages and work the statements are true,—except, we can hardly acknowledge that we are just quite "worn out," working as we now are from eight to ten hours daily; but the rest day may not be far away. What they have said as to the salary is true.

* * * * *

I was placed on the Mission Board in October, 1886. During this quadrennium our first two missionary families were sent to Japan. In 1890 I was made Mission Secretary, to that was soon added the work of Mission Treasurer. For the next sixteen years I was retained, by re-elections, as secretary, during which time all the missionaries that the denomination has yet sent to foreign fields were sent. During the last twelve years of this time we started, and edited the Christian Missionary, and with some extra office help, created for it a circulation of about thirty-seven hundred copies monthly.

Our Motto. When taking the office of Mission Secretary I had been on the Board four years and had learned somewhat of conditions—the great lack of missionary sentiment and interest among our people, and had a fair idea of the task we were undertaking, and hence made this our motto:

"This one thing I do."

From that day forward Mrs. Bishop and myself gave ourselves—time, energies, and means to the work of creating missionary interest and building up the work. We located at once in Dayton, a good center from which to radiate, though an expensive city in which to live.

The salary for the first two years was $200.00. This was gradually raised, so that the average salary for the first four years was $337 annually, for the second four years $575, for the third $652, for the fourth four years $800. It was continued at these figures for the first two years of the fifth quadrennium. During these six of the past twenty-two years, except one in which our foster daughter was in college, we did manage to live on our salary. Then the quantity of work required was lessened somewhat and the salary put at $400; later the amount of service increased and the salary was increased to $500, and then to $550.

As to the salary we are not complaining of the Board. They have always done what seemed to them the wisest and best to do under the circumstances that obtained at the time conditions sometimes which the Board did not create and was powerless to amend. I would have retired from the Board some time ago (indeed did tender my resignation at the last Board meeting) but for the urgent solicitations of members at different times for me to remain.

Mrs. Bishop joins me in the plea, that we may all keep in very close fellowship with the Lord Jesus; that our faith may take strong hold on the promise of Phil. 4:19, and that we all may betake ourselves more earnestly to prayer and active effort for the enlargement of our beloved missionary cause.

J. G. BISHOP.

CONTROL YOUR THOUGHTS.

Stop that thought. It was in your mind all day yesterday, and it made you perfectly miserable. Over and over again it passed through all the unpleasant scenes, heard all the cruel words that were spoken, suffered again all the painful feelings, and succeeded in spoiling the day, unfitting yourself for your work and destroying all happiness out of your heart. Are you going to continue it always and by so doing waste more of your life in the foolish if not insane habit of tormenting yourself because someone or something made you unhappy in the past?

That thought has no right in your mind. You may think you cannot stop it, but you can, as it is only a bad habit you have fallen into and you must break it or it will break you. You must get the mastery of your own mind, and the control of your own thoughts, and while it will be the hardest battle you will ever have to fight it will be the most glorious victory you will ever win.

To be a slave to unpleasant thoughts is the

Children's Missionary Stories

STORIES are—yes, must be—used by every wide-awake worker among, or leader or teacher of, children.

MISSIONARY STORIES seem to have been the one field well-nigh overlooked until Mrs. Alice Moreton Burnett, Corresponding Secretary for the Woman's Board for Home Missions of the Christian Church, made a compilation of thirty interesting, instructive stories pertaining especially and directly to missions that are sure to be appreciated by workers, teachers, leaders, pastors, fathers, mothers—and the children.

Some of the Important Events of both Home Missions and Foreign Missions are also included, together with Suggestions For Junior Leaders.

They make a book 5 x 7 inches in size, 128 pages, red cloth binding—a handsome, attractive volume. Price 35c per copy postpaid.

worst kind of bondage, and sometimes leads to insanity; but to be able to think on any subject you please places your happiness in your own hands, and gives you a sense of power and independence which is not only delightful to realize, but which enables you to develop your character and shape your life according to your own choice. When you begin this work never shut yourself up in a room alone to brood and weep over your sorrow, but do those things which will make you forget it, live in the open air as much as possible, get acquainted with the birds, watch the clouds, study the flowers, talk to the streams or trees and make companions of the wonderful works of the loving Father, which will help you out of yourself into the broader and sweeter life in which they live. But if you cannot do this, have a book at hand and compel yourself to read a few lines or a few verses, visit a friend, do some work that demands close attention, study a picture, and whenever the hateful, tormenting thought presents itself turn your back on it and your attention to something else till you can say to it, "Not at home."—Ex.

NOTICE! NOTICE!

The Young People's Convention of the Western North Carolina Christian Conference will hold its annual meeting with the Randleman Christian church July 25-27, 1913.

The Sunday school at this church has extended to the convention a cordial invitation to meet there, which invitation the executive committee has gladly accepted; and we feel sure that with Randleman as our meeting place we can have one of the best conventions ever held in the Western Conference. That the convention may be a success I want to ask that every pastor and also every Sunday school superintendent begin now to make plans and have every school within the bounds of the conference represented. A large delegation is one of the very necessary things that go to make a convention a success. Brethren, please see that your school is represented in the Randleman Convention.

Yours in the work,
J. F. MORGAN, President.

CURES HOG CHOLERA

Last spring cholera got among my hogs and one died before I really knew they were sick. Two others were very sick when I noticed them, and as I had bought two of your Brick for the horses, I decided to give it a trial. I dissolved half a Medicated Salt Brick in some swill, giving this to the two sick hogs and in a few hours I gave the other half to them. They seemed to improve so nicely, I bought several of the Brick and gave it to all my hogs, and have not lost another one with any kind of disease. One of the sick hogs lost all of his hair, so this is proof that they had cholera.

THE BIBLE.

The book contains the mind of God, the state of man, the way of salvation, the doom of sinners, and happiness of believers. Its doctrine is holy, its precepts are binding, its histories are true, and its decision immutable. Read it to be wise, believe it to be safe, and practice it to be holy. It contains light to direct you, food to support you, and comfort to cheer you. It is the traveler's map, the pilgrim's staff, the pilot's compass, the soldier's sword, and the Christian's charter. Here heaven is opened, and the gates of hell disclosed. Christ is its grand subject, our good its design, and the glory of God its end. It should fill the memory, rule the heart, and guide the feet. Read it slowly, frequently, prayerfully. It is a mine of wealth, health to the soul, and a river of pleasure. It has given you here in this life, will be opened at the judgment, and is established forever. It involves the highest responsibility, will reward the greatest labor, and condemn all who trifle with its sacred contents.—Exchange.

THE SENTINEL OF THE SOUL.

Those who indulge fretful feelings, either of anxiety or irritation, knows not what an opening they thereby give to the devil in their hearts. "Fret not thyself," says the Psalmist: "else shalt thou be moved to do evil." And in entire harmony with this warning of the elder Scriptures is the precept of St. Paul against undue indulgence of anger: "Let not the sun go down upon your wrath; neither give place to the devil." Peace is the sentinel of the soul, which keeps the heart and the mind of the Christian through Christ Jesus. So long as this sentinel is on guard and doing his duty, the castle of the soul is kept secure. But let the sentinel be removed, and the way is opened immediately for an attack upon the fortress.—Pittsburgh Christian Advocate.

EVERY MOTHER HOLY.

The world has been worshipping at the shrine of the Virgin Mary, but Jesus said to His disciples, "Every holy mother is a glorified Madonna!" You remember the occasion; it was that day when one said to Him, "Thy mother and brethren desire to speak with thee," and Jesus answered pointing to His disciples, "Behold my mother, for whosoever doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven, the same is my brother and sister and mother." What a wonderful fulfillment these words of Jesus have had, for if you were to search the world for examples of love and purity, you would find that the truest, best, noblest the world has to offer comes from Christian motherhood. And Christianity is the only religion which has produced this exalted and purified type of womanhood.—Ex.

The picture of American life to-day is that of a people rushing madly up the altar stairs of mammon. Our English cousins may truly tell us that while they hold a family name as the symbol and essence of our glory, we hold as the symbol of essence of our glory a monopolistic business or a spectacular fortune. There is not so much difference after all, between the lion rampant and the dollar rampant.—Nashville Christian Advocate.

DONATIONS.

Mrs. J. P. Barrett, 1 hat, 1 pair shoes, 1 dress, 1 shirt waist and 1 skirt.

I have ordered the Mite Boxes, at last. It will be some expense to get them; and I debated the matter for sometime before placing the order. But I decided that there might be a number of the cousins who would like an interest in this part of the work; make the Corner more interesting and profitable to the institution. Now, may I have a number of requests for boxes and I will mail them to you as soon as they are received.

We have ordered the range; a large double oven one. You may know the cook has a broad smile, just to think she is to have this most needed addition for her department.

HE SUFFERED TO PROTECT OTHERS.

I give you this week the benefit of a story I have read. It goes like this: You know that in Holland there are large parts of the country that lie below the level of the sea. The people, in those parts, build great walls, or banks of earth, to keep the water from overflowing the country. These banks are called dykes. Some times these dykes give way, and the water rushes in and overflows the country, destroying much property and many lives.

One night a little boy in Holland was returning home from a village, to which he had been sent by his father, on an errand. As he was walking along he saw a little hole in the dyke, through which the water was beginning to run. The hole was so small that he could just cover it with his hand. He knew if it was left till morning, the bank would be washed away, and the sea would rush through, and drown all the village. He was afraid that, if he left it till he ran to the village and back again, the opening made might be too great to stop till much damage had been done. So he resolved to stay there and keep his hand over the hole, till somebody came by whom he could send to tell the villagers of their danger. Then he took his stand on the dyke, and kept his hand over the place, and waited patiently for somebody to come. But no one came. The shades of the evening gathered round. The darkness of the night settled around him; still no one came. Hour after hour rolled slowly away, and there the brave boy stood manfully at his post. In cold, darkness, wet, tired, and shivering, he remained there, stoutly pressing his hand against the dangerous place. All night he remained in that position. At last the morning broke. A clergyman, walking on the dyke, heard a groan, and looked around to see where it came from.

"What are you doing there, my child?" he asked, seeing the boy, and surprised at his strange position.

"I am keeping the water back, sir, and saving the village from being drowned," said the boy, with lips so benumbed with cold that he could hardly speak. The astonished minister took the boy's place, and sent him to tell the villagers. They came and stopped the breach. Thus the boy at the dyke was willing to suffer all night for the sake of doing good to his friends and neighbors.

"Give and it shall be given unto you; good measure pressed down, and shaken together, and running over."

HOW TO HAVE FRUITS AND FLOWERS.

Are you having any trouble with your roses or other lawn flowers? If so it may be due to the many diseases to which they are subject and which can be cured if you knew how. Perhaps your fruit trees are not bearing as they should. Maybe you wish to place some improvements around your home and make it more attractive. If so, the J. Van Lindley Nursery Company Box 207 Pomona, N. C., is sending out free a book on such matters containing very valuable information. A post card will bring it. You can depend upon the advice given in this booklet for the above firm is the oldest in the South.

STOPS TOBACCO HABIT

Elders' Sanitarium, located at 1017 Main St., St. Joseph, Mo., has published a book showing the deadly effect of the tobacco habit, and how it can be stopped in three to five days.

As they are distributing this book free, anyone wanting a copy should send their name and address at once.

WHOLE-HEARTED.

"I will praise thee, O Lord, with my whole heart." (Ps. 9:1).

God is a jealous God and He will not accept a divided heart. The cold-hearted Christian, "the lukewarm," are nauseating to God. (Rev. 3:16). Only the whole-hearted, true-hearted, warm-hearted will God welcome and receive.

Read your hymnbook and notice the whole-hearted terms used by inspired poets; read your Bible and mark its strong, whole-hearted speech. Stop and think, what would I give for a half-hearted hymn, one that read like this:

"Thou, O Christ, are part of what I want;

Much of good in thee I find "

How weak! How insipid! How nauseating this!

How infinitely richer, sweeter, the true verse:

"Thou, O Christ, art all I want, More than all in thee I find."

What would I give for a lukewarm and limited gospel like this:

"The blood of Christ often cleanses us from some of our worst sins?"

If we love whole-hearted hymns, and scripture and prayer, then why not live a whole-hearted life of love and worship and service? When your life gets to be as large and rich and true as are the terms in our hymns and prayers and Scriptures, then will your life be great!—N. C. Christian Advocate.

MONEY—MORE MONEY.

"Jesus said more about money than any other one thing." "The love of money is the root of evil." "How hardly shall they that have riches enter into the kingdom of heaven."

Man becomes like his god. The money-god is hard hearted and makes man's heart hard. The love of God and man is destroyed by the love of money. "Love not the world, neither the things in the world. If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him." (1 John 2:15). "Every one that loveth is born of God and knoweth God. He that loveth not knoweth not God: for God is love." (1:78). "To be carnally-minded is death."—i. e., to love money, pleasure, the world, is death to love for God and man. (Rom. 8:6). "She that liveth in pleasure is dead while she liveth."

"Property belongs to society." "No man makes enough by himself but is helped to do so by others." Many a man has been made rich in a short time by having property in a growing city. Society made him rich. All we have to sell is salable and valuable by reason of the fact that we have people around us. The man who makes money out of people owes the people a debt in proportion to what he makes. Few men ever pay this debt. "I am a debtor to all men." The income tax is eminently just.

pride that is haughty and disregardful of God.

Money tempts men to be false, dishonest and deceitful.

Money leads men to trickery, treachery, thievery and all manner of roguery and rascality.

Money is back of the licensed saloon in this country. Money is back of the white slave traffic, and all sorts of sinful traffic.

But why more? The love of money has set itself up against the love of God and seeks to lure the sons of men to walk down its glittering, golden way to death. Broad and brilliant is the way, and many there be that walk therein.

There is no piety in poverty. Some poor men are as wicked as Satan wants them to be. But there is a discipline in povrty that develops in those who accept it right the finest, divinest traits of character.

To own a million dollars is to have a grand opportunity to pay the debt you owe to society; but to be owned by a million dollars is to be enslaved by a master whose heart is hard metal.

A man in any business or profession may have the heart of a highway robber when it comes to getting money, but he may use just a little different method in robbing society.

Happiness can no more grow in a hard heart than a rose can grow in a rock. The gold god makes the heart as hard as metal, according to the law that we become like our god. Therefore, the money god destroys the power and possibility of happiness.

The love of money is a thousand times more perilous to the world than is the love of whiskey.

To make money the end of life, love, and labor is to make a fatal mistake. But to make money as a means to a meaner end is just as bad.—N. C. Christian Advocate.

The purpose of the development is to provide a meeting place for Methodist conventions and kindred bodies and a large number of people will doubtless visit this point each season.

WHAT IS THE DIFFERENCE?
Some of Uncle Sam's political sons want him to build a navy of forty-eight big battle-ships between now and 1925, and then say to the world, "I am now ready to keep the peace and if the rest of you will not I'll make you do it." The man who puts a pistol in his pocket and goes about the country has as much right to say that he is doing so in order to keep peace.

REALLY BELIEVING IN GOD'S FORGIVENESS.

Why do we add sin to sin, by doubting God's willingness to forgive us, instantly and completely, for any sin that we can ever commit? A man was telling a friend how wonderfully God had blessed him by forgiving a certain sin that he had recently committed; and he explained that not only had God instantly restored him, but even though the sin had meant a waste of time, God had not permitted that loss of time to interfere to the extent of a single minute with the necessary programme for the day's work. In concluding he said that now, of course, his temptation would be to presume upon his experience, and let the sin be repeated but, that might not be so tolerant the next time. "I suppose you mean," answered his friend quietly, "that you would not be ready to believe in the Lord's forgiveness the next time." It was a keen thrust, but it was needed. The man saw the sin he was committing: the sin of unbelief. Jesus Christ is the same yesterday and today, yea and forever. What He has done once, in the way of forgiveness, He will do always. We are not to sin that grace may abound; but we are not to commit the sin of limiting that abounding grace.—Selected.

Herndon.

Bro. John E. Herndon is dead, was the message that came to me over long distance Friday morning, May the 9th. The first thought was "A good man has gone to his reward."

Bro. Herndon was born March 10, 1851, and died May 8, 1913, aged 62 years, one month, 28 days. He was married to Miss Sue Hurdle November 7, 1888.

He was a member of the building committee of Bethel Christian church, and one of its first deacons, and remained a faithful and efficient officer until his death. He was honored by his county and State with office of trust for many years.

His wife preceded him several years. He leaves two sons, two daughters, one grand son, one brother, many relatives and friends to mourn their loss. The community loses an excellent citizen, the church a faithful and loyal member, the children a devoted father. He was laid to rest by the side of his deceased companion in Bethel cemetery in Caswell County, N. C., in the presence of many sorrowing friends and relatives.

He lived to do good and was a friend to the needy. Funeral services by his pastor, who has been associated with him in church work for more than 20 years. The sorrowing ones have the deepest sympathy of pastor, church, and community. May God bless and comfort them.

THOS. W. STROWD.

PRAY, HAVE ME EXCUSED.

A great many people have their belief in different religious and charitable projects and yet, though they are Christians, they do not give their support to them as they should. It is so easy to think that some one else has more time for the Sunday school, some one else ought to sew for and give to the Orphan's Home, "somebody ought to adopt one of the dear little orphans, but really not I." "It would be lovely if somebody would plant a portion of their garden this spring for the 'Home,' but I guess there will be plenty of people who will, so I won't." "It would be a great help if a good many different women would take a few fruit jars which the 'Home' will supply and fill them for the orphan boys and girls, with fruit or vegetables. But there is no need of my doing it. Likely somebody will."

"It would be a good idea if the Sunday schools and churches would adopt some systematic way of giving to the Home. Give a certain amount each month or give the collection of a certain Sunday each month to the Home. Then they would know what they could count on. But we need not trouble to do that in our school or church. They will get along without us." "Pray have us excused." Isn't that shirking one's duty? Shifting one's responsibility?—Orphan's Friend.

EVERYBODY NOW PLAYS THE PIANO.

You ought to see the enthusiastic letters which the managers of the Christian Sun Piano Club are now receiving from Club members relative to the self-player piano. Men, women and children who love music but who have never had the opportunity to take lessons are simply delighted to find that they can now play the piano for themselves. The player offered by the Club is the best that money can buy. It is really two instruments in one for it can be used either as an ordinary piano or a self-player.

If you are interested in this wonderful instrument the Club will gladly put one in your home on approval. It is so simple and easy to operate that even a child can learn without difficulty. Write for a copy of the Club's catalogue which explains how, by clubbing together in a big factory order for one hundred instruments, we save one-third the cost of each Club member. Editorial Briefs

Beauty For Ashes.

Man desecrates; God consecrates. Man destroys; God builds up. Man kills; God makes alive. Many a night has been made hideous by the evil deeds of men, to be replaced immediately by the morning sun and a spotless, glorious day. This world will be one horrible, howling wilderness in a decade but for the renewing power of God's love and mercy going on continuously about us.

One of the bloodiest battle fields in the annals of history, Neerwinden, a field fertilized by twenty thousand human bodies, the very flower of French, English and Dutch, broke forth, the following summer, into millions of poppies, one vast sheet of scarlet and waving red for a hundred acres around.

So is the hand of God ever stretched forth to restore to love and beauty the desolation and the desecration that the wickedness of man hath wrought. How merciful is our heavenly Father: how wondrous His ways and works. Surely doth He give joy for sorrow, hope for tears, and beauty for ashes.

Dominion Over The Earth.

Since 1878 the hand of man has been felt grappling at the throat of that narrow, but stalwart, giant known as the Isthmus of Panama, that holds two oceans at bay. Private individuals spent millions, and failed. The French government poured out other millions, and gave up the struggle. In 1903 Uncle Sam paid $40,000,000 in gold coin to be allowed to lay his hand at the throat of the monster; and since then the struggle has been fierce indeed. One day last week—May 18—32,760 pounds of dynamite were exploded by engineers at one time to destroy certain dikes and let in the waters of the Pacific into channels intended for them. For nine years blasting, drilling, driving, digging on a scale heretofore unheard of in the world's history, has been going on, during which time a total expenditure of $290,110,000 has been made. Excavations are going on at the rate of 2,500,000 yards monthly, and there remain but about 20,000,000 cubic yards of earth yet to be removed.

Truly has this been called the greatest liberty man has ever taken with nature; and by it two separate and heretofore divided oceans, the Atlantic and the Pacific, will flow together and become one. In the act one continent becomes two and the circuits of the earth are drawn thousands of miles closer together.

"And God said, Let us make man in our image, after our likeness: and let them have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over the cattle, and over all the earth, and over every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth." (Gen. 1:26).

The Other Man.

We usually think of the other man; but how? We know we are busy, but we think he isn't. We know we have difficulties, but we don't think he has. We know we have financial strains, but we don't think he has. We know that all our belongings, privileges and advantages come by dint of hard work, pay, and sacrifice; but we think his come easily, and at small price. We don't give much to church, but we think he can and should. We know we are not the one to serve as chairman of a committee in church matters, because we have so much to do, but we think he should because he has an abundance of time and fitness. We know we should not help the general enterprises of the church, but we think he should. We know we can't teach in the Sunday school, but we think the other fellow should. How easy indeed is it to imagine that the other fellow is able, willing and ready to do that which we ourselves are unwilling to do. We can quickly put on another that which we are not willing to take on ourselves. This is not the way of the Word; but it is the way of the world. (Galatians 6:3, 4, 5.)

His Name.

There is one Name above every name. He has no equal. He will allow nothing to be put before or above Him. He is a jealous God. He will not have even a divided heart. He must have the whole or none. "God is God, and beside Him there is none other." When any one places pleasure, possessions, pursuits, plans, purposes above God, and leaves God out, then that one is on dangerous and deadly ground. "I am the Lord: that is my name: and my glory will I not give to another." (Isa. 42:8). We do well to remember that we are helpless and dependent creatures and can do nothing without Him. All our hope, help, strength came from Him. And before Him each one must appear one day; by Him each and all are to be judged, according to the deeds of the body; according to the desires of the heart; according to the thoughts of the mind. "For as a man thinketh in his heart so is he" (Prov. 23:7). This name we are to enshrine in the heart; bow down before It with reverence and adoration; worship and serve It in all our way. His name is above every name; and he alone is safe, sane, and sober who puts it and keeps it there in his own mind and heart.

The Church and Progress.

As the eternal years are counted, it has not been long since our Savior said, "I will build my church, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it." But the Church has come a long way since then, these nineteen hundred years. At first they had a small church out at Antioch in Syria. Then Paul went on some individual missionary journeys and planted a few others. Next we hear of a circuit of "seven churches" out through Asia Minor. Then it was not long till the church was bombarding the strong-holds of Rome. It finally swept that mighty empire of satan and sin into a name and a memory only.

Today the mightiest single institution in all this earth is the church. It does more to mould human character, shape human destiny and influence the immortal soul than any and all other institutions combined. It gives employment to more minds, labor to more hands, bread to more hungry people, and inspiration to more hearts than any other agency known amongst men. More people gather at church to engage in its service, hear its message and aid its mission than ever gathered for any other cause whatsoever. The church sweeps on conquering and to conquer. Neither the forces of earth nor the stronghold (gates) of hell can prevail against it.

Young People and The Church.

Church services should be interesting; but that does not signify that the church should be made a place of entertainment. That word entertainment is somehow connected with amusement, novelty, the unusual and spectacular. The church does not, should not, afford these, or any of these. The church is that which savors of the eternal, the everlasting, the exalted, the sublime. We want to get young people to attend church; but we need not make ourselves believe that even young people are looking for entertainment and amusement only. They, too, are looking, or should look, for that which pertains to the deeper, truer things of life. I wish that every pastor, and every church could get firmly fixed the following wise words recently spoken by President Wilson: "When we say that the way to get young people to the church is to make the church interesting, I am afraid that we too often mean that the way to do it is to make it entertaining. Did you ever know the theatre to be a successful means of governing conduct? Did you ever know the most excellent concert or series of concerts to be the means of revolutionizing a life? Did you ever know any amount of entertainment to go farther than hold for the hour that it lasted? If you mean to draw young people by entertainment, you have only one excuse for it, and that is to follow up the entertainment with something that is not entertaining, but which grips the heart like the touch of a hand."

It is never foolish to do a thing because we want to do it. The folly lies in doing a thing because other people think we ought to do it, and we do not.—Ellen Thorneycroft Fowler.

If the Word of God is hid in the heart it will come at once into our thoughts when we are tempted to sin, and the reply to the tempter will be, "it is written."

To the truly moral and religious man, everything that comes to pass is the will of God with him, and therefore the best that can possibly come to pass.—Fichte.

FIRST A VISION, THEN A VIEW.

No man ever sees the world right until he sees it through God. Moses knew how to mind sheep only till he got a vision of God. Then he viewed a far country, and a great nation. He had a different conception of life, labor, and duty when he had gained a vision of God. David tended his father's flocks, and carried provisions for his brothers, till he caught a vision of God. Then he became a king, and a nation builder.

Isaiah "saw the Lord sitting upon a throne high and lifted up." (Isa. 6:1). Then Isaiah began to see the world, duty, work, life, in a different and broader sense than he had seen these before.

Saul had his learning, his eloquence, his philosophy acquired well at the feet of Gamaliel, but he did not become Paul, nor begin to use these acquirements to any worth until he had caught a vision of God. Then the world appears different, life has a fuller meaning, and duty becomes a different word.

No man can understand himself, no man can rightly interpret the meaning of the world until he has had a vision of God.

Had we considered well the fact that this America of ours had little worth or meaning till man quit coming here to hunt for gold, and began to come here to find God? For more than a hundred years brave and brilliant men sought this land for what gold they might get. Their quest was vain, and their labor lost. But when men came here desiring first of all to worship God under their own vine and fig tree, and to have a vine and fig tree under which to worship Him then permanent settlements were made, and America began to grow. No nation has ever prospered until it created for itself an exalted idea of the gods, or gave the true God first place in thought and speech.

The Greeks remained a great people, were a mighty nation, and built up a noble literature only while they had an exalted idea of, and a great faith in, their gods.

The Romans were factors in the world's history, enriched mankind with bravery, heroic deeds, great laws and worthy literature, only while they maintained a noble conception of their gods. When faith in her gods went out, Rome, as an empire, faded from the map.

That nation alone can be permanent, and can abide, which has an exalted idea of the one supreme and all-wise God, and views its national plans and purposes through the promises and the power of God.

So, likewise, ever and always, of the individual man or woman, boy or girl. No one in this life can understand the meaning of life, its fulness and its power until one has had a vision of God.

That man who has climbed into the practice of law through a vision of God is in the law to stay, to abide, and ultimately to achieve. That individual who has entered the profession of preaching, teaching, practicing medicine through a vision of God is in such profession to abide, and ultimately to win out. We cannot understand this world until we have come in contact, some way, with its Builder and Maker. Then the world has a new meaning; then life looks larger, duty more agreeable, work more wholesome, and life more happy. We must first get a vision of God before we can get any sort of a correct view of earth.

The earth is the Lord's. His hand is in it and upon it. That hand He will not lift for us until we have lifted our face to him. When we lift our face He lifts His hand, and the beauty and the glory of the earth begin to dawn for us.

"The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom; a good understanding have all they that do his commandments" (Psa. 111:10).

If we would know this world we must first know our God, its Creator.

A TRIBUTE TO HIS MOTHER.

We may say and think and print all we can about mother, and then full justice will not be done her. She fights the hardest battles; endures the most pain, makes the greatest sacrifices, known to us mortals on this earth, and the worth of a faithful mother has never yet been estimated.

Josephus Daniels, Secretary of the Navy, went back to his home town the other day to celebrate his fifty-second birthday. His widowed mother was present, and in the course of his public address to the citizens of his native town the Secretary is quoted as using these fitting words: "All that I am, if there is any worth in me, I owe to my mother. All that any man ever has been or ever will be is due to his mother. It is she that made him; she fixed his character, fixed his soul, shaped his career. No good man, no great man, was ever reared by a weak or vicious mother. Whenever a big task looms up before me, whenever a mountain of adversity towers ahead of me, whenever the sky seems darkest and stormiest, I recall the placid face of my courageous widowed mother, I go back again to the days of childhood, I feel the glow of her radiant countenance, the courage of her calm, steady eyes, the fire of her dauntless soul. She still lives, thank God, and is here with us today, as when I was a barefoot boy, and guides my life now as then. It will ever be so; it is so with all men. All my power has come from her and everything I have tried to do of value that has met with your approval are tributes to the brave, noble, unselfish, heroic woman who took Christ for her master and in poverty and travail taught her boys to follow the flag of duty and never to strike their colors."

MONEY OR GOSPEL.

Editor Johnson, of Charity and Children, thus speaks:

"The old cry of the church miser that he is tired hearing so much about money and longs to hear the old gospel preached, has been unmasked. Everybody knows that the motive that controls such a man is that he may have his nickels and still be prominent as a member of his church. But that kind of brother is no longer prominent. He must take a back seat. No church with the least life in it will tolerate that kind of man in its leadership."

We doubt if the sort of brother referred to has been so much unmasked as obliterated. You do not hear about him, at any rate, and he does not count. We have at least learned that giving is a part of grace; and that the man who will not give of his substance for the spread of God's kingdom is too meager and insignificant to reckon with. Giving of one's substance has come to be as much a part of worship and church service as praying, singing or any other part of the program. It may be truthfully said that he who does not give to the gospel does not get enough from the gospel to be reckoned with. Giving is a high privilege God has bestowed upon man; and the man is the loser who does not avail himself.

THEIR OWN SUNDAY SCHOOLS.

By quite a majority vote, the Southern Baptist Convention in session last week decided to abandon the Sunday school lessons selected by the Inter-Denominational Committee and substitute therefor such lessons as a committee from their own body shall select. For many years the various evangelical churches, through an inter-denomination committee, have selected the scriptures to be used, and then each denomination has handled the lesson in any manner deemed proper. This gave the same scripture text for study in all the schools on the same Sunday. We presume our Baptist brethren have tired of this and henceforth choose their own scripture for lesson study each Sunday. Of course any denomination had a perfect right to do this, and no word of criticism should be spoken. The great advantage in the international series of lessons was that, one preparing the lesson for one's own school, and by visit or chance, attend school in some other church than one's own, knew the lesson for the day, and was at home in reciting the same. Many found it comfortable to know the lesson when attending another school than one's own. If other denominations shall follow the lead of our Baptist brethren the international series of lessons will be broken up; and one will only know on any Sunday what scriptures one's own denomination is studying.

NOTES AND PERSONALS.

—Bro. A. S. Dunn, Lawyers, Va.: "We are very proud of our larger and much improved church paper; also of our new church building at Liberty, N. C."

—Mr. W. K. Holt, of Burlington, has been appointed a member of the Just Freight Rate Association of N. C. There is a level headed business man for you who will give, as far as is within his power, the railroad and the people a square deal.

—Miss Florence Harvey, for several years leader of the choir in Suffolk Christian church was called to Oberlin, Ohio, last week by the illness of her mother who, however, died seven hours before Miss Harvey reached there. The burial was in Indiana and Miss Harvey is not to return to Suffolk till September.

—Prof. Jno. T. Cobb was an agreeable visitor our way last week. Prof. Cobb has been principal the past year of Coolemee High School, Coolemee, N. C., but has recently been elected as Superintendent of the City Graded Schools of Enfield, Halifax County, N. C. Prof. Cobb is an efficient teacher and a likable man.

—Rev. C. C. Jones, Wakefield, Va., sends in a list of six new subscribers, and writes: "Your paper has so improved that all of my family has fell in love with it, and so much so, that my eight year old son, Bernard, said to me a few days ago that THE CHRISTIAN SUN was the best religious paper that he ever saw, that he was going to subscribe for it himself when he was a little older. Yes, the paper is getting the praise all over my field. I shall be glad to send in all the subscribers I can get."

—Rev. W. G. Clements, Morrisville, N. C.: "I enjoyed worshipping with the Christian church at Durham last Sunday. Their house has recently been very much improved internally. The Sunday school was large an interesting, the music was excellent; and best of all their free-will offering in cash and pledges was double what I had been praying for, for the Chapel Hill work. Where I can go to a church and tell of the work on the church at the University of North Carolina the results are good. But I can not go to all. Why not take a collection in my absence and send it on? And then you would not have to give a big eater some costly meals. The work at Chapel Hill is standing still for the want of money. The pastor at Durham is a worker and his parishioners like him for it."

—Thus the Charlotte Observer: "The Northern Presbyterian General Assembly appears to have 'viewed with alarm' almost as much as the platform of a political party on the out side. Cheer up! Maybe the Assembly won't run into such a rainy spell at Chicago next May and will look on the bright side of things." We are surprised that as staunch a blue-stocking as Col. Harris is, or is supposed to be, should attribute the alarm of said Assembly to as transient a thing as a rain storm. Why man, that Assembly reported 5,000 churches that had not received a single member on confession of faith in the past year, and that many of its most intelligent and influential members spent much of their time Sundays not at Sunday school and church, but at games and on the golf links. If that is not enough to make any church Assembly, let alone the blue-stockings, "view with alarm" then we don't know.

—Our good and great brother Lightbourne is making his work tell for Christ, the church and the Kingdom, in Delaware. We reprint from The State Sentinel of Dover, May 24, the following:

The second annual session of the Delmarvia and Pennsylvania Christian Conference will convene in the People's Church on Saturday morning, May 24, at ten o'clock, and continue in session over Sunday. Among the visiting clergymen will be Rev. W. W. Staley, D. D., LL. D., president of the Southern Christian Convention, Suffolk, Va.; Dr. Oliver Powers, Secretary of the Missionary Society of the Christian Church; Dr. L. F. Johnson, pastor of the First Christian Church, Raleigh, N. C.; Rev. M. W. Butler, president of the Conference; Rev. G. T. Price of Washington; Rev. Wallace L. Gennett, of Bridgeboro, N. J., and others.

Fraternal representatives of the Free Will Baptist churches and the Congregational Methodist churches of Eastern Pennsylvania will be present, and the Christian churches of Wyoming, Frederica and Felton will send delegates.

There will be special music on Sunday, both morning and evening, by the chorus choir of the People's Church.

Ordination services will be held immediately after the Sunday morning sermon when several young men will be ordained to the ministry.

The following is the full program:

Saturday, 10 a. m.—Devotional services, conducted by Geo. T. Price; roll call and enrollment of delegates; words of welcome extended by the pastor; response; miscellaneous business; assignment of delegates to homes.

Saturday afternoon, 2 o'clock.—Devotional service, Rev. George Louis Wolfe; reading of minutes; roll call; president's address; discussion; ministers' reports; churches' reports.

Saturday evening, 7:30.—Devotional service; reading of minutes; roll call; reports of committees; unfinished business; new business; miscellaneous business.

Sunday morning, 9:30.—Prayer and praise service, Thomas J. Stephenson, leader; 10:30, public worship, preaching annual sermon by the president, Rev. M. W. Butler; 11:40, ordination service.

Sunday Evening, 7:30.—Preaching by Rev. W. W. Staley, D. D., LL. D.; close of conference session.

A FEW REMARKS.

—Emperor Yoshito, of Japan, is ill with pneumonia, and grave fears are entertained as to his recovery.

—On May 20 Cuba inaugurated Gen. Mario G. Menocal as President. This gentleman was educated at Cornell University, and it is felt that Cuba is safe in his hands and enters an era of peace and prosperity. Let us hope.

—Wake Forest College gave seventy-eight diplomas at its commencement last week. The degree of Doctor of Divinity was conferred upon Rev. Livingston Johnson; and Doctor of Laws upon President Martin of Davidson College.

—For sheer inconsistencies and immoral vagaries commend us to the rum dealers. The papers state that a Cincinnati saloon keeper closed his shop the other day to mourn the death of a black cat. Suppose that man were to undertake to mourn the loss of body and soul of every man his business had caused? He would hardly open again for a decade to come.

—Henry M. Flagler, noted capitalist and railroad builder in Florida, died at his home at West Palm Beach, Fla., May 21, aged 83. Mr. Flagler will be best known as the builder of the "over sea railroad" from Miami to Key West.

—The Harry K. Thaw scandal will not down, nor stay out of the papers. Recently a lawyer in New York has been convicted of offering a $20,000 bribe to the keeper of the State Asylum to release the slayer of Stanford White.

—The difficulty between Japan and the United States growing out of the alien land law adopted by California seems to grow more complicated, as the Japanese claim that this is a violation of the treaty between the two Governments.

—B. Sanders Walker, Jr., a millionaire banker of Macon, Ga., took, by mistake, bichloride of mercury and died from the effect thereof last Wednesday. Mr. Walker was exceedingly popular in banking circles and his death is generally deplored.

—Princess Victoria Louise, daughter of the Emperor of Germany, was married last Saturday to Prince August of Cumberland. This wedding called together more crowned heads and potentates than any similar event in a decade. The Czar of Russia, the King of England, and the Emperor of Germany were the leading lights present, but scores of others joined in making the event memorable.

—Former Judge W. H. Wallace, in speaking before the general assembly of the Southern Presbyterian Church, Atlanta, Ga., last Wednesday urged that the next session of the Assembly be held in Kansas City because the speaker declared, "that city is one of the most immoral in the country." The motion carried and the Assembly will meet there in 1914 with the hope of helping the moral and spiritual life of the city.

—In a police raid in Durham last Friday, about fifty barrels of beer and liquor were seized. Because of the easy access to the distilleries and saloons across the Virginia line, Durham has been possibly the most flagrant violator of the prohibition laws of any town in North Carolina. We are glad that the city authorities have decided to take a high hand and have the law enforced, or put the violators in prison or on the road, where they deserve to be.

—The officers in Durham seem to have determined to enforce the no-liquor law in that good town, and The Sun of May 23 says there was a rattling of dry-bones when the police made a simultaneous raid on every suspicious joint in the city. Practically every dray wagon in town had to be employed to haul the beer and whiskey that was seized, and that never has the human eye witnessed such a scene as was presented when the raiding officers go their haul together.

—At the Northern Presbyterian Assembly in session in Atlanta last week, it was reported that there had been a distressing loss of membership in many synods of that church for the past year. Nearly 4,000 churches of the assembly, during the past year failed to secure a member through a confession of faith. It was brought out in reports that some of the church's most intelligent and influential members spend the Sabbath on the golf links, instead of attending divine worship. It was, furthermore, declared that the extent and boldness of the white slave traffic had become appalling, even extending into Sabbath schools and Christian Endeavor Societies.

PLEASANT UNION.

On the first Sunday in May we met a large congregation and had a large Sunday school, good singing by the choir. After the close of the Sunday school the church service opened with the house well packed with appreciative people.

The first item on the program was to ordain Deacon Spence, Dr. W. C. Wicker, J. D. Wicker, pastor, and W. A. Green and Morgan Johnson, Deacons, constituting the ordaining presbytery.

The next item was the presentation of a nice Bible to Bro. J. D. Long by Pleasant Union church, showing their appreciation of his faithful work in helping to erect the new church. Dr. Wicker presented the Bible in behalf of the church with appropriate remarks.

Next item on program was singing by choir, after which Dr. Wicker preached the dedicatory sermon and conducted the dedicatory service, dedicating the house to the service of God. It was indeed and in truth a red letter day for Pleasant Union church. It seemed that everybody was pleased with the sermon and services generally. Then about 40 or 50 of us were invited over to Bro. W. A. Green's to take birthday dinner with him. Bro. Green and his cultured daughter, Miss Mary, certainly know how to make their guests feel pleasant and enjoy themselves in their home. The table was set in the yard under the beautiful trees, and loaded down with plenty of good things to eat. Among the guests was Uncle Billie Marsh, of Lillington. He weighs about 275 pounds, is a widower, and likes to be where the girls are. But he is very sensitive about his age and weight. He likes to make himself useful to the ladies. So after dinner was over he was very busy helping the ladies with the dishes. He always makes mirth and makes things lively wherever he goes. Thus closed the first Sunday in May.

I am glad to say that Pleasant Union church, Sunday school, and choir eclipse all the churches, Sunday schools and choirs of that community. Hope Dr. Wicker was well pleased with his visit and will come among us again soon.

J. D. WICKER, Pastor.

AMONG MY CHURCHES.

May has been an interesting month in my field. The first Sunday at Long's Chapel a large congregation attended the service. Our new recess pulpit added much to the looks and comfort of the church building. Brother Smith from Elon College was with me and conducted the afternoon service.

At Union, the second Sunday, a great concourse of people came together. The day was bright and all seemed to enjoy the occasion. Rev. A. F. Iseley assisted at this service. Our protracted meeting at Union will commence the fourth Sunday in July.

At Bethlehem the third Sunday we held our Memorial service which brought together from the surrounding country many people who had loved ones buried there. The afternoon service consisted of short talks by several different speakers.

The pastor has been kindly remembered by friends at Bethlehem within the last few days: Sister Nancy Garrison a bucket of lard, Bro. J. M. Story with about forty others a purse of $18.15, Mrs. Sallie Garrison by five dollars in cash. The editor's recent experience will enable him to appreciate the pastor's feelings at such evidences of kindness. Continued serious illness of my wife makes such kindness more timely. May God bless all these dear friends.

FROM OUR CONTRIBUTORS

COLLEGE AND CITIZENSHIP.

BY PRES. W. A. HARPER.

Colleges receive their charters from the State. They are granted immunity from taxation by the state. In the case of State institutions, they are also supported at the State's expense. All of them are protected in their rights by the strong arm of the law. In return for these benefits a due sense of gratitude and appreciation would suggest certain obligations on the part of the Colleges to the sovereign power granting them, and fortunately this sense of gratitude and appreciation is, to a growing degree, present in the Colleges, in their student bodies, and in their Alumni. What evidences of this gratitude and appreciation does the State rightfully expect?

The first evidence should be obedience to her laws. The unmistakable evidence of filial devotion is found in generous submission to parental authority. The surest proof of good citizenship is cheerful obedience to the State's laws. The best citizens are the most law-abiding. They do not expect special privileges, but yield a complete and loyal submission to the demands of the State, and the greater their intelligence and the higher their rank in life, the more cheerful and the more complete that submission should be. Judged by these standards of good citizenship, what justification can there be for the claim on the part of certain College men and of their apologizers that certain doings of theirs, which in other men would be rebuked by stern penalties, should be winked at or excused on the ground that boys will be boys? What shall we say of those over-sympathetic persons, who think such conduct should be commiserated and not blamed? Has it come to the point where College men deserve pity for the privileges they enjoy? Can any position be more inconsistent than this? Shall men of superior intelligence, higher social rank, grander privileges, larger outlook on life, men from whom the State expects and rightfully the flower of her citizenship and the acme of her leadership, be pitied when they violate the laws of the land, while those of inferior intelligence, lower social rank, smaller privileges, narrower horizon of life, men from whom the State looks not for leadership, pay the penalty of their misdeeds? Shall the law thus become a respecter of persons? Shall the least be expected from those capable of rendering the most? Shall one set of laws apply to men of low estate and another to men of higher estate? Should not College men and we administrative officers of the Colleges hang our heads with shame at a suggestion like this?

It is no justification of this deplorable condition to plead that custom sanctions the difference. What is law but custom enacted into law? And every man who follows custom contrary to law is a criminal, whether he be a negro ditcher, or a College president. Nor can it be excused on the ground that Colleges create artificial conditions and that College life differs from other life. How can we consistently demand that an industrial corporation submit itself through its officers and its employees to the laws, and justify an educational corporation in which the laws of fundamental human rights, rights declared to be natural to man and inviolable by the Declaration of Independence, the National Constitution and every State Bill of Rights and Constitution in the nation, are violated and the violation condoned by a maudlin sentimentalism? If the industrial corporation persists in violating the law, it is dissolved. What shall we consistently do with our educational corporations doing this identical thing through its beneficiaries? We need sanity of thinking, respecting fundamental matters and consistent pursuit of the highest ideals of life and conduct, in order to render our part, our due part, to the State's reputation for justice and to the type of its citizenship.

College men should be ashamed to plead for special privileges in law breaking and we, who exercise corporate privileges of great value in the management and direction of Colleges should be ashamed to tolerate such a plan or condone it when made. And the civil authorities should see to it that College men obey the laws of the land or pay the penalties of their violation. The citizenship of the State should not be satisfied with a less equable standard of civic justice than this, and the leaders in the movement to bring this result about should be the presidents and faculties of our Colleges and the student bodies of the same. Let the best young men of the State, the privileged class of young manhood, set their less fortunate brothers the example of perfect obedience to civil authority and in so doing to that extent justify the wisdom of the founders of our Colleges and exemplify proper appreciation of the franchise and its attendant benefits granted by the State to the Colleges.

I regret to have felt constrained to speak thus at length in a negative and critical way of our Colleges, and I am rejoiced to note a growth from barbarity to civilization in the attitude of the College men toward civil authority and in their increasing respect for fundamental human rights and obligations in the treatment of their fellow students. I am aware, also, that it is the exceptional College man who wins against the State's laws and his College mate's rights. But so is it the exceptional man in the other strata of Society, who transgresses the law. In neither case should the exceptionableness of the occurrence condone it. The normal man is law-abiding. The abnormal man should suffer the penalty of his abnormality, whether he be in high or low estate. And we are recreant to our duty as citizens unless we set our faces resolutely for equality before the law and equality in the enforcement of the law, without fear of favoritism.

But obedience to her laws is not the only evidence of appreciation for benefits received that the State has the right to expect of College men. The State expects that of every man, and must compel it, if it is not yielding willingly. The State expects more of the flower of her manhood than that, and the Colleges are in position to satisfy those expectations. It is here that the real value, so far as public utility is concerned, of College education is centered, for unless the College could furnish certain needful elements of citizenship the State would not be justified in granting the privileges and immunities which the Colleges enjoy.

Among these positive goods of College education in the realm of citizenship should certainly be found the disposition to subordinate private to public interest, and there is need of this spirit in American public life. Our leaders in the various walks of life are prone to silhouette their private interests against their perspective of public questions. From this narrow standpoint, we are accustomed to consider the tariff, the Panama Canal, the conservation of natural resources, the maintenance of the forest preserves, the parcel post, the Sunday delivery of the mails, the ship subsidy, the monetary standard, the sale of whiskey, control of corporations, labor unions, and so on through the entire category of the questions confronting us today. We need to get a vision the whole as against a part. We need in private life the spirit of the soldier in time of national danger. There is demand, sore demand, for every day patriotism, a kind not so spectacular nor thrilling as the war sort, but which will render the war type superfluous. The liberalizing tendencies of culture, the altruistic qualities of scholarly attainment, can supply to College men this vitalizing conception of citizenship, and we educators should see to it that this happy denouement is made in the men and women, who come up to us in full confidence of our ability to inculcate in them the ripest ideals of life and conduct.

Close akin to the first good is the determination to correlate vocational activities with the public welfare. One hundred years ago this desideratum of citizenship would have been identified with the former, but today there is a difference. We no longer work altogether on individual enterprise, but as parts of corporate bodies, and the time is not far distant when a single corporation will have more persons dependent upon it than live in some of our smaller States. We know that men in the employ of a corporation, through a false standard of loyalty, will resort to practices which on personal grounds they would indignantly repudiate. The esprit du corps of such employees needs an infusion of patriotism, patriotism which shall connect vocational activity with national welfare. They need vaccination with the virus of a new and better loyalty, loyalty to mankind as against loyalty to kind men. When this virus shall have inoculated the industrial captains and their employees, the stealthy violation and disregard of pure food laws, of laws against adulterations, and wholesale (and retail) stealing in contravention of the laws will cease to be practiced or will we readily exposed and speedily punished. To whom else rightfully can the State look for leadership in popularizing this new conception of civic duty than to those whose rare opportunities for understanding the complicated relations of life have specifically qualified them, or should have thus qualified them, for this very service?

The formation of wholesome public opinion is another large avenue of service to the State open peculiarly to College men. Public opinion controls in a free country, but public opinion is no accident. It is the resultant of a parallelogram of competing, often with antagonistic forces. No blind fatuity leads the ordinary citizen to think as he does upon questions vitally touching the nation's ideals, laws, and life. Public opinion is the result of responsible leadership, and is moulded by that leadership, as surely as the potter's wheel moulds the plastic clay. Who shall form our public opinion for us? Shall the yellow journals, the demagogues, the special interests, the agitators, the ignorant, but blatant tools of an enraged group of vituperative partisans, the bland, but treacherous pious office-seekers? Shall any or all these prejudice the honest husbandry of the land in favor of their pet schemes or against the ameliorative proposals of patriots and statesmen and profound thinkers? The College man shall answer. It is to him that we look for intelligent leadership which shall view every proposal in the light of the world's experience, and so save, or should save the nation the costly tuition of experiment in political life. The foe of good government is ignorance, and equally is it true that scholarship in the sense of wisdom, not of pedantry, is the only guarantee of national perpetuity. The originators of the sects, schisms, and isms subversive of progress and inimical to prosperity, in every department of life, are almost universally men of shallow intellectual attainment, prone to be radical because not appreciating the consequences of their radicalism. Tyrants and anarchists are, in free lands, always of a low order of intelligence. The College man in America can be neither a tyrant nor an anarchist, if he has been properly taught. Let a high sense of obligation to the public good, for high privileges enjoyed, inspire the College man to wield with powerful grasp the influence with which his learning and culture have crowned him in creating, fashioning, and enforcing a wholesome public opinion, fearless alike of demagogue, entrepreneur, quack, charlatan, or what not, always able out of the abundance of his wisdom to fortify himself by citation from authenticated racial experiences and anxious at all times to win adherents to his standard by readiness to give reason for the faith that is in him. Let him be a conservative, weighing all proposals in the scales of mankind's experiences, and let him, at the same time, be a progressive with rare discrimination projecting the lessons of the race's experience into conditions not met before, but sure to be properly met when decisions are arrived at by patriots, who, knowing the past, confidently, without prejudice, give themselves to such measures as promise most for the public weal.

Finally, the College man should stand ready at any time to render public service. This may mean willingness to enter politics. It may mean willingness to hold public office, but, if so, the public office should be viewed as a public trust, and by the true College man it will be so viewed. Becker would not have inaugurated his dastardly system under the administration of a superior like Taft or Roosevelt or Wilson. He would have known in advance the certainty of his conviction and the speedy retribution upon him for his crimes. We have made fun of the scholar in politics, and deterred thereby many men of scholarly attainment from patriotically and effectively serving their country. College men must break the power of the political boss and remove from the political arena the ward-heeler, and they can do it by turning on the lime-light of publicity and fortified by the wisdom and insight it is their privilege to enjoy mercilessly to expose the fallacism of would-be political panaceas and quack nostrums. If they can do this by alignment with a party, they will be strict party-men. If the parties will not hear them, they will resort to other means. If it is necessary for them to hold office properly to protect the interests of the people, they will seek the mantle of official authority, but in whatever way may seem to them just and right and most effective they will loyally, patriotically, gratefully, serve their country. This the State has the right to expect, and College men will manfully meet this expectation. May the scholar in politics multiply in number and efficiency as a leader and in effectiveness as a purifier of public life, until the nation's best, purest men shall cease to feel disgraced to mingle in political caucuses and frequent the elections, and the office shall seek the man, not the man the office!

ELON COLLEGE COMMENCEMENT.

Program of Exercises of this Interesting Event.—
Distinguished Speakers Will be Present.

The 24th annual commencement exercises of Elon College will begin on Saturday evening of this week with the Senior Class Day Exercises. These exercises will continue till Wednesday evening of next week, and promise to be of uncommon interest.

The baccalaureate sermon will be delivered on Sunday morning at 11:30 o'clock by Dr.

DR. WARREN H. DENISON.

Who will Deliver the Baccalaureate Sermon.

Warren H. Denison, Norfolk, Va., whose subject is to be "Life's Great Rule."

President Harper, of the College, will deliver the baccalaureate address that evening, using as his theme, "Life's Essential Ingredients."

The three literary societies will give the program of their representatives on Monday evening, at which time also the Board of trustees will meet in annual session. The meeting of the Building Committee of the Board, which has had charge of the erection of the new gymnasium, will occur Monday at noon and the committee will make its final report to the Board of Trustees that evening.

Tuesday morning Dr. Charles W. Kent, of the University of Virginia, and one of the South's foremost scholars, will deliver the Literary Address before the societies, using as his theme, "Lincoln and Davis," being the anniversary of the birthday of President Jefferson Davis of the Confederacy. Dr. Kent will be heard with gladness on that theme. That afternoon will occur the business meeting of the Alumni Association and the recital of the Department of Expression, and that evening the Annual Concert of the Music Department will take place.

The great day of the entire season will be the final day, next Wednesday, when the graduating class will have its final exercises at 10:30 o'clock. At this time fifty-two persons will receive degrees, diplomas, and certificates, the largest number to be so honored at any commencement up to this time.

The Art Exhibit will be given in the West Dormitory Annex on the afternoon of this day, and the reunions of the literary societies in their various halls will follow. The evening will be taken up with the Alumni Address by Mrs. J. K. Ruebush, Dayton, Va., whose theme will be "Universal Democracy." Following Mrs. Ruebush's address will occur the annual Alumni Banquet in the College Dining Hall.

We cordially invite our friends to be present at and enjoy with us all these exercises.

W. A. HARPER, President.

THE BIEDERWOLF MEETINGS.

(Greensboro, N. C.)

In the early part of this year, the Ministers' Association of Greensboro planned a Home Altar Campaign for the city. The result was, Evangelist Biederwolf, of Indiana, Secretary of the Home Altar League, with the National male quartette, was secured to hold evangelistic meetings in the city from the 30th of April till the 18th of May.

A tobacco ware-house was soon fitted up to seat 2,500 people and all arrangements were made. The party duly arrived, opened up in hurricane style, and continued at lightning speed. The period of eighteen days is just four weeks shorter than Biederwolf's usual time of meetings, therefore, to put six weeks into two it was necessary to go very fast. So literally did the spirit sweep Greensboro, there was not an evening from the very first service that the tabernacle was not filled, there being one exception, when there was a very heavy rain storm. Many nights, hundreds and hundreds were turned away.

The first service was held Wednesday evening, April 30th. The tabernacle was full. His text was, "I ask therefore with what intent ye have sent for me." The quartette rendered angelic music every night. It consisted of: Wm. McEwan, 1st Tenor; James Heaton, 2nd Tenor; G. K. Ackley, 1st Bass; and L. L. Kemper, 2nd Bass. Each one of these men was better than the other at their task. In other words, they were incomparable among themselves. Mr. McEwan is called "The world's sweetest tenor." He is a Scotchman of first caliber, very low in stature, and apparently strong and robust in physique. He has a freak, but exceedingly wonderful voice. He sang a duet with himself one evening. He sang the second part, with his own voice on the first, on a graphophone. He is also Mr. Biederwolf's chorus director, and the excellent music which the chorus of two hundred and fifty voices, furnished by Greensboro each night, was a charm.

Unfortunately, and much to the surprise and astonishment of every one, after the great men's meeting second Sunday afternoon, Mr. McEwan had a hemorrhage from the lungs, and had to call off all engagements and return to his home in Binghamton, New York, for a complete rest. It is reported that the attack is slight and recovery is hoped for. He hopes to join his party again in the fall. Mr. Heaton took charge of the music and carried it on as well, and we all had a great time. The preaching was with great power. A thousand souls must have been converted. Eight hundred and ninety five is the count, but there were many whose names were not secured; and one of the chief features of the meetings was the consecration of young men and women to the Lord's service. Forty-three young men gave themselves to the ministry, if God should call them; and I judge conservatively that there were at least two hundred young women who gave themselves to the missionary work, if God should call them thereto.

The meetings were a great inspiration and uplift to the whole city. We were sorry to see it close, just at the point where harmony had prevailed, Christians had got in the spirit of service, and the unconverted were just becoming seriously concerned. The meeting closed Sunday night, May the eighteenth. The party left immediately for Atlanta where they conduct evangelistic meetings supplementary to the Presbyterian General Assembly now in session there. From there they go to the Panama Zone for the same kind of work they did here.

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENTS

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The Delmarvia Christian Conference convened in the People's Christian Church, Dover, Delaware, Saturday morning, May 24th, 1913. Rev. M. W. Butler is the president, and Howard E. Lynch is secretary. There are six churches and eight ministers in this conference, A. W. Campbell, E. C. Graham, and W. D. Short being ordained as Elders during this session. On Sunday morning, Rev. A. G. Graham, Sr., was admitted as an Elder into the Conference from the Wesleyan Methodist church, and A. G. Graham, Jr., was voted to be licensed to preach the gospel.

The business of the Conference was transacted in three sessions on Saturday, forenoon, afternoon, and night. It was a very busy day and harmony prevailed in all discussions and transactions.

The following Memorial, expressing the Conference interest in a Christian church in Washington City was passed by unanimous vote: "The Delmarvia Christian Conference respectfully and earnestly desire to memorialize the Home Mission Boards of the American Christian Convention and the Southern Christian Convention, to make survey of the Washington field, and that Rev. Dr. L. F. Johnson, of Raleigh, North Carolina, be engaged to spend sixty days, beginning September 1st, in such investigation of our opportunity in the National Capitol as will enable the Boards to determine whether it is wise to undertake the planting of a Christian church, in the near future in that city.

Rev. R. S. Stephens gave me a very interesting account of the organization of a new church in the town of Wyoming on the railroad only three miles from Dover. The population is about a thousand with only one church. On the opposite side of the railroad was a neglected portion of the town where people did not attend church. Dr. Stephens went into that section and found the people were willing to attend religious meetings. He then cast about to find a place for meetings. He found a good frame building that had been erected for a wheelwright, though it had never been used. The lower floor was the earth and the upper room was planned for a paint shop. He easily secured the use of the building and an option on the property containing five lots for a thousand dollars. The building is forty by twenty feet. They had no money, but the people had a "mind to work;" so one rainy day he borrowed jack screws, called the men together, jacked up the old shop, prepared to take out the upper floor and replace it for the main floor. Then it occurred to him to excavate a cellar for the use of a furnace. Picks, shovels, and spades were soon busy. Seeing what seemed to be the tail board of a cart some one was about to move it when it was found to be on hinges as the lid to a box containing bottles of whiskey; and soon another larger box was found buried in the same dirt floor. It had been used as a blind tiger. The neighborhood was given to drinking, gambling, fussing; but a new spirit had already entered and the men were busy, had the cellar dug, the floor laid, electric lights put in, windows in the sides, seats in the room, pulpit and organ in place, and then a meeting was held and numbers of these men were converted, united with the church and became active, testifying and leading in prayer in the meetings. Some of the men converted had reached three score and ten.

An Episcopal gentleman told Dr. Stephens that, before this work was started, his wife was afraid to go on the back porch on Sunday evenings lest lullies should come from that quarter; now the new converts pray and tell the Lord where the men are drinking and gambling and they are so scared that one could not catch them with an automobile. He says he will help them paint the building. The property has increased in value by reason of the improvement in the life of the people. They have spent $230.00 in repairs, friends in Dover making contribution and the people themselves hold suppers, have organized active societies, put in new song books, and have good singing. I preached for them on Sunday afternoon to a good congregation of attentive and well behaved listeners. This has all been accomplished since 1913 was ushered in. Dr. Stephens deserves great credit for this movement and the people are enjoying the change of heart and the change of the community.

The Delmarvia Conference is small, but active; the People's church is large and active. Rev. M. W. Butler preached in the People's church on Sunday morning and this scribe in the evening. Dr. Lightbourne is a power in Dover, and Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Benson, active workers in the People's church, gave me royal entertainment. W. W. STALEY.

NORFOLK LETTER.

In the course of an address to the graduates from a certain law school, an eminent jurist admonished his hearers to make the careful study of men a specialty if they would be successful in their calling. Without an expert knowledge of human nature, its weaknesses and excellencies, he declared the highest proficiency in any public vocation to be impossible.

No doubt there is a great deal of sound truth in the Judge's statement. It will hold good, not alone for lawyers, but also for physicians, ministers, editors and all others whose work calls them into close association and contact with their fellows. A keen and intuitive insight into the characters and motives of those about us is indispensable if we would move in their midst tactfully and helpfully. Without some such insight all the book learning which we may possess will be greatly discounted.

As illustrative of this fact I have in mind at this moment a gentleman of the highest scholarship and with degrees from three or four different colleges and Universities. He also holds one of the highest positions in one of the great churches of the nation. He is a very close personal friend of mine, and hence what I say is in no way inspired by prejudice or antipathy to him, but I do not hesitate to say frankly that, owing to his inability to adapt himself to the various classes of people with whom he meets, or to understand their varying peculiarities he is always a very unpopular personage until those with whom he comes in contact have found out his many fine and splendid qualities.

I have had ladies tell me, after he had once been a guest in their homes during some ecclesiastical gathering, that under no circumstances would they ever consent to entertain him again because of his habit of frankly comparing their cooking and housekeeping with that of others whom he had known, sometimes to the disadvantage of the hostess. Knowing him as I do, I am sure that no more appreciative man than he lives, and yet it is the want of tact, coupled with his frankness and inability to perceive what might offend which makes him do these things. If everybody could know him as I do, I am sure that they would love him, but the difficulty lies in the fact that not all will take the time to study his peculiarities. Of course, these things impair the gentleman's usefulness to an extent and make him rather unpopular when such things are undeserved as a matter of fact.

We need to realize that it is absolutely true that no two persons in the world are wholly alike and that therefore, no two persons can be approached altogether in the same fashion. No class of men know this better, perhaps, than travelling salesmen. No class of men upon earth "size up" a prospective customer with more skill and adroitness than these do. At times their insight into character impresses one as being almost weird and uncanny.

As ministers and workers for the Master, seeking to win men to a better life, it seems to me that we might take a lesson from our fellow workers in other lines of activity. In trying to win others to the church why should we not carefully study the points of approach by which we may best and most forcibly make our appeal to them. What will touch the heart of one will possibly not begin to influence that of another. In fact, it might drive him further away. And certainly, if ever anywhere, it is a crime to make a blunder it would seem to be in a calling so delicate and far-reaching in influence as that of the Christian, as he stands related to the eternal interests of his fellows. By all means let us know, not only books; let us be conversant not only with theories, but let us know, as far as possible, human life and humanity. HENRY SPENCER BOOTH.

ALABAMA LETTER.

On the first Sunday we organized our Sunday school at New Harmony. It has never been the writer's privilege to witness a more delightful meeting of this kind, for a large portion of the church membership was present and an earnest interest was manifested throughout the services. Of course we can't tell what the future holds, but the beginning is most hopeful indeed. We believe the school will be a glad success. Earnest, consecrated men and women have been placed as leaders, and, with the church's co-operation, under the guidance of God, failure is an impossibility.

The commencement sermon of our Wadley school was delivered by Rev. E. M. Glenn, of Roanoke, on the morning of the second Sunday. His message was one of force and power. At the evening hour services were held at the Christian church. The pastor used as a text these words of Christ, "Learn of Me." He tried to say in part, that while other great teachers and world-leaders have been the promoters of various doctrines, Jesus Christ was the expositor of the science of life and holy living; other teachers say, "Learn our doctrines," while the Christ seeks ever to impress men with what He is. The effort of the Son of God is to get men to know him. The Lord was present. A good service was enjoyed.

At Pleasant Grove last Sabbath we had "Home Coming Day." This was something out of the ordinary. Our hearts were rejoiced that so many members of the church were present. The pastor endeavored humbly to present the message of Christ, after which the church roll was called and each member present was asked to answer either with cash or by pledge the amount he wished to contribute towards raising the conference assessments. Results were very gratifying. While this is a rural people and had never before attempted raising conference funds until the fall and just before conference, almost half the amount assessed was paid and a substantial sum pledged on the balance. We rejoiced together and feel sure of coming up to conference in October with a clear slate. The work here is more hopeful than for several months. Doubtless a better day has dawned.

ELON COLLEGE NOTES.

The officers of the College Sunday school were elected on last Sunday. Dr. T. C. Amick is to remain Superintendent and Prof. N. F. Brannock Assistant. Some changes were made in the other officers.

Miss Bettie Ellis and Miss Lillian Johnson are to represent the College Y. W. C. A. at the Black Mountain Conference this summer.

The new gymnasium has been furnished this week with the most modern and up-to-date room furnishing for school purposes. Single beds are in use and every convenience to satisfy the students has been applied regardless of cost.

A Mass Meeting of all missionary societies of the Christian Church South is being held here this week. A most enjoyable and helpful meeting is reported. Among those on the program are: Mrs. W. A. Harper, Elon College, N. C., Mrs. W. H. Carroll, Burlington, N. C., Miss Bettie Stephenson, Boone, N. C., Mrs. H. E. Rountree, Greensboro, N. C., Mrs. C. H. Rowland, Franklin, Va., Mrs. W. T. Waltres, Franklin, Va., Mrs. W. H. Denison, Norfolk, Va., Rev. A. B. Kendall, Burlington, Dr. J. O. Atkinson, Elon College, and many others whose names we do not have. Many plans and purposes are being unfolded and we shall expect to see the fruits of these undertakings that are being worked out by these willing workers.

The fiscal year of the College closed on Saturday last, and those who have had the financial end of the institution in charge report a most successful year in every department. The many friends of Elon have done well their part the past year in both student and financial help, all for which the administration is profoundly grateful.

This writer had the privilege some five years ago of reading a book on the life of a young man written by himself. The author of the little book was a reformed drunkard, having reformed three times and making the start each time from the lowest of the lowest of places of sin. At the time the book was written (1908) the young man was in the Taylor University, Upland, Ind., preparing for the ministry. The thrilling story of the young man and his awful experience with whiskey could not let us forget his name. Last week, through desire to learn of the young man, we wrote the president of the institution in which the young man was a student, asking if the young man was holding out and making progress in his undertaking. A letter just received informs us that the young man is the pastor of one of the city churches in Florence, Kansas, and doing well. An evidence that the grace of God is sufficient to save.

President W. A. Harper delivered the literary address at the closing of the North Wilkesboro High School last Friday.

All the classes, except the Senior, have examinations this week. Next week is Commencement week and a great gathering of friends and Alumni of the College is expected.

The village continues to grow and improve in many ways. Some real estate changes have been made and it seems that prosperity is finding some work to do in these quarters. Among the changes and additions to the community is the coming of Mr. J. H. Oldham, of Whitsett, N. C., who has purchased President Harp-er's former home and will live among us.

Already the President has received a number of letters from young men and women signifying their intention to be here next year. The catalogue is being mailed to all who make application and any reader of THE SUN interested in getting an education for himself or helping another should send for a copy of this excellent publication.

Dr. J. O. Atkinson filled the College pulpit Sunday morning and used for his theme the "Transforming Vision," from which he delivered a most masterful sermon to the uplift of all present.

AMONG THE CHURCHES.

Pleasant Grove, N. C.

The first Sunday was Memorial day at Pleasant Grove, Randolph, N. C. The day was ideal; the congregation large and attentive. The singing was the best since I became pastor of this church. The splendid organ put in the church recently, with sister Annie Cole as organist, and Bro. P. C. Caveniss leader of the choir, helped very much to make the success of the day. The flowers were beautiful and abundant. There were more than 325 graves decorated. Thus passed another day of importance into the history of Pleasant Grove church. So far the work here goes on nicely. There are other encouraging features in the work here which we will mention later. These are good people and a strong church. The apportionments of conference are being raised very nicely, as they really needed some one to lead them in this work of missions. I am well pleased with the work here.

Ingram, Va.

The last second Saturday was our second quarterly meeting. The church seems to be in a very satisfactory condition. The Sunday school is doing well with Bro. Jas. M. Henderson as Superintendent. Bro. Henderson is one of our most Godly, pious Christian men, who has been the faithful superintendent for years.

Bro. E. M. Carter was with us here the second Sunday in April. Bro. Carter preached a good sermon and presented the claims of the Orphanage to which our people responded very nicely. There has been a great deal of sickness in this congregation this Winter and Spring. This is a good church, always ready to do its work with credit and high honor to its members. Any pastor needs to feel proud of such good people as these are. The second Sunday in June will be "Parents Day" at Ingram. We will expect a large congregation then.

Happy Home.

Last Sunday was our memorial services here, which was very largely attended and very interesting. The singing was very good. Sister Julia Hill, our splendid organist, with Bro. W. H. Davis, our choir director, and their splendid singers gave us some of their very best music. The flowers were abundant, and the congregation was attentive. The Sunday school is in a fine condition, I think the best I have seen since I have been their pastor. Bro. W. D. Wall, one of the best superintendents I know any where, is yet leading this Sunday school. He has been Superintendent for some 17 years, as an "ever-green" school. Bro. Wall has a good force of workers in Bros. W. H. Davis, J. W. White, J. H. Richmond, M. E. Lillard and others. The report of the deacons in quarterly meeting was that the condition of this church was improving. I am sure this is very gratifying to all. The third Sunday in June is the time for "Parents' Day," or "Mother's Day."

Keyser.

My last appointment, the fourth Sunday in April, was a good service in Keyser. The congregation was real good, the singing was splendid and the interest was better than usual. Miss Rachel Gilchrist, the popular school teacher, and Miss Mattie McLoud, members of the finance committee, deserve special mention for the great interest they have taken in the church work here. Bro. A. R. Troutman, our new Sunday school Superintendent, is doing good work here. Bro. Wm. Keith has been in feeble health all the winter and spring. Bro. Eugene Addor suffered a stroke of paralysis on Saturday before the fourth Sunday in April. These are important brethern in this church.

Smithwood.

At this church my Bro. P. T. Klapp preached for me in April. Here we have a very good Sunday school, with Bro. W. D. Humble Superintendent. Bro. Humble is one of the leading young men in this church and community and is a good Sunday school worker. Our memorial services will be held there next Sunday. This is a church where we have real good singing. Here we have some most excellent members.

S. B. KLAPP, Pastor.

Greensboro, N. C.

Moore Union.

This church held, and enjoyed, a memorial service on Saturday, May the 17th. The program rendered was as follows:

Song, by the choir.

Recitation, "Christian Character Like the Snow,"

Miss Mattie Maddox.

Song, by the choir.

Recitation, "Sold her Soul for Gold," Miss Ella

Baldwin.

Song, by the choir.

Address, "Victory over Death and the Grave," by the writer.

Song, by the choir.

The roll was called, reaching back to 1874, and loving remarks made relative to the characteristics in the lives of those who had gone to meet God. Yes, many pleasant memories of the past were renewed. It was indeed a meeting to be remembered. The floral offering was good. This meeting did not assume the nature of a picnic. Here we have a good Sunday school, with our young consecrated Deacon, B. J. Harward, as Superintendent. They also have a weekly prayer meeting preparatory to our protracted services. We are praying daily for a God-given revival. The brethren here have a good deal of the material on the ground for a new church building.

Clinton.

Here we have a very encouraging Sunday school, with our dear brother, E. H. Buchanan, as Superintendent. It is the purpose of this people to have a church building at this place in the near future.

Mt. Bethel.

The church at this place is greatly concerned about and praying daily for a great meeting. Here we have a good Sunday school with brother J. M. Simpson as Superintendent, and a weekly prayer meeting.

Kallam.

Our congregation here is improving, and conditions are more hopeful. They have met half of their financial obligations. We have no Sunday school here, for lack of someone to lead it. We hope and pray that God will give us a glorious revival at this point, and in it someone to lead a Sunday school and prayer meeting. May God bless all these places with the outpouring of His Holy Spirit and the ingathering of many precious souls.

Enclosed find money for four new subscriptions to the new CHRISTIAN SUN.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON, JUNE 1.

Subject for This Sunday—"Joseph Tests His Brethren." Text, Genesis 44-47.

Time.—Estimated from B. C. 2100 to 1500. Usher gives it as B. C. 1707.

Place.—Egypt.

Persons.—Joseph, his steward and his brothers.

Golden Text.—Confess therefore your sins one to another, and pray one for another, that ye may be healed.—Jas. 5:16.

Leading Thought.—We need the prayers and sympathy of others.

Joseph, the mighty ruler of Egypt, knowing them, unknown by them, gave his brothers a great, glad feast (Lesson 8). Their fears were scattered, they believed their strange, mysterious conscience-smiting troubles were at an end. Rejoicing over such a happy termination to their second dreaded expedition for food, and full of thoughts of their wives and children and of their aged father, expecting to start for home in the morning, they slept, or perhaps were held sleepless by gladness.

Sharper trials, more perplexing, more heart-rending difficulties were just at hand.

Joseph must know still more of the characters of these men—his brothers—before he can know what he can do for them and for their, and his, dear old father. In order to obtain this information he devised and carried out the plot which to-day we study.

Joseph's final test of his brothers was designed to test their feelings with regard to his own brother, Benjamin. Would they surrender him, and go back home? If so, their hearts were as hard as when they sold Joseph into Egypt; and Joseph would not want them in Egypt, though he would keep Benjamin, and, doubtless, send for Jacob.

The silver bowl from which Joseph fancied he gained knowledge of the future is evidence of the admixture of superstition in the character of even so wise a man as Joseph. He may have divined by throwing bits of gold and silver into the cup and drawing conclusions from the bubbles they raised or the way they fell. Cup-divination is common in the East to this day. Of course it is possible that Joseph had the cup as a curiosity and was himself far above the use of it. There seems a touch of sarcasm in verse 15: "Wist ye not that such a man as I can indeed divine?" for how could he be expected to divine with his divining-cup stolen?

The steward whom Joseph sent after his brothers was the house-manager, the keeper of the palace, the head servant.

The fact that the brothers did not give up Benjamin, but went back with him when the cup was found in his sack, and also the fact that Judah, their spokesman, acknowledged their sense of guilt, though not of the particular crime with which Joseph charged them; the fact also that in Judah's speech there was no word of blame of Benjamin—all this proves that the brothers had indeed experienced a change of heart. Especially did Judah's offer to remain a slave in Egypt, to which he had sent Joseph as a slave twenty-two years before, provided Benjamin and the rest might be allowed to return, show Judah's reformation.

OBJECT LESSONS.

A Magnet—Steel Needles, Bits of Sawdust or Wood.—Some of these tiny objects on my book are steel and some are not. You cannot be sure which are steel just by looking at them or feeling of them, but as soon as you touch them with the magnet you can tell by the way they respond. The attracting power of the magnet is the test. Joseph could not judge what was in his brothers' hearts by looking at their faces. He needed to know whether they were selfish or unselfish and he used a test to show whether they were true brothers. The lesson tells about this.

Write on the Board "Friday, the Thirteenth."—What do some people think about this day of the week and month? They say it is unlucky, that it is not safe to begin a journey or undertake a new piece of work on Friday or on the thirteenth. When the thirteenth comes on Friday it is still more dreaded. Superstition is the same in all lands and times though it is connected with different objects. In Egypt in Joseph's time the divining cup was used to tell fortunes. In our times there are many kinds of superstition. We dishonor our faith in the loving heavenly Father when we allow any of these superstitions to influence us.

QUESTION REVIEW.

1. Who was one day arrested just outside the capital city of Egypt?
2. On what charge was he arrested?
3. What "circumstantial evidence" of Benjamin's guilt was found?
4. Why had he not hidden the cup in a safer place?
5. What offer was made the brothers of Benjamin?
6. Why would they not accept the offer?
7. To whom, instead of Benjamin, did they impute guilt? Themselves. "God hath found out the iniquity of thy servants." (V. 16.)
8. Of what great sin was conscience always accusing these men?
9. Before whom did they at last confess their sense of sin?—Carrie B. Leonard.

NOTES ON C. E. TOPIC, JUNE 8.

Subject—"Seek Peace and Pursue It." I Peter 3:8-18.

This meeting may be given a double aspect. Let a part of the members discuss world peace, and the progress nations are making in that direction, while others may tell something of that peace that gives to individuals a sweeter and nobler life.

The leader should see that proper topics or quotations are given out to members. Have the program, songs, prayers and everything arranged. Many a meeting has had its effect spoiled by the leader's looking for songs during the meeting while the audience waited.

Let the leader's opening talk be brief, but comprehensive. Outline the topic and the matters to be considered under it. Speak of the greatly increased attention paid to peace since the first and second Hague conferences. Then speak of the need of peace; wars are more expensive than ever; religious, educational, missionary and commercial enterprises need our heroes instead of war.

Let the leader discuss that peace that individuals should cultivate—be at peace with neighbors, family, church members and with God. The same principle is involved as in the case of nations.

SOME SHORT ADDRESSES.

Campbell Morgan tells of having walked in a garden, as a boy, with one who had recently given himself to the Savior, and who, plucking a nasturtium leaf, said "Isn't it beautiful? I never knew how beautiful every leaf was until I gave myself to Christ."—The Sunday School Times.

The life that was the Light of the world was primarily not His teaching, His miracles, or His cross, but the life that was in Him. "I am life." In the same measure that Christ has been formed in us we, too, are the light of the world.—C. H. Parkhurst, D. D.

Just before Wendell Phillips died he said to a friend: "When I was fourteen I heard Lyman Beecher preach on 'You belong to God.' I went home, threw myself on the floor of my room, and locked the door and prayed, 'O God, I belong to Thee; take what is Thine own.' From that day to this it has been true that whenever I have known that a thing was wrong, it had no temptation for me; and whenever I have known a thing to be right, it has taken no courage to do it.—Ex.

Vision is largely the fruit of training. The man on the lookout discovers a ship ahead long before the passengers on deck. The fine accuracy of sight has come to him as he has battled with the tempests, and learned to distinguish between the whiteness of flying foam and the sunlight on a sail. Clearness of spiritual vision is acquired in the same way. He who can see even to "the far-off interests of tears" has been taught his discernment by reading the meaning of nearer events.—A. H. Bradford, D. D.

PEACE AMMUNITION.

(These facts about the cost and iniquity of war may be given out in advance. At a "signal" you may have a "broadside," the facts being repeated rapidly, from all parts of the room.)

A first class battle-ship costs as much as all the hundred buildings of Harvard University.

Europe pays annually, in time of peace, for keeping up her armies and navies, more than one billion dollars. This is a pile of dollar bills fifty-two miles high. It represents a thousand million days' labor at a dollar a day.

A modern battle-ship costs $12,000,000. It lasts for twenty years at most and during that time its upkeep costs $16,000,000, or $28,000,000 in all.

For the cost of a single battle-ship fifty manual-training schools could be built and fitted out, and 75,000 boys and girls could learn trades every year.

Out of every dollar of our national expenditures, seventy cents goes to pay for past wars and provide for future ones.

The world's armies and navies require 5,560,000 men. Think how much better off the world would be if these millions were engaged in the productive arts of peace!

The cost of one battle-ship would buy 250,000 acres from which forests have been cut, and plant them with trees for the needs of future generations.

Every time a fourteen-inch gun is fired the cost is $800. That would give a boy or a girl two years at many colleges.

The United States army has 90,000 men, and its navy 50,000 men, or 140,000 in all, who must be fed and clothed, paid and cared for, year after year. And this is as nothing compared with other nations.—C. E. World.

Ideals are like stars. You will not touch them with your hands, but like the sailor, you choose them as your guides, and reach your destiny.—Anon.

The love of Christ is not an absorbing but a radiating love. The more we love Him, the more we shall most certainly love others.—F. R. Havergal.

VISIONS AND DREAMS.

E. C. FRY, IN HERALD OF GOSPEL LIBERTY.

Our stout Siberia rode the waves of the recent storm beautifully, vindicating its claim to be one of the steadiest boats on the Pacific, and we are now within three days of Japan. It occurred to me this morning that quite a series of romances might be written about the visions and ideals of our various passengers: the French countess and her brother, and the other tourists, intent on sight-seeing in strange lands; the statesman (a member of the recent United States Cabinet), on a well-earned holiday; the group of young civil engineers on their way to the Philippines; and the various other groups. But it is beyond the stretch of my imagination to attempt so varied a matter.

Dr. Morrill is my roommate in stateroom No. 25, and I know the high purpose that has led him hitherward, and know that I am joining with many other hearts in Japan, and, I trust, also with many in America, in praying that these hopes may be realized. For successive years our Japan Mission has asked for the assistance of this visit, and it seems almost too good to be true that the blessing has really come. A few weeks later, some of the immediate results can be written up, but it is my belief that results that are not immediately tangible, in ever-widening circles, will continue until the Great Assizes are held.

What of my own visions, ideals, dreams? Here, on the broad Pacific, I seem for these days to separate from both America and Japan. Wireless messages bring short summaries of world news, but my daily letters to my daughter have ceased, as also messages to or from my wife until we reunite at Utsunomiya.

"Mission field our trysting-place." America lies behind me, with all the blessings that furlough gave, and with all the opportunities for service that it afforded. Before me lies Japan, and this is what I see there:

I see a splendid group of hundreds of American and other missionaries, in as grand an enterprise as ever fired the imaginations of men; and I see a much larger group of Japanese ministers of the Word of God, who, like Paul, have not proved disobedient unto the heavenly vision; and a group of more than a hundred thousand Christians in that Island Empire, by their lives as well as by their words, setting forth the merits of the religion of a crucified Savior and commending it to all around them.

I see in the good providence of God the growth of His kingdom continuing here until Japan shall have become one of the kingdoms of him who "hath on his vesture and on his thigh a name written, King of kings, and Lord of Lords." And I see our own brotherhood, by the grace of God, doing its part of this grand work, and aided by the visit that Dr. Morrill is now making.

As on every previous occasion, I am weary of the enforced idleness of an ocean passage. I look forward eagerly to regaining my Japan home and again joining in the labors of trusted and beloved colleagues, both American and Japanese, and meeting my wife and the little Japanese baby who so longingly is waiting for "uncle" to return. Perhaps I may be able to be of some service to him; but has he not already done much for me, and does he not continue to be to me "a pledge of better times," like all other successful souls being meanwhile serenely unconscious of the greatness of his own powers? No stretching of the imagination is needed to add him to the dreams and visions, for in the providence of God, He who chooses to use the weak to confound the strong, and the things that are not, to bring to naught the things that are, has added to the continuous correspondence with my wife, the invitation from Japanese and American colleagues to return in time for our twenty-fifth anniversary celebration, and the especial reason for going back just now in connection with helping to secure the largest possible benefits from Dr. Morrill's visit, little Maki's oft-repeated wish for "uncle" to come back to him soon, as one of the voices calling me back to duty in Japan.

Pacific Ocean, April 12, 1913.

OUR MISSION SECRETARY IN JAPAN.

Glimpses of Japan.

It may be interesting to the readers of THE SUN to have just a few words from Japan written by a "greenhorn" in the country, and to know some of his impressions. In general he is reserving his conclusions and trying to hold himself open to impressions with the hope of escaping blunders which must later be corrected. Even so first impressions are often erroneous; but when they are the only kind a man has he must hold his peace or speak of such as he can.

On every hand are evidences of advancement. Being where I could look over the city of Sendai yesterday, my attention was caught by the few smokestacks which mark the presence of modern industrial and public service plants. That is something one notices in all the leading cities of the country now. Two weeks ago I preached in the city of Oji, and after the service walked to the brow of a bluff whence we could see the modern factory plants of that place—woolen mills, paper mills, and allied industries.

New railroads are being constructed, making the remoter parts of Japan accessible. Thus far the roads seem to be of the narrow gauge variety, but good cars and modern conveniences are in use. Stations are being improved, and without doubt the Imperial railway system will soon be one of the best, if not the best, in the Orient.

The large cities have good systems of street railways, that in Tokyo being especially noteworthy. Distances are great in the capital, and a network of car lines, with a belt line around the city, make the transportation question vastly easier than it was twenty-five years ago when our missionaries began work in Japan.

The stores and shops in most of the larger places are showing the effects of modern ideas and equipment. Foreign goods are slowly finding their way to the remoter markets; I am told that fruits are much more used than they used to be, and they are exposed for sale almost everywhere. The Japanese way has been to open the whole front of the shop or store to the street, displaying the goods on the floor or low supports of various kinds; but now one can find show case and window displays. In one respect the influence of the Occident does not please me at all, namely the advertising craze, which is putting up glaring signs on bill boards, suspending them from tall bamboo poles, displaying them in the street cars, etc. However, I do not think that Japan is yet able to cope with America in billboard indecencies.

One never gets away from the police or the public school here. The police system of Japan is very thorough, and the police office in the towns is likely to be the most noticeable structure in the town. A foreigner will find few persons more ready to assist him than are the Japanese police, who often give themselves great trouble to accommodate and serve. Schoolhouses are usually large and thronged. All persons at all conversant with Japan know that the government school system is very broad and thoroughly graded. English is taught in many schools, and especially in the normal schools and higher institutions. It has been my pleasure to converse with several Japanese teachers of English in the larger towns. One of them tells me that he is accustomed to read the Bible regularly, and yet he is not a Christian. Missionaries visit the public schools and are generally invited to address the pupils, although Christianity is banned as a topic of address. Such wide-spread scattering of schools has of course had its effect, and one need not be surprised to find the people of Japan so progressive.

Religious teaching and ideas are changing, too. Christianity is making headway slowly, but there is plenty to give courage even to the casual observer. Best of all is the fact that thousands have been radically converted and vitally changed, and Christianity is thoroughly implanted in such hearts, so that the propagation of it is assured. The outlook is bright.

At the request of our Japanese pastors my plans have been revised, and I am now making a hurried round of our churches before the hot and busy season (sounds like America, doesn't it?) and will make the more complete survey afterwards. What I have seen so far is encouraging and my hope rises. Fellowship with the Japanese pastors has given me high regard for them. Of this matter I shall have occasion to say more at some future time.

Sincerely yours,

M. T. MORRILL

FOREIGN MISSION RALLY DAY.

At a meeting of the Foreign Mission Committee of the E. Va. Christian Conference in Suffolk, Va., the committee recommended that Sunday, June 29, be set apart as a special Foreign Mission Rally Day. The Suffolk Christian Church was chosen as the place for these services.

Rev. Warren H. Denison, Pastor of Memorial Christian Temple, has been secured as speaker for this occasion. Three services will be held during the day as follows—11 A. M., Sermon on Missions. 3 P. M., an address on Laymen's Missionary Movement. 8 P. M., Address on our Denominational Foreign Work.

Each church is requested to have representatives present at this meeting, especially at the afternoon meeting, when we would be glad to have as many men present as possible. As many pastors as can make it convenient are also requested to attend these services. We trust that the services may be well attended and prove a blessing in furthering our cause.

PRAYER MEETINGS.

A few days ago while talking with a young lady who teaches in our Bible school, of the lack of interest in prayer meetings, she said:

"You have no reason to feel discouraged, for there is probably no church in town whose prayer meetings are so well attended as ours."

"Yes," said I, "I know our attendance is good as compared with the larger churches, for I have recently had opportunity to observe. But ours is not what it ought to be. Our young people do not attend in as large numbers as I feel they ought, and I am quite sure even many of those who are older would find it possible to come more frequently if they fully appreciated the important place which the prayer meeting should occupy in the life of a church or community."

"But," said this estimable young lady who is herself a very regular and interested attendant, "the young people at high school used to almost invariably speak of attending prayer meeting as a joke."

Then we began discussing the personnel of our groups gathered for prayer. To my surprise I discovered that nearly forty-five percent. of our attendants were young people. Still I was not convinced that we were doing all that might be done to interest and hold either the young or old as they needed to be held in the place of prayer. The membership of our little church is now 41. The average attendance at our prayer meetings for May has been but a fraction over 25 so far. All of these are not members of this church; indeed some are not members of any church. While I have not recently kept a record of the attendance of the membership separately, the records of some months ago would seem to indicate that not more than 17 or 18 members attended the average prayer meeting in our church.

Some weeks ago, I exchanged with a congregational brother, whose membership I think is about 300. There were 26 at his prayer meeting including myself. A little later I exchanged with a Methodist brother, whose membership I believe is nearly 700, with a Bible school of more than 1200. There were 29 at that meeting. In conversation with another M. E. pastor who was telling me with great enthusiasm of the success attending his work, I asked about his prayer meeting. "Oh!" said he, "our prayer meetings are coming right along. We are having a fine interest. We had thirty at our last meeting." That church has a membership of nearly 200.

It is bad enough to witness a lack of interest in so important a meeting as that held for the church to unite in prayer, but when a pastor who prides himself on the success of his work feels elated at having a sixth or less of his membership present at the weekly prayer meeting, something must be radically wrong.

While pastor at the Temple in Norfolk, Va., a meeting of ministers was called for, to consider a union evangelistic service. When I arrived, there were three other pastors present. The night before, a light snow had fallen, accompanied by considerable wind, but not such as to be considered a very severe snow-storm even in that sunny clime. That night was the night for the weekly prayer meeting of the churches. As I came up to the little group one of the ministers asked of the others how the storm affected the prayer meeting. The first to answer was pastor of a church with a membership between 700 and 800. He said: "We only had seven."—The other, with a sneer on his face as well as in his tone, answered, "Well, here is one preacher who was not fool enough to go out and see. I wasn't going to prepare a prayer meeting talk to deliver to three or four people."

Brethren, are not we of the ministry largely responsible for the deplorable conditions which these incidents indicate? Two merchants were talking of a social event of importance, when one remarked, "I shall not find it possible to go, as it is stock-taking time with us, and I have made it a rule for years to give this important matter my closest personal attention."

With a look and gesture of contempt, the other replied that he never bothered with stock-taking any more, for he knew if losses were revealed they would cause him uneasiness, and he preferred not to know it. It is needless to say that in a few years he failed.

Take my own case for instance: A membership of but 41, and an average prayer meeting attendance on the part of those members of only 17 or 18. Only from 41 per cent. to 44 per cent. of the membership of a small church like this, when the amount of pastoral oversight secured to each member must be greater than that in the larger churches, that habitually attend the place of prayer! Must I yield to a feeling of pride or even of gratitude when complimented, as I sometimes am, on such "a good showing"? Grateful I must be of course for those who come, and my gratitude should find expression in more faithfully serving Him who crowns such feeble effort with so much success. However, I dare not yield myself up too completely to a sense of gratitude for results secured, but must temper my grateful recognition of God's goodness with just as clear a recognition of the larger results which must come from more faithful care of my flock.

The more I think over the feelings I have entertained in the past as a result of congratulations received from many kind hearted and well meaning friends, I am persuaded to believe I have allowed myself to be blinded to the real situation. We are so likely to measure ourselves by ourselves (each other), that we often fail to get a proper idea of conditions as they actually exist.

Who of us can sit down for an hour and think earnestly and deeply of the early church, and imagine a meeting for prayer, with less than half, and in many instances less than a tenth, of the resident membership present?

But excuses are easy to find. They were in Jesus' time. "I have married a wife, and I cannot come." Too many are too much married—to one form or another of that which makes its appeal to the flesh.

Children's Missionary Stories

STORIES are—yes, must be—used by every wide-awake worker among, or leader or teacher of, children.

MISSIONARY STORIES seem to have been the one field well-nigh overlooked until Mrs. Alice Moreton Burnett, Corresponding Secretary for the Woman's Board for Home Missions of the Christian Church, made a compilation of thirty interesting, instructive stories pertaining especially and directly to missions that are sure to be appreciated by workers, teachers, leaders, pastors, fathers, mothers—and the children.

Some of the Important Events of both Home Missions and Foreign Missions are also included, together with Suggestions For Junior Leaders.

They make a book 5 x 7 inches in size, 128 pages, red cloth binding—a handsome, attractive volume. Price 35c per copy postpaid.

NOTICE! NOTICE!

The Young People's Convention of the Western North Carolina Christian Conference will hold its annual meeting with the Randleman Christian church July 25-27, 1913.

The Sunday school at this church has extended to the convention a cordial invitation to meet there, which invitation the executive committee has gladly accepted; and we feel sure that with Randleman as our meeting place we can have one of the best conventions ever held in the Western Conference. That the convention may be a success I want to ask that every pastor and also every Sunday school superintendent begin now to make plans and have every school within the bounds of the conference represented. A large delegation is one of the very necessary things that go to make a convention a success. Brethren, please see that your school is represented in the Randleman Convention.

PLEASANT HILL (JOHNSON).

Our work at Pleasant Hill (Johnson) is moving on very smoothly. We have a very fine Sunday school. We remodeled, stripping off all the old weather boarding and replacing it by nice new weather boarding. We removed the old windows and put in new ones. Then seeing the roof looked too flat we raised it and covered it new and we have a very nice house of worship. The ceiling inside is all good. We put new doors in and now have practically a new house. Now it must be painted, and I want to ask all my friends in the entire conference that feel concerned in this all important mission point to send me $1.00 to help paint it. It seems that the brethren have done about all they are able to do and if we don't get help from the outside I don't see how we can paint it. We look upon this church as being a most important point it being a border church and in Johnson County. The church here has made rapid progress in the past three or four years. We have had about 50 additions to the church and our Sunday school is good and we have a good choir. We wish we could have help and encouragement from the outside to get the church painted by the fourth Sunday in July, at which time our protracted meeting begins with Bro. Neal Rowland to help.

TURNER'S CHAPEL.

Turner's Chapel is moving on nicely now. We have a nice organ there and painted up the furniture in the church and carpeted the rostrum, alcove and aisles. Have a fine Sunday school and a good choir. We held memorial service there the fourth Sunday in May. A large congregation in the morning, the congregation was entertained by the choir and a fine address delivered by Bro. June Gunter of Sanford, N. C., after which we decorated the graves with a profusion of beautiful flowers. Then the ladies of the community served a bountiful dinner in the grove to every body. We had one hour and a half intermission, meeting old friends and enjoying the good dinner, after which we returned to the house and had some appropriate songs by the choir. Then Prof. McLeod of Broadway High School was introduced and delivered a very fine and instructive address which was enjoyed by all. He is a Scotchman of no small talent. Thus ended the memorial service at Turner's Chapel.

"Every man according as he purposeth in his heart, so let him give; not grudgingly; or of necessity: for God loveth a cheerful giver." 2 Cor. 9:7.

Lula Brown is spending a few days with her relatives at High Point, N. C.

Nora Wadkins returned from her visit last week and reports a good time.

I was with the good people of Damascus the 3rd Sunday. It was a real pleasure to be there. This people gives their regular monthly collection, and responded liberally to the call while I was with them. I received, in cash and subscription, $33.50. So this report shows up pretty well for the water and sewerage. The plumbbers began work the 18th. Yes; really, they did. And, you know the next thing they will want is, money. We have hardly enough for the first payment; and that is due now.

HONOR TO WHOM HONOR.

You all remember the story of Washington, when he was a boy. He had set his heart on entering the navy, and going to sea. His mother had yielded a reluctant consent. She said he might go; but it was evident that she wanted him to stay. A midshipman's commission had been obtained for him. The vessel was about to sail. The servant was at the door with his trunk. He went to say good-bye to his mother and found her in tears. He saw the look of deep distress that was in her face; but she said not a word. That was enough for him; that he became conscious of his mother's love, so he went out, and said to his servant, "Take my trunk back again to my room. I will not break my mother's heart, to please myself." He gave up his commission, and stayed at home.

When his mother heard what he had done, she said, "George, God has promised to bless those who honor their parents, and He will bless you!" How true these words were! God did bless George Washington and made him a blessing to his country and to the world. Washington gained many victories afterwards, but this was the most important victory he ever gained. He conquered the British at Trenton, and at Monmouth, and at Yorktown, but when he gave up his own will, to please his mother, he conquered himself. And the Bible tells us, that, "He who ruleth his own spirit, is greater than he that taketh a city."

THE VALUE OF A CHILD

Sarah K. Bolton has a poem called, "His Monument."

Men tried to make themselves immortal by erecting great and splendid buildings, but time laid them in the dust. They thought to be forever known because of the books they had written, but even the titles were forgotten. They made memorials by ruling cities, but the tablets on which their great deeds were inscribed were rusted and illegible.

But there was a man who took a child from a wretched hovel. This child if neglected might have brought dishonor to the state. He was reared in the Christian's hope and trust. And when he had grown to manhood, he became a light to many, "and taught to those in need the love of God." That work "has been multiplied like stars at night." What granite monument can last like that? —Selected.

THE LEGAL ORPHAN MAKING.

Is Chicago becoming the Reno of the Great Lakes? This is the recently expressed opinion of Judge Richard E. Burke of the superior court. In a six months' period in Judge Burke's court there were 436 non-contested divorce cases as against sixteen contested cases. In 289 of the non-contested suits service was obtained by proof of publication of which 172 were on the desertion charge. This is significant as to what features of the law are generally invoked and discloses the difficulty which the courts have in guarding against collusion. In his court an average of fifty-four divorce orphans are created each month. For a period of twenty years this would mean that at least 12,960 children would be deprived of at least one parent. There are three chancellors in the superior court, and three in the circuit court, and all are obliged to assign divorce cases to others on Saturday mornings, which means that approximately two additional courts hear divorce cases, or eight in all. Taking the ratio given by Judge Burke and following it through eight courts, it would give the figures of children whose parents were divorced in twenty years as 103,180. It is no wonder that both the church and the state have become aroused as never before to a situation which threatens to undermine the foundations of society. What shall become of these thousands of legal orphans?—Standard.

PIANOS OF QUALITY FOR THE CHRISTIAN SUN PIANO CLUB.

The superior quality of the Ludden & Bates pianos which are being supplied to members of the Christian Sun Piano Club is evidenced by the fact that for nearly half a century they have enjoyed the favor of the most discriminating musicians throughout the South. You will find them in the homes of the best musicians, in conservatories of music, in schools, colleges, churches and Sunday Schools, in auditoriums, public buildings, hotels, etc. The Ludden & Bates instruments are beautiful in design and finish; sweet, pure and full in tone; responsive in action; permanent in durability. Each Ludden & Bates piano is guaranteed for a lifetime, which means that if it should ever develop any defect either of workmanship or material the firm will make it good or will replace it with a new instrument.

Such is the quality of the pianos and player pianos on which the Club is offering its members a saving equivalent to approximately one-third the price. If you wish a piano of real quality at a price lower than you would have to pay for an inferior instrument, write for your copy of the Club's catalogue today. Address the managers Ludden & Bates, Christian Sun Piano Club Dept., Atlanta, Ga.

WORMY PEACHES.

The J. Van Lindley Nursery Company, Box 207, Pomona, North Carolina, has gotten out a booklet telling all about how to avoid worms in your fruit, giving correct spraying formulas, condensed so that you do not have to spend half a day getting at the facts. This booklet has been approved by the State Entomologist of North Carolina, and can be had for the asking, whether you are a customer of the Company or procured your stock from some other nursery. These people are not only interested in selling you trees, but want to help you to have a perfect fruit.

NATION-WIDE PROHIBITION.

The Headquarters Committee by the approval of the Board of Trustees of the Anti-Saloon League of America have authorized the following declaration as the future policy of the organization:

The Next and Final Step.

The policy of the Anti-Saloon League since its inception has been to go just as fast and just as far as public sentiment would justify. It confines its efforts to law enforcement and sentiment building where that is the only policy public sentiment will sustain. It is for local Prohibition where that policy meets the requirements of the most advanced public demand. It always has favored the adoption of state and national Prohibition just as quickly as an enlightened public conscience warrants. We believe the time is fully ripe for the launching of a campaign for national Prohibition—not by any party, or parties, but by the people. This does not mean that we are to relax our efforts one iota for law enforcement, local Prohibition and Prohibition by states, but it is a recognition of the fact that the task begun more than a hundred years ago should speedily be completed.

The Character of the Traffic.

Every defense the liquor traffic has erected has been battered down except the defenseless appeal to greed and appetite. It no longer has advocates; it must depend for its existence upon partisans. It is united with the white slave traffic. The offspring of this unholy union are robbery, bribery, cruelty, debauchery and murder. The martyred Senator Carmack but uttered an accepted truth when he said, "The liquor traffic would rather die than obey law." It is an enemy to everything that is good in private and public life. It is the friend of everything that is bad. In the name of decent civil government and for the sake of humankind the manufacture and sale of this despoiler of the race should be abolished.

The Peril We Face.

The vices of the cities have been the undoing of the past empires and civilizations. It has been at the point where the urban population outnumbers the rural people that wrecked republics have gone down. There the vices have been centered and eaten out the heart of the patriotism of the people making them the easy victims of every enemy. The peril of this republic likewise is now clearly seen to be in her cities. There is no greater menace to democratic institutions than the great segregation of an element, which gathers its ideas of patriotism and citizenship from the low grog shop and which has proved its enmity to organized civil government. Already some of our cities are well-nigh submerged with this unpatriotic element, which is manipulated by the still baser element engaged in the un-American drink traffic and by the kind of politician the saloon creates. The saloon stands for the worst in political life. All who stand for the best must be aggressively against it. If our republic is to be saved the liquor traffic must be destroyed.

What Has Been Accomplished?

More than half the counties of the republic, multitudes of incorporated villages and cities and nine entire states containing upwards of forty-six millions of people—fifty per cent. of the population—embracing above two-thirds of the entire territorial area of the country have outlawed the saloon. The traffic has been driven from the army and navy, from immigrant stations and from the national capital; but the greatest triumph of the temperance forces of the nation was the passage of the Webb-Kenyon bill over President Taft's veto, not only for the service it will render the cause of law enforcement, but for the demonstrated fact that Congress is responsive to the organized, expressed will of the people on this as on any other important moral issue.

National Prohibition—How Secured.

National Prohibition can be secured through the adoption of a constitutional amendment by Congress and ratification of the same by the necessary three-fourths—thirty-six—states. A state once having ratified the amendment cannot rescind its action, but a state failing in its effort to ratify may do so at any future time.

The Opportune Time.

The time for a nation-wide movement to outlaw the drink traffic is auspicious. Organization is now established and in operation in all parts of the country. The forces that definitely oppose the traffic are in accord as at no time in the past. The moral, scientific and commercial aspects of the problem are being more intelligently put before the public than hitherto. The narrow, acrimonious and emotional appeal is giving way to a rational, determined conviction that the traffic being the source of so much evil and economic waste and the enemy of so much good has no rightful place in our modern civilization.

Abraham Lincoln reluctantly consented to the levying of an internal revenue tax as a war measure only when assured by members of his cabinet and leaders in Congress that it would be repealed at the close of the war. When the war ended and the broken fortunes of the republic were manifest, the liquor traffic, with that serpent-like wisdom for which it is noted, was the first to urge the continuation of this tax, knowing the force of a bribe upon the public conscience. From that time to the present the chief cry against national Prohibition has been that the government must have the revenue. The adoption of the Income Tax amendment to the federal constitution furnishes an answer to the revenue problem.

ROSY AS A GIRL.

Summitt, N. C.—In a letter received from this place, Mr. J. W. Church, the notary public, says: "My wife had been ailing for nearly 12 years, from female ailments, and at times, was unable to leave the house. She suffered agony with her side and back. We tried physicians for years, without relief. After these treatments all failed, she took Cardui, and gained in weight at once. Now she is red and rosy as a school girl." Cardui, as a tonic for women, has brought remarkable results. It relieves pain and misery and is the ideal tonic for young and old. Try it. At druggists.

Increase Your Yields Per Acre of All Crops—Reduce Your Labor and Producing Cost and Make Bigger Profits This Year by Using

Virginia-Carolina High-Grade Fertilizers

Thousands of farmers learned in 1912 what many, many thousands already knew—that Virginia-Carolina Fertilizers are more than ordinary fertilizers. That at least one-and-a-half bales of cotton to the acre is not impossible, nor 100 bushels of corn per acre so very difficult with up-to-date farming methods, frequent cultivations and working of the crop, and several applications of V.-C. Fertilizers. That with the use of these excellent fertilizers the average yields of Tobacco, Wheat, Oats, Fruit, Rice, Peanuts and Truck can be often easily increased from fifty to a hundred per cent.

V.-C. Factories Located at Convenient Shipping Points as Shown on Map.

There are sound, logical reasons why you should use Virginia-Carolina Fertilizers. The proven experiences of others—more farmers use V.-C. Fertilizers successfully than any other brand in the country. Our Factories and Shipping Points are so well distributed over the country that your dealer should effect a great saving in freight and time by ordering Virginia-Carolina Fertilizers. Our facilities for making V.-C. Fertilizers are perfect. They are scientifically and perfectly mixed of the highest-grade materials, and reach you in perfect mechanical condition. Granted that you use good seed and cultivate properly, there is only one thing necessary for you to make a banner crop this year—that is the liberal use of V.-C. High-Grade Fertilizer.

KNOW YOUR BUSINESS.

Equipment for service is quite as important as a disposition to serve. When Ralph Waldo Emerson was still exercising the functions of the Christian ministry in an uncertain and hesitant fashion he was summoned by a veteran of the Revolutionary War to administer appropriate consolation to the dying soldier; but when Emerson betrayed his awkwardness and embarrassment in the use of religious consolations, the languishing veteran kindled into momentary wrath and cried: "Young man, if you don't know your business, you had better go home." The advice was excellent. Our Lord reminded His hearers that when the blind attempt to lead the blind both are likely to fall into the ditch.—New York Christian Advocate.

It was through obedience to Christ's command to rise up and walk that the paralyzed man was made well. In like manner Christ's commands to us which seem beyond our power to obey are often His simple and direct method of giving us the strength we need.

If the gospel is not only good advice, but "goodnews," then proclamation should have larger place in our preaching than exhortation.

—The militant suffragettes of England certainly are living up to their name. The number of guards about Buckingham Palace, the official residence of the King and Queen, have been increased because of the suffragette threats to blow up the building. It is officially estimated that they have already caused property loss to the extent of $5,000,000, besides the heavy expenses entailed in increasing the police force in London and other cities to guard persons and property. For instance, three detectives have been assigned to each cabinet minister to protect him at all times. Many other officials have to be guarded in the same manner.

CHRISTIAN SUN PIANO CLUB PRESENTS DISSATISFACTION.

One of the strongest features of the Christian Sun Piano Club is that it makes piano buying absolutely safe. No Club member can possibly be dissatisfied or have any cause for regrets. The first principle we fixed upon in the organization of the Club was that every member must be delighted, otherwise the piano must be returned and any payments refunded.

"Delighted" is the favorite adjective of our Club members in describing their appreciation of the Club and its superb instruments. They are "delighted" with the artistic cases; "delighted" with the beautiful finish; "delighted" with the sweet, full and sympathetic tone; "delighted" with the big saving in price; "delighted" with the convenient terms of payment; "delighted" with the courteous treatment, etc., etc.

When the Club was being organized we realized that in order to make it a grand success we would have to make every Club member "delighted." Thus far we have been unanimously successful.

The daily blessings of life ought to be constant reminders of Him from whom cometh down every good gift and every perfect gift.

DEATHS

Teague.

Near Siler City, Chatham County, N. C., at the age of 53 years, 5 months and 20 days, Mrs. Cornelia E. Teague, wife of Richard Teague, and daughter of the late Gaston Albright, died. Her husband, three daughters, one son, two sisters and mother, survive her. A good mother, a kind neighbor, and an excellent Christian woman has passed to the spirit world.

Funeral and interment at Pleasant Hill Christian church, conducted by Rev. J. W. Holt.

Kelly.

Whereas, on the 3rd day of May, 1913, God saw fit to take from us our co-worker, Bro. John I. Kelly; and while we would be submissive to Him in whose hands we are, we desire to show our appreciation of his life, and of his works and labor while among us, therefore be it

Resolved, 1st: That we hereby express our profound sorrow at the loss of one of our loyal and true members;

Resolved, 2nd: That we are thankful for his life; his was one of those all too rare spirits who go quietly and without ostentation about their every day duties of life, duties toward God, as well as toward man.

Resolved, 3rd: That we record our high esteem of Bro. Kelly as a man and as a citizen, in our community. Our belief is, that the influence of his character and work in our bounds will abide as a precious heritage for those of us who remain.

Resolved, 4th: That we assure the wife in her loneliness of our deepest sympathy, in her great bereavement.

Resolved, 5th: That a page be set apart in the records of our Sunday school in which these resolutions shall be recorded, and that a copy be sent to the wife, and to The Christian Sun, and Lee County News for Publication.

NOT A DAY IN BED.

Gramling, S. C.—In a letter from Gramling, Mrs. Lula Walden says: "I was so weak before I began taking Cardui, that it tired me to walk just a little. Since taking it, I do all the housework for my family of nine, and have not been in bed a day. Cardui is the greatest remedy for women, on earth." Weak women need Cardui. It is the ideal woman's tonic, because it is especially adapted for women's needs. It relieves backache, headache, dragging feelings, and other female misery. Try Cardui. A few doses will show

"IN ESSENTIALS UNITY, IN NON-ESSENTIALS LIBERTY, IN ALL THINGS CHARITY."

OUR PRINCIPLES.

- (1.) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the church.
- (2.) Christian is a sufficient name for the church.
- (3.) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
- (4.) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of church membership.
- (5.) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

Editorial Briefs

The Soliloquy of the Cigarette.

I am not much of a mathematician, but I can add to a young man's nervous troubles (old men have too much wisdom to tamper with me); I can subtract from his physical energy, multiply his aches, increase his pains, divide his mental powers, take interest from his work, and discount his chances for success.

Excusing An Evil.

"Of two evils choose the lesser." "This was a necessary evil." With such argument even the grossest sins are excused. The poet Southey was the better philosopher, and the true teacher, when he declared that "As surely as God is good, so surely there is no such thing as necessary evil." Matthew was correct in writing, "A good tree cannot bring forth evil fruit, neither can a corrupt tree bring forth good fruit." (Matt. 7:18.)

Choosing A Career.

Not every one can choose his own career. Many have their courses cut out for them, and there is no turning aside. Such is the case of the very rich. Vincent Astor, recently inheriting the vast fortune of his father, is reported as saying, "If I did not have my career cut out for me, if I were to lose my fortune, I would turn to the law and study some phases of it that interest me greatly." There is a man with millions doomed to go through life, against his choosing, just piling up more millions, just making more money. Happy indeed is that man or woman who has the power to choose his vocation, and then choosing it, throw the whole heart and life into it.

Seeking For Men.

It is not natural, it is supernatural for a man to seek to save his fellowman by leading him to Christ. It requires effort, sacrifice, prayer. And many will not pay the price. The excuse is made that it is an awkward process, or irksome, or unnatural. Of course. Any purely divine task is unnatural to man, because man is intensely human and only partly divine. The Sunday School Times relates of Delavin A. Pierson: "After the meeting a young theological student said to him, 'I was glad to see people converted to-night, but I don't just like the way you asked them to rise and come forward.' 'Neither do I,' replied the evangelist. 'How do you do it?' The young man hesitated, then answered, 'Well I don't know that I do it at all.' 'Then,' replied the evangelist, 'I like the way I do it better than the way you don't do it.'" It is easier to criticise awkward evangelism than to be evangelistic ourselves. But Christ can wonderfully bless awkwardness when it is prayerfully and unselfishly devoted to telling others the good news of deliverance from sin and from death.

In Heavenly Places.

Once a sturdy Scotchman was asked if he expected some day to go to heaven. "Why man, I live there," was the safe reply. If heaven does not abide in us it is a fair sign that we will hardly abide in heaven. The devout Puritan was right in believing that heaven must be in him before he should ever be in heaven. A certain godly man, being asked how he knew he was saved, replied, laconically, "Why Christ saved me and I was there when the transaction took place." Heaven is ushered in when Christ comes, and abides where He tarries. Patient Job's immortal declaration has place in the world, and finds response in every heart that believes and trusts, "For I know that my redeemer liveth, * * * and though after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God, whom I shall see for myself, and mine eyes shall behold, and not another." (Job. 19:25.) When man looks with his eye, even his eye of faith, till he sees God, then heaven comes and the world gives place.

Giving A Tenth.

There is a local church in the world which gives, not a tenth of its money merely, but a tenth of its membership for the furtherance of the gospel. This church has 1,995 members, from which membership there are now in the field 196 pastors and evangelists. Of this number the church itself supports 92, the remaining 104 being volunteer workers who support themselves or are supported by the people among whom they labor. In one year—last year—this church established 52 other churches, or regular preaching places. This church, which is on the foreign field, was planted by a missionary, and before it became self supporting was itself ministered to, and nurtured by, "one sent." It is now itself an active, aggressive missionary force, and is doing wonderful things in winning the world to Christ. How many missionaries did your local church send out last year? How many within the past ten years? How great a force in evangelizing the world is your church? How many preachers, teachers of the Word, evangelists has your church sent out in your day? God is no respecter of persons, and will hear the cry of your church as readily as He will that of any other.

Unanswerable Argument.

Logic is a subtle sort of thing with which the skilled may easily entrap the unskilled. Every one is not equally adept in handling words, and in manipulating phrases; and so the strong may conquer the weak in forensic exercise. But there is ever that which is deeper than human speech and more mighty than logical argument; this stronger thing is individual experience, the feeling of the heart, the life of the soul, the knowledge in one's own mind. Dr. Newman Hall relates that a clever atheist assailed his father's faith and declared he had never heard an argument for religion which he could not demolish. This clever atheist evidently forgot that there was one thing which his cleverness could not abolish, and that was the elder Hall's experience, for the latter replied, "Jesus Christ dwells here in my heart, where the devil once reigned, and helps me to conquer sin and rejoice in hope. You cannot overthrow that." The weakest man in all this world who has the love of God dwelling in his heart is in possession of an argument for God and the gospel which the most skilled logician in all the earth cannot take away. Christianity is not a matter of argument; it is a matter of experience, of love, of life.

When The Heart Speaks.

True eloquence is born, not of the head, but of the heart. And when the heart speaks men and women listen and are moved. Judah's appeal to Joseph for the release of Benjamin, and for substituting himself as a bondsman (Gen. 44:18-34), will remain for all time as a gem of literature and a masterpiece of personal and public appeal. Judah's heart was in what he said. He poured out his soul in simple, sincere utterance. That is the secret of all eloquence. We have another example in Peter's deliverance on the Day of Pentecost (Acts 2:14-36). Students of the art of public speech tell us that this utterance of Peter's is the most perfect piece of oratory recorded in history; that from a human point of view it meets every requirement of the orator's and the rhetorician's art; that every great oration since Peter's time has been modeled according to the plan Peter pursued in preaching that strangely powerful sermon; that all speakers to the end of time will have to follow its plan, for it is fundamental in build and make up, and so must be followed, or imperfection and inefficiency result. Who taught that untutored fisherman to plan an oration whose utterance won three thousand souls to his way of thinking, and to plan and present to all the world an oration without superiority in all the world's history? There can be but one answer: God was in it and the heart spoke from its foundations. One reason why much of our preaching is vain and dull and dry and uninteresting is because it is formal, put forth to fill time, and the heart is not in it. When the burdened, bleeding, breaking heart of a man or a woman speaks, then there is an utterance worth while, and the world listens.

To the truly moral and religious man, everything that comes to pass is the will of God with him, and therefore the best that can possibly come to pass.—Fichte.

How mankind defers from day to day the best it can do, and the most beautiful things it can enjoy, without thinking that every day may be the last one!—Max Miller.

EDITORIAL

REMOVING THE CANDLESTICK.

Our clue is from a ringing article by Mrs. J. P. Barrett printed elsewhere in THE SUN this week. The figure is a striking one and, as it seems to us, altogether appropos. It was written, as a challenge and a threat, to the church at Ephesus: "Remember from whence thou art fallen, and repent, or else I will come unto thee quickly, and will remove thy candlestick out of his place, except thou repent." Rev. 2:5.

The application here made is to our altogether deplorable missionary situation in foreign fields.

A brief summary of the situation is this. (We blush with shame and sorrow to have it put in type again). We have not sent out a single recruit to our mission force in a foreign field the past six years. More than this, we have not now as many missionaries in foreign lands as we had six years ago—several are at home on furlough, or have been called home for lack of funds. Furthermore still, we are tremendously in debt, several thousand dollars, for the support of the force and the work now, or in the past, maintained, and we are getting deeper in debt all the time. No missionaries being sent out, fewer missionaries year by year on the field, and an ever increasing indebtedness, that is our foreign mission situation.

Some time ago, because these facts were staring us in the face, we mildly suggested that those who were responsible, those in charge of such a situation should resign, get out of the way, and let others be put in charge and given a trial. Those in charge, as it seemed to us, had had a long enough trial and tenure, had been weighed in the balance and had simply been found incapable of grappling with the situation. This suggestion of ours was offered in all brotherliness, in the best of faith, and with no sort of malice, ill-will, or unkindness to any one.

But our mild suggestion was not acted upon, our brotherly counsel was not taken. And so matters go on as they did, only more so. The debt piles up, no new missionaries go out and the situation grows more tense and more pitiful. Is there any wonder that we are of the same opinion still?

The point now to make, the situation now to face, is this: Unless we do something, repent, reform, change, face about, do first works, then indeed and in truth will our Father be justified in removing the candlestick from out its place so far as our church is concerned.

We must do different about foreign missions, do more for foreign missions, or we as a Church cannot expect to have much longer the opportunity of doing any thing.

Brethren we sleep as to the matter of missions. We seem not to care that a great opportunity is ours and we act as if that opportunity would abide forever. It will not abide. God's Word teaches plainly, over and over again, that opportunities do not continue forever. Privileges granted a people may and do continue for a season, but unless taken and improved upon, are passed to others.

It seems to us that unless we give more to missions, pray more for missions, and become more interested in missions, God will remove our opportunity, and the little that we have will be passed on to another. Brethren and beloved, what are we going to do about our missionary situation? At present that situation is deplorable indeed, and it seems to grow more deplorable as the months pass. And no one seems to care. May God help us. We need the light, and more light. But if the candlestick is removed from its place, then will darkness come indeed. Is it not time we were using the light we have, and beginning to go forward in that light?

OUR WOMEN AND MISSIONS.

The members of the Woman's Board of Missions of the Southern Christian Convention, desiring to develop the work of missions in the churches, and create interest and enthusiasm in missions called a Mass Meeting at Elon College Monday evening, Tuesday in three sessions, and Wednesday A. M. of last week. The desire was to hear addresses on missions, take counsel about missions, and get informed as to what was being done, and as to what might be done. There were forty or more delegates from various conferences and societies and the meetings were inspirational and will result in great good. The work is new, but a beginning has been made. There will be a Convention next year, and a basis of representation in that Convention was agreed upon. This Convention will be held in conjunction with the Southern Christian Convention in its next biennial session next spring.

The Treasurer's report, presented by the Treasurer, Mrs. W. T. Walters, Winchester, Va., showed a remarkable work for the first year of its operations. There was collected $722.27 as follows:

Eastern Virginia Conference	$523.77
Georgia & Alabama Conference	10.10
N. C. & Va. Conference	67.40
Va. Valley Central Conference	44.11
Western N. C. Conference	76.89
Total	$722.27

All Conferences had reported to Mrs. Walters, and sent in the money raised through local Societies save the Alabama and the Eastern North Carolina, the latter reporting through a delegate that some money had been raised in that Conference and would be reported. This seems to us a most hopeful showing indeed—$722.27 raised by our women in one year for missions, and that, too, the first year of their effort and existence as a body.

The officers of the Board the coming year are, with little change, the same as the past year, to wit, Mrs. C. H. Rowland, Franklin, Va., President; Mrs. W. H. Carroll, Burlington, N. C., Recording Secretary, also Superintendent of Mite Boxes and Literature; Mrs. W. A. Harper, Elon College, N. C., Corresponding Secretary; Mrs. W. T. Walters, Winchester, Va., Treasurer; Miss Bettie Stephenson, Boone, N. C., Superintendent Young People's Department; Mrs. L. F. Johnson, Raleigh, N. C., Vice-President and Superintendent of Cradle Roll.

The Board voted to spend one half its collections for Foreign Missions, one half for Home Missions, after deducting necessary current expenses.

The effort is to be made the coming year to largely increase the number and usefulness of the local societies and to make a showing, if possible, of $1,000.00 collected. This can be done if the good women in the various churches will fall in line, organize a Woman's Missionary Society, write to Mrs. W. A. Harper, Elon College, N. C., for literature and information, and begin the work with the devoted ones who are leading in this work.

Giving While We Live.

If we are going to give anything to benevolences why not give it while we live? At our death our Creator simply takes us away from all that we have and turns it over to others, to our relatives, friends, or what not, according to the law of the land, the decree of the courts, and the will of the testator—provided the latter fits in with the decision of the former. While we live, we can give, we can direct, we can take counsel. But "there is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom, in the grave, whither thou goest." (Ecc. 9:10). A great giver in a certain church, as now reported in the papers, promised to give $10,000 to a certain church work. The man no doubt meant what he said, and his intentions were good. But a few days afterwards he died suddenly, and though worth a million dollars neither church nor charity will get a penny, there being no mention of either in his will—and the law does not provide for gifts to benevolences when the giver has gone to his grave. This man's name will soon be forgotten, and the cause for which he built his great fortune will disappear from the memory of men forever. A very wise man said, "Remember that what you possess in the world will be found at the day of your death to belong to someone else, but what you are will be yours forever."

NOTES AND PERSONALS.

—Rev. J. M. Roberts, Windsor, Va., reported in these columns as quite unwell some weeks since is spending some time now at certain springs endeavoring to recuperate.

—Mrs. J. K. Ruebush, formerly Miss Nan Rhodes, Dayton, Va., was elected Corresponding Secretary of the Virginia State Christian Endeavor Union at the annual meeting recently in Staunton, Va.

—Rev. S. B. Klapp, Greensboro, May 29: "We had a good day at Smithwood last Sunday. The work goes well there. Enclosed find one new subscriber for THE SUN. I hope to send others shortly."

—Main St. Christian church Sunday school, Berkley, Va., ran a moon light excursion Wednesday evening, May 28th, clearing more than $100.00 for their church, besides having a very delightful evening socially and otherwise.

—Rev. Stanley C. Harrell preached at the Suffolk Christian church at the morning and evening services Sunday, May 25, the pastor, Dr. W. W. Staley, being at Dover, Delaware, attending the annual session of the Delmarvia Christian Conference.

—Rev. M. L. Bryant who has been in Asheville for his health for some months is to go on a visit, the last of this week, to his wife's people in Berkley, Va., for awhile. We are gratified that Bro. Bryant's health has so much improved that he feels justified in taking the trip.

—The men of his church presented Pastor H. E. Rountree, Greensboro, with a bicycle the other day—a gentle hint to Bro. Rountree that his folks love him and want him to come to see them. Count on Greensboro First church to do the great and gracious thing at the right time.

—Revs. D. A. Keys, South Norfolk, Va., W. T. Walters, Winchester, Va., A. W. Andes, Harrisonburg, Va., and C. E. Newman, Henderson, N. C., were among the ministers who came to the Young People's Convention at Burlington and remained for the Elon College commencement.

—The National Anti-Saloon League has declared that the objective henceforth shall be "nation wide prohibition." United Christian Endeavor has elected Mr. Daniel A. Poling as National Superintendent of Temperance and he will make it his chief business to work for a saloon-less nation.

—The baccalaureate sermon last Sunday at Elon College by Rev. W. H. Denison, D. D., was one of the very best, most appropriate, and most soul stirring ever delivered here on a similar occasion. Dr. Denison spoke from his heart, and reached the heart of his great and appreciative audience.

—Readers of THE SUN everywhere will deeply regret to learn that the beloved wife of Rev. J. W. Holt, who has been ill for some time, was stricken with paralysis a few days ago and is reported in a critical condition. Brother Holt has our deepest sympathy in his solicitude for the afflicted one.

—A full write up of the Woman's Board Meeting at Elon College last week will be given in next week's SUN. Mrs. Rowland was exhausted when the Convention adjourned, and Mrs. Carroll was under constraint to attend the commencement of her daughter's graduation. The full proceedings will appear next week.

—Elon College, through its Board of Trustees at the recent meeting, conferred the degree of Doctor of Divinity upon Revs. A. B. Kendall, Burlington, N. C., C. H. Rowland, Franklin, Va., J. W. Harrell, Portsmouth, Va., I. W. Johnson, Suffolk, Va., and J. W. Weltons, Elon College, N. C., to all of whom we extend congratulations. They will wear well the honors thus conferred.

—Our obituary columns carry an announcement of the death of Brother Peter A. Long of Long's Chapel. Brother Long resided for some years at Elon College and is well known to many SUN readers. He was a man of deep personal piety and godly consecration. The members of the bereaved household have our sympathy. The interment was in New Providence cemetery, Graham.

—Paul was a scholar, a logician, a philosopher, but he did not add to the world's grandness, glory, or greatness, until he had a vision of God. There is nothing in this world that lifts a man up and helps to make him useful like catching a vision of God. It changes a man both in name and character and through it many an ordinary Saul has bounded into an eloquent and honorable Paul.

—It was a pleasure to have a visit last Saturday from the fluent and well versed writer of Norfolk Letter, Bro. Henry Spencer Booth, Third Church, Norfolk, who came from the Young People's Convention at Burlington and looked Elon over, shaking hands with his many acquaintances here. Bro. Booth delivered a splendid address before the Burlington Convention. His visit to the College was appreciated and he expressed himself as delighted with what he found here.

—SUN readers will learn with sorrow and deepest sympathy of the bereavement which came May 25 to the home of Brother Thomas F. and Sister Bessie Staley Cheatham when they lost by death their younger child, Florence Harvey Cheatham. The interment was on Tuesday at Roxboro, N. C., where the parents reside. Through her letters to THE SUN Florence Harvey Cheatham, though a child of tender years, had become known to a wide circle, and all will deplore her untimely death. Our hearts go out for our dear friends, the bereaved parents.

—It will be gratifying alike to the friends of Elon College and to the friends of the members of the present senior class, to know that the class decided to make a gift of $1,200.00 to the trustees of the college to be used as they may see fit in developing the institution. This is loyalty, and if each member pays the amount pledged there will never be occasion to regret the good step on any account. There is that in loyalty which adds to the volume, value, and validity of life; and though loyalty to any enterprise costs, it is well worth the price—always.

—We do not know how nearly true the following is, but many CHRISTIAN SUN readers in the county named will see it with pride, and read it with profit as we pass it on from our esteemed neighbor, the Greensboro Daily News: "Isle of Wight county in Virginia is entitled to the blue ribbon for law and order. The county has a population of 15,000 and is located in what is termed a 'wet' state, but we are told that no grand jury has been necessary this year to consider criminal business; that the county jail has been empty for months and is for rent, and that the only thing that keeps the court alive is livel business."

—The Women's Missionary Meeting at Elon College last week brought together a large number of women devoted to the mission cause and shows to any who may have had doubts that our women are interested in missions, and will do a great work for mission if given a chance. Our Woman's Mission Board of the Southern Convention, only in existence as a working, organized body a little more than a year, has wrought well indeed, having founded many local societies and raised over $700. This is an earnest of what may be expected of our women when they are thoroughly organized and have local societies in all the churches, as they should have.

—Rev. A. M. Hanson, 518 W. Boone St., Marshalltown, Iowa, writes the following letter, which will be of interest to his many friends: "Thank you for your kind letter of sometime ago. Only reason for not answering before has been the need of saving my strength. When my year's work ended at Princeton, I was about exhausted. Am slowly regaining energy. Have a big garden, a fine lawn, berry bushes, etc., to keep me busy. How happy I am to be free for a little while! Have been having much rain here, but that makes one appreciate the sunshine all the more. Every day of sunshine is a genuine tonic. In spite of my physical condition, the year's study at Princeton was a most happy one. And why not! I obtained what I needed, and it also marked the end of seventeen years of severe and often bitter labors to fully prepare for my life's work. We like the new garments of THE CHRISTIAN SUN. The tone of the paper has been advanced. It will now be much better able to represent the real spirit of advance which is so present with the brethren we met in the South. God bless 'THE SUN' and the cause it so well represents. If I felt it would be wise to use more of my strength now, would be glad to write to 'THE SUN' frequently. But am writing only as circumstances require. A little later I may write more."

A FEW REMARKS.

—Mr. Arthur Page, son of Walter H. Page recently appointed Ambassador to England, is to succeed his distinguished father as editor of The World's Work.

—Some one has said that ours is not so much the land of the dollar as it is the land of divorce. It is both, for the more the dollars the more frequent the divorce.

—A cyclonic storm struck Norfolk, Portsmouth and South Norfolk last Friday evening, wrecking a score or more homes in the latter place and doing much damage to limb and property. There were no lives lost so far as reported.

—"About this time of year," apologies to the almanac, look out for "drowned in mill pond." "He got beyond his depth and drowned before any one could reach him." The newspapers will save time by letting those lines stand for a season now.

—Men and women of great intelligence, great prestige, great influence, great wealth, are giving their thought to missions as they never have before. As the years go the volume and the momentum of missions increase at a tremendous rate. For which we thank God and take courage.

—President Wilson has said that there is at Washington a "numerous and insidious lobby" at work threatening and trying to alter or defeat the Underwood tariff bill. A Senate Committee has been appointed to investigate as to this lobby and report its findings at an early date. We live in a day of charges, counter charges and investigations.

—A wind and rain storm struck a holiness tent in Greensboro last Sunday evening just after a congregation of 1,200 had assembled, completely demolishing the tent, and greatly frightening the people, but with no serious injury to any one. A large tent under which Buffalo Bill was showing at Henderson was demolished by a similar flurry the other day, killing one man and injuring others and the showman is being sued in the courts for $10,000. Tents will have to be erected in a more steadfast and permanent manner, or people will fear to frequent them.

—"Mr. Tillman is quoted as saying that the speech to be delivered in the Senate this week in behalf of the anti-smoking resolution will probably be his last, 'for,' adds the Senator, 'if smoking is not prohibited in the chamber I shall die.'

"Has it not occurred to the gentleman from South Carolina that he has an alternative. He can resign."—Virginian Pilot.

But would our contemporary have as valuable a man as Senator Tillman resign rather than that his colleagues should quit smoking in the Senate Chamber—where they have no business to smoke anyway? Gentlemen have no right to smoke where the habit is offensive, much less where lung and life are endangered.

—Colonel Theodore Roosevelt sued Editor Geo. A. Newett, of a Michigan paper, who accused the ex-President of being a drunkard. The trial was last week and a six cents damage was awarded the plaintiff, after the defendant had retracted and expressed his regrets at the publication. Meanwhile people generally go on believing in the matter as they choose. The Colonel denied getting drunk, but admitted he drank some. When once the rumor has gone forth that a man drinks it is difficult to stamp it out, though the accused be acquitted at a bar of justice.

NOTICE! NOTICE!

The Young People's Convention of the Western North Carolina Christian Conference will hold its annual meeting with the Randleman Christian church July 25-27, 1913.

The Sunday school at this church has extended to the convention a cordial invitation to meet there, which invitation the executive committee has gladly accepted; and we feel sure that with Randleman as our meeting place we can have one of the best conventions ever held in the Western Conference. That the convention may be a success I want to ask that every pastor and also every Sunday school superintendent begin now to make plans and have every school within the bounds of the conference represented. A large delegation is one of the very necessary things that go to make a convention a success. Brethren, please see that your school is represented in the Randleman Convention.

Yours in the work,

J. F. MORGAN, President.

THE CULTURE OF THE SPIRIT.

(By Rev. W. G. Sargent, Providence, R. I., Secretary of Education for the American Christian Convention. A sermon delivered at Elon College Sunday, May 11, 1913.)

Text: "Exercise thyself unto godliness." I Tim. 4:7.

The primacy of the spiritual.

"There is," says Carlyle, "an infinite in man, which, with all his cunning, he cannot quite hide under the finite." It is not a natural acquisition like language, it is not taught us by another, does not come to us at some crisis, but is innate, ours from the beginning. It is a germ within us, which, under proper care and nourishment, will develop into a beautiful personality. We may call it conscience, we may call it the inner light, we may call it the divine spark, or what we will. It does not matter so much, so that we recognize its presence and its possibility, and take means to achieve its development. More clearly than elsewhere in the New Testament, that peculiar blending of Greek philosophy and Christian revelation, to be found in the prologue to the fourth gospel, recognizes this primal element of life and assigns to it a significance that is unmistakable—"There was the true light even the light that lighteth every man coming into the world."

It is upon this in the first instance that the validity of religion rests. It is a call from deep unto deep. Whence hath the soul the idea of God if there is no God? "A being," says Channing, "who can think the thought of God, be he ever so fallen, is by that single power exalted to a good beyond all natural good." "If the eye were not so sunny, how could it look upon the sun," says Goethe. If the soul were not so God-like how could it think God? And Tennyson expresses the same thought in other words,

"Speak to him thou, for he hears, and spirit with spirit can speak, Closer is he than breathing, and nearer than hands and feet."

It must be evident that the idea of God is given to the soul for a purpose. It stamps upon us the possibility of an eternal destiny. It reveals to us the true end of the soul which is a growing likeness to God. It is the voice of God speaking in unmistakable terms to the soul of illimitable reaches of enlargement ever approaching nearer the ideal, God himself. "Ye therefore shall be perfect as your heavenly Father is perfect."

This spiritual nature is central. It is at the very heart of being. It touches life at every point. No element is unaffected by it. Even our physical natures must recognize its presence and its power. "Know ye not that your bodies are a temple of God and that the Spirit of God abideth in you?"

The lack of culture.

The elementary nature of this spiritual life with which we are all endowed would seem to make it wise to turn our first thought to its cultivation, and to recognize the culture of the spirit as the first and all important element of our education. How far this is from being true, however, is manifest from the very few treatises that are written on the subject, and the rarity of its discussion on the public platform, or among groups of those banded together for mutual improvement. Quite recently I was admitted into the stack room of one of our largest and most splendidly equipped city libraries. I had the help of an assistant, a young man of unusual mental endowment and religious spirit. We searched the book-shelves of the religious department through, and found no volume that seemed to me worth while to bring home. Doubtless it was touched upon in many volumes, but what impressed me was that out of those hundreds of volumes of a religious character, representing a multitude of writers, no one of them had been drawn to this fundamental need of life, sufficiently to write a treatise bearing directly upon it.

Our colleges, even our professedly religious schools, provide courses in science, philosophy, languages, art, music, elocution, engineering, farming, physical culture, domestic science, and no doubt, with present tendencies will soon provide courses in millinery and dress-making (strange, by the way that none of them have yet bethought themselves how attractive such courses would be), but with it all there is no course for the culture of the spirit, no direct and scientific attempt to develop that element of life of first importance. We cannot evade the question by saying the spirit is too elusive for culture. It is no more so than the mind, and yet we are concentrating our utmost endeavor to ascertain the laws of mental life that we may be enabled to contribute, by careful cultivation, to the enlargement of the mental life of the race. Should our endeavor be less true of the spiritual life of the individual? In a paper read before the Theological Society of the New Church College, Edinburgh, just forty years ago, that prince among Scottish thinkers and Christians, Prof. Henry Drummond, whose work was the greatest contribution, of the close of the last century, in the realm of religion and science, and who saw so far beyond his time, said: "Of the three elements, body, mind and soul, which make up a responsible human being, two only have been hitherto treated as subjects fit for scientific enquiry. From six thousand years of contemplation of the phenomena of human life and thought, only two sciences have emerged. Physiology is telling all that is possible of the human body; psychology of the mind. But the half is not accounted for. We wish further a spiritual psychology to tell us of the unseen realities of the soul. This is where our university training must be supplemented. It deals with man as a body and a mind. It forgets that man is a trinity. It is an extraordinary and momentous fact that by far the most important factor in human life, has been up to this time, all but altogether ignored by the thinking world."

The thirst for spiritual attainment.

There is within every normal Christian breast a sense of dissatisfaction with our attainments. We are each of us an incomplete creation. Man is "No finished and finite clod, Untroubled by a spark."

It is this sense of incompleteness and the consciousness of possible growth that haunts us all. There is a yearning, more or less clearly recognized within us, to express the powers of which we are conscious. But to do so requires a culture as surely as is true of the body and mind. Compacted of the germs of all excellence as we are, we must seek those ways of development and modes of expression that will bring to its fullest fruition the life, the spiritual life and powers, which have been entrusted to us. It must be frankly confessed that our modes of theological thought, some of which have become to us as traditional, as was true when Christ came to the earth, have oftentimes tended to quench this inner impulse, by insisting that every individual pass through certain experiences with which it is said such a development must co-incide, and so running the very grave danger of cutting off long reaches of life, during which the process might and should be going on. But we are readjusting ourselves, here as elsewhere, to Christ's own ideal, and the gain is great in the emancipation of the individual in an individual way. For this hungering and thirsting after righteousness is at once an incentive and prophecy of attainment.

The place of faith.

Let us know that every great inward advancement rests in the first instance upon faith. However we may think of it, it falls back upon God and the fact that He trusts us and seeks to unfold to us His plans and purposes as we are able to understand. It is the consciousness of our unity with Him, and of His love and strength, that impels us toward attainment, and helps us seek those means that will make real the dream of the life beautiful, that somewhere presents itself to us as a possibility. For faith is our sixth sense, helping us to realize the things that are lovely and of good report, and above all making real to us "the vision of Him who reigns."

It is the culture of this sense of nearness and love of God, which results in the spiritual excellence of life, with which we are at this time concerned. With a scientific view we may not hope to deal. Our time is limited. That must be worked out in the laboratories of our individual experiences, as we discover the laws by which progress is made. But we do hope to indicate a few principles, which, if faithfully worked out, we believe will help attain the end desired. In so doing we beg to say they are not new. In dealing with principle we discover there is nothing new under the sun, for principles do not change. They are the constant elements in life, finding their home in God. The method of working a principle out may, nay, will vary with differing conditions, but the principle abides.

Grasping the idea of spiritual culture.

It is essential at the outset that the idea of spiritual development, by means of culture, take possession of us. Ideas have ever made men and are behind all progress. All moral achievements have been the result of a great conception moving surely toward a desired goal. It is only when an idea seizes upon one in this way that one rises through difficulty to victory. You who are privileged to sit within these halls and listen, day by day, to your instructors are here for a purpose. A great idea dominates you. You believe in the possibility of mental culture, and the best students will apprehend the possibility of growth not as a means of making a living, but of making a life. How the idea grips you! You toil day by day over your problems, distasteful many of them; perhaps you work far into the night, if any be so unwise. You turn your problem in mathematics or philosophy over and over and over in your mind, as it follows you through the day and haunts you in the still watches of the night; and yet you court it. Why? Because you are sure that once conquered you will be stronger and better equipped for the next problem that will be presented you. You believe progress is to be attained that way. What a thought the conquering might of the developed and ever developing power of the intellect! How it impels men in the long toilsome marches of daily life to bend every energy in the way of mental growth. Will it be less of the spiritual life? But let this idea possess one. Let him become conscious of "the vision and the dream." Let there come to him, in the waking moments of his life, a revelation of the power within him that only waits development, and he will turn his thought and endeavor in that direction with a directness of purpose that will soon make real to him achievement. Nor should we forget that spiritual attainment cannot be ours other than by conquest. "There is evidently no intention," says President King, in his lectures on The Seeming Unreality of the Spiritual Life, "in the constitution of the world or of man to bring men to any degree of high attainment except by strenuous endeavor on their part." Setting the will toward attainment.

Psychology is fond of insisting, today, on the central importance of the will. It assigns to the will the largest possible place. If, then, spiritual culture is to be according to the laws we know it must recognize the supremacy of the will. Reduced to its simplest terms it means that spiritual culture of the highest type is only possible to one who, considering the forces, the hopes, the loves of his life, definitely, and with an insistence that knows no denying turns his attention to this fundamental need of life. With a wholesome view of life that puts first things first, he sets his will to the discovery and development of the spiritual powers and possibilities within him. The prayer of the Greek sailor to the Greek god Neptune was: "Thou canst save me if thou wilt; thou canst drown me if thou wilt; but howsoever that be I will hold my rudder true."

I cannot but think that our unexpressed conceptions, have been and too often our precept has taught, that spiritual development is something of a magical process, unlike anything else in the world. It is something unto which we attain by a few simple exercises, calling for no great effort on our part. It is a kind of spell cast about us by unseen fingers, and happy are they who are so fortunate as to experience it. We insist on definite positive work in the way of mental development. We know the same holds true of the physical world. But when it comes to the spiritual, we identify growth with an ecstasy which is, in some miraculous way, superinduced by God without special effort on our part. Too often, alas, the Christian appeal has been not to the will but away from it. Certainly it has not been directed in as large degrees as should be to the sustaining and fortifying function of the will in the way of spiritual development.

Now it is true that the spiritual world is distinguished by laws peculiar to itself, just as the animate has laws peculiar to itself, distinguished from the inanimate world. But one of the truths that modern science has taught us is the continuity of law to the limit of similar constitutions of the two kingdoms with which it has to do. And the contribution is a very great one in ascertaining the laws of the spiritual world. The will, unquestionably, as a factor in both mental and spiritual life, and is as vital to the one as the other. Let us not think the way of development of the spiritual life has anything magical about it. It conforms to law, and the first law, after the clear recognition of the possibility and vital nature of spiritual culture, is that one should steadfastly set himself to the task.

And one thing more, just here, and that is that "this definite task should be assumed just as soon in life as the will sets itself out toward any cultural accomplishment. We may not forget that he who puts the call aside for some more convenient season, and turns the attention to things of lesser value for the present, must pay the price in spiritual loss that is sad beyond telling. It is at least illustrative of the importance of the truth just cited that Horace Bushnell could say in one of his illuminating addresses on child life: "I have no scales to measure quantities of effect in this matter of early training, but I may be allowed to express my solemn conviction, that more, as a general fact, is done, or lost by neglect of doing, on a child's immortality, in the first three years of his life, than in all his years of discipline afterwards," meaning by this, as I understand it, that one half of the habits that will follow him through life are most apt to be formed during this period. The citation is made to impress the value of early turning to the first things of life. The setting of the will toward spiritual culture must early become a habit, ever intensifying if we are to be advantaged by it.

I need not tell you that the deepest truths of moral philosophy come to you, for the most part, only after long thought and contemplation. Once and a while a truth may flash in upon you with a clearness that is startling. In that case I think you will usually discover it is not its newness that is singular, but in reality a conception which has been held in suspension in your mind for some time, but now expresses itself in a way that clarifies the whole situation for you. It has passed out of the bud which you have been gazing upon and about which you have been thinking, and whose form you have been shaping, into the full flower.

One of the truths which psychology emphasizes strongly is the creative process of the mind. It declares that the acquisition of knowledge is never a merely passive process, as is most generally thought. It involves the creative activity of the mind. The mind has always, at every stage of the process, something to give. It may be from the realm of the conscious or the subconscious. But its contribution is certain. The importance of this law in the Culture of the Spirit must be at once manifest, for it demands in both prayer and revelation a human interpretative element. That is, we cannot take the facts of communion with God and revelation by God and consider them as God's activities directed toward us, and requiring no action on our part. It is open to serious question if we are not oftentimes accustomed to think of them. But if we are to "see God," if we are to "know him," if we are in any measure to comprehend his thought, then, by conscious activity, we must go out to meet him. Pure abstraction about God means little or nothing to us.

It is the recognition of this truth that throws into the foreground the importance of spiritual intercourse with God. We are unduly proud of the fact that ours is a practical age. It is a claim of which we make over much. That is most practical which ministers most certainly to the highest life, and of the aids to spiritual development, few are of more value than meditation on the spiritual realities of life. To take some time each day to think of God and Christ and heaven; to take some time each day to listen to the inner voice which will most surely guide us to spiritual values, to take some time each day to rest beside the quiet streams of life that flow through the Bible; to take some time each day to have communion with God through Christ—these are certainly needful to spiritual culture and will most assuredly lead to the development of the inner life. The Master put it this way: "No man can serve two masters." What he really means is that the current of our lives cannot flow two ways at once; for the general direction of every individual's life is turned toward the good or the evil. There is "a universe of desire," to use an expressive term coined by one of our greatest moral philosophers, in every life. What we need in both the conscious and subconscious life is to get that "univers of desire" moving in the right direction. We can only do that as we form the habit of constantly associating with the best. But particularly must this be true of long and unwearied meditation on the things of the Spirit, revealed in ourselves, the Bible and Christ. This movement in the right direction, this trend of life, this "universe of desire," in time of temptation helps one achieve victory over his baser nature. Oh no, we cannot neglect these times of meditation and hope to grow spiritually in any very great degree, for the supreme authority of human life is the voice of God in the soul. "It is expedient for you that I go away, for if I go not away the Comforter will not come unto you," Happy is he who becomes acquainted with that voice.

The culture of service.

But the contemplative life is not the highest kind of a Christian life. However much Thomas A. Kempis had for his own time he is not at a premium today. Our age is an age of action, and once again psychology insists upon this as essential to undertaking. The thing we know to do is the thing we must do, if we are to have an actual, and not a theoretical, knowledge. "Whosoever willeth to do his will, he shall know of the teaching, whether it is of God or whether I speak of myself." The life must be well adjusted. It must possess equipoise. Leaning too strongly on contemplation makes one a mystic. Paying too great heed to the so-called practical elements of life leaves a man without vision and incentive. When the soul dreams of service it must be free to serve, for in service we attain the true end, and the soul achieves its freedom. The young man who came to Christ and who turned away from the path of service, to which Christ invited him, is an illuminating example of the slavery of selfishness. With Christ were the ways of service and freedom: the old path was the way of the self-like, and he had not strength to turn from it, for the univers of his desire ran in the other direction. Who has not experienced the lasting joy of service has yet to learn one of the secrets of soul culture.

Devotion to Christ.

But there is one principle in the way of soul culture that is more important than all. The greatest known power for good is the influence of one personality of superior worth upon another. Christianity, when reduced to its simplest terms, is the impact of Christ's life upon that of his disciples. Therefore, it is of first importance that we should come to know him that our fellowship should be constant. When Christ sent his disciples out to their unthinkable task in world evangelization, he said, "I will go with you," and the consciousness of his presence made every man of them ready for martyrdom. In the great conflict of life, when in moral action the man stands at bay, it is the realization that this friend stands with him that nerves his arm and brings him off more than conqueror. Therefore must we cultivate communion with him until he is more real to us than aught besides, for it is in fellowship with him that we will come to know God and ourselves.

The lure of the ideal

And so the ideal lures us. "He who possesses the courage to will it attains it; and of those who have come measurably near the goal, not one has yet found the cost too high or the toil too hard." For this know that only he who is willing to pay the price may hope to attain. You young men and women know what the cost is you are paying for

NORFOLK LETTER.

Of all the many beautiful and touching incidents recorded in Holy Writ, I think that I know of none which surpasses that wherein Mary breaks the alabaster box, and with the precious oil contained therein anoints the head of her Lord and Master. It was a most subtle and delicate evidence of her affection speaking, as mere words could not have done, of the hidden devotion of her heart.

Another of less worth than the Lord, and with less of His own pure and unsullied love, might have misinterpreted the act of Mary and would have failed to perceive the sublimity and the tenderness of the passion which it revealed.

Only when we love can we truly value the loving acts and gracious trustfulness of those by whom we are loved, and only then, too, will it be possible to interpret as worthily as they deserve these marks of thoughtfulness and esteem bestowed upon us.

Those who are themselves cleanest and most truly worthy in character are always the quickest to perceive these same traits in the lives and acts of others. Mary's sacrifice in the eyes of the multitude would have appeared to be prompted by trivial sentimentality and worthy merely of ridicule; only Jesus saw the beautiful love which it revealed.

Not to appreciate the love, trust and beautiful confidence of our friends would seem to be the greatest sin of which we can be guilty.

May the dear Master help us all to be daily more worthy and deserving of the many rich tokens of love and appreciation, which come from the dear ones about us. And may he also help us to prize these same traits beyond all earthly blessings. There is nothing more true than that:—

"One thing shines clear in the heart's sweet reason,
One lightening over the chasm runs,
That to turn from love is the world's one treason,
That treads down all the suns."

ELON COLLEGE NOTES.

Sunday was a busy day and also a glorious one here, for into it were crowded the Baccalaureate Sermon at 11:30 A. M. by Dr. Warren Hathaway Denison, pastor of the Christian Temple, Norfolk, Va., and the Baccalaureate Address at 8:00 P. M., by President W. A. Harper of the College.

Both speakers directed their remarks directly to the graduating class and to students, but since youthful problems are always inviting, the audience entered also fully into the spirit of each occasion. Dr. Denison took as his theme, "Life's Great Rule," based on I Cor. 10:31, and his admirable discourse will appear in THE SUN next week.

The theme of President Harper's Baccalaureate Address in the evening was "The Ingredients of True Living," in which he also discussed the purpose of life, but from a standpoint differing from that chosen by Dr. Denison. President Harper declared that "What life's purpose is has always been an engaging theme and how best to spend it has been equally engaging because involved inextricably in its purpose. Philosophers have discussed it and are still discussing it. It is the old, yet new question. Epicurus said it was pleasure. The Stoics thought it consisted in self-control, through strict and devoted adherence to this principle attaining to independence of external circumstances as well as victory over internal conflicts. Plato conceived it to be subordination of lower to higher impulses. Aristotle advances the doctrine of the sense of proportion, or the symmetrical development of the man, a sort of Darwinian evolution on morals. The Christian can accept no one of these, for whom the purpose of life, its end and aim, is involved in love of God and from this central force flows every principle of life and conduct."

President Harper thought that this was a truth that College men needed to keep before them and pronounced an anathema upon any system of education which did not have this principle thoroughly embodied in its curriculum, "for this Christian basis of life is the only sure foundation of a successful career and the system of education, whether public or private, which strikes at it or which pleads its inability to supply it or which even neglects or ignores it, is fatally defective at heart and lacking in the real constructive principle of true education."

In the course of his remarks the President also took occasion to reiterate his well known opinion that one of the great defects in modern education is narrowness, which takes the two forms of specialization and practicality and declared that "the specialist's education should make his narrowness as little noticeable as possible. It should therefore be liberal and then special, broad and then narrow."

In deploring the modern mania for the practical in education, President Harper declared that the slogans of the new educational propaganda are: Vocational training; special and technical schools; farm-life schools; normal schools; domestic science; business colleges; manual training; less to do with Latin and Greek roots and more to do with potato and cabbage roots; we shall get more good from our schools when the sound of the hammer and the buzz of the saw shall have supplanted the rhythm of poetry, which has no practical use" and described those who stand for their promulgation as "true soldiers of the bread-and-butter-and-pie-brigade, but unfit guides in the great work of preparing the young for life; for life is more than making a living. They forget that the most practical education is that which puts the emphasis on preparation to live a life rather than on making a living, that centers around man rather than around practical."

At this writing many friends and Alumni are on the Hill enjoying a feast of fat things. It is good to meet them and share with them the pleasures of a commencement season. A full account of the Commencement will appear in THE SUN next week. C. B. R.

PARK'S CROSS ROADS.

Park's Cross Roads, Western North Carolina Conference, is a church located in one of the most prosperous agricultural sections of Randolph county, N. C. It was my privilege to be with the pastor, Rev. L. I. Cox, and this good congregation at their memorial services the third Sunday in May. The church building is one of the best in that part of the country and was built to take the place of a less commodious and pretentious house of worship, only a few years ago. The cemetery is one of the best cared for I have seen in any country community. After the clouds of the early morning passed away on this memorial Sunday, the day was bright, beautiful and delightful. The congregation was entirely too large to be accommodated in the church although the ushers filled every available space with extra chairs. Besides being memorial day, it was the time and place of the annual singing convention of all the choirs in the township in which this church is situated. The music was therefore exceedingly inspiring, all the choirs of the township being merged into one great choir and their leadership being augmented by the voices of the vast congregation. The morning program consisted of music, devotional services, an address of welcome by deacon R. W. York, who in his address gave some interesting facts concerning the history of the church; a memorial address on the "Ministry of Sorrow"; and decoration of the graves with a profusion and great variety of flowers. After dinner, which was served in rich abundance on the grounds together with happy comingling friends and delightful social intercourse in which the visitor and stranger felt a welcome not frequently equalled, the afternoon program was most successfully carried out. The pastor, who had enriched the morning session by his excellent manner of presiding, was again in his place and interspersed the songs of the various choirs with happy and helpful little speeches. All in all it was a great day, one in which God was honored. W. P. LAWRENCE.

LITTLETON COLLEGE COMMENCEMENT.

The closing exercises of Littleton College began this year on Sunday, May 25th, with a sermon by Rev. R. F. Bumpas before the Young Women's Christian Association at the Methodist Church to a very large audience from the text "And they shall hunger no more." The sermon was very fine and bore unmistakable marks of the scholar. Mr. Bumpas has been a life-long student, has traveled abroad and is an unusually well informed man. It was, therefore, no surprise to his audience that his sermon made a very fine impression.

The most unique and picturesque feature of the commencement was the Class Day Exercises on Monday afternoon. The novel costumes and marching of the students on the campus attracted much attention.

The Annual Sermon on Monday evening by Rev. Dr. Smoot of Norfolk, received many favorable comments. Dr. Smoot is a very attractive speaker and easily holds the attention of his audience.

The Annual Sermon on Monday evening by Rev. Dr. Smoot, of Norfolk, received many favorable comments. Dr. Smoot is a very attractive speaker and easily holds the attention of his audience.

There were present at the Commencement quite a number of visitors and among them was Rev. D. H. Tuttle, who a few weeks ago spent some time at Littleton College in the Bible Conference. When he unexpectedly entered the auditorium Monday evening, the pupils surprised him and the audience by giving him a great ovation. This was all the more refreshing because it was sprung so suddenly and unexpectedly by the student body and carried with it such spontaneous and unbounded enthusiasm. We do not believe the thought of receiving such an ovation had ever occurred to Mr. Tuttle.

The graduation exercises took place Tuesday morning, followed by the Baccalaureate Address delivered by President Few of Trinity College, who surprised his audience with a free and off hand address delivered with much ease and grace without the aid of manuscript or notes. The address contained much very fine thought upon the development and growth of woman based on Christian character and was greatly appreciated by the young ladies of the college.

DWINDLING THROUGH PROMINENCE.

There was perhaps never a time when there were so many people in the public eye as there are today. So many have risen from obscurity to notice that our minds are largely occupied with them, and their achievements are getting to be the ambition of the many. This situation has its ennobling and encouraging aspect. No one can help rejoicing over the barriers surmounted and the difficulties overcome by those who have patiently and persistently employed their gifts and their opportunities. There is so much of hindrance and opposition to crush and discourage men's efforts that we need a vast wealth of testimony to the truth that man is meant for victory. But there is the other side, and in that aspect we see that the achievements of others fill some with restlessness, jealousy, discontent, and a sense of injustice. And worst of all it begets in many the feeling that without prominence nothing can be accomplished—and they make prominence and aim an end itself. Who can estimate how much vital strength is destroyed through this fevered longing for notice and name? Many who have had all the elements of happiness at hand have seen them lost and wasted through believing that it was not through their work but through the fame of their work that satisfaction was to be obtained.

It is well life should be filled with motive and spur, but it is well to know that the love of being noticed gradually burns up and destroys all chance of real influence. At a conference, a young woman came to the leader and confided to him the story of how all through her college days she had sought by all possible means to be in the forefront of everything. It had been like the breath of life to her to lead. And then in the midst of her success she realized that she had been steadily losing influence, and that in the year past this loss had been very marked. At length it came over her that the very love of prominence was robbing her of her influence. Life had gone wrong. Prominence might indeed be achieved, but even while one held it it might become a hollow and almost ghastly thing. It may be accorded to us, and yet the reality be all gone out of it. "The worst thing about money," says some one, "is that it costs too much;" and so we may say of the love of prominence that one of the worst things about it is that it destroys the very qualities which we meant to use as soon as we achieved prominence.

It would be folly to try to reach this defect through a general attack upon all ambition whatsoever. It is a good and wholesome motive which makes one wish to take his place in the world, to have a large part in it perhaps, and to be of the number of those who make a difference. Every human being ought to make a difference. The natural desire to be liked is a wholesome one, though it may become a poison. The ambitious life ought not to be crushed and broken; but by good training it ought to have its tendrils patiently unwound from the wrong trellis and made to grow on the right one. If we make prominence the test of success, the touchstone of influence, if we think what we need most is to be better known and that we can work our best results only by being at the fore,—then our life is being subtly undermined. The world seems rough and lacking in the finer judgments, but even while it applauds the forward it keeps its inward respect for those who live by principle.

Perhaps no temptation was applied to Christ more constantly than the temptation to be prominent. The devil, the disciples, the enemies, all beset him to tempt him to forsake the quiet inward way of influence for the loud, bold, and aggressive one. Day by day it would come back to him to feel that the world can be reached only by striking and sensational means.

The wisdom of this world would say to a man, "If you expect to have any influence, you must be in the public eye every moment. You must always be doing something novel or you will be forgotten. Influence is a very subtle thing, and the world decides how it must be exerted." It is said that before Christ there were sixty-five others who came offering themselves as Messiah. Through publicity, through popularity, through falling in with natural expectation, all expected to fill that place. When the real Christ came his path to glory was thorough obscurity and the Cross.

The misery which comes to those who are ambitious of notice is a force which often destroys many of the finest gifts whose quiet exercise first brought them into notice. After they have achieved prominence one often misses some fine element which used to be so marked in their influence. Their names may be indeed more often on people's lips, but what they stand for is not so clear as of old. A fine product which used to be made by hand and turned out in small quantities has often been noticeably lowered in quality after it has been manufactured on a larger scale. It is all a mistake to suppose that because one is doing good in a small office and opportunity he will do just twenty times as much good in a position twenty times as large. In the more obscure position one had time for those quiet talks with individuals, for painstaking attention to separate cases, for hours spent on doing one thing well without the world looking over his shoulder. He was freer to put his whole life into what he did. There was a loving attitude about his work which was not quite so possible afterward. And so when we looked for prominence to increase one's effectiveness, it has really caused it to dwindle. There was more freedom, more width of movement possible in the seeming obscurity than in the larger field.

The love of prominence works a secret untruthfulness in us as to the values we attach to things. It is hard to realize that some unknown and unheralded offering may be a far finer thing in reality than something which is noised about everywhere. We become coarse in our judgments, slighting men's work when it may be of the finest, and turning from it in disdain because it is not known. It was our chance to make a discovery, but we lost it and trifled it away.

It is amazing how suddenly the world becomes rich for us in all directions when we get over this obsession about the prominent things. "Set not your mind on high things," said the apostle. They will soon make you think there are very few fine things in the world. But when we begin to look for the very finest things as flourishing perhaps in unnoticed directions, we shall be surprised at the nobleness we find in our fellow-men, at the achievements that the humblest life may represent, at the victories that are always being won right under our gaze. And as regards our own accomplishment we are quite likely to discover that it has been made greater by being protected against prominence. As a Jesuit father once said, "You can do a great deal of good if you don't care who gets the credit for it."—S. S. Times.

AMONG MY CHURCHES.

The church at Oak Level is moving on in a smooth, even channel, not making much fuss, but attending to the Master's work. There is a Christian fellowship in the church and community that gives a sweet inspiration, which is soul strengthening.

The Sunday school, with its soul stirring music, is a live force in the neighborhood for good.

Memorial services at Amelia, the second Sunday in May, were enjoyed by a large congregation. This church is doing a good work. With a good Sunday school, good music and loving fellowship, the community is closely bound together. The flowers placed on the graves were beautiful.

An all day service at Hayes' Chapel (Gardner) third Sunday gave a large congregation and excellent music. In the forenoon the sermon was preached by the pastor, after which the memorial exercises were held. Flowers were placed gently on the graves of those who had gone to the Spirit land. In the afternoon a sermon was preached to the Junior Order by Rev. Mr. McCrackin, pastor of the Person St. M. E. S. of Raleigh. It was well prepared, well delivered, and much enjoyed.

Dinner was served to a large crowd, which was enjoyed by all. W. G. CLEMENTS.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON NOTES.

Subject for June 8.—"Joseph Forgives His Brethren."

Scriptures.—Genesis 45:1-15.

Time.—As in Lesson 9.

Places.—Egypt, Canaan.

Persons.—Joseph, his brothers, Pharaoh, Israel.

Golden Text.—Behold, how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity!—Ps. 133:1.

Leading Thought.—We have joy when we are at peace with one another.

To-day we study the climax in the story of Joseph. This lesson cannot be understood without acquaintance with what precedes; that cannot be understood without acquaintance with this. This is essential to an understanding of what follows.

The chief event of this lesson—Joseph making himself known to his brothers—is just what we were looking, longing for when the last lesson ended.

LESSON CONTRASTS.

In the last lesson, as in several preceding ones, we saw Joseph testing his brothers; in this lesson we see the plan and purpose of all this was in order that he might give and they receive his forgiveness and all the good for which it opened the way. In those lessons Joseph appeared to them as an Egyptian; in this lesson he is revealed as a Hebrew. Until now he had spoken truth through an Egyptian interpreter, now he speaks the familiar tongue of Canaan. Then he was Egypt's mighty monarch; now he stands revealed as their brother. The glare and glitter of his high estate in the last lesson dazzled them; in this lesson they are called to look through this and discern the familiar features of their own father's son. But while, in the last lesson, the brothers enjoyed a season of freedom and cheer, under the warming effect of Joseph's kindness, in this lesson they are again in the bondage of fear when his identity is revealed. But their hearts are reassured as he urges upon them "Your father is my father; your God is my God; my glory is to be shared with you; your sin has been overruled by God for your salvation."—Hageman.

OBJECT LESSON.

Show a child's slate, covered with crooked chalk marks, or put such marks on the blackboard.—With a piece of red crayon write the words, "I forgive you" across the marking. Show that this is the way some people forgive the mistakes and wrongdoings of others. They say, "I forgive you," but they will not forget. They keep the injury still in the foreground. Joseph had learned the true way to forgive. (With eraser entirely obliterate the marks.) He not only forgave wrongdoing of his brothers; he also tried to help them forget it. He was true, loving forgiveness—the sort that forgets and entirely blots out the feeling of injury. This is the sort of forgiveness Jesus taught. It is the way we would like others to forgive us, and the way we should learn to forgive.

A tightly corked bottle.—Try to fill the bottle with water. Notice that it flows over and around the bottle, but cannot get in. Why? There is an obstacle. You will have to take out the cork before the water can get in. Compare with a heart full of grudge and resentment toward others. God's forgiveness flows over and around it, but cannot enter until the unforgiving spirit is removed. Take out the cork and see how easily the water fills the bottle. Get rid of your grudges and see how quickly God's love will come in and fill your heart. Joseph knew the secret of true forgiveness.—Hageman.

LESSON ANNOUNCEMENT.

It is not uncommon for well dressed, prosperous people to be ashamed of poor relations. It is very common for city young people to dislike to introduce shabby country cousins among their friends.

What sort of courage do you think it would take for a young man at court who was supposed to come from the highest circles to introduce his shepherd father and shepherd brothers at court

This is one of the things of which next Sunday's lesson tells, and it happened in a land where shepherds are especially despised.

If some of us have not such moral courage as that, try to think this week how we can acquire it.—Hageman.

NOTES ON C. E. TOPIC, JUNE 15.

Subject—"Favorite Verses. II. In the Proverbs." Prov. 4:10-27.

Start with a song service of favorite hymns. As the members call for hymns let them say a few words about the writer of the hymn, or tell why the hymn is a favorite. The Scripture-reading may be assigned to two Endeavorers, who will read it verse about. After reading have two brief prayers, closing with the Twenty-third Psalm in unison. If you have any special music, introduce it at this time. It is not a bad plan to get in the announcements at this point.

Read Responsively Prov. 22:1-9.

1. A good name is rather to be chosen than great riches and loving favour rather than silver and gold.
2. The rich and poor meet together; the Lord is the maker of them all.
3. A prudent man foreseeth the evil, and hideth himself but the simple pass on, and are punished.
4. By humility and the fear of the Lord are riches, and honour, and life.
5. Thorns and snares are in the way of the forward; he that doth keep his soul shall be far from them.
6. Train up a child in the way he should go; and when he is old he will not depart from it.
7. The rich ruleth over the poor, and the borrower is servant to the lender.
8. He that soweth iniquity shall reap vanity; and the rod of anger shall fail.
9. He that hath a bountiful eye shall be blessed; for he giveth of his bread to the poor.

Leader's Talk.

Let the leader tell about the book of the Bible we are to study. Proverbs is the Hebrew philosophy of practical life. A proverb is the result of experience; condensed wisdom. Let the leader tell how the book deals with civil life, men's relation toward other men, and home life. The Psalms is a book of devotions—it speaks to the heart; Proverbs is a book of moral maxims, dealing with every day living. The fool is the person that will not listen to the experience of his elders, but prefers to try himself. He finds out the truth, but from bitter experiences.

Use quotations and suggestions in the Christian Endeavor World. These are very fine.

THE BURLINGTON CONVENTION.

The third biennial session of the Young People's General Convention of the Christian Church, South, held at Burlington Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of last week, was featured by a change of name of the organization, splendid reports of officers and several magnificent addresses. The attendance was probably as large as previous conventions, but was not as large as it should have been. Many ministers and leading laymen whose presence would have been of great value to the convention were absent.

The name of the organization was changed to the "Sunday School and Christian Endeavor General Convention" and all conference bodies are asked to change their names to correspond to this. Hereafter ministers and officers of the local conventions will also constitute this General Convention, together with delegates from individual Sunday schools and auxiliary organizations of the convention.

Officers were elected as follows: Rev. W. T. Walters, of Winchester, Va., president; A. W. Andes, Harrisonburg, Va., secretary; Rev. L. I. Cox, Treasurer. The editorial secretary will be elected by the executive committee.

Proceedings in Detail.

The convention was called to order in the Burlington Christian church at 10 o'clock Wednesday morning by Rev. W. T. Walters, president. The quiet hour service was conducted by Rev. P. H. Fleming. After enrollment of delegates, Rev. A. B. Kendall, the church pastor, made the welcoming remarks, which were responded to by Rev. C. E. Newman, of Henderson, N. C.

At the afternoon session Mrs. J. J. Lincoln read a paper on primary plans, which was followed by the annual address of the president. As the president's address will be printed in full in THE SUN we will not comment upon it now.

Rev. W. C. Wicker, of Elon College, delivered a very thoughtful and forceful address on "How the Child Learns."

At the evening session Dr. W. A. Harper, president of Elon College, spoke on "The Duty of the Church to Young People and Vice Versa." Dr. Harper, as he always does, talked sound gospel and good practical sense.

The Convention was also favored at this session by a paper from Miss Bettie Stephenson, our Supt. of Young People's Mission Work on "Young People's Missionary Societies."

Thursday morning Charles A. Hines, editorial and field secretary, presented his report, which was adopted. This will be published in THE SUN next week. Mr. Hines then discussed "Co-operation with the Editorial and Field Secretary." Pending the discussion of some matters referred to in Mr. Hines remarks, a motion was adopted appointing a committee to consider a change of name and constitutional amendments. This committee was composed of W. T. Walters, J. O. Atkinson, C. A. Hines, S. M. Smith and H. E. Rountree.

At 11 o'clock Rev. H. E. Rountree preached the convention sermon. It was a very attractive and helpful discourse. He announced as his text "Open his eyes that he may see," and talked along lines of progressive Christian work.

At the afternoon session Mrs. W. H. Denison read a paper on the Cradle Roll, which was well received. Rev. P. H. Fleming discussed the home department in a very attractive way. Dr. Atkinson spoke on "Training the Teachers to go to Sunday School," and teacher training was discussed by others. At this session the committee on name reported and the report was adopted, changing the name as above stated.

One of the best features of the session was the address of Rev. W. H. Denison, Thursday night, on "Our Young People and Missions." He was followed by Rev. W. G. Clements, who discussed "Our Young People and Temperance."

The Closing Day.

Friday morning the report of the executive committee was submitted and adopted.

The committee on resolutions made its report. The Burlington people were thanked for the handsome manner in which they entertained the convention. The printing of the minutes of the convention was left to the executive committee. The work of the Women's Home and Foreign Mission Board and conference was endorsed.

The resignation of Rev. L. I. Cox as treasurer was accepted and Rev. J. O. Cox elected in his stead.

An amendment to the constitution was offered by Rev. C. E. Newman and adopted, thus abolishing the "standing" committees and substituting secretaries for the several departments. These secretaries were later in the day named as follows:

Teacher Training—Rev. H. E. Rountree.

Organized Classes—Charles A. Hines.

Elementary Grades—Mrs. J. J. Lincoln.

Home Department—D. R. Fonville.

Cradle Roll—Mrs. J. L. Foster.

Christian Endeavor—Dr. W. A. Harper.

This report of the committee on Organized Classes was submitted by Rev. W. T. Walters, recommending that the field secretary emphasize organized classes for the next year.

The address of the morning was delivered by Dr. Atkinson on "Reaching the Young People for Christ and the Church."

In the afternoon the committee on Christian Endeavor reported. Rev. A. B. Kendall delivered a very forceful address on "The Christian Endeavor as an Evangelizing Force."

Prof. W. A. Harper conducted a Christian Endeavor round table, which was both interesting and practical.

Rev. H. S. Booth, the eloquent pastor of the South Norfolk church, spoke on "Perils and Ideals of Young People." This was a very captivating and entertaining discussion.

A MESSAGE TO OUR WOMEN.

BY MRS. J. P. BARRETT.

(This paper was read before the Woman's Missionary Mass Meeting at Elon College May 27th.)

To-night I am thinking deeply of our work. My heart is aching, and the only relief I have has come through looking to Him who is the Author and Finisher of our faith. Lately a letter came to me from one of the most devoted Christian women in our Church. In it she said she prayed more for our mission cause than ever before. She felt that prayer was her best weapon—and she has prayed. It is needless for me to tell our women that they need to pray, for there are some things that can be done only through prayer. Our mission work, that we love so well, will not be our work long if we continue going on, as we have done for a few years. You remember that God threatened to remove the candlestick from the Church at Ephesus because of its unfaithfulness (see Rev. 2:5). To-night the thought has come to me that soon our Father may say: Take this mission work from the Christian Church and give it to another, since they will not care for it as it deserves to be cared for in the spread of the truth. If our work should be taken from us and given to another Church which is full of the mission spirit and work, which is using its time and talents and money in that work to decided advantage, what could we say but JUSTICE! I cannot bear to think that such a time will come, and may be much sooner than many of us think, when the Christian Church will have to hand over its mission work to another, and all because we have so poorly cared for it. Think of it! The dear little work which we have started, and which some of us have loved so well, may be given to another, unless we more readily and fully yield to the leading of the Spirit in caring for and supporting that work.

My reason for coming to you at this time is to plead with you to get together in prayer, in agonizing prayer, ceaseless prayer, that God may use us as a people in this great work for the real spread of the truth through the Christian Church, and in a better way than we have done it in the past. If we are to succeed, really succeed in building up the Kingdom of the Lord, then we must do better work and much more of it in the future, and it must be done in a way to insure greater thrift, or our Master may see it as a necessity to remove the candlestick from us—that is, take away our opportunity in the mission field. We are facing just that possibility now, and it is for us to say what the final outcome shall be. Shall our candle burn more brightly, giving light to thousands who are in darkness, or shall the candlestick be removed? In a larger measure that would leave us in darkness as well as the heathen for whom we are expected to care. Can we do it? From a human standpoint I should have to answer, No. But from the Christian standpoint, Can we do it? Then I should answer, Yes, in the strength of Christ, we can. May we not hear every Christian saying, Yes, in the strength of Christ we can and we will.

Then let us not forget that we, and not others, are responsible for our mission work, for its financial thrift. Think of what it might be, if only we were working as we ought in His strength. Shall we let our work suffer when we have the promised help to make it a success? Let me plead with our people to give all they can in time, prayer and money. Give your time to telling the needs of our mission work to others, pray that they may be used for the good of the cause in so doing, and give of your money as God has given to you. Remember that even without money you can be an instrument of blessing to the cause through prayer and talking to others who can give. It is a great help, comfort and even inspiration in a time like this to search the Scriptures to see what God has done through His people in other days. One thing is most encouraging, viz.: That we have no record of any instance in which God turned a deaf ear to the real cry, the earnest prayer of His people for help. It is recorded over and over again that they cried unto the Lord and He heard their cry and saved them out of their distresses.

The serious embarrassment of our missionary work is a time for real and prayerful heart-searching—not the searching of our brother's, our sister's or our neighbor's heart, but of our own, that if possible we may see why we are in such a condition financially, and also see what is needed on our part to make this great and good work, this God-given, this Jesus-commissioned work a real and mighty success. To this end we need His help and we need it now. We can have it, if we will to have it in the right way. If we truly pray, something will come to pass, and our mission work will be saved to us and we shall be given power to carry it on successfully, for He is able to guide us to that end.

We are here at the headquarters of our work—where we can see, we can hear, we can know, and knowing our needs, I feel that I must ask every praying one to pray, to pray mightily, for our mission cause. Do not forget that it is still true that some things are still wrought by prayer, and that God can use a praying heart in ways of which the world has not dreamed. I have thought much of our work—how it has suffered and how it is now suffering, and to-night—this blessed Easter night, March 23—in thinking over the situation, I turned to Psalms 18:6, and in reading it, I got comfort. Let me give it to you: "In my distress, I called upon the Lord, and cried unto my God. He heard my voice out of His temple, and my cry (my prayer, I take it) came before Him, even into His ears." Oh, let us work, let us give, but first let us pray and the mission situation will become a joy to us as a people, instead of a continual and perplexing problem, but we must be united, agreed as touching the petition we desire to make. Then when agreed, we can pray the prayer of faith and that always brings forth fruit. Let us try it in faith.

—The Japan Society of New York in giving a dinner May 23 to Hon. Geo. W. Guthrie, of Pittsburgh, newly appointed ambassador to Japan, refused to allow any wine at the table, using instead unfermented grape juice, as did Secretary of State Bryan at his diplomatic dinner.

THE BURLINGTON CONVENTION.

The convention came to a close with Friday evening's session. Splendid music was rendered. The addresses were by Dr. J. U. Newman on "Securing Recruits for the Ministry," and Hon. D. R. Fonville, of Burlington, on "Bible Knowledge as an Asset to Moral and Spiritual Life." Both men measured up to their favorable reputation as speakers of power and grace.

There are many features of the convention that deserve mention, but we can name only a few here. The work of Mr. Walters in the chair and Secretary Andes was without flaw. The convention was fortunate in having them at the helm and is to be congratulated on re-electing them. The music furnished by Misses Pitt and Barnes, and others from Elon College, on Thursday evening was immensely enjoyed and appreciated.

Friday afternoon in a few minutes Revs. L. I. Cox and J. O. Atkinson secured more than $100 to be used in clearing the convention's deficit. When this is paid the convention will have all old obligations out of the way. It is to be regretted that adequate provision has not been made for the future, but it is believed that the executive committee will attend to this.

THE CULTURE OF THE SPIRIT.

mental culture. Some of you are denying almost the necessities of life that you may attain the goal. Others are denying themselves for you. Your days and your nights are absorbed in it. It is cost, cost, cost, every inch of the way. The denial of those who have born you; your own denial in forgoing at least many of the comforts and luxuries of life; your sacrifice of inclination when the athletic field calls you and the social hour invites you; the days of delight and nights of pleasure—these are costs to be reckoned. Will we be less willing to pay the cost of the culture of the soul?

Let no one say this quest is not for me. Meet your doubts and discouragements squarely. If you feel you have failed today, the morrow is long and it beckons you with its promise. That promise is not vain. The more you realize of it the more does it hold out to you. The eagle may soar until he can fly no higher, the air becomes so rare but it is not so with the soul. The reaches of infinity are before us. Finality is the great heresy.

Glory of warrior, glory of orator, glory of song, Paid with a voice flying past to be lost on an endless sea.

Glory of virtue, to fight, to struggle, to right the wrong—

Nay, but she aimed not at glory, no lover of glory she,

Give her the glory of going on and still to be.

The wages of sin is death; if the wages of virtue be dust

Would she have the heart to endure for the life of the worm and the fly?

She seeks no isles of the blest, no quiet seats of the just,

To rest in a golden grove, or to bask in a summer sky,

Give her the wages of going on and not to die.

THE BIEDERWOLF MEETINGS, GREENSBORO

There were some features of the Biederwolf meetings I did not have the space to tell of last week.

On Saturday afternoon, May 3rd, a children's meeting was held. On Saturday night a brief service was held at the ware-house where about fifteen hundred people had gathered. At the conclusion of the service all formed a line from four to eight abreast and marched to court square singing gospel songs. At the square the streets were lined with surging humanity for a block in every direction and at the corner where arrangements had been made for speaking and singing the whole street was completely blocked. Here from the rear of a motor truck the quartette sang and Biederwolf spoke. This was the greatest street meeting ever held in Greensboro.

On the following afternoon at 3 o'clock a meeting for men only was held at the ware-house and one for women only at the W. Market M. E. Church. Monday night was "Church night." Every church had a "pew," and after the regular service which was briefer than usual, each church had a conference with its members and definite plans were made to cover the city by personal work.

Wednesday, May the 7th was mother's day. Flowers were placed at about a dozen places over the city for free distribution. Committees of young ladies were placed in charge of them and everybody was requested to wear a flower for mother's sake. At ten thirty o'clock "Mother's" services were held at the ware-house. An hundred or more rocking chairs were provided, and all the automobiles available in the city were called into service and sent all over the city for the old and infirm people, bringing them to the service. Hundreds were there. The service was adaptable and was great. They sang the old songs our grand parents used to hear sung by the older people. It was not "Jesus Lover of My Soul," that is new, but the old, old songs which were worded out by the pastor and sung by memory by the people. There were many there who will never hear those songs again. I wish there were some way to preserve them on down through the ages. I wonder why music lovers have not preserved them in their collections? The oldest person in the house was awarded a pretty bouquet,—a Mrs. Hall, of this city, 87 years old, and goes to church regularly.

Thursday, May 8th, was children's day. A great service was held in the afternoon followed by a mammoth parade, led by a band, and each child carried a flag.

On Sunday, the eleventh, all the churches of the city, with a few exceptions, called in their services for the one union service to be held at the ware-house. Each Sunday school met at its own place, formed a line and marched in a body to the ware-house. It was a great sight to see these armies of Sunday school folks meeting at the ware-house about the same time, coming from every direction like the spokes in a hub. Each school had special assignment, was given a few minutes to make records and then Biederwolf took the meeting in charge. About one hundred and fifty Sunday school people were converted that morning. In the afternoon a men's meeting was held. About three thousand were present and about one hundred and fifty converted.

The following week was not characterized by so many special days. We are all now getting more interested and getting down to business. During the week he spoke on "The Atonement," "Hell," "Cards," "Heaven," "Theater," "Christian Science," "The Dance," etc. The subjects of amusement were

STORIES are—yes, must be—used by every wide-awake worker among, or leader or teacher of, children.

MISSIONARY STORIES seem to have been the one field well-nigh overlooked until Mrs. Alice Moreton Burnett, Corresponding Secretary for the Woman's Board for Home Missions of the Christian Church, made a compilation of thirty interesting, instructive stories pertaining especially and directly to missions that are sure to be appreciated by workers, teachers, leaders, pastors, fathers, mothers—and the children.

Some of the Important Events of both Home Missions and Foreign Missions are also included, together with Suggestions For Junior Leaders.

They make a book 5 x 7 inches in size, 128 pages, red cloth binding—a handsome, attractive volume. Price 35c per copy postpaid.

discussed at the day services.

The meetings were closed on Sunday night. Union services were held again this day, excepting the Sunday schools. In the afternoon, he spoke on "Booze" for an hour and ten minutes. He is an uncompromising fighter of booze.

Biederwolf handles sin with a rough hand and no language nor term is spared to place it in its proper place; and yet he carries a heart of great love and is just as careful and as anxious to bear every one in his arms of love to Jesus. He said a great many things I would not have said and did some things I did not approve, but I take that to be no reflection on him. The facts are that he did a great deal of good in the city and the churches are now receiving many good and substantial members as a result thereof. Notwithstanding the criticism which usually is meted out to such meetings by certain classes, many of this town who have not been in sympathy with such Christian endeavor are now saying that they believe this meeting to be the best they ever saw. The pastors are laboring hard to make their follow-up work count and it's going to count.

BUY A PIANO FOR YOUR HOME

Even those who think they can not own a piano may own one at a very low cost. As a boy, I longed for music, but had to forego that pleasure because of the high prices charged for pianos. My boyhood home would have been complete had there been a piano in it.

I can sell you a high grade piano with a 10 years guarantee by the Manufacturer, with high grade workmanship and finish for $150.00.

If the piano is not satisfactory after 30 days trial, money will be refunded.

CURES HOG CHOLERA

Last spring cholera got among my hogs and one died before I really knew they were sick. Two others were very sick when I noticed them, and as I had bought two of your Brick for the horses, I decided to give it a trial. I dissolved half a Medicated Salt Brick in some swill, giving this to the two sick hogs and in a few hours I gave the other half to them. They seemed to improve so nicely, I bought several of the Brick and gave it to all my hogs and have not lost another one with any kind of disease. One of the sick hogs lost all of his hair, so this is proof that they had cholera.

ANSWERS TO PRAYER.

He who believes the Bible must also believe that God answers prayer. And no one should pray at all, unless he believes that there is a God in heaven. But, while it is true that God answers prayer, it is further true that not every prayer is answered. It is probable that not one half of the prayers in the world are answered. It is a question which no human being can settle. Yet the fact remains that very many true prayers are answered in God's own way and time. A Christian woman in a letter to a Christian Herald, says: "I am near three score and ten. Last summer, in order to save life, it was necessary to have an operation performed at the hospital. Two Christian men, who carried me from the house to the doctor's automobile, to be taken to the hospital, afterward went to their knees in prayer that I might be spared to return home. Many other friends, besides relatives, as soon as they heard of my condition, besought the Lord for my recovery. All seemed to believe that their prayers would be answered, though doctors and nurses despaired of my life, and I was willing to go or stay. He who rewards faithful prayer heard and answered, and my strength has so nearly returned that I feel well enough to resume my work for my Master." There is no good reason to doubt this testimony. It accords with that of very many other people in regard to various cases. It is probable that a considerable number of people, who have read this account, will conclude that all seriously sick persons would be soon healed by God, if the right kind of prayers were offered; but such a conclusion is not warranted, for it is a fact that very many sick persons have not been restored to health, though the prayer of faith has been offered in their behalf. We may say that there is a mystery in this thing, yet it is a fact. For reasons, known only to God, thousands of ill people have died, notwithstanding great faith and much prayer. I have seen examples of it in my own experience. God has answered my prayers for some very ill people, while in other similar instances he has not answered them in like manner, nor at all. But let us keep praying.

Wallace, Va.—Mrs. Mary Vest, of this place, says, "I hadn't been very well for three years, and at last I was taken bad. I could not stand on my feet, I had such pains. I ached all over. I felt like crying all the time. Mother insisted on my trying Cardui. Now I feel well, and do nearly all my housework." No medicine for weak and ailing women, has been so successful as Cardui. It goes to the spot, relieving pain and distress, and building up womanly strength, in

SOUTHERN SCHEDULES.

Ashville, N. C., May 7.—Better facilities than ever before given for reaching the tourist resorts of Western North Carolina are provided in the summer schedules and through car arrangements just announced by the Southern Railway.

Beginning June 1, two sleeping cars will be operated daily between New Orleans and Asheville, one via Mobile, Montgomery, and Atlanta, and the other via Meridian, Birmingham and Chattanooga. On the same date the sleeping car service between Memphis and Asheville on trains 35 and 36 will be extended to Lake Toxaway and a through sleeping car line will be established between Memphis, Asheville and Waynesville, the car to be handled on the "Memphis Special." Through sleeping cars between Savannah and Asheville will be put into service June 1, between Charleston, Asheville and Waynesville on June 2.

Greatly improved service between Augusta and Asheville has been arranged. The parlor car service which was operated last year in connection with the "Carolina Special" will again be given and in addition a new sleeping car line will be inaugurated via Blackville and Columbia, leaving Augusta at 11:45 P. M., arriving Asheville at 2:10 P. M., and leaving Asheville at 4:30 P. M., arriving Augusta at 8:20 P. M.

On June 15 a sleeping car line will be established between Jacksonville and Asheville in addition to the car operated between Jacksonville and Cincinnati via Asheville. Daily sleeping car service between Atlanta and Lake Toxaway will be established on June 22, additional trains being operated between Hendersonville and Lake Toxaway to handle this car. Parlor car service on trains 5 and 6 between Asheville and Lake Toxaway will be inaugurated May 25.

Tickets will be on sale June 23 to 28 inclusive. Final return limit to reach original starting point by midnight July 13, 1913.

Round trip fares from principal points as follows: Raleigh, $9.20, Goldsboro $10.65, Selma, $9.65, Durham, $8.45, Burlington, $7.40.

Rates in same proportion from all other points.

Elsewhere in this department I give an open letter written by T. J. Ogburn; how he appreciated the singing of the Orphanage Class.

We have been favored with an invitation to attend and take part in the picnic of the Masons of Union Ridge the first Saturday in August. We are hoping to have a good day.

LISTEN! LISTEN!!

We are finishing up the work on the water and sewerage. Will use water from the tank to-night (May 29) and will get the sewer finished by the middle of next week. This sounds good to us. You can't imagine how much the girls, those who have to bring the water, are rejoicing over the thought of having the water in the house, and at the wash-tubs. But the unpleasant task comes when we have to borrow $600.00 to finish paying for this work.

HE SACRIFICED FOR HIS PARENTS

There is a celebrated charity school in London, called the "Blue Coat School." It bears this name, because the scholars there all wear blue coats, with long skirts to them. And this is a story about one of the boys.

In the "Blue Coat School" one of the boys who was in the habit of saving a part of his meals, and all the bits and scraps he could gather from the table, after their meals were over. He used to put them in a box near his bed, and keep them there. This led the other scholars to talk against him very much. At first they thought he was greedy and kept him there to eat at night, when the rest were asleep. Some of them watched him, but he was never seen to eat them. Once or twice a week he used to make a bundle of the contents of the box, and go away with it.

Then the boys thought he meant to sell them and keep the money. They concluded that he was a mean, miserly fellow. They refused to let him play with them. They joked about him, and called him hard names, and persecuted him in many ways. But he bore it patiently, and went on saving and carrying all he could honestly get.

At last they complained of him to their teacher. The boy was watched, when he took away the next bundle. He was seen to go into an old worn-out building which was occupied by some of the poorest people in the city. There he made his way to the fourth story of the building and left his bundle with a poor old couple. On inquiry it was found that these were his parents. They were honest, worthy people whom age and poverty had reduced to such a condition of want that their dependence was the food thus furnished by their son. He was willing to deprive himself of food and bear the reproach and persecution of his school-mates in order to do what he could for the support of his parents.

When the managers of the school heard of it, they provided relief for the poor boy's parents and gave him a silver medal for his praiseworthy conduct. Certainly he deserved the medal and the praise of the people. "Honor thy father and thy mother; that thy days may be long in the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee."

"GOD WILL TAKE CARE OF YOU"

Six months ago I heard the orphans at Elon College sing "God will take care of you," before the Annual Conference of the Methodist Protestant Church. I have heard some grand music. "The Halleluia Chorus" sung by a choir of one thousand voices was sublime and almost overwhelmingly inspiring. The singing at the Ecumenical Conference on Foreign Missions, in Carnegie Hall in 1901, I can never forget. And I could mention other occasions whose music has wonderfully thrilled me. But I cannot recall any singing that has cheered and comforted me more than has the children's singing of these beautiful, simple words. They sang them into my very inner soul. And those sweet voices have been ringing in memory's ear and have hundreds of times given me new hope in God. God bless those children! You can never know, as I can never tell, what a blessing they have been to me. I cannot discard the impression that I ought to express my gratitude to them and to the skilful leaders who so carefully trained them, and to the noble Institution which has made such excellent work possible. I am trying as I grow older to cheerish and express more and more the thankfulness every benefit I receive should call forth. This simple and sincere expression may give encouragement to those who have so sweetly helped me—I hope it will. And as long as I live, in every trying hour, and when I shall come to die, may those children's voices still cheer my almost fainting and yet trusting heart with the sweet words, "God will take care of you."

KANSAS WOMAN HELPLESS.

Lawrence, Kansas.—Mr. J. F. Stone, of this city, says, "My wife suffered for ten years from womanly troubles, during two years of which she was totally helpless. She was examined by many physicians, some of whom gave her up to die. Finally she began to take Cardui, and since then has greatly improved in health. The tonic, strengthening, and restorative effects of Cardui, the woman's tonic, on the womanly constitution, are the most valuable qualities of this popular medicine. THE NEED OF GOD.

This ample, splendid, fruitful, energetic, prosperous America of ours is not, perhaps conscious enough of all its needs. It has many of them, but none is greater or more pressing than its need of God.

This is not an arraignment of our morals. For all our outcry against political and financial corruption, we are, as the world goes, a moral people. We are a generous people, a kindly people, a sympathetic people, ready to respond abundantly to the appeal of any form of want or suffering.

But this habitual kindness and conventional morality, on which we pride ourselves too much, covers but cannot hide the deeper need of which The Companion wishes to speak. Look back at the past, at the history of all the nations of the world; how many peoples do you find who show in their common daily lives as little sense as we show to-day of what you may call, if you will, "the not-ourselves," "the spiritual mystery," "the divine"? There is no better name to call it by than "God."

We have churches, you protest. So we have. But there are some who do not go to them, and not all of those who do go, listen. And what is far more important, in most cases God is left in the church. Who names His Name in the rush of business or in the tumult of pleasure? How many of us—writer, lawyer, doctor, broker, politician, or club-woman—connect the thought of Him with any absorbing interest of our lives?

There are various reasons for this. One is the real decay of belief, due to the subtle infusion of science, or misunderstood science, into all our thoughts. And there are others. But the most curious of all is an excess of reverence. From time to time of the original Protestant revulsion against the undue familiarity of the middle ages with saints and things divine, there has been a growing tendency to remove God further and further from common daylight and common dust and toil and common tears and laughter into the shadow of shrines and the dim odor of sanctuaries, until we have taken Him from all contact with our real lives, where everything must dwell that is to touch us with any vital power.

The process has gone on so quietly that we have not been conscious of it, has gone on so far that we have lost all appreciation of its significance; yet it offers one of the greatest problems that the twentieth century has to deal with, greater far than any political or economic problem. A nation can get on without kings, without navies, without air-ships, without telephones; but no nation has ever long grown and flourished and triumphed without God.—Youth's Companion.

THE UNPAID DEBT.

Fifty years ago a great host of young men gave up their chance for education, their business prospects, their hope of marriage, and went forth to fight for an ideal. More than 300,000 of them never came back, and of those who did survive, many returned broken in health and beaten in the race. In every high and noble sense these last gave up their lives for the great cause as truly as those who left their bones upon the battlefields, for they gave that which makes life best worth while.

The ideal for which they so cheerfully and modestly made their sacrifice was the ideal of country, of patriotism. They fought that their homes might continue, and that the principle on which this nation was founded might live in the hearts of men and persist from generation to generation, throughout all time.

Because they did that thing, we put aside once every year our common duties for a day, and following an ever-lessening line of bent old men, we seek our cemeteries, there to lay flowers on a constantly lengthening row of graves.

Do we thus discharge our obligation? Neither in kind nor in amount—and if we pay at all, it must be in kind. From every star-marked grave the blood that was shed on our behalf is calling to us to take up the burdens and meet the duties of our day as the men who fought in the sixties met theirs. Of what avail is their sacrifice if we, their heirs, shall fail to pass on unimpaired the patrimony that they bequeathed to us; if, through cowardice, we neglect to right our social wrongs; or, through indolence, fail to oppose corruption; or, through indifference, allow the channels of our public life to become polluted?

They were men, those idealists who marched forth in the sixties. What matters to them, or to those who survive them, the offering or the withholding of a few flowers once a year, if we fail to read aright the lesson of their lives? The national debt recorded in the books in Washington is not the only one, or the greatest. There is another, written in the hearts of all of us; and that one we cannot pay in dollars and cents, but only in service.

CHRISTIAN CHURCH CONFERENCE

The second annual session of the Delmarvia and Pennsylvania Conference of the Christian Church closed here last Saturday evening after a most successful two days' session. Delegates from the six churches constituting the Delmarvia Conference, four in Delaware and two in New Jersey, were present. Rev. M. W. Butler, pastor of Gulf Mills Christian Church at Conshohocken, Pa., presided at all of the sessions. The reports from the churches within the bounds of the conference showed increased activity along all lines, with prospects of greater work during the coming year.

A committee of three, including the president of the conference, was appointed to investigate openings for the establishment of Christian churches in Delaware, and Maryland, Virginia and Pennsylvania, in localities where there are but few churches or where the inhabitants of a place warrant the establishment of another church, without detriment to the established churches in those localities. Philadelphia was especially mentioned as one of the proposed places for the establishment of a church. Offers of consolidation with the Christian Church now established on the Delaware, Maryland and Virginia peninsula, from other denominations, were received and the executive committee of the Delmarvia Conference was given power to act in the vocation of conference looking toward such amalgamation or consolidation.

Dr. W. W. Staley, of Suffolk, Va., a fraternal delegate from the Southern Christian Convention, of which he is the president, bore greetings from the Southland, where the Christian denomination has a large following, commending the advancement of the Christian Church in this part of the country and district success and a bright future. Dr. Staley preached the Sunday evening sermon at the People's Christian Church here, the seat of the conference, and also at Wyoming Sunday afternoon in the New St. Paul Christian Church at that place.

At the close of the morning service the following candidates for admission to the conference were ordained by President Butler, assisted by Dr. W. W. Staley, Dr. A. W. Lightbourne and Rev. George L. Price: Wingate D. Short, Georgetown, Del.; E. Crawford Graham, Wyoming, Del., and Alexander Campbell, Philadelphia.

Rev. M. W. Butler, of Conshohocken, Pa., was re-elected president of the conference; Professor Wesley Webb, Dover, vice-president; H. E. Lynch, Dover, secretary; W. J. Benson, Dover, treasurer.

There are at present six churches and eight ordained ministers constituting the Delmarvia Conference.—State Sentinel, Dover, Del., May 31, 1913.

ARE THEY WEAK OR PAINFUL?

Do your lungs ever bleed?
Do you have night sweats?
Have you pains in chest and sides?
Do you spit yellow and black matter?
Are you continually hawking and coughing?
Do you have pains under your shoulder blades?

These are Regarded Symptoms of Lung Trouble and

CONSUMPTION

You should take immediate steps to check the progress of these symptoms. The longer you allow them to advance and develop, the more deep seated and serious your condition becomes.

We Stand Ready to Prove to You absolutely, that Lung Germaine, the German Treatment, has cured completely and permanently cases after cases of Consumption (Tuberculosis), Chronic Bronchitis, Catarrh of the Lungs, Catarrh of the Bronchial Tubes and other lung troubles. Many sufferers who had lost all hope and who had been given up by physicians have been permanently cured by Lung Germaine. It is not only a cure for Consumption but a preventative. If your lungs are merely weak and the disease has not yet manifested itself, you can prevent its development, you can build up your lungs and system to their normal strength and capacity. Lung Germaine has cured advanced Consumption, in many cases over five years ago, and the patients remain strong and in splendid health today.

Let Us Send You the Proof--Proof that will Convince any Judge or Jury on Earth

We will gladly send you the proof of many remarkable cures, also a FREE TRIAL of Lung Germaine together with our new 40-page book (in colors) on the treatment and care of consumption and lung trouble.

BAD TEMPER DOESN'T PAY.

Half the world worries or loses its temper over the non-essential. Both conditions have a direct and easily apparent effect on the stomach.

It is twice as difficult to digest food when the consumer's mind is perturbed. From this condition has come the old, old expression, "Laugh while you eat."

The poisons generated by evil temper and emotional excess over non-essentials have not yet been determined, although without a doubt they exist. Explosions of temper, emotional cyclones and needless fear and panic over disease and misfortune that seldom materializes, are simply bad-cell habits.

By proper ventilation and illumination of the mind it is possible to cultivate tolerance, poise and real courage without being a "bromide." So the saying, which is almost an axiom, "Don't cross the bridge till you come to it," has a real place in medical advice.

The man whose daily work interests him is especially fortunate. His only risk is that of being led into excessive attention of his business or profession.

Contrariwise, the man whose work is monotonous and repellent is in a hard case. But, instead of accumulating the poison of discontent, an effort should be made to balance avocation against vocation.

Aside from the ordinary relaxations and amusements, many of which, by the way, are often injurious to the overworked and nervous, the steady influence of some harmless fad, sport or mental pursuit disassociated from business or profession should be employed. Brain work should be avoided when physically exhausted, and vice versa.—The Inli.

HORNER MILITARY SCHOOL

OXFORD, NORTH CAROLINA

Presents a record of 62 years of notable achievement in preparing boys for college, university, scientific and technical schools, the Government academies and life and in assisting youth to develop physically, mentally and morally into the highest type of Christian Manhood. One large, happy family of manly, studious young men.

J. C. Horner

At Horner, the student is surrounded with the refining influences of a well-ordered home. He is in constant and close association with sympathetic instructors who take a personal interest in his progress. Here as nowhere else, are inculcated habits of truthfulness, self-control, a keen sense of honor and systematic and exact application in the performance of all duties. Under firm, but kindly discipline he acquires gentlemanly habits, is taught to forsake all selfish traits, and to be generous and courteous withal.

Your boy will like the life at Horner. He will like the daily Military drills, and they will do him good. He will enjoy the spirit of rivalry existing between the football, baseball and track and field teams of the two Companies. Nine months at Horner will do more to make a boy stronger and healthier physically than anything we know of.

Horner is easily reached and in close connection with all parts of the State. In the beautiful suburbs of Oxford, forty-five miles north of Raleigh, on both the Southern and Seaboard Air Line railways. Six hundred feet above the sea level.

THE COMMON COMMUNION CUP FORBIDDEN IN CHURCHES.

A recent order issued by the Ohio State Board of Health regarding the uses of the public drinking cup, prohibits the use of the communion cup in church services.

The same or similar laws have been passed by many other States, and it would now appear that the time is not far distant when the use of the common drinking cup, whether in church, school or other public place, will be against the law in every State in the Union.

For a number of years the prejudice against the common communion cup in churches has been growing. Today thousands of churches all over the country are using the individual cup service with the result that participation in this service has been materially increased by doing away with the very natural fear of contagion.

"Cleanliness is next to Godliness," and certainly the church is to be commended for adopting reforms that promote cleanliness. —Presbyterian Standard.

—The separate Presbyterian assemblies are in session in Atlanta, Ga., this week. It is thought that these will form an organic union. There are a dozen or more different Presbyterian Denominations.

THE STILL HOUR.

At the close of day, when its cares have sped and the quiet night is around us, how sweet it is to be with Jesus! To be alone with Him! What a refreshment it is, a well in the desert, the shadow of a great rock in a weary land. Home feeling is everything. How the cares of life ebb away, and the sorrows of yesterday are as the clouds that swiftly pass to come no more. We can almost welcome the trials of life, for if they lead to such fellowship, they have been as the dew to Israel. We can tell our dear Savior things we would not care to whisper to another, knowing that in the secret of His tabernacle He will hide us. He will understand where others either cannot or will not. But here, what a refuge! He knows. He will not misunderstand. He will be pitiful and merciful, for He remembers that we are dust. His presence is light, as when the night is gone and we raise the blinds and let in the sweet and gentle morning. There is no other where like this, and as one might turn aside where the springs are full and the flowers are in bloom and the birds are singing sweetly, and there is a peace above expression and a fragrance that touches the soul, so here when the day is done there wait the sweet repose and the blessing. It is a time when patience comes back, and sympathy, broad as humanity, comes with it. Hatred, with its vulture wings, flies out into the night, and the dovelike presence that hovered above the Nazarine fills all the hour with an ineffable love. With Jesus! Is there any tryst that will stir the best that is in us like that? The day is not half so dull and the night is bereft of its darkness. If there has been a casket in the home, and the dear face within it has looked unresponsively into ours, we can look into the face of Jesus and understand that "it is

Editorial Briefs

Good Tidings.

Only the evil minded love to bear about, from person to person, evil tidings. There is no surer mark of him that thinketh evil in his own heart than that of passing on to others the evil which he himself hears. On the other hand, to call to view Isaiah 52:7 "How beautiful upon the mountains are the feet of him that bringeth good tidings, that publisheth peace; that bringeth good tidings of good that publisheth salvation." There is no such pronouncement in all language upon him that hasteneth to publish the bad. And there is no reward in carrying evil tidings save that of satisfying an evil mind and a degenerate heart. When one finds one's self hastening to publish an evil report one would better tarry awhile and pray.

Tempora! Mores.

Human nature may remain about the same; but times and customs change greatly—even customs deep seated and well fixed. An ex-President of the United States went into court, away out in a Western State, at great expense of time and means the other day, to prove that he was not an habitual drinker. He deemed it worth while for the sake of his good name, at any cost to show that the accusation that he did drink was false; for such a charge against a public man in our time is dangerous, if not deadly, to all his public hopes and political ambitions. Yet it is a well known fact of history that it was rather a boast of himself and his admirers that Daniel Webster could drink tumblerfuls of whiskey and keep going. So far as we know Webster never lost a vote even if on occasions of appearance in public he was so nearly drunk he could hardly stand unaided.

A Select Company.

The most noted and select company that ever gathered on this earth was not in a throne room, nor in a palace of state, nor in a mansion of the mighty, nor on a battle field, nor a ball room floor—but in a Christian prayer-meeting. There were just seven present, seven notables, the most celebrated seven that ever honored this planet with their presence, to wit, Peter, James, John, Moses, Elijah, the Son of God, and the Shekinah (from which came the heavenly Voice). Of this company Summerbell in his "Mountains of The Bible" thus speaks "Blessed company! a company the most select of the universe! a company gathered from heaven and earth, come to the Christian prayer meeting! Not very many of them, only seven; but Jesus was in the midst of them." Any company is safe and select where Jesus is in the midst. And no company is worth seeking or keeping unless Jesus is in the midst.

Sin Cheapens Life.

One would naturally suppose, because of the doom to follow, that a hardened sinner, a man of notoriously evil habits, would hold this life at high price, and would greatly dread to die. He does not. Sin has taught him to put a poor estimate on his own life, and on the lives of others. Out in Nevada they allow criminals under sentence of death to choose their own method of execution. The other day a criminal plead to be shot to death. His plea granted, he took his stand and watched with stolid indifference all the preparation for his taking off, and then without a tremor looked into the throat of the guns that belched forth his own death potion. That was not bravery. The criminal was a notorious murderer. Sin had reduced the price of human life for him, both the life of others and that of himself. "The wages of sin is death." (Rom. 6:23). That is, for the wages of sin one puts aside all the value of life, and pays death.

The Bible In China.

The entire Christian world was agreeably amazed recently when the request went forth from the officials of China that Christians everywhere, on a given day, pray for the success and permanence of the Chinese Republic. Again there was joy and surprise when the message came forth that the day set apart for prayer by the Christians was reverently observed in the various Christian communities of China itself, and that such throngs gathered at the churches and places of prayer as had never before been seen in the Celestial Empire. This awakening was not in a day, but, as is apparent now, a little leaven has been leavening the whole lump. During 1912 the British and Foreign Bible Society alone printed in Chinese 1,868,000 copies of the Bible, and these, of course, were all circulated in China only. This one society the current year has circulated in China 16,450,475 copies of the scriptures. Now comes a letter from the Vice-President of the Chinese Republic to the National Bible Society of Scotland: "To convey an expression of my deep appreciation of the noble work which your society has carried on for so many years in our country." The Bible is doing its work in China. The miracle of all the ages is this Book of books and, as it has proven the awakening of China, it will prove the awakening of any community or any family, which has been heedless of it, and which, by study and research, meditation and prayer over it, becomes familiar with its great teachings. Give the Bible a chance.

The Divine Signal.

In beginning a race a signal is given. Sometimes the signal is the tap of a bell; sometimes the outward wave of the hand; sometimes the waving of a red cloth, or the dropping of a flag; most often it is the count, "one, two, three." We are all in the race of life. And the Bible, the Book of life, contains and repeatedly points out a signal—the Divine signal. It is contained in the four words "I am with you." You will find this signal at the parting of the ways, at every new crisis, in the beginning of every great event. It was given to Abraham when he went out from Haran, "Lo I am with you," it was given to Isaac when he went to Beersheba; to Jacob when he left Bethel, to Moses when he was sent to Pharaoh, to Joshua when he entered the land of Canaan, to Gideon, when he went up against the Midianites, to Jonathan, when he went against the Philistines, to Solomon when he took the throne; always and ever when a great epoch was beginning and the man of God who was to make the beginning relied upon God. "Go, and I am with you." Our Savior employed the same signal in imparting the great commission "Go ye and teach all nations: * * * and, lo, I am with you, even unto the end." (Mat. 28:20). If the divine signal is given you for the race you need have no fears whatever as to the outcome. You are in to win. For, said John Wesley, "One with God is a majority." And better still with Paul "I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me" (Phil. 4:13).

Whom He Did Foreknow.

Our God is from everlasting to everlasting. A thousand years in His sight are but as yesterday when it is passed. There is no present, past, or future with Him. All things that are to be are as if they had already been, so far as His all-knowing mind is concerned. He knows all peoples everywhere. Knowing them now He knows them to-morrow, next year, next century, forever. Whom He did foreknow! He foreknew everybody. Before the world was He knew who would be. He knows now all who are to be—not some, but all. "Whom He did foreknow He did predestinate." He foreknew all. Therefore He did predestinate all. And God never did predestinate any mortal being to do wrong, to engage in sin, or to be lost. As N. Summerbell points out, the Bible gives nowhere an account of any man anywhere being predestinated to do wrong. God foreknowing all, predestinated all to do His holy will. And wherever sin abounds grace does much more abound; so that if any are lost it is not because God predestinated them to be lost, an unthinkable as well as an unbiblical proposition, but in spite of the fact that God predestined them to be saved, and then "gave his only begotten Son that whosoever should believe on Him should not perish, but should have everlasting life." Whom He did foreknow, them He did predestinate. He foreknew all. We are all made both to glorify His holy name, and to be glorified by Him. If any man does not glorify the name of God, he falls below that whereunto he was made. All men, everywhere should glorify and magnify His holy name.

Mr. John D. Rockefeller has just made a gift of $500,000 to the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research, New York, to establish a pension system for members and associate members, and also for their widows and orphan children.

EDITORIAL

ELON COMMENCEMENT.

Elsewhere we give in detail an account of the 23rd annual commencement of Elon College. This, we are sure, will be read with interest, for Elon has come to be the Mecca of our Christian hosts, and hundreds look forward to the annual commencement as a milestone that marks the way to larger and greater things in our educational attainments. No write-up, however, can give any adequate idea of the spirit of these annual occasions, and the inspiration to be had by attendance upon the same. The activity and hope of youth, the advice and the counsel of maturity, the words and the wisdom of the learned, the deep interest and the universal attention to all things done and said, serve to give an impetus to thought, a thrill to life, and a joy to the heart, such as no other occasion affords.

The commencement is a beginning of new resolves for the institution, of larger plans for Trustees, of nobler ideals for all, and is, in itself, an education in epitome. He who has not attended an Elon commencement has not caught the first glimpse of Elon's future, for we read the facts of to-morrow only in the light of the ideals and dreams of to-day. At commencement time students become men and women of future influence and eminence, class rooms become too small, buildings too meagre, the campus not large enough, and all plans and projects so far executed seem to be too insignificant for future demands. Anybody on commencement day at Elon College can readily see that every building, so far erected, is too small, and if future demands are to be served, larger endowments must be had, greater equipment supplied, superior things must be undertaken. Twenty-three years of Elon College achievement packed into pulsating, thrilling life, on commencement day, teaches us beyond cavil or question that the most sanguine have not yet dreamed of the large things the future has in sight for us.

Last year a magnificent building was erected, one of the handsomest and best equipped in the State, a gymnasium that would do honor to any State University, and the Board of Trustees decided that the coming year another building, a Ladies' Hall, must be put up to accommodate at least forty young women, in which these may get their board at cost. A 50,000 gallon steel water tank on a 100 foot steel tower is to be erected at once as a necessity. These are declarations merely that every improvement calls for at least two more improvements, and the volume of the work increases with the passing years. The Treasurer of the College reported receipts the past year of $73,242.21 from all sources, and disbursements of $72,228.84. Of this amount, $27,694.52 was paid for improvements of a permanent character, and $7,756.75 was paid on Special Fund indebtedness.

The President's report showed progress along all lines. The enrollment during the year was the largest in the history of the institution, being 358 in all departments. Business of the institution and the government of same have grown to such extent that the Board of Trustees deemed it necessary to give to the President as help in the management three deans, to wit: Dr. J. U. Newman, College Dean; Dr. W. P. Lawrence, Dean of Men; and Miss Bessie Urquhart, Dean of Women. These deans will assist the President in the discharge of his duties of management and government, giving him more time for outlining the policies and developing the educational and financial problems of the institution.

The grand climax of the commencement occasion was the decision, on the part of the Alumni Association, to assume the task of paying for the new gymnasium, which was erected the past year at a cost of $26,000.00. The outgoing class set the pace for the undertaking by subscribing $1,500.00 of the amount. This handsome structure will be known as the Alumni Building, and it is certainly a credit, both to the Alumni, and to the institution.

One of the most pleasing incidents of commencement, as well as one of the most fitting, was an interruption on the part of Rev. W. T. Walters, Winchester, Va., in behalf of several friends, who presented to Dr. J. U. Newman, the oldest member of the Faculty in point of service, a purse of $75.00 in gold to enable him to attend the Bible Conference at Northfield, Mass., during the vacation. This was a mark of deserved esteem and was a deed both generous and gracious.

The magnificent Alumni address by Mrs. J. K. Ruebush, of Dayton, Va., was a source of great inspiration to all who heard it, and proved that this alumna of the institution, though some years removed from graduation day, had in no manner relinquished her love of learning. It was an interpretation of the spirit of the times that would have done credit to any speaker of national reputation. It was an utterance of wide scope, beautiful in diction, liberal in preparation, and eloquent in delivery. There was no utterance of the commencement that surpassed it in sweep of thought, in breadth of scholarship, and in power of presentation.

It is no reflection on past commencements to say that the twenty-third was the best of all, and this is as it should be, for everything of life, in order to be life, must grow, and commencements, as well as Colleges, grow.

Elon College built upon the prayers and sacrifices of a loyal and devoted people, is destined, under divine guidance, to grow into mighty proportions, and make large contributions, in culture and character, to the kingdom of our God.

THE CHURCH.

The Church increases in power and influence even in New York, the "Babylon of America." On Manhattan Island church edifices are now in course of construction, or nearing completion, representing an expenditure of nearly four and a half million dollars. The mightiest factor and the greatest institution in the United States is not our standing army, nor our navy, nor United States Steel, nor Standard Oil, nor the American Tobacco Company, nor the Democratic party, nor the Republican party, but the Church. And the Church never was as potent, wealthy, aggressive, energetic, influential, universal and invincible as it is today. We of this generation have lived to realize that Christ spoke a prophetic truth when He said, "Upon this rock I will build my church; and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it," (Matt. 16:18).

EXPLANATION.

—We regret that much important matter is left out this week, The Woman's Missionary Department, Suffolk Letter, Elon College Notes, and other matter far more important than much we carry. But our Mergenthaler was smashed and the part had to be ordered from New York before we could set any type. We had to use, therefore, what was already up, and then we are delayed a day in mailing. Pardon us this week, for all the troubles come in showers.

NOTES AND PERSONALS.

—Rev. T. W. Stroud, Chapel Hill, N. C.: "I am well pleased with THE SUN. Enclosed find a renewal."

—Rev. L. E. Smith changes his address from 60 University Place, Princeton, N. J., to 1412 S. Clinton Ave., Trenton, N. J. He writes: "Have been very busy since the Seminary closed. Will write about my summer's work at an early date."

—Rev. M. L. Bryant and wife who have been in Asheville the past two years for the benefit of Bro. Bryant's health are visiting in Berkley, Va., the home of Sister Bryant and the scene of Bro. Bryant's successful pastoral labors.

—Our sometimes esteemed contemporary, the Virginian-Pilot, of Norfolk, loses no opportunity of taking a fling at prohibition, and the prohibition movement. But unless all signs of the time fail our esteemed will yet live to make its daily visits from a city and a state honored and redeemed by the strong arm of a prohibition enactment.

—Our distinguished friend, Senator Cook, of The Uplift, Concord, N. C., will accept our thanks for the following:—"Mr. and Mrs. James P. Cook announce the marriage of their niece, Miriam E. Dumville to Dr. Richard Morrison King, on Wednesday, June the 4th, 1913, Concord, N. C."

—Rev. C. H. Rowland, Franklin, Va.: "I am ashamed that I have not written you how much I appreciate the improvements in THE CHRISTIAN SUN, but it has been in my heart all the time. It is the equal of any religious newspaper, and to me it is the greatest in the world, because it was coming to my home before I came."

—Under date June 2, Rev. J. G. Bishop, D. D., Dayton, wrote "Yours with enclosure of an additional sum of $32.00 contributions for our personal benefit is at hand; and again I want to assure you of our sincerest thanks to yourself, and through you to the contributors. Now that flood conditions are eased up I hope we all may turn our eyes and thoughts, as far as possible, to the great multitudes engulfed in sin, and do what we can to give them the Gospel of Life and Salvation. With gratitude."

—Rev. R. L. Williamson, Luray, Va., writes, under date of June 2:—"I am rather late in tendering congratulations to you and the Publishing House, for the most excellent paper you are giving us, but I am none the less appreciative, nevertheless. I have been a reader of THE SUN since I had to spell the words when reading. My father taught me to love his church paper before I knew its worth. I have always loved it, but as my memory and judgment serve me, I would say that THE SUN is better now than I have ever known it. I am presenting the merits of the paper and its claims on our people as best I can."

—Rev. H. E. Rountree, Greensboro, June 9, writes: "Rev. P. T. Klapp was with me yesterday both services. He preached in the morning. His sermon was much enjoyed."

Last night's services were under the auspices of Philathea classes of the Sunday school, lady ushers, and flower girls, giving a flower to every person. Sermon was addressed to young women. Large congregation present. Special music.

Next Sunday morning services will be under auspices of the married ladies of the church. Next Sunday night, will be under the auspices of Baraca classes. Services for young men."

—We are in receipt of the following for which thanks are expressed: "Mr. and Mrs. Frank O. Moring request the honor of your presence at the marriage of their daughter, Pattie Aline, to Mr. Robert Shackleford Page, on the evening of Wednesday, June 11th, 1913, at nine o'clock. First Baptist Church, Raleigh."

—Rev. L. F. Johnson, D. D., Raleigh, N. C., feels very much impressed with the possibilities of a work for the Christian denomination in Washington, D. C. Writing May 29, Bro. Johnson says: "I have sufficient evidence in hand to justify the wisdom of the proposed undertaking. I now have eighteen names on my list, given me by friends in Washington and elsewhere. I honestly think that in sixty days time of good hard work in a survey for prospective members we would be able to organize and plan the starting of a Christian church at our national capital." This is a commendable task, for the Christians should have had a church in Washington half a century ago.

—Just send us your orders for job printing. We'll use the parcels post and get it to you promptly and at our expense. Recently we received an order for 1000 envelopes, with name and address to be printed, from a discriminating and successful physician at Victoria, Va. The order was quickly filled, went forward by parcels post, at our expense, and by return mail came the check in payment with these words, "The printing arrived in due form and am very much pleased with it."

If you want neat printing, good material, quick work and reasonable prices, send your order to The Southern Christian Publishing Company, Elon College, N. C. Do it now.

—We never could understand how a thief could rob a church; except on the theory that repeated thefts had destroyed all sense of the sacred and the holy. The following from the Berkley correspondence in the Virginian-Pilot, June 9, relates an unusual story: "Thieves entered the First Christian church, Main street, some time last week and destroyed the entire new supply of stationery and Sunday school literature that had been received in the past few days for the ensuing quarter.

The entire lot of stationery after being ransacked was dumped out doors in the rear of the church and the rain that fell in the last few days destroyed the lot.

The Sunday school bells, secretary's book and several of the library books were carried away.

The entrance to the church was effected through one of the side windows and the door leading to the rear of the church was opened."

—Elon has not seen a happier occasion, socially, than that at the home of Dr. and Mrs. J. U. Newman on the evening of June 6th, when in response to invitations, scores of their friends met to celebrate the 25th marriage anniversary of this widely known and much beloved pair. The gifts of silver were costly and numerous, and the occasion was in every way exceedingly delightful. Misses Alma and Lila Newman, daughters, greeted the guests and introduced each to all. Appropriate and wholesome refreshments were served. Dr. and Mrs. Newman received the hearty congratulations of their host of friends; music was sweet and inspiring; the home was refreshing and inviting, and in every way the event was most becoming and delightful. THE SUN's editor enjoyed the occasion and united his heart with others in wishing these dear Christian friends many years of continued usefulness and service and in desiring that they shall have all the happiness that two devoted hearts are able to share in the years to come. And in this sentiment we are sure hundreds of SUN readers who hold Dr. and Mrs. Newman in loving esteem will heartily join.

The jockey, horse, and suffragette were terribly bruised and the latter died soon after "a martyr to woman's rights." By such means of violence the militants of England hope to gain the ballot. On the same day, June 4, a suffragette arson squad set fire to and burned a newly erected mansion at Westwood, near London, the damage being $75,000.00. Other women may get the ballot, but the militant suffragettes have proven themselves wholly unfit for it.

A PURSE OF GOLD

[Some friends had, without his knowledge or consent, solicited a purse of gold for Dr. J. U. Newman, of the Chair of Greek in Elon College, to give him a trip to the Northfield Bible Conference this summer. Rev. W. T. Walters, Winchester, Va., who was at the recent commencement, being called upon to present the gift, arose and addressed his audience as follows:]

Mr. President: It is very seldom that I get into such a distinguished company and I feel, if you will permit me, that I would like to avail myself of the opportunity and make a speech. Poets are prone to sit at the feet of a statue or gaze at the face of a painting and tune their muses while the marble hero tells of his deeds of valor and the canvas lips pour forth their tales of wrong! but I do not agree.

If you could charge the stone figure of Washington today with a vitalizing force, until the heart could throb, the mind could think and the lips could speak, they would not tell of the surprise at Trenton, the victory at Yorktown, nor even the hardships of Valley Forge, nor do I believe they would speak of the difficulties of founding this great republic; and if I could press an electric button and make that picture of the honored founder of this institution alive, I do not believe the words breathed forth from those now speechless lips would be of discouraging days, sleepless nights, and heroic sacrifice. For I believe that back of the history stored in the mind, deeper than the pity, lying in the heart flows the gratitude of life. And if those marble tongues could talk and if those painted lips could speak, they would tell not of the deeds of heroes, nor sing the praises of sacrifice, though these things engage the mind of the historian, in flame the speech of the orator, and swell the heart of the patriot. Their first expression would be words of gratitude for the work of the sculptor's chisel and the painter's brush. The marble would be glad that his rough edges were gone, and the canvas would be pleased that her coarseness was covered.

I come today as a representative of a number of young men, who have had some of the rough edges knocked off and some of the coarseness smoothed by the master minds of these faithful and efficient members of the Faculty. And I want to assure you, Mr. President, that no words can express our gratitude of what Elon College has done for us.

Among those who have stood by the institution and helped to make these things possible, none, perhaps, have won a warmer place in our hearts than the oldest professor in point of service, Dr. J. U. Newman, whom I shall now ask to come forward. Dr. Newman, in behalf of a number of young men, whose names are enclosed, and as a small token of their appreciation, not only for what you have done for them, but for what you have done for our beloved Alma Mater, I present to you this purse of $75.00 in gold, to give you a vacation outing, a trip to the Northfield Bible Conference. Take it with the best wishes not only of those who have contributed, but of hundreds of our fellow students for a pleasant and a profitable vacation.

NOTICE! NOTICE!

The Young People's Convention of the Western North Carolina Christian Conference will hold its annual meeting with the Randleman Christian church July 25-27, 1913.

The Sunday school at this church has extended to the convention a cordial invitation to meet there, which invitation the executive committee has gladly accepted; and we feel sure that with Randleman as our meeting place we can have one of the best conventions ever held in the Western Conference. That the convention may be a success I want to ask that every pastor and also every Sunday school superintendent begin now to make plans and have every school within the bounds of the conference represented. A large delegation is one of the very necessary things that go to make a convention a success. Brethren, please see that your school is represented in the Randleman Convention.

Yours in the work,

J. F. MORGAN, President.

FROM OUR CONTRIBUTORS

ELON'S GREATEST YET COMMENCEMENT.

I. THE FIRST DAY, MAY 31.

Senior Class Has Its Exercises.

The twenty-third annual commencement exercises of Elon College opened on the evening of May 31, when the class of 1913 gave its class day program.

Mr. A. L. Hook, president of the class, presided and welcomed the audience in fitting terms. The first item was the class poem by Mr. W. S. Wicker, which exhibited the usual viewpoint of such poetic composition, and revealed mastery of the technique of the art.

Miss Nellie Sue Fleming read the class history, delineating the great influence of the class upon the life and growth and ideals of the College, and also giving the averages from various standpoints of the class, but omitting their average scholarship, "since modesty forbids."

Mr. B. J. Earp made a hit with his class prophecy, and Mr. Wicker was again greeted in the Class Cuts, which were well received.

Miss Janie Lee Beale read the class will, bequeathing to the Faculty, to the student body, and to various individuals, their bounty, not neglecting to bequeath a portion of their dignity to the incoming senior class "for it is very evident that they will need it and we have an abundance of it to spare."

Mr. A. T. Banks delivered to Mr. F. F. Myrick of the Junior Class the mantle of authority in the institution, who received it with equal eloquence and satisfaction.

Mr. C. T. Rand next gave, with fitting remarks, a trophy to each of his classmates, which they should carry through life as relics of the days spent so happily at Elon.

The remaining members of the class represented the class by orations or essays on commencement day Wednesday morning, June 4th.

This class distinguished itself by publishing the initial number of the College Annual, to which it gave the appropriate name, The Psichi, which epitomizes the names of the three great literary societies which have played so signal a part in the College's history and progress, and also by beginning the Alumni Association Fund by subscribing $100 each for this purpose and expressing the hope that every succeeding class would follow their wholesome example. This announcement was greeted with prolonged applause.

II. THE SECOND DAY, JUNE 1.

Baccalaureate Sermon and Address.

The first day of June was a busy, and also a glorious one here, for into it were crowded the Baccalaureate Sermon at 11:30 A. M. by Dr. Warren Hathaway Denison, pastor of the Christian Memorial Temple, Norfolk, Va., and the Baccalaureate Address at 8 P. M. by President W. A. Harper of the College.

Both speakers directed their remarks directly to the graduating class and to students, but since youthful problems are always inviting, the audience entered also fully into the spirit of each occasion. Dr. Denison took as his theme, LIFE'S GREAT RULE, and his splendid discourse will appear in full in THE SUN at an early date.

III. THE THIRD DAY, JUNE 2.

Representatives From Literary Societies Speak.

The feature of the third day of commencement was the essays and orations of the representatives of the three literary societies, Clio, Philologian, and Psipheian. These representatives were chosen from the Junior Class by their respective societies, and their appearance is always a most pleasing event of the annual commencement season.

The first speaker was Mr. Kirby William Loftin, Kinston, N. C., who represented the Clio Society, and who spoke with appreciation of "The Future Industrialism of the South," maintaining that the South will eventually forge to the front in industrial leadership, basing his conclusions upon the vast natural wealth of the South and the homogeneity of the population, which is distinctly American.

Mr. Gilmer Gustave Holland, Holland, Va., also representing the Clio Society, spoke from the theme, "Life and Its Possibilities," pleading for idealism as against realism or materialism, but felt also that the ultimate of attainment, even in material things, had not been reached. He had no fear of materialism provided idealism could control it for virtuous, rather than for sordid ends.

The representatives of the Psipheian Society then came, with their charming essays, Miss Nina Pinnix, Kernersville, N. C., who discussed the prevailing educational tendencies of today with sharp discrimination, but without unqualified endorsement, using as her subject, "Whither Drifting." Miss Sallie Warren Foster, Burlington, N. C., followed her and took as her subject "Unknown Heroes," proving that the heroes that are not known are the real architects and producers of the heroes who are known, instancing such illustrious examples as the wash-tub mother of Governor John A. Johnson of Minnesota, the first Democratic governor of that State.

Mr. Marvin Stanford Revell, Kenly, N. C., representing the Philologian Society, entered for the farmer an eloquent plea, showing that he is the backbone of the various orders of modern life and that he is now coming into his own. His subject was "A New, Yet Old Order,—The Farmer."

The concluding speaker was Mr. Clyde Carney Johnson, Siler City, N. C., representative of the Philologian Society, himself an athlete and manager of next year's baseball team, who discussed with full appreciation of all interests concerned, "The Relation of Athletics to College Education." Mr. Johnson thinks that athletics, when properly managed, will contribute, not only to the physical man, but to the mental and the moral man as well, and gave solid reason for his contention. The subject was presented from a new view point and the oration was thoroughly enjoyed.

IV. THE FOURTH DAY, JUNE 3.

Expression Recital. Annual Concert. Dr. Charles W. Kent Speaks.

Dr. Charles W. Kent, Professor of English in the University of Virginia, and one of the South's foremost scholars and orators, covered himself with glory in his great address before the literary societies of the College this morning. Dr. Kent was introduced by Prof. W. P. Lawrence of the department of English in the College, who referred to him as "the man who has done more to perpetuate Southern Literature and bring it into its own than any other one individual," which remark the audience appreciated by generous applause.

Dr. Kent began his address and spoke as follows:

"The transfer of sovereignty from the king to the people means that the people have the power of the king or sovereign power. The sovereign power of the people means the sovereign power of the individuals. How shall man acquire or retain this kingship?"

"By self-knowledge: A College is a place where a man finds himself, assuming what is generally true that the young man in college is lost. The newest officer is the vocational analyst to deal with the 85 per cent. of misfits. To find oneself one should take his bearings and ascertain his relations to other things, first, his fellowman with all this means of social readjustment; second to his Creator. Jefferson once wrote: 'The relations which exist between man and his Maker, and the duties resulting from these relations, are the most incumbent on his study and investigation.' Third, to the world as a theatre of action, as an object of personal concern, as a great power to be directed. Fourth. Having ascertained his bearing to other factors he may begin to weigh himself with reference to his equipment for efficiency.

"By self-reverence. What shall a man find in himself to revere? Briefly character. A man reveres not so much his life or performance and, therefore, a man might rightly be more concerned about creating a past than a future. Self reverence is the result of a life lived faithfully and rightly, of memories unsullied in their joy, of conscience approving our past careers and of confidence in the same vital and inspiring ideals which have guided us. By self-control is meant not merely negatively self-restraint but self-direction. This puts positive principles in the place of negative laws and leads not to death but to life abundant.

At three o'clock in the afternoon the Department of Expression, of which Miss Ethel Clements is director, gave its annual commencement recital and rendered a pleasing program of choice selections from Shakespeare, Browning, Tennyson and such authors. The young ladies taking part were Miss Nannie Haskins, Virgilina, Va.; Miss Annie Laurie Wicker, Elon College, N. C.; Miss Myrtle MacLeary, Suffolk, Va.; Miss Viola Frazier, Elkton, Va., Certificate; Miss Mary Williams, Suffolk, Va., Certificate; Miss Nellie Sue Fleming, High Point, N. C., Certificate.

Miss Haskins gave two selections antipodal in sentiment, carrying her audience with her from the sad to the bright side of life and leaving them in a bath of sunshine. Miss MacLeary's impersonation of Katherine was especially good. Miss Wicker delighted with her humorous selection, in which she always excels. Miss Frazier portrayed Judas on the night of the crucifixion with sympathetic insight and power. Miss Fleming's impersonation of Juliet revealed a rare dramatic ability, while Miss Williams was never better than in the scene from Leah which she rendered with fine effect.

In the evening at eight o'clock the Department of Music was greeted by a tremendous audience to hear its 24th annual concert. The selections were from such masters as Chopin, Wagner, Moszkowski, Litz, and others and were rendered by the advanced pupils of the director's class. Those participating in the program were as follows: Miss Annie Simpson, Atlanta, Ga.; Miss Ethel Barrett, Dayton, O., certificate in piano; Miss Hattie Belle Smith, Elon College, N. C., certificate in piano; Miss Madge Moffitt, Ramseur, N. C.; Miss Beatrice Mason, Nashville, N. C., certificate in piano; Miss Jennie Willis Atkinson, Elon College, N. C.; Miss Maibelle Pritchette, Altamahaw, N. C., diploma in piano; Miss Minnie Riedel, Holland, Va., certificate in piano; Miss Madelle Woodruff, Lumpkin, Ga.; Miss Blanche Newman, Holland, Va.; Miss Pearl Tuck, Virgilina, Va.; Miss Viola Rollings, Sebrell, Va.; Miss Annie Bagwell, Durham, N. C., certificate in voice; Miss Pearl Fogleman, Burlington, N. C., certificate in voice; Miss Grace Rollings, Sebrell, Va.; Mr. O. M. Barnes, Greensboro, N. C., diploma in voice; and Mr. M. E. Woodward, Suffolk, Va. There have been more than a hundred music pupils in the department this year.

V. THE FIFTH DAY, JUNE 4.

Fifty-Two Receive Diplomas and Certificates.

The final day of commencement season was thronged with tremendous crowds. It was a gala day, fifty-two receiving degrees, diplomas, and certificates, the largest cluster of such fortunates so far in Elon's twenty-three years of achievement. Promptly at 10:30 A. M. the baccalaureate procession filed into the auditorium and the formal graduation exercises began with prayer by Rev W. G. Clements.

The audience was welcomed by the salutarian, Miss Nellie Sue Fleming, High Point, N. C. Four essays and two orations then followed. The first was an oration by Mr. Ben Joe Earp, Milton, N. C., who discussed football as a sport, the so-called typical American sport, using as his subject, "Chasing the Pig Skin." Mr. Earp was a football player during part of his College days, and declaimed boldly against the brutality of this pastime.

Mr. A. L. Hook chose for his theme, "Hidden Powers," and spoke of the great forces as silent forces, whose powers could not be seen, but which could not be resisted.

Miss Pearl Tuck paid a glowing tribute to indomitable will-power, thinking that all things must eventually yield to him who thinks he can. Her subject was, "He Can Who Thinks He Can."

Miss Virgie Beale spoke of character as the basis of success and the only guarantee of real attainment, picturing life as a building and character that principle in it which made it "The Living Structure."

Miss Viola Frazier congratulated those who have had experience in the school of hard knocks and saw a joy as well as a discipline in "The Ministry of Adversity."

Miss Pearl Fogleman made a hit with her militant utterance respecting the treatment of women at the hands of the gallant sex. She declared that women were the mothers of men and their strength as men was due to their mothers' characters and personal training and that it was folly to regard women as man's inferior. She was warmly applauded, when she concluded her remarks by asserting that "Womanhood, the badge of inferiority, shall soon be changed into womanhood, the badge of excellency in every line, and the sons of women will see that it shall be even so."

Miss Virgie Beale, valedictorian of the class, next said farewell to the audience and this part of the class in the Commencement exercises was over. As soon as she was seated President Harper delivered the diplomas and certificates to the graduates prefacing his presentation of them with words of admonition as to the place College men and women should occupy in the leadership of modern life, as follows:

BACHELOR OF ARTS:

Viola E. Frazier, Elkton, Va.; Alonzo Lohr Hook, Winchester, Va.; Charles Titus Rand, McCullers, N. C.; Walton Staley Wicker, Elon College, N. C.

BACHELOR OF PHILOSOPHY

Alonzo Tomlinson Banks, Henderson, N. C.; Janie Lee Beale, Handsom, Va.; Virginia Estelle Beale, Windsor, Va.; Ben Joe Earp, Semora, N. C.; Nellie Sue Fleming, High Point, N. C.; Pearl Fogleman, Burlington, N. C.; Lillian Pearl Tuck, Virgilina, Va.

LICENTIATE OF INSTRUCTION:

Pearl McKee Jones, Holly Springs, N. C.; Lillian Belle Johnson, Cardenas, N. C.; Isaac James Kellum, Kellum, N. C.; Myrtie Alice Lawrence, Seagrove, N. C.; Doctor Travis Surratt, Jackson Hill, N. C.

MASTER OF ARTS:

Rufus C. Cox, A. B., Liberty, N. C.; W. D. Harward, A. B., Newport News, Va.; John Lee Johnson, A. B., Cardenas, N. C.; C. C. Jones, A. B., Wakefield, Va.; Charles Everett Newman, A. B., Henderson, N. C.; Mrs. L. E. Smith, Ph. B., Princeton, N. J.; H. E. Truitt, Ph. B., Defiance, Ohio.

CERTIFICATES IN FINE ARTS:

Annie Corinne Bagwell, Durham, N. C., Thelma Clymer, Greensboro, N. C., Naomi Joyner, Courtland, Va., Helen Lawrence, Holland, Va., Larlie May Taylor, Milton, N. C., Annie Laurie Wicker, Elon College, N. C., Mary Elizabeth Williams, Suffolk, Va.

CERTIFICATES IN EXPRESSION:

Nellie Sue Fleming, High Point, N. C., Viola E. Frazier, Elkton, Va., Mary Elizabeth Williams, Suffolk, Va.

CERTIFICATES IN COMMERCIAL DEPARTMENT:

Henderson Cole, Jr., Wilmington, N. C., James P. Hales, Kenly, N. C., W. Harvey Pitman, Kenly, N. C., Lester V. Smith, McLeansville, N. C., Raymond W. Southerland, Watha, N. C., Langston L. Wilson, Mebane, N. C.

Honorary degrees were conferred as follows:

Prof. Edward Byers, Dean of Defiance College, Defiance, Ohio, to be Doctor of Literature. Rev. J. W. Harrell, Portsmouth, Va., to be Doctor of Divinity, Rev. I. W. Johnson, Suffolk, Va., to be Doctor of Divinity, Rev. A. B. Kendall, Burlington, N. C., to be Doctor of Divinity, Rev. C. H. Rowland, Franklin, Va., to be Doctor of Divinity. Rev. J. W. Wellons, Elon College, N. C., the oldest living minister in the Christian Church, South and who has done more perhaps to infuse the principles of his denomination than any man among us, to be Doctor of Divinity.

Dr. C. E. Forlines, Professor of Pastoral Theology in the Western Maryland Theological Seminary, was recognized and delivered the Bibles to the graduating class. Dr. Forlines deplored the tendency in many sections to deny the people the right to the Bible in connection with their education and declared that no College could afford to do anything derogatory to the Book of books. He was of the opinion that few men become great who did not get their inspiration from the inspiring record of Holy Writ.

Dr. L. F. Johnson, Raleigh, N. C., in the absence of Col. S. L. Adams, Cluster Springs, Va., giver of the Stanford Orator's medal, presented the five medals which it is the custom of the College to award through its friends who have provided the foundation of them, as follows: Long Scholarship to Miss Virgie Beale, Windsor, Va.; the Morrow Memorial Thesis to W. S. Wicker, Elon College, N. C.; the Moffitt Essayist's to Miss Viola E. Frazier, Elkton, Va.; and the Stanford Orator's to Rev. Ben. Joe Earp, Milton, N. C.

The Art Exhibit was given this time in the young Ladies' Gymnasium on the second floor of the annex of the West Dormitory and occurred at 3 P. M. Following came the reunions of the Psiphelian, Philologian, and Clio Literary Societies in their respective halls. These reunions were characterized by the usual wit and humor and good fellow-feeling.

The College Band, besides furnishing music for the graduating exercises this morning, also gave a concert on the campus at 6:30 o'clock, occupying the traditional place for this function, the College Band Stand.

Mrs. J. K. Ruebush, Dayton, Va., of the class of 1901, at eight o'clock charmed her audience in a discussion from the woman's stand point of "Universal Democracy." Mrs. Ruebush said nothing about woman's suffrage and it could not be inferred whether she believes in it or not. She discussed the development of democracy in every department of life and that with its spread had come happiness and fulness of life for the masses as well as for the classes.

In concluding her magnificent address Mrs. Ruebush said:

"Democracy is more than a form of government. It is a spirit of life. It is faith that all men are brothers. It is therefore faith in community interest. It is that faith the Father has given to his children all things richly to enjoy. It is religion of the people, by the people, and for the people. It is education of the people, by the people, and for the people. It is wealth of the people, by the people, and for the people. It is government of the people, by the people, and for the people. In brief, it is the sovereignty of the people in religion, education, and industry no less than in government.

"And in the light of this coming World-wide Democracy, we look forward to the time when machinery will do the world's drudgery and man will cease to be a drudge; when he will have time for other things than labor; when the conditions of labor will be sanitary and generally comfortable; when he will share in the profits of his labor; when there will be none so rich that they will have to spend their money on monkey dinners, jeweled collars for poodles, and gold and powdered footmen; when none will be so poor that they can get no work to do; when all shall recognize the truth that an injury to one is an injury to all and that a benefit to one is a benefit to all. Then shall we approach the realization of Tennyson's fine phrase, 'the Parliament of Man, the Federation of the World.'"

The Alumni Banquet occurred in the College Dining Hall, immediately following Mrs. Ruebush's address. Over this she gracefully presided as toastmaster, the banquet going through six courses and continuing till 2 A. M. Many toasts were responded to.

Rev. H. E. Rountree, Greensboro, N. C., with Prof. A. Lucius Lincoln, Richmond, Va., as alternate, is to deliver the Alumni Oration in June 1914.

W. A. HARPER.

THE HEALING POWER OF MUSIC.

BY A STUDENT.

A correspondent to a scientific periodical pleads for the use of music as a cure for the sick, and especially for the mentally sick and the insane, giving some instances of such cures which have come under his observation. Cases of nostalgia and aphasia were cured by a musical box in the sanitarium; appropriations, he thinks, should be made by States for supplying asylums with musical instruments of the automatic kind. The writer attributes the cure to a resuscitation of the will-power by means of the emotions, the emotions being aroused by the music. Music, he says, is the language of the emotions; and good music diverts the mind from bad emotions such as brooding.

The tendency to such refined methods of cure may be welcomed as a contrast to the opposite tendency—that in the direction of experimenting upon the brains of living animals or injecting unclean animal extracts into the blood. The proposal to cure the insane by music certainly stands in marked contrast with the proposal to kill them off or mutilate them. The existence of these two contrary tendencies, the one towards refinement and progress in knowledge, the other towards reaction and error, should be carefully noted. In connection with the healing art we have also the X-rays to look to as a means of diagnosing and curing by refined means.

To what emotions does music appeal? There are various kinds of emotions, and a good deal of music that is played appeals to the lower kinds, thus tending to degrade the character instead of uplifting it. More than this, even though the music should appeal to higher and nobler emotions, yet if the nervous system of the hearer is not strong and well-balanced, he may be upset and may vibrate to the opposite extreme. Weak and sensitive natures often run through the whole gamut of emotions from lofty aspirations to maudlin tears, and do nothing after all but waste nervous force.

So the mere rousing of emotions, even though they be lofty ones, is not enough; the higher emotions must be made fruitful in action.

The reason why we cannot fix or make use of the lofty states into which music lifts us is because the general tone of our life is not keyed up to that pitch. And so, when the influence has been withdrawn, we fall down again; and the impetus may carry us for a time below our normal level. Music shows us a glimpse of a world of beauty and harmony, and we long to be there, but many preparations are necessary before we can make the journey. The beauty revealed by music has to be lived up to. Our momentary rapture is like the vision of a goddess who stays just long enough to charm us with her splendor and then vanished with a beckoning finger. Shall we then spend our life pining over the vision of wasting our adoration on the mere phantom of memory, and say that life is all a delusion and a snare?

If music does not inspire us to action, it has not inspired us at all. We have to realize that we are temples and that these shrines need to be made clean and fit ere they can be blessed by sublime presences. Anything worth having must be fought for; and it rests with us whether we consider the thing worth fighting for.

Let us try to attach to the word "music" a wider meaning than that of the concord of sweet sounds. Let it stand for harmony in general. Then we have a meaning for the expression "to make music in our lives." Could we not try to establish music within the inner world of thoughts which we inhabit? We could study the causes whence discord arises in that world—chiefly in connection with our relations to other people.

Harmony is not the same as unison. Some people's notion of brotherhood is unison; all people sounding one note, and that note—whose?

How many geniuses fall short of their mark because they try to go on sounding their own note! Perhaps this accounts for the limitations of genius and the sad falls and anticlimaxes. And it is a singular circumstance that when we try to discover the personalities of our greatest geniuses we can find little or none. Perhaps they did not have any personality to speak of.

Are we not fond of sounding our own note? Do we not like to get away by ourselves, and are we not irritated when someone else breaks in with his note. There are even people who, when listening to music become irritated if someone talks. Perhaps they are justified, but was it, or was it not, the music that inspired the irritation?

Everybody knows the man who in a chorus insists on having his own voice heard above the rest. He knows nothing of the delight of letting one's voice blend into the indistinguishable harmony with the whole. It is the same with general conduct. We cannot make harmony all alone.

All this implies that it is the old enemy, selfishness, that is the fly in the ointment. We cannot take this thing with us into the beautiful realms after which we pine. But what we should do is to admit this fact, and not turn round and curse the laws of nature.

There is great need of beauty in the world, and music is one of the sources through which it must enter. But the love of beauty must be coupled with resolve, or it will be vain and fruitless. It is for this reason that in Lomaland music is regarded as an integral part of the art of life and is studied pari passu with the study of the art of life. Thus treated, music acquires a new significance and becomes a healer not only of the mind and body, but of the whole nature.—The Theosophical Path.

MORAL REFORM.

(Address of Rev. George T. Price, of Washington, D. C., at the Second annual session of the Delmarvia Conference of the Christian church at Dover, Delaware, May 24, 1913.)

That which is morally abnormal may with propriety be designated Moral Evil, because it keeps in view the type or ideal from which it has departed.

There is an advantage in employing the Word rather than Sin, Vice and Crime, for it always implies the type or ideal.

The recognition of Moral Evil is not difficult. The only difficulty is to know where to begin. The need of social reform is as good a starting point as any. It is generally assumed that Society needs reformation in various relations, and Society means the persons who compose it. Many are expending their energy on industrial reform. They trace nearly all existing evils to selfish competition which creates huge monopolies and trusts, and which makes the laborer the last rather than the first partaker of the fruits of their labor. It is contended that economic conditions should be changed from competition to combination, that there should be an equitable, or perhaps an equal distribution of wealth. Poverty, disease, shortened-lives, crime, intemperance, and, in fact nearly all evils are traced to the encroachment of profit upon wages. Others are devoted to the reform of the family. They find in frequent divorce, in hasty and ill assorted marriages, in the displacement of the home by tenement, and boarding-houses, in the prevalence of licentiousness which is fatal to domestic purity and a preventive of marriage, the root of all kinds of evil. Others still find in political and municipal corruption a crying evil. These are wrongs, injustices, and perversions, which infest civilized society. True progress which is needed and expected in all the relations of society is the correction of wrongs. What then is evil? It is that which the word suggests; the opposite of virtue, which is the normal character. If goodness is supremacy of the higher over the lower in the proportionate satisfaction of all powers, then badness is the reverse of this order, in the satisfaction of the lower to the neglect of the higher.

The proper idea of evil as we use the term, is the gratification of the appetites, passions, and propensities; the sacrifice of truth or honor or purity in order to enjoy sensuous pleasures and to gain physical good; the estimate of material wealth as the chief good because it ministers to the enjoyment of luxurious and sensual pleasure.

With these introductory remarks, I proceed to select the three great institutions as adequate for moral reformation of human society; viz., The Family, the State, and the Church.

1. The Family. There is a marked, and, some think, an alarming tendency to degeneration in the modern family. The outward sign of retrogression is frequency of divorce, which, in some states of the American union, is as high as ten per centum of the marriages each year, and in no state is less than three per centum, except South Carolina, which does not permit divorce. Wherever law is relaxed divorces increase, as in Germany and the Scandinavian States.

Another sign of degeneration is in the family life.

At the upper end of social life are the demands of Society and business, with the relegation of children to maids and governesses, and early banishment to boarding schools.

At the lower end are small and squalid tenements, frequent change of abode, work of women and children in shops and factories, the trade union meeting, the engine company, the military company, the lodge, the saloon, and worse.

At the upper end are marriages of convenience without affection.

At the lower end are marriages of impulse, passion, and improvidence. Workers in university settlements regard it as one of the most discouraging facts in the habits of the average working man that he is ashamed to be seen, with his family, in the places he visits after his day's work is done.

While we do not approve of the continental beer garden, yet it has one redeeming feature; fathers, mothers and children are found there together.

I need not indicate in detail the evils which threaten the family and the home. It is evident that the purity and happiness of the home are of the first importance to the welfare of Society. Where there is contented domestic life in the homes nearly all social evils are absent.

A direct work to be done is in respect to laws of marriage and divorce. There is no doubt that facility of legal divorce makes the family insecure; that, if the causes were reduced and investigations were more careful, quarrels would not arise so often, and there would be fewer ill assorted and hasty marriages. This is an instance in which law may do much for morals and happiness.

Indirectly, the value of the family and home is enhanced by those sentiments which exalt other interests above wealth, which favor marriages of affinity in tastes, character, and affection, and which discourages marriages for money and position. Then, too, whatever improves the conditions of laborers and of the poor, whatever gives greater permanence to residence, more comfortable dwellings, better education, healthful and innocent amusements, promotes the welfare of the family.

A returning current of population from the city to the country would be favorable to the home. It is true that life in remote rural districts is healthier and more natural than in the cities, and a reflux from the crowded, noisy city to the suburbs is decidedly advantageous to families of small or moderate means. The privileges of the city, and the quiet, the healthfulness and the open spaces of the country are combined. This movement of population is facilitated by the electric railway and the bicycle, and will doubtless be promoted by other means of rapid transit.

The well regulated home is the ideal society in miniature. It is under the law of reciprocal service. Each has his right and his duty. The strong serve the weak. To maintain a true home, to be charged with the nurture and education of children, to engage as husband, wife, father, mother, child, brother, sister, in services of mutual helpfulness which are expressions of mutual love, is to bear a large part in social regeneration.

The family is one of the most important organs of the Kingdom of God.

2. The State. Like the family, the State promotes and is promoted by social progress. It is an organ of social regeneration and is itself to be constantly regenerated. By the State we mean the political organization, having a constitution and laws and ordaining a peculiar form of government. Now the inclination of the modern state is distinctly towards democracy, that is toward self-government by the people.

The power of aristocracy is being reduced; while the power of the people is being enlarged. There is, however, a well grounded fear of aristocracy of wealth. The concentration of wealth in a few hands gives power more enormous than that of kings.

In America, local legislatures can be corrupted by railway magnates and owners of monopolies, and through the legislatures the general government can be controlled. Yet, on the whole, democracy is more likely to check this tendency than to be overcome by it. This is seen in the limitations being placed upon the great and powerful corporations of this country. The people are watchful and alive to the danger. Legislation may be thwarted for a time, but will be effectual in the end. The power of taxation is almost unlimited. In fact, there is more danger that legislation will place weights too heavy for legitimate enterprises to carry, than that an aristocracy of wealth will take political power away from the people.

Amongst the members of an aristocratic class the code of morals may be high, but the relations of superiors to inferiors too frequently is unjust and debasing to both.

At all events democracy has come to stay. It may be held as a political axiom that democracies do not go backward. Progress must proceed, not by reversion of aristocratic government and recovery of its shorn power, but by the intelligence and honesty of the people who have taken and are taking government in their own hands, that all must have equal rights under the same conditions. But, we must remember that rights before the law, carry with them corresponding duties which are enforced by the law. However unequal men may be in ability and possession, as citizens, they are equal in all legal and political rights and duties. To every man his right, from every man his duty, is the true moral principle of good government.

The State is also the guardian of morality. The family is under the guardianship of the State, not only as to the support of wife and children, and inheritance of property, but also as to purity. Marriage is legalized by the State, that it may be the more secure. The religious sanctions of marriage are recognized by the State, so that there may be every possible safeguard. Causes of divorce are very properly limited by law. The intimate interdependence of State and family is apparent to all. The State is preserved by the founding of new families; and the family is protected by wholesome legislation; which shows the great importance of electing to legislatures men of high ideals of the sacredness of the family. Our law makers should also understand the danger of the home being invaded by the common enemy, and give corresponding protection.

The State also protects religion by securing its public observance from interruption, by protecting Sunday from the encroachments of industry, by defense of personal liberty in religious opinion, and in many other ways, on the ground that religion conserves and encourages morality.

3. Let us now consider the Church as a social institution. It is a means of social reform or recognition. It has been aptly called the institute of humanity. The church is the Kingdom of God, but one of the organs of the Kingdom of God, and through it operates upon human life, both personal and social. The Kingdom comes in all purification of life and progress of society, in business, culture, art, civilization, in the family, and in the State, which are also, each in its own functions, organs of the Kingdom.

The Church is the organ which most directly promotes that Kingdom, as having to do with the worship of God and with the service of humanity. The Church aims at complete and universal regeneration; complete for the individual, universal for all mankind. The entire moral life and character of the individual is cultivated by the Church, since religion includes all aims, motives and conduct. The State controls only certain outward acts in civil and political relations.

Family nurture is confined to nonage, and the members pass from parental authority and care to freedom of personal life and social affiliation. The Church, as the minister of religion, includes the entire moral culture of the individual and the whole period of life.

Personal regeneration and perfection of love involves social regeneration in the organic life of the church and is universal, including all persons of every class, race and color. Congress may forbid the immigration of the Chinese and Japanese. A state legislature may forbid their ownership of land, but there would be universal consternation if by act of Congress churches should be forbidden to receive a Chinese or a Japanese to membership. In the Southern States slaves were members of the churches to which their masters belonged.

The early church, founded by our Lord and organized by the Apostles was universal, it included Jews and Gentiles, women and men, slaves and masters. The Church, more than commerce, binds the nation together. The Christian church is the best ally, as it was the precursor, the true democracy. The Church is not English, or American, or Greek or Roman. It is the Holy Catholic Church. The first words of the creed expresses belief in God the Father Almighty, whose children we are. The Fatherhood of God implies the brotherhood of Man. Besides this principal of universal brotherhood differences of Protestant and Roman Catholic polity and liturgy diminish into insignificance. The one may exalt the organization above the individuals, giving the society authority over the person. The other may subordinate the organization to the individual, exalting private judgment. The one may regard salvation as flowing to the person only through the Church. The other may regard the Church as the result of personal faith in the Lord Jesus Christ. The one may lean too heavily on the organization. The other may encourage excessive individualism. Each may need to be corrected by the other. But in either case, the Church is the society of universal brotherhood, the institute of humanity.

The Church is under the law of service according to the needs of men on one hand and ability on the other. The question then, Who is my neighbor? The answer is given, not by locality, nor by affinity of Class, Nation or culture, but by sympathy.

A neighbor is one, wherever he is, and whoever he is, who needs what I can give, or can give what I need. The family is under the law of service by an impulse of nature, within a limited circle. The State stands chiefly for the protection of rights on the basis of justice. The Church stands for the discharge of duties on the basis of love. The Church is under the law of service in freedom and intelligence, according to the need of men. In scope it is wider than the family and the State combined.

So the family, the State and the Church, as we have tried to show, are required, in their best endeavor, to establish and enforce by love, by justice and by natural law the moral welfare of Society. The interdependence of family, Church and State is suggested in the old war-cry, when men were battling in defence of their country: "For our Altars and our firesides."

Children's Missionary Stories

STORIES are—yes, must be—used by every wide-awake worker among, or leader or teacher of, children.

MISSIONARY STORIES seem to have been the one field well-nigh overlooked until Mrs. Alice Moreton Burnett, Corresponding Secretary for the Woman's Board for Home Missions of the Christian Church, made a compilation of thirty interesting, instructive stories pertaining especially and directly to missions that are sure to be appreciated by workers, teachers, leaders, pastors, fathers, mothers—and the children.

Some of the Important Events of both Home Missions and Foreign Missions are also included, together with Suggestions For Junior Leaders.

They make a book 5 x 7 inches in size, 128 pages, red cloth binding—a handsome, attractive volume. Price 35c per copy postpaid.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON FOR JUNE 15.

Subject.—"Jacob Before Pharaoh." Genesis 47:1-12.

Time.—A few weeks after the events of Lesson 10, B. C. 1707 (Ussher).

Place.—Egypt.

Persons.—Joseph, his father and brothers, Pharaoh.

Golden Text.—To them that love God all things work together for good.—Rom. 8:28.

Leading Thought.—Love God and let him order our lives.

The purpose of this lesson, as one in the series of the life of Joseph, is to show how, through Joseph, Jacob and his clan reached, were welcomed, and settled in Egypt.

To-day we conclude the series of eight lessons on the life of Joseph.

The beauty and strength of his character strongly suggest the one only perfect character.

It is a commentary on human progress when we can turn back four thousand years and find a character that, to us of this latest, most advanced century, is practically above any adverse criticism.

It seems to be a part of God's plan that every age has some men, so noble, so true, so imaging the divine, so perfectly manifesting God's idea of a man, as to be examples to all ages.

Lesson Contrasts.

In our last lesson Joseph was sending for his father; in this lesson he is welcoming him to Egypt. In that lesson he declared his love for his brothers and father; in this lesson he manifests that love in every way that true love suggests. In that lesson the governor of Egypt, apart from all beholders, privately expressed his affection for his kinsmen; in this lesson the governor of Egypt publicly honors the same uncouth shepherds, showing them as much courtesy as if they were ambassadors from a foreign land. In that lesson Goshen was offered to Israelites for a habitation; in this lesson this fertile part of Egypt is accepted by them, and their herds and families take possession. Up to this point of the story Jacob and his sons had known of Egypt's monarch only by hearsay; in this lesson they are brought into his very presence, and the monarch shows his true kingliness in his deference to the aged, godly Jacob.

OUR WORK MOVES FORWARD.

Following are some facts taken from the report of Mr. Hines, editorial and field secretary, to the Burlington convention:

From the information I have at hand I can report since the organization of the Young People's convention the organization of the following classes, societies and departments:

Teacher training classes, 32; Organized classes, 103; Cradle rolls, 23; Home departments, 19; Christian Endeavor societies, 52.

Organizations in the last two years:

Teacher training classes 3; Organized classes, 45; Cradle rolls, 5; Home departments, 4; Christian Endeavor societies, 11.

The following comparative figures are of interest:

	No. 1910	No. 1912
Sunday schools	168	182
Officers & Teachers	1500	1611
Money raised	$6,512	$8,825
S. S. Enrollment	14122	16430
Church membership	20445	20850

From 1910 to 1912 the church membership of the Southern Christian convention increased only 405, or 2 per cent. In the same period the Sunday school enrollment jumped from 14,122 to 16,430—a gain of 2,308, or 16 per cent. At the same time the contributions to Sunday school purposes increased 26 per cent.

I do not believe it is a vain thing for this convention to claim some of the credit for this showing.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE MEETS.

Tuesday afternoon and evening of last week the executive committee of the Sunday School and Christian Endeavor General Convention held sessions at Elon College. Present were: President W. T. Walters, Secretary A. W. Andes, Treasurer J. O. Cox, Rev. H. E. Rountree and Field Secretary Charles A. Hines.

The committee reelected Mr. Hines editorial and field secretary upon the same terms as he had served for two years. He was instructed to emphasize class organization and better systematized Sunday schools for the next two months.

It was decided to ask every Sunday school in the Southern Christian church to give the collection on the first Sunday in September to the work of the convention. All local conventions will be asked for a contribution of one cent for Sunday school and Christian Endeavor enrolment.

The committee instructed Treasurer Cox to investigate the matter of getting out a Sunday school and Christian Endeavor Handbook, which will contain minutes of all Sunday School and Christian Endeavor conventions in the Southern Christian church, together with other valuable information. This will probably be published as soon as the minutes can be obtained of the conventions.

NOTES ON C. E. TOPIC FOR JUNE 22.

"Mission Work at Home and Abroad. VI. Missionary Tours. Acts 15:36-41; 16:1-5.

As all other meetings, this should be planned for in advance. Let the prayer meeting committee meet with the leader two weeks before the meeting. Take the information contained in the Christian Endeavor World and give it out to the members. Let the questions also be handed to the better informed members.

Let members tell of instances of telling work that missionaries have done, striking plans that have been used. The religious papers and books are full of such things. Do not let the meeting lag. When those who will speak spontaneously have finished, either call upon others or close the meeting.

Let the prayers be for missionaries and especially for the missionary enterprises of our church. Let someone tell of the little foreign work we are doing, and tell the reason for our not having made more progress.

Missionary Items.

The missionary goes where the crowd is, much as the strolling preachers in our own country—to market places, the principal street corner, the front of the public building and like places.

The magic lantern has been found useful in missionary work. The modern moving pictures may yet be used in the salvation of heathen people.

The traveling preacher carries many tracts in the native language, stating simply the message of the Christian religion.

Sometimes a Bible left in a community will mean the organization of a church. "From small acorns grow mighty oaks." From a little act, great consequences flow.

Many churches have no visit from the missionary but once a year. The church is started, a native helper is left in charge, and the preacher comes around to solemnize marriages and administer ordinances.

Railroads and other progressive modes of travel are making the work of the missionary of more value. It does not make his work easier; it makes it possible for him to accomplish more.

PREDESTINATION

J. J. SUMMERBELL

N. Summerbell left among his papers one reading somewhat as follows:—

Predestination is the monarch doctrine of fate. In opposition to free will, it has characterized not only the dogmas of various Christian sects, but has been an icy bulwark of Mohammedan faith. Of old it entered largely into pagan philosophy; later it came into Christian learning.

Predestination in the Bible is simply certain providences of exceptions to the operation of natural causes, whereby God in his mercy guides human destiny in Christian salvation.

Too many, however, have forced into the doctrine the etymological meaning of the word predestinate: pre, prior, or before, and destine, to appoint, to determine. They give the doctrine the cold rigidity of the composition of the word. But in the New Testament the word refers to the guiding hand of God to ways of safety and mercy; and is no more rigid and unfeeling than the tender mother's hand as she guides her little child among the flowers and away from the thorns.

Many mistake predestination for unchangeable iron fate; thus grafting into the golden vine of gospel grace the philosophy of the stoic of ancient Greece or later Mohammedanism. Thus the doctrine becomes one of gloomy doom; or of a fixed end for the good or evil. The human being becomes a man of destiny. So Plato taught. So Napoleon spoke of himself. So thousands think; that their fate is fixed, for glory or despair.

Contrary to this, the gospel predestination only signifies God's previously revealed desire; the course of safety in which, in his love, he desires us all to sail over the sea of life into heaven's blessed port of endless peace.

Mark well, and remember, that in the Bible no man is predestined to death, or to be lost, irrespective of the action of his own will developed in his conduct. None are predestined to a life of sin. The words like foreordained, or foreknow, or elect, are all for the good. No demon lost is predestined, or sinful man is predestined to perish. And the good are predestined, not to become worse, but better. Witness the reading:—

"Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who hath blessed us with every spiritual blessing in the heavenly places in Christ: even as he chose us in him before the foundation of the world, that we should be holy and without blemish before him in love: having foreordained us unto adoption as sons through Jesus Christ unto himself, according to the good pleasure of his will" (Eph. 1:3-5).

There, you see, some are predestined to the adoption of sons; that is, those not sons, are predestined to become sons. Gospel predestination is never to evil, but always to good.

Turn to another passage unjustly used to lay a load of fate on the human heart:

"For whom he foreknew, he also foreordained to be conformed to the image of his Son, that he might be the firstborn among many brethren: and whom he foreordained, them he also called: and whom he called, them he also justified: and whom he justified, them he also glorified" (Rom. 8:29-30).

Here those who are foreordained, or predestined, are destined for good. Men are never doomed to evil, by the will of God.

In this passage in Romans, who were they whom God foreknew, who were also predestined? Was it not his people? The first verse of the 11th chapter reads,

"I say then, Did God cast off his people? God forbid."

The whole doctrine of predestination, as given by Paul, has reference to the old Hebrews, God's people, and signifies that they were to become Christians as a race, as a church; and all the good, who accepted Christ, fulfilled their destiny; that is, they were conformed to the image of God's Son, who predestinated them to the adoption of sons.

And the word predestination in the Bible is never applied to any other people, nor to any other purpose. Of the 66 books of the Bible, it is found in only two: Romans and Ephesians; and in only two chapters of those books; and in only two or three verses of those chapters. It applied only to one people, the Jews; and for only one purpose for them: to be Christians.

"Predestinate" is never applied to the Gentiles.

Now read in full, Eph. 1:3-14:—

"Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who hath blessed us with every spiritual blessing in the heavenly places in Christ: even as he chose us in him before the foundation of the world, that we should be holy and without blemish before him in love: having foreordained us unto adoption as sons through Jesus Christ unto himself, according to the good pleasure of his will, to the praise of the glory of his grace, which he freely bestowed on us in the Beloved: in whom we have our redemption through his blood, the forgiveness of our trespasses, according to the riches of his grace, which he made to abound toward us in all wisdom and prudence, making known unto us the mystery of his will, according to his good pleasure which he purposed in him unto a dispensation of the fulness of the times, to sum up all things in Christ, the things in the heavens, and the things upon the earth; in him, I say, in whom also we were made a heritage, having been foreordained according to the purpose of him who worketh all things after the counsel of his will; to the end that we should be unto the praise of his glory, we who had before hoped in Christ: in whom ye also, having heard the word of the truth, the gospel of your salvation, — in whom, having also believed, ye were sealed with the Holy Spirit of promise, which is an earnest of our inheritance, unto the redemption of God's own possession, unto the praise of his glory."

In this long sentence of Paul, the Hebrews, the Jews, are the we, the us; and the Gentiles are ye. Read it again with that thought in mind.

But predestination is not fate. Only a part of those Hebrews predestinated to the adoption of sons, ever became sons. Possibly, probably, the bulk of the people rebelled, and died aliens.

For no one is forced by predestination; that is, the predestination of God. Men violate the predestination of God, the same as the law of Sinai.

When in Romans, 9th chapter, Paul speaks of Jacob and Esau, recalling the prophecy, "The elder shall serve the younger," a prophecy fulfilled, he immediately quoted "Jacob have I loved, but Esau I hated." And many a reader supposes that the "love" and "hate" passage accompanied the prediction just quoted by Paul. But it did not. It was a historical statement written by Malachi 1800 years after Jacob and Esau were born, not referring primarily to Jacob and Esau personally, but picturing God's condemnation of their descendants on account of their wickedness, and his love of the Israelites. But even in this connection the emphasis is on the special choosing of the people of Israel to become sons of God; although they were still allowed their freedom.

And when Paul speaks of Pharaoh and the hardening of his heart, we easily see that God hardens the sinner's heart only because he has chosen to sin. God is just; for even while Paul is picturing the foreordaining by God, and "showing his wrath" against the "vessels" made "unto dishonor," he pictures him as having "endured with much long suffering" their conduct.

And why should any one protest against the work of the infinite Potter? If he chooses some of the human clay to become his sons, what right have Egyptians to complain of fate? God simply keeps his freedom, and chooses the material for his sons that is not defiled by sinful opposition. Has not the farmer the right to choose his seed? If men choose to be wolves, the infinite Shepherd having given them a chance to be lambs, is it not necessary for him to ordain that the wolves be expelled from the sheepfold, and do it before they destroy the lambs?

* * * * *

But let us look at the subject from another standpoint. Let us read words of Peter:—

"Peter, an apostle of Jesus Christ, to the elect who are sojourners of the Dispersion in Pontus, Galatia, Cappadocia, Asia, and Bithynia, according to the foreknowledge of God the Father, in sanctification of the Spirit, unto obedience and sprinkling of the blood of Jesus Christ: Grace to you and peace be multiplied" (1 Peter 1:1-2).

Does not this passage teach that those people were elect according to the foreknowledge of God? And if they were elect according to the foreknowledge of God, how can it have ever been possible for them to be lost? Is not this fatalism?

Here we approach the common difficulty of the human mind, when reasoning on foreordination and predestination. We involuntarily feel that God's knowledge of an event makes that event to be sure; that because God foreknows it, it must be that way; that God's knowledge of it, his foreknowledge of it, therefore, causes it to occur; therefore, that foreknowledge is foreordination in the sense of fate.

This fallacy must be thoroughly disproved, or we must accept heathen predestination and old fashioned Calvinism, notwithstanding all the teaching of the Bible that God is our Father, not willing that any of us should perish.

The key to the fallacy is found in the words knowledge and foreknowledge.

But foreknowledge is no greater a knowledge (as to certainty) than mere knowledge. That is, God's knowledge at one date is no more sure, or certain than at another date. God's knowledge of an event is no more certain after an event than before it; no more certain before it than after it. In this, God is different from man. God's memory is no more reliable than his foreknowledge; and his foresight is no more exact than his recollection. God's foreknowledge, knowledge, and subsequent knowledge (memory) are all one; that is, knowledge, perfect knowledge.

Now no one would for a moment say that my present knowledge that in the past I was secretary of the American Christian Convention and organized its general activities caused me to be such secretary, or caused me to organize such work. Every one reasons that my present knowledge of my past work is the effect of that work. My present knowledge does not cause the past event, although my present knowledge of it is perfect. That is, my knowledge of the event is the effect of the event, not the cause of it.

So God's recollection of a past event is not the cause of that event, but the effect of that event. But his foreknowledge is no more powerful, no more reliable, no more certain, no more exact, than his memory. And as his memory of an event is not the cause of the event, so his foreknowledge of it is not the cause of it.

Illustrate in another way:—

I see this paper before me. I know, I positively know, it is here. But my seeing it here is not the cause of its being here; but its being here is the cause of my seeing it here.

God's knowledge, all of it, is present knowledge: for he inhabiteth eternity. He is the "I am that I am." With God eternity is an ever present now. God does not grow old. In the time of Daniel he was the "Ancient of Days," as certainly as at the present time. With him, there is no yesterday, no tomorrow. He sees the end from the beginning and He sees the beginning from the end; always present at both. He neither looks backward, nor forward. He is in the past, in the present, and in the future, as we call such things. To him a thousand years are as one day, and one day as a thousand years. He is infinite.

Then he sees things of what to me are future, as if they were present. Then, as my seeing this paper is not the cause of its being here, but its being here is the cause of my seeing it, so God's seeing the event is not the cause of its occurrence, but its occurrence is the cause of his seeing it. With him it is now before him.

Then we reach the conclusion, that God's foreknowledge is not in any sense the cause of our conduct or fate; and whether we are free depends on other reasoning than anything based on the knowledge of that we do.

Let us now turn to the Bible, that opens to us visions of a genuine freedom, brighter and broader than any other lens. The Bible removes from our eyes the bandages of materialism, strikes from our activities the handcuffs of heathenism, and lifts from our hearts the oppressive weight of fatalism. For if the Bible be not true, there is no freedom: our appetites and passions, our conduct, and our fate, are all only the effect of physical causes; that is, matter: and we are only passive clay in the power of other clay. There is no infinite Potter to choose clay, nor sensitive clay to refuse.

Contrary to this sophistry that degrades humanity to the barren importance of minute atoms or unchoosing avalanches, let us sensibly yield to that instinct within us that, twenty times a day makes us feel that we are choosing our path in which we walk; that we select the fruit that we eat; and that we speak the words we will, or refrain, as we choose. Surrendering to that instinct, we will also discover within us the reasonable action of related powers, when conscience sometimes makes us miserable because we feel that we have chosen the wrong thing to do, or say. There could be no reproaches of conscience, if we did not naturally realize that we had freedom of choice. For when man has no freedom of choice his conscience does not reproach him; and he firmly demands that other men do not reproach him: sternly saying, I could not help myself.

That is, conscience itself, and its reproachings, prove that man is a free moral agent.

If this is so, and if the Bible is the book of God, it follows that it will reveal him as desiring us to pursue some polity in life, although allowing us our freedom. Let us see if the Bible so pictures God's government.

In Jer. 7:31 we read the following words of God concerning his disobedient Israelites:—

"And they have built the high places of Topheth, which is in the valley of the son of Hinnom, to burn their sons and their daughters in the fire; which I commanded not, neither came it into my heart."

If God had foreordained this action, it certainly must have come into his heart. The Jews evidently were free, as far as God was concerned, except that he had commanded them.

And the spirit of the subject is set forth in the three famous verses, Is. 1:18-20:—

"Come now, let us reason together, saith Jehovah: though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as snow; though they be red like crimson, they shall be as wool. If ye be willing and obedient, ye shall eat the good of the land: but if ye refuse and rebel, ye shall be devoured with the sword; for the mouth of Jehovah hath spoken it."

This warning of God makes the subject plain. He reasons with us, evidently because we are free to choose our course. He commands us, in order to induce us to escape. But he leaves us the power to disobey. He foreordains that choice against him will lead to our destruction. He is determined to preserve his own sovereignty; even though he is determined that we be free.

To set aside the natural meaning of such fatherly statements as "Come now, let us reason together," because of some abstruse reasoning of our own on the subject of the foreknowledge of God, is really an unkindness to our heavenly Father, making him to appear as pretending to give us free choice, although he does not. It is disrespectful to God.

When he says (Jer. 27:13; Ez. 18:31; 33:11) repeatedly, "Why will ye die?" the plain meaning is that it is not God's "will" for us to die; which is logically the same as for God to disclaim the doctrine that he foreordained that we should die.

This pleading of God with us reminds us of the exclamation of Christ over Jerusalem:—

"How often would I have gathered thy children together, even as a hen gathereth her own brood under her wings, and ye would not" (Luke 13:34).

"Ye would not"! Their will was against God's will. "Ye would not"! This proves that they were free.

Finally, foreknowledge, or present knowledge, or later knowledge, does not fix destiny any more than not to know.

It is the destiny that fixes the knowledge; not the knowledge that fixes the destiny.

NO "BAD FAITH" SAY RAILROAD PRESIDENTS

History of Negotiations With Legislative Commission

MATERIAL REDUCTIONS IN RATES WERE OFFERED

Could Not Accept Proposition of Legislative Commission, But Suggest That Question Be Submitted to Interstate Commerce Commission, and Agree Not to Appeal From Its Decision.

Hon W. C. Dowd, May 27th, 1913.
Chairman, Charlotte, N. C.

Dear Sir:

We observe in the public press that, at a recent meeting of certain business men at Raleigh, you as Chairman of a committee introduced a set of resolutions, the first preamble of which is as follows:

"Whereas, The representatives of the railroads operating in North Carolina, in meeting assembled, on April 29, repudiated and failed to carry out their promises made to the governor and the special freight rate commission at the meeting held on February 26, to correct the present excessive and discriminatory freight rates,"

Inasmuch as your name, in your representative capacity as Chairman, has thus become associated with the preamble and resolutions in question, we trust we may be permitted to explain to you, and through you to the important interests your committee represents, that, in our judgment, when the facts are fully appreciated, no charge or bad faith can be justly made against us.

At the outset, we must express our profound regret that the impression should prevail in the minds of any one, and especially in the minds of yourself and others associated with you, that the carriers have been guilty of any lack of good faith in their dealings with the representatives of North Carolina in regard to the important questions which have been involved in the recent negotiations with the Legislative Freight Rate Commission.

We have endeavored to live, and we believe we have lived, fully up to both the letter and the spirit of our proposition made on the 26th of February.

The proposition made, on that date, by the railroads and accepted by the Commission was as follows;

"1. The carriers, now engaging therein, will withdraw from business from the West to Virginia City points through North Carolina. This will be done, not because they consider the carrying of such business at present tariff rates as economically unsound, but in deference to the sentiment of the North Carolina public on the subject. It will be done in good faith, but as a matter of current business management with the understanding, however, that if any of them should hereafter resume such business, the State of North Carolina is to lose none of its rights as at present existing of such as it may hereafter have, in respect to such rate structure.

"2. That the carriers will, for the purpose of these negotiations, recognize the principle of making a lower proportional rate from Virginia City points to North Carolina points, than the rate now existing and will endeavor to work out with this Commission what would be such reasonable reduction, this commission or its representatives to sit with the representatives of the carriers in the effort to arrive at what is reasonable and proper in the premises; with the understanding, however, that, although actuated by the disposition to make sacrifices to fairly meet the views entertained in North Carolina that freight rates from the West to North Carolina points are unjustly discriminatory as compared with rates from the West to Virginia City points, the carriers are confronted with the difficulty that a voluntary reduction in these rates will, under the law as administered by the Interstate Commerce Commission, doubtless be used to measure the rates into other territory and to bring about a reduction of these last mentioned rates. Because of the smaller density of traffic in the South as compared with the Trunk Line and adjacent territory, it is impossible for the carriers to make or stand such general reduction in rates. The view of the North Carolina public can, without incurring the serious consequences mentioned as to rates into other territory, only be met under an order of the Interstate Commerce Commission directing certain reductions to North Carolina points and holding that such reductions will not affect the rates into other territory. Any agreement reached is, therefore, to be carried out by an application by the North Carolina authorities to the Interstate Commerce Commission for such an order, and the carriers will co-operate in an effort to secure such reductions as may be agreed upon between the North Carolina Commission and the carriers, provided such order of the Interstate Commerce Commission will protect them from reductions because of such reductions to North Carolina territory, in their rates to other territory; and provided, further, that if the action of the Interstate Commerce Commission shall not be in accordance with such agreement, the State of North Carolina shall not be precluded from such other action in respect thereto as it may be advised. If the Commission and the carriers fail to agree upon what would be reasonable in the premises, the North Carolina authorities may in their discretion submit the question to the Interstate Commerce Commission and the carriers pledge themselves to facilitate and expedite the hearing and determination thereof in every reasonable manner, but the State is not hereby precluded from using any other remedy or taking any other action as it may be advised.

"3. If there are any other questions with reference to the rate situation which either the said Commission or the carriers may desire to have considered, such question may be taken up and considered with a view of adjusting them by agreement between said Commission and the carriers, and if not adjusted, then the position of neither party to be prejudiced by such consideration or by anything herein contained. Any other questions not presented and agreed upon are left unprejudiced hereby.

"4. Inasmuch as this is an effort made in the earnest desire on the part of the carriers to meet the sentiment of North Carolina and to remove causes of controversy in that State, the above suggestion is made with the understanding that if, for any reason, it is not acceptable to the North Carolina authorities, or a final adjustment is not reached thereunder, nothing herein contained is to be used to the prejudice of the carriers in any proceeding that may be instituted against them, or any of them, in respect to freight rates as regards North Carolina territory."

In presenting this proposition, the spokesman for the railroads, as will appear from the stenographic report on file with the North Carolina Corporation commission, made the following statement:

"Your Excellency, it seems to us that the only principle on which we can maintain lower rates in North Carolina than we can in other states to the South is the fact that North Carolina is the most nearly contiguous territory to Virginia, which has these abnormally low rates, and that, therefore, the effect of that proximity may be reflected into North Carolina, whereas it could not be reflected further off."

It is difficult, of course, as there are no specifications, to appreciate exactly in what respect it is thought the railroads have not in entire good faith lived up to this accepted proposition. In the absence of such specifications, we can only examine what the proposition essentially was and compare it with the action of the railroads pursuant to it.

It will be observed that the proposition consists of four paragraphs, the fourth of which shows that the three preceeding paragraphs, although dealing with different features of the proposition, all constitute a single basis of adjustment and it was expressly stated that, "if a final adjustment is not reached thereunder, nothing herein contained is to be used to the prejudice of the carriers."

Let us examine then what the proposition actually contained.

First: It provided that the carriers now engaged therein would withdraw from business from the West to Virginia City points through North Carolina.

There has never been any subsequent discussion of this paragraph, for the reason that it is fully understood that the carriers stand ready to withdraw from this business as soon as an adjustment is reached in respect to the other points, which constitute the points really at issue.

Second: It provided that the carriers would, for the purpose of these negotiations, recognize the principle of making a lower proportional rate from Virginia City points to North Carolina points than the rates now existing, and would endeavor to work out with the Commission such reasonable reductions, the Commission or its representatives to sit with the representatives of the carriers in the effort to arrive at what would be reasonable and proper in the premises. The proposition thereupon went on to carefully explain that "although actuated by the disposition to make sacrifices to fairly meet the views entertained in North Carolina that freight rates from the West to North Carolina are unjustly discriminatory as compared with rates from the West to Virginia City points," the carriers could make no such adjustment as would extend reductions into territory other than North Carolina and to explain the reason for it, and, to ensure this, there was an express provision that any basis agreed upon should be carried by the North Carolina authorities to the Interstate Commerce Commission and should become effective only if that Commission would enter an order which would protect the carriers from reductions into other territory because of such reductions to North Carolina points.

Third: It provided that the Legislative Commission or the carriers might bring up any other points that either thought proper for discussion and action.

Reverting now to the second paragraph of the above proposition, it will, we think, be readily appreciated, from reading the text of that paragraph, especially in view of the statement made by the spokesman of the carriers, that the only way that the second paragraph could be carried into effect would be through the means of reflecting into North Carolina points the influence of the abnormally low rates which exist to Virginia Cities (for which these carriers are not responsible and which they cannot control), and that any basis of agreement reached under that paragraph and covering the points thereby provided for, must be such as would not involve a reduction of rates into other states. This limitation and condition was, by the express terms of the proposition, put upon the negotiations. It was considered essential by the carriers and its propriety was expressly agreed to by the representatives of the State. Negotiations were thereupon entered into under the limitation that anything agreed upon in respect to reductions of rates must be of such a character that it should not have the effect of reducing the rates of the carriers into territory other than North Carolina and that that conclusion should be approved and endorsed by an express order of the Interstate Commerce Commission protecting the carriers from any such reduction into other territory.

It follows from this that any reduction of rates that might be agreed upon, coming as a consequence of the influence of the abnormally low rates to Virginia City points, must be greatest to North Carolina points in closest proximity to Virginia City points, and would gradually lessen and finally disappear as the distance from Virginia City points increased. Otherwise, we would create such a situation that points in North Carolina near the South Carolina border, or the Tennessee border, would have such low rates that the influence of such low rates would necessarily extend across the borders into other states, and the Interstate Commerce Commission could make no such protecting order as was in contemplation and expressly provided for. This, we submit, must be universally conceded.

Fully appreciating, therefore, the problem before them, and seeking in the most earnest and sincere way to find a solution, the chief freight traffic officers of these railroads were instructed by their chief executives, to consider and report a basis of adjustment that would reflect, to the utmost practicable extent, the influence of the Virginia City situation into North Carolina and at the same time would preserve the essential condition of the proposition that it should not operate beyond the limits of North Carolina territory.

Pursuant to these instructions and after a thorough investigation of the rate situation applicable to North Carolina these representatives of the railroads with the full authority of the chief executive officers, suggested certain material reductions in the rates complained of to North Carolina points, which we then believed, and still believe, are in accord with both the letter and the spirit of the basic proposition. We believed that the proposition then made embraced all the reductions which could be made without opening the doors to such radical reductions of rates throughout the Southeastern territory as would reduce the rates into other territory than North Carolina and thus threaten the very existence of these properties.

We thought it best and, in fact, necessary, for the chief traffic officers of the roads to take up with the Legislative Commission the discussion of rates, rather than that the chief executives should do so, for it was a subject in respect to which these traffic officers alone could enter into an intelligent discussion of all the essential details. In fact, it will be seen from the very language of the proposition that it was in contemplation that the Commission itself need not meet the representatives of the railroads, for it might desire its representatives to be experts in rates and to sit with the representatives of the carriers—and likewise it was provided that the representatives of the carriers—without designating them and thus giving the carriers like opportunity to be represented by their traffic experts—were to sit with the representatives of the Commission, or the Commission itself, in the effort to arrive at what would be reasonably proper under the circumstances.

The reductions proposed were applicable to all points in North Carolina within the range of the principle of reflecting into North Carolina alone the influence of the low rate basis to the Virginia City Points. The reduction was greatest at the points nearest the Virginia Cities; it was less at this distance increased, and it disappeared practically altogether before it reached the State southern and western border lines. As heretofore explained, we could not hope that the Interstate Commerce Commission would approve reductions on any other principle or would be able, under any other conditions, to enter an order protecting the carriers from a reduction of their rates into other territory because of these reductions to North Carolina points.

We did not approach the Legislative Commission with the idea of assuming a trading position. We thought it due to the importance of the occasion and to the dignity of the representatives of the State, that we should come forward at first with the best proposition which we believed we could offer. While we regarded the proposition we submitted as the best and most substantial which we thought could be worked out, we were still always in the attitude of readiness to have our authorized representatives sit down with the representatives of the State, and discuss, in all its features, any suggestion that might be advanced, and were ready to consider with an open mind anything that might be brought to our attention in that connection.

We are, however, of the opinion that our offer was most substantial and that the extent and scope of the reductions contemplated by it have not yet been fully realized, and that the benefits to be derived from putting it into effect have been almost entirely overlooked.

Our proposition was the result of a patient and conscientious investigation. It was submitted to the Legislative Commission on April 19th and declined by the commission the same day. A counter proposition was made that afternoon by the Commission; and, after fully considering this counter proposition for a period of ten days, we were convinced that the rates suggested would result in reductions of revenue so serious as to impair the usefulness of these carriers and that it would be impossible to put them into effect without causing a general reduction throughout the southeast.

As the proposition of February 26th provided that any reductions agreed upon were to be of a character not to affect rates outside of North Carolina, and as it was never contemplated that the railroads were to make sacrifices which would destroy their usefulness and their ability to perform their public service, we believed that the counter proposition submitted by the Legislative Commission, while in good faith intended to be, was not in compliance with the express provision of the basic proposition of February 26th. We gave our reasons for not accepting this proposition of the Legislative Commission in the answer submitted to the conference at Raleigh on April 29th, which was given in writing, and, while we do not consider it appropriate to enter here into a discussion of the merits of the rate situation, that answer, which deals with it, is subject to the inspection of any person interested in its contents.

In the afternoon of April 29th the Legislative Commission submitted a rejoinder to the effect that our answer was not satisfactory, and offered certain modifications of its counter proposition, thus, as it seems to us, indicating that they themselves realized that their first proposition could not be sustained and did not meet the requirements of the basic proposition which imposed limits upon the scope of the negotiations. We found, however, that the obstacles, which we considered insurmountable in the original counter proposition, still remained. The Commission was respectfully advised of the reasons why we found it impossible to adopt this second suggestion. We believed then, and we believe now, that these reasons were cogent and compelling, but the Commission thought otherwise and, greatly to our regret, the conference was, at the Commission's instance, declared at an end.

The termination of the conference has raised an issue between the Legislative Commission and the railroads. That issue is this: "What, under the terms of the proposition, and under a recognition of the principle of making a lower proportional rate from Virginia Cities points to North Carolina points than the rates now existing, would be a fair and reasonable reduction?"

We concede that the Legislative Commission, in advocating a readjustment of rates upon the basis which it has adopted, is acting in the best of faith and is actuated by patriotic motives. With equal sincerity and with full confidence in the justice of our position, we contend that the reduction proposed by the Legislative Commission is too great and is beyond what was contemplated by the agreement of February 26th. In fact, we are convinced that the suggestion of the Legislative Commission will be found in direct conflict with the provision of that agreement which requires that any reduction of rates agreed upon should be confined to North Carolina territory and should not extend into other States, and that an order of the Interstate Commerce Commission should be obtained protecting the carriers against any reduction into other States because of this reduction to North Carolina points. Nothing would give us greater satisfaction than to arrive at an amicable agreement with the Commission and bring about a settlement of the rate controversy upon a basis which we would be in a position to accept.

In fact, as soon as it was made to us, we welcomed the suggestion that, although the conference between the Legislative Commission and ourselves had been declared at an end by that Commission, the North Carolina Corporation Commission, through its chairman, Mr. Travis, should take up with the traffic representatives of the railroads a further consideration of these controverted points, and see whether, in a patriotic and earnest effort on both sides, some amicable and reasonable adjustment might not be suggested and might not be reached. We are glad to say that these negotiations are continuing and we shall hope that such a conclusion may be reached by the representatives of the State of North Carolina, on the one side, and the representatives of these carriers, on the other, as will bring about an acceptable and a final adjustment of this much controverted question.

If our hopes and the hopes of the people of North Carolina be disappointed in respect to this, we will then be confronted by the question of what is the proper course to be pursued in respect to this matter.

Conceding the sincerity and patriotism and the desire to do justice on the part of the Legislative Commission and on the part of the representatives of North Carolina, but respectfully and firmly insisting that we are actuated by the same high motives, what is the proper thing for us to do? On the one hand is it proper for the carriers to insist on an arbitrary adherence to their own conclusions in respect to this matter and to refuse to have it determined by any independent and disinterested authority? On the other hand, is it proper for the representatives of the State to insist arbitrarily upon their view and exercise their power for the purpose of coercing an acceptance? Must not both of these questions be answered in the negative? Is it not, on the contrary, the proper, wise, and patriotic thing to submit this difference, conscientiously entertained on both sides, to the adjudication of the only tribunal provided by law for the settlement of just such controversies?

It is not the function of the State, or within its lawful authority, to control interstate rates, and the power of the railroads in respect to them is expressly made subject to the control and authority of the Interstate Commerce Commission. It is universally admitted that the regulation of interstate rates is a function of the national government alone. That government has provided instrumentalities for the special purpose and a tribunal for the adjudication of all disputes relating to interstate rates. It has provided a Commission which to a very high degree possesses the confidence of the American people and its doors are open and its procedure simple. The determination of a case can be expedited and a conclusion reached at an early day. We are obliged by the proposition of February 26th to expedite a hearing before that Commission in every practicable way and we stand ready to promptly and fully comply with that duty. It will be seen from the language of the proposition, where it is provided that "if the Commission and the carriers fail to agree upon what would be reasonable in the premises, the North Carolina authorities may in their discretion submit the question to the Interstate Commerce Commission, and the carriers pledge themselves to facilitate and expedite the hearing and the determination thereof in every reasonable manner" (although the State is not precluded from using any other remedy or taking any other action), it is expressly contemplated that an appeal to the Interstate Commerce Commission may be made. Not only was this in the contemplation of the Proposition as made, but the joint resolution of the North Carolina Legislature at its last session, in relation to this very matter, contained these two paragraphs:

"THIRD: That pending the enactment into law by Congress of the principles above declared for, it should, in the opinion of the General assembly of North Carolina, be the policy of the State, to press before the Interstate Commerce Commission objections to the injustice of allowing any discrimination against North Carolina points, in favor of other points outside of the State to which hauls are longer than to the North Carolina points, and which longer hauls include the hauls to such North Carolina points.

"FOURTH: That, in addition to the powers conferred on the North Carolina Corporation Commission to institute and prosecute cases before the Interstate Commerce Commission for relief to the people of North Carolina from discriminatory and excessive charges by common carriers, power is conferred upon the Governor to institute and prosecute such cases, either independent of or in conjunction with the North Carolina Corporation Commission, in his name on behalf of the people of the State, or in the name of any combined association or body of citizens, or in the name of the North Carolina Corporation Commission, and for such purpose the sum of not exceeding five thousand dollars a year is appropriated out of any money in the state treasury, not otherwise appropriated, to be paid on the order of the Governor."

Thus it will be seen that the Legislature of North Carolina expressly declared its policy to be that this matter of dispute should be carried by the State to the Interstate Commerce Commission and the Governor was empowered to institute and prosecute such proceedings, either independently or in conjunction with the North Carolina Commission, or in his own name in behalf of the people of the State, or in the name of others that are mentioned, and an appropriation of Five Thousand Dollars a year was expressly made to bear the expense of this procedure.

Under these circumstances of the provisions of the proposition in question and of the declared policy of the State, made by a solemn resolution of its General Assembly, we submit that that course ought to be followed. The railroads have no purpose to enter upon a course of contention or of litigation. As above stated, they are prepared to expedite a hearing before the Interstate Commerce Commission by every means in their power, and when a conclusion is reached they are prepared to adopt it, whatever it may be, without questioning it in any court whatever, and retain it in operation, without controversy, during the full time the order of the Interstate Commerce Commission is in force.

We are profoundly impressed with the idea that an amicable settlement of this controversy is necessary for the welfare of all concerned. We hope for a definite and permanent settlement, and we appreciate that no settlement can be permanent unless fair and just both to the people of the State and the railroads. The railroads are among the largest employers of labor in the State; they pay the highest scale of wages; they contribute as much as any other class of citizens to the welfare of the State; while their employes contribute in no small measure to the State's prosperity and are effective in every patriotic service.

The principle of regulation has the unqualified approval of the American people. The power of regulation as to interstate commerce must of necessity be, as it has expressly been, vested in the federal government and in it alone. This principle carries with it certain restrictions as well as immense advantages, when viewed from the standpoint of any one State, as well as from the standpoint of all the states. The advantages immeasurably outweigh the disadvantages. In this connection it cannot be forgotten that North Carolina was one of the first of the States to advocate National, instead of State, control of interstate commerce. As far back as 1781, before the adoption of the Constitution, we find the representatives of North Carolina in the Continental Congress offering a suggestion to the States that the power to control interstate commerce be surrendered to the national government, instead of being reserved, as was then the case, by each State. Later, when the Constitutional Convention was framing our organic law, the representatives of North Carolina again favored, and were instrumental in securing, the adoption of the commerce clause as it now stands, which vested in the federal government exclusive right of control of interstate commerce.

In suggesting that this controversy, relating solely to interstate rates, be submitted to the Interstate Commerce Commission for settlement, we are not asking that any subject be withdrawn from any tribunal, legislative or judicial, of North Carolina, of which those tribunals have lawful or rightful jurisdiction. We are asking only what North Carolina has always insisted upon, that the regulation of interstate commerce shall, in this condition of difficulty, as well as in every other, be regulated by the power which all the States have placed exclusively in the hands of the federal government.

In view of this attitude of submission to law and in view of the facts herein stated in respect to what they have attempted to do to meet the just expectations of the state regarding these rates, we respectfully and earnestly submit that no charge of bad faith, or of lawlessness, or of arbitrary conduct, or of a desire to dictate the conditions under which the commerce of North Carolina shall be conducted, can justly be laid at the doors of these carriers.

In conclusion, may we not express the earnest hope that, notwithstanding the termination of negotiations with the Legislative Commission, had at its instance, there may yet be found by the Corporation Commission, in the conference now being held with its chairman, Mr. Travis, and the representatives of the traffic department of these carriers, a basis for a friendly adjustment of all differences?

May we not express the further hope, that, if they should fail to find the means of arriving at an amicable adjustment, recourse will be loyally had by both parties to the only tribunal having jurisdiction under the laws of North Carolina as well as of the United States, and that these differences be submitted to its final adjudication?

Mindful of the fact that the State and the railroads must live together, that their interest and welfare are inseparable, and that the welfare and prosperity of both can be promoted only by a policy of good will and conciliation, is it not the duty of both sides of this unfortunate controversy to go to the one impartial tribunal, established by law for that purpose, which has the jurisdiction and the power to finally adjudicate and adjust the differences between us, to establish the rates which shall prevail, and to determine what is the fair and reasonable solution of our difficult problem?

CUSTOMS CHANGE

Dear Brethren:

I remember that when I was a boy, the preachers would visit our home and talk about the interests of the church, and about the first thing a new preacher would do would be to examine the church roll and see how many had died and how many were excluded and who needed visiting, and so on. It is not so now; but about the first thing when the preacher arrives at the church ground, some good brother will meet him and say, "Bro. Preacher, I want you to make us a good Farmer's Union speech this afternoon." "Good! Let's hurry in the house and get through with our little preaching services." "Say, Brother Preacher, go out and take dinner with me. We have a sick brother in the community, and we will go and see him." "I would like to go and see him, but I want to be at the Union this afternoon." It's true he is not a loyal member to his church, but what might it have meant to visit such and read a portion of God's Word and pray with and for him, and visit the sick!

"Seek ye first the Kingdom of God and His righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you." God in heaven will not prosper us until we reverence the church more, the only institution that the Lord established while here. May the Lord help us to live better lives and do more for the advancement of His kingdom in the future than we have in the past.

HORNER SCHOOL A HOUSEHOLD WORD.

Remembers a Remarkable Class.

The Hon. R. W. Winston, Raleigh, N. C., writes an interesting letter as follows:—"The writer and his only three brothers and the sons of these brothers spent the happiest years of their respective lives as students in the Horner School at Oxford, N. C. Indeed, the School has been a household word in my father's family since the late James H. Horner, its founder, and he were college mates. I sometimes recall one class in this school, and that not a very large one, from which have gone forth one of the greatest lawyers in the city of New York, a philanthropic banker, a popular presiding elder, two bishops, and a judge. Such a record can not be altogether accidental. The training received at this school, in my judgment, has had much to do with the success of its students.

Horner Military School has for its purpose: (1) The thorough preparation of boys for entrance to colleges, universities, government and technical schools. (2) To give a thorough secondary preparation for a business career. (3) To inculcate truthfulness, self-control, a right sense of honor, habits of systematic and close application in the performance of all duties. (4) To help boys to grow physically, mentally and morally into the highest type of Christian Manhood. Does it better today than it ever did.

A VISIT TO OAK RIDGE, N. C.

To go to this quiet little village is merely to visit the Oak Ridge Institute, for this popular school is the one big, dominant feature and the pride of Oak Ridge. And indeed, it is justly so. We doubt if there is another preparatory school for boys in the entire South with handsomer grounds, more magnificent buildings, or better equipped in any way, or better known than Oak Ridge Institute.

For sixty long years it has been a bright light in this state's educational work. As a training school for colleges and technical colleges it has long been noted as the best, and no less successful is it in the preparation it offers for life's work.

One of the distinct features of Oak Ridge Institute is the business College Department in which it teaches Book-keeping, Law, Shorthand, Telegraphy and Typewriting in a thorough manner, and fits young men to maintain various lucrative positions in the business world. It is truly a great school, and the boy who enters and graduates there is fortunate. Profs. J. A. and M. H. Holt, Proprietors, Oak Ridge, N. C., cordially invite correspondence from parents, and will send catalog free to those who write.

A "Friend" of the institution said a few days ago that if we would send our wagon to his place he would give us some cabbage. We did; and, he made us glad. We received about two hundred pounds; and four hundred potato plants. Thank you.

These good rains are making us feel glad. Our garden is looking fine and the corn is almost knee high. We also have a very fine prospect for a grain crop.

During the commencement many friends have visited us and it was our great pleasure to have them. We want them to come again.

I am wondering what has become of the "Cousins." We have a letter from one of the "faithful" this week; read it, and see if it will not make you homesick. I want to get into a position that will make the corner interesting and helpful; and, am constantly trying to find that happy medium. I suggested sometime ago that I would not answer any more letters as I had decided, may be, there would be more interest in the stories I could write or find, than the few words in reply to the letters. I have been doing all I could with the stories and I see the letters have almost entirely quit. I asked the question if some one would not write to me and secure Mite Boxes—would like to have two, or more in each school. To have one for each class, might be a good idea. And, they are not intended to interfere with any other plans, such as the Monthly Offering and the Birthday Bank but to assist. This would be a good idea, I think, for the schools, and would make the monthly offering easier.

I have the bill for the boxes and am expecting them any day; will be glad to hear from a number of the cousins next week.

E. M. CARTER, Supt.

QUESTION BOX.

Below I give a few questions which may be of interest and shall be glad if you, when writing to the Corner would answer as many of them as you can.

1. How did the Lord Jesus ascertain the will of God concerning himself from day to day?
2. What is the devil called in Mark?
3. What does "living by every word of God signify"?
4. What is the meaning of the word, Christ?
5. What were the publicans?

Stem, N. C., May 20, 1913.

Dear Uncle Emory:

Daddy has been at Goldsboro for a week, where he has been attending the bedside of a very sick brother of his; but he returned this morning. I was mighty glad to see him too! I hardly knew when to stop kissing him. He would have gone to the Young Peoples' Convention had his brother not been so low.

Here's my dime for May. Many good wishes for all.

R. P. CRUMPLER, JR.

I know you were glad to see your father and, I hope his brother is better. It seemed like "old times" to see him at commencement this week. The next time he comes to Elon you must come with him and see the Orphanage.

MRS. POWELL ALMOST DEAD.

Dry Ridge, Ky.—"I could hardly walk across the room," says Mrs. Lydia Powell, of Dry Ridge, "before I tried Cardui. I was so poorly, I was almost dead. Now, I can walk four miles and do my work with much more ease. I praise Cardui for my wonderful cure." Cardui is successful in benefitting sick women, because it is composed of ingredients, that act specifically on the womanly constitution, relieving headache, backache, irregularity, misery and distress. Only a good medicine could show such continual increase in popularity as Cardui has, for the past 50 years. Try Cardui, the woman's tonic.

Nine nations have responded favorably to Secretary of State Bryan's peace plan which would interpose a period of delay and investigation before the outbreak of war. The nations are Italy, Great Britain, France, Brazil, Sweden, Norway, Peru, Russia and Japan.

CLUB SAVED THIS MEMBER $150.

The management of the Christian Sun Piano Club has just received a letter from one of its members who joined about six months ago and who selected the Self-player Piano. He describes the Player as "The Prince of Home Entertainers" and continues as follows:—"After investigating two other makes during a recent visit to New York, I concluded that I saved one hundred and fifty dollars by buying from you."

This letter is a fair sample of the daily correspondence of the Club. Practically every mail brings similar expressions from those who have received their instruments and are delighted with the quality, price, terms and privileges afforded by the Club.

Every subscriber is cordially invited to write for a copy of the Club's illustrated catalogue which pictures and describes the Pianos and Player-Pianos and explains the big saving in price which results from Club membership. Address the managers, Ludden & Bates, Christian Sun Piano Club Dept., Atlanta, Ga.

OLD LADY'S SAGE ADVICE.

Knoxville, Tenn.—Mrs. Mamie Towe, of 102 W. Main Street, this city, says: "If you had seen me before I began to take Cardui, you would not think I was the same person. Six doctors failed to do me good, and my friends thought I would die. I could hardly get out of bed or walk a step. At last an old lady advised me to take Cardui, and now I can go most anywhere." All ailing women need Cardui, as a gentle, refreshing tonic, especially adapted to their peculiar ailments. It is a reliable, vegetable remedy, successfully used for over 50 years. You ought to try it.

A week's campaign in Dayton, O., to raise $2,000,000 to make the city safe against floods, ended on May 25 with the funds secured. The National Cash Register gave half a million dollars.

FOR HOME OWNERS.

If you are interested in the attractiveness of your home and grounds—in keeping the trees, shrubbery, vines, and flowers at their best, or in preserving the bearing qualities of your fruit trees—you will know how to appreciate the book being given free by the J. Van Lindley Nursery Company, Box 207, Pomona, N. C.

The book is entitled "How to Plant and Grow Fruits and Ornamentals" and tells everything to be known about the proper planting, cultivation and care of fruit and ornamental trees, shrubs, roses, vines, etc. This book is really valuable, and the owners do not care to send it to idle inquirers. If you are really interested, write for free copy.

OBEYING GOD

There is no greater personal duty than that of obeying God. It means everything to a person. There is great breadth and depth to it. It pertains to all the relations of life in this world. It has much to do with one's morals. He who obeys God in all respects, will be moral in all respects. One cannot obey God, and at the same time willingly do wrong to his fellowmen. Such obedience leads one to deal justly with all people. Abraham was noted for his steadfast obedience to God. Parallel with this was his doing right in all of his relations with other people. Rev. W. F. Crafts says: "Nowhere is the faith of Abraham, that obeying God can bring no evil consequences, more needed than in business and politics. Many business men, in moments of confidence, frankly confess that while right is right in theory, it will not work in buying and selling. They think that if a man sticks to the truth, while his competitors keep on lying, the lie will beat the truth. Against this worst form of unbelief we hurl the resistless shot, 'Right wrongs no man.'" He further says: "We must obey God by doing right, and trust him to take care of consequences." No truer words were ever said. They ought to ring in the ears of every person in the civilized world. The professor of religion who thinks that he can be dishonest in business, and at the same time can really prosper, is a fool, even though he may fancy that he is very sharp and successful. Such a man may go to church on the Sabbath, and appear to worship God; but he is not, in reality, worshipping God. God accepts no kind of sacrifice from one who practices fraud upon his fellows. Nor is one obeying God, in any religious way, if he have not the love of truth so strongly that he will speak it at any cost. Obeying God is to obey the rule of doing right, whatever may be the temptation to do otherwise. Let no one think that, by uniting with a Christian church, he is obeying God sufficiently to escape condemnation if he should sometimes tell falsehoods, and sometimes cheat others. Obeying God fully brings full blessings.

JOIN THE CHRISTIAN SUN PIANO CLUB.

And exchange your old piano for a splendid new Self-player Piano that can be used and enjoyed by every member of your family from the little tots of five or six years to the old gray headed folks who love music but who didn't have the opportunity to take lessons when they were young. This delightful home entertainer is the greatest musical instrument of the age, for it makes home the most interesting and delightful place in all the world for the young and old alike.

In speaking of the Self-player furnished by the Club, Rev. Len G. Broughton, D. D., formerly of Atlanta, now of London, says:—"All who have heard it are in an agreement that it is one of the very best combinations that has ever been put on the market. Persons desiring such an instrument will certainly do well to examine yours, and if they will only give it a trial I feel sure they will try no further."

Write for your copy of the Club's catalogue and see how easy we have made it for you to own a first class piano or player piano. Address the managers, Ludden & Bates, Christian Sun Piano Club Dept., Atlanta, Ga.

OUR PRINCIPLES.

- (1.) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the church.
- (2.) Christian is a sufficient name for the church.
- (3.) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
- (4.) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of church membership.
- (5.) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

Editorial Briefs

The Gentle Voice.

"A soft answer turneth away wrath; but grievous words stir up anger" said Solomon (Prov. 15:1). Acting, we presume, upon this wisdom news comes that the boys and girls of Bayonne N. Y., have organized "The Gentle Voice Society" for the purpose of discouraging harsh language. There is nothing as useless, and nothing that stings and bites and burns, like harsh language. The person using it could get his or her ends achieved to much better effect with the gentle voice, and those who are the victims of it carry a heavy heart for hours after the sound of the harsh voice has been hushed. Start in your home a Gentle Voice Society; and a happier, as well as a far better, day will dawn there.

Is Right Ready?

It has been a long time, as the years go, since the French philosopher, Joubert, wrote, "Force and Right are the governors of this world; Force till Right is ready." One would believe, from current reports of the costly armament of nations, that Right is not yet ready to rule this world. Every week, almost every day, we read of some nation's adding larger ships to its navy, more expensive equipment to its army, or more and better trained soldiers to its fighting force. Who knows that Right is not ready? When and where has Right been given a chance to prove whether it was ready or not? We rely upon Force. We have faith only in Force. We spend our millions in preparing Force. Is it not time we were thinking less of Force and more of Right?

Future Reward.

No individual worth while gets his reward immediately. The future has to reveal the worth of a person, place, or thing. And until that future comes the real value is unknown. A copy of Benjamin Franklin's essay, "A Dissertation on Liberty and Necessity," sold in London on June 5 for $5,025. The man who bought it was the grandson of the man who once bought the same pamphlet for 50 cents and tried in vain to sell it to the British Museum for $5.00. In two generations the future has enhanced this product of a pen more than five thousand per cent. What John and Peter and Paul did eighteen centuries ago is worth a thousand fold more today than it was when performed. The future reveals the worth of man or event; and no proper judgment can be pronounced upon a man and his work until he has been gone a hundred years. Will the work we do today stand the trial and test of the future?

A Popular Ruler.

On June 5th, Emperor William of Germany celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of his accession to the throne. All Germany delighted to do him honor. A jubilee fund was raised amounting to $12,000,000, all of which the Emperor intends shall be used for benevolent purposes. Germany was never so powerful as it is today, and it is doubtful if any Emperor upon its throne was ever so popular or held in such high esteem. Emperor William is known the world over as a Christian prince, a close observer of the holy Sabbath, devoted to religious service and worship, and a man who from youth has made it a practice to read his Bible every day. "When the righteous are in authority, the people rejoice; but when the wicked rule, the people mourn." Proverb 29:2.

Longing For The Nation.

As was announced in these columns recently, the Anti-Saloon League of America was now planning a campaign for nation-wide prohibition. The slogan of the League is, clear our nation of the Saloon and its evils. This campaign may seem to some premature and without hope as to results. Yet the League has recently issued a map which shows facts that will, we believe, prove a surprise to many. Of the 2,973,890 square miles of territory in the United States the saloon is now forbidden in 2,132,746 square miles. There are thirty-two States combined whose number of saloons is less than the number in Chicago. Out of a total population of 91,000,000 more than 46,000,000—more than one half the people in the United States—live in no license territory. Or even better than this: Out of 2,856 counties—our political units—in the United States, over 1,700, considerably more than one-half, have abolished the saloon. In nine States with an aggregate population of 15,000,000 there is State-wide prohibition. It is within reason to say that at least one half, if not more than one half, of all the people in the United States want the saloon abolished, and the League proposes to afford the opportunity of giving the majority its will.

Business Is Business.

Of course it is. One wonders what it would be if it were not business. It is either that, or a cloak for crookedness and cruelty. "I would certainly love to accommodate you, and would do so, but business is business." It takes a Solomon to sling out slugs of wisdom like that! It is every man's business to observe and to keep the golden rule. It is every man's business to remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy. It is every man's business to give a tenth of all his earnings to advance the kingdom of God in this world. It is every man's business to seek first the kingdom of God and His righteousness. It is every man's business to be honest, sincere, upright, without cavil or question in all dealings between man and man. It is every man's business to be loyal to the State, obedient to God, true to himself, and family, and faithful in all things. Business is business. And no man on this earth properly looks after his own business unless he also looks after the business of the King first and foremost. Your business man who looks after his own business only is not a business man. He is just a blur, a blot, and a blunder that is soon to be wiped out—and then be charitably forgotten forever.

Watched.

A woman in making a plea for a divorce from her husband the other day said, "I became suspicious of his faithfulness to me, and then I employed detectives to cover his movements by day and watch him by night; and I found my most dreaded suspicions more than justified." Our God is a jealous God, and He will allow us to put nothing between us and Him. His all-seeing eye watches us by day and by night, more closely than any detective ever watched a suspect. David rightly said (Psa. 139:1, 2, 3, 5,) O Lord * * * thou knowest my downsitting and mine uprising, * * * and art acquainted with all my ways. * * * Thou hast beset me behind and before." God's eye is upon the sparrow, and surely He watches us. We may escape others, Him we cannot escape. He watches not to entrap, but to help us, to set us free. The shrewd man, knowing he is watched by the detective may cover his tracks, and obscure his deeds. Not so of any mortal being in the sight of God. His all-seeing eye watches us everywhere. "If I ascend up into heaven, or if I descend into hell," God's eye is upon me. There is no north and south far enough, and no depth of darkness deep enough to remove us from the watchful eye of God. Yes, God watches us, and there is no escape from Him.

Grace.

There are, strange as it may seem to some, hundreds of families, the heads of which are church members, who do not say "grace" before partaking of their meals morning, noon or night. It would seem if every householder, whether member of any church or not, would feel under constraint to at least thank God for daily food. Is it not gross ingratitude not to do this little act? God is the giver of every good gift, of every morsel of bread, of every savory viand. He gives not once, nor twice, nor thrice: His gifts are continued, perpetual, unceasing. Is it not as little as one can do to reverently bow the head before Him before the daily food is taken and humbly repeat from the heart some such words as these: "Our heavenly Father, we do thank Thee for this meal we are about to receive. Grant it as a blessing to everyone at this table we ask for Jesus sake. Amen"? Any one can easily have in mind words, as sincere and as simple as those. It is but common gratitude to express some such desire. Or words like these, "We thank Thee, O God, for this food before us, for the nourishment of our bodies. May we be as faithful in serving Thee as Thou art in providing our daily bread, we ask for Jesus sake. Amen." Father, mother, you owe it to your God, your children, yourselves, your home, to have "grace" at mealtime.

EDITORIAL

MISSIONS AND MEN.

We of the Christian churches might as well come to it, for we must, or we perish. We must give the people a chance at missions. So far we have not done so. We of the Southern Christian Convention are only playing at missions, and that very indifferently. There are none amongst us who care. We are not burdened for the cause of missions, neither Home nor Foreign.

We meet in annual conference. An apportionment committee sits in cool judgment upon a page or two of figures, wondering how much they can get placed upon the churches, without any kick coming from some obdurate and protesting delegate. Then at the close of the year, or at some Sunday during the year, the pastors make a pull, and conference apportionments are "all in."

In this process we may be teaching a few to give; but are we teaching the many what they are giving for? The educational feature has not gone far enough. Teaching and training people to give is only half the battle, and hardly that. The other half consists in teaching them to realize what their giving is for, so that they may have a joy in giving.

It is safe to say that a large per cent. of our congregations do not hear a sermon, or even a talk on missions, home or foreign, once a year.

The burden of missions is not upon us. We are callous and indifferent. We are asleep and there is no one to awaken us. To our thinking there is no need today, in our Southern Convention, as great and as urgent, as that of a man burdened and burning with the theme of missions to go in and out amongst us, telling us of our missionary needs, urging upon us our missionary duties, bringing before us our missionary burdens, responsibilities and obligations.

People are never stirred unless there is an individual to stir them. Behind every movement that ever was there was first of all a person burdened and bending with the weight of the task to be accomplished.

There is now the finest opportunity open to us for mission work we have ever had. Our good women are making a start. A few anxious hearts have become aroused. If there were now amongst us a person who could go from church to church and tell and talk the matter over and organize the work it would not be long before there would be a Woman's Missionary Society in every church.

Brethren and beloved we must have a person or persons who will get under this missionary burden, and feel the press and weight of it. Then some what will be accomplished. Every man, woman and child who knows any thing of the situation is, or should be, heartily ashamed of the little we are doing for missions, and the cold indifference with which we treat the mission subject.

The liveliest topic in the public mind, the greatest problem that challenges the thoughts of men today, is that of missions. But we of the Christian church are asleep and indifferent to the topic and the challenge. We need to read more about missions, teach and think more of missions, preach and pray more for missions, and then give more to missions. When we do this we will see an awakening amongst us such as we have not witnessed in a quarter of a century.

"WHAT LEXINGTON MASS. DOES."

Under the above far off caption The Charlotte Observer recently carried an editorial that ought to bear fruit, but it will not. We of the South do not care for our history, for that is what the editorial in question has reference to, and it will take something mightier than newspaper editorials, mighty and strong as these may be, to awaken us, and make us care.

Lexington, Mass., as our esteemed points out, has a population of 5,000; yet that town raised readily $30,000.00 with which to purchase Buchman Tavern, where the Minute Men convened; and the town has recently spent $7,000.00 on a handsome volume about itself in connection with a celebration soon to be held, and not a rich man in the town. "We cannot imagine any Southern Lexington doing such things, though it were the starting point of creation and teemed with millionaires," concluded The Observer.

The indictment is shamefully true. We of the South are about as indifferent to our heritage of history as the Prodigal Son was to the substance his father divided unto him. We simply waste it in riotous living.

If our patriotism did not challenge and engage us, it would really seem that our love for gain would. But neither does. Put this down: Besides keeping the patriotic spirit alive, and having that Tavern and that volume to enhance their pride, count upon it that the people of Lexington, Mass., will get back every dollar of their money, and a tremendous interest besides.

Just going outside the field of observation one moment, the county of Warwick, in which is situated Stratford-on-Avon, Shakespeare's home in England, is a very fertile county we are told, and produces an abundance of grain, wheat in particular. Statisticians tell us that tourists to the home of the great poet are a source of greater revenue to both town and county than all the grain grown in the entire county, year after year.

The statistics are not at hand, not at our hand at any rate, but we are led to believe that tourists to Lexington and Concord, in Mass., leave more revenue in those towns than all the farm products of the counties in which they are situated amount to annually. About the only reason why Lexington is a town, and Concord is a town, today is because through these years the people there have prized their history and their tradition as worth conserving, and the outside world has made them well-to-do and famous. And these two towns have school-houses and imposing stone buildings for libraries and art galleries that would make those in our larger Southern cities ashamed of themselves. And more than that, these libraries and galleries are thronged from day to day by boys and girls who have the leisure, the taste and the disposition, to linger and study and lounge and learn there. Conserving their history has done the work; the outside world, tourists, travelers, pilgrims, have poured out their treasures there for the enrichment of these patriotic men and women.

It is a low basis, we know full well, upon which to view it, but we do not know a source of greater waste, financially, in all our Southern country, than that which goes on because we do not and will not conserve our history, and the places of historic worth and interest.

There is a commercial worth of sentiment. Patriotism pays. Large motives, and magnanimity of spirit always pay. Our South has abundant historical resources, but they are undeveloped, and so bring no revenue and no patriotic pride.

SUNDAY SCHOOL HAND-BOOK.

There is a movement on foot, already too long delayed, to get out this year a Sunday School Convention Hand-book. This publication is to sustain the same relationship to our Sunday School Conventions that our Annual sustains to our Conferences and Southern Christian Convention. In this hand-book are to be gathered the data and the proceedings of the Sunday-School and Young People's Conventions of our various Southern Conferences, which are to meet this summer. There are two reasons for this. First, the Sunday school statistics should come out of the Annual, should never have been there, in fact, as the Annual deals with church statistics and Conference proceedings, and this has grown so bulky and expensive that the Sunday school statistics will have to be eliminated by necessity. Secondly, our Sunday school statistics, and the proceedings of our Sunday School Conventions are, under the present regime, practically useless. Some of the Conventions get out their minutes, others do not, and so none are valuable for practical use, or personal and public benefit.

The proposition is for our Sunday School Conventions to spend for the hand-book about what they have been spending on their local Convention minutes, but receive in return copies of the entire book, instead of proceedings of a single Convention. This measure can be carried out if the several Conventions will appropriate for the purpose of publishing their minutes the following:—

Virginia Valley Central Convention	$15.00
Eastern Virginia Convention	30.00
Eastern North Carolina Convention	20.00
Western North Carolina Convention	20.00
North Carolina and Virginia Convention	20.00
Alabama Convention	15.00
Georgia and Alabama Convention	15.00

If the proceedings are not too bulky, it is estimated that we can get out something like 2,000 copies of the Hand-Book for this amount and the same will be distributed pro rata among the Sunday schools and Sunday school officials of the several Conventions. Let someone advocate this measure in each Convention and see that at least the amount named is appropriated, for the Hand-Book would be incomplete if a single Convention is left out.

If further information is desired touching this matter, write to Rev. J. O. Cox, Durham, N. C., who was appointed at the General Convention at Burlington to finance the matter, and to make an earnest endeavor to get all the Conventions to unite in bringing out a Sunday School Hand-book, or Sunday School Annual.

—We have a supply of the new Christian Hymnaries on hand. The price is 75 cents per copy by mail, or 50 cents per copy in quantities, express not paid. We supplied Holland Christian church, Holland, Va., with fifty copies last week.

—We regret to learn that Rev. J. Lee Johnson declines the call to our Raleigh church. This will leave Raleigh, Main St., Berkley, Va., High Point and Asheboro, all important points without pastors after June 30. The church needs and demands earnest, consecrated, able ministers as it never has before.

—Real Estate at Elon College advances in value with great rapidity. Lots that could have been purchased readily here a few years ago for $100.00 now sell at five times that much, and are hard to find. Mr. Mart Cook recently sold his home and place just west of the College for $4,000.00; Mr. Heater, his place for $2,500.00. And both could be sold today, we presume, at an advance over that. There is not a vacant house in the village, and there are several applicants for dwellings.

NOTES AND PERSONALS.

—Rev. W. D. Harward, Newport, News, Va., writes under date of June 14th: "I am calling the attention of my people to THE CHRISTIAN SUN and mean to give them a chance to subscribe. I hope to send you a nice list of new subscribers."

—Rev. C. C. Peel is in Eastern Virginia traveling in behalf of THE CHRISTIAN SUN. We certainly trust the ministers and brethren generally will aid Brother Peel in his good work, as THE SUN, in order to maintain its present high standard, must of necessity largely increase its subscription list. The list can be increased all right, if friends of THE SUN will manifest some interest in its behalf. Thank you, dear friends. Don't forget THE SUN.

—We have received from President D. B. Atkinson an invitation to the commencement and graduating exercises at Jireh Christian College, Jireh, Wyoming, June 15th to 18th. The invitation and program indicate that this youthful institution is growing in strength and in numbers.

—We were just wondering why all of our friends, who wish anything in the printing line, neat and up-to-date, would not do like our distinguished friend and good brother, Capt. J. A. Turrentine, who, as Commander of a Camp of United Confederate Veterans, needing some printed cards for the coming encampment, drove over to our Publishing House and, while his work was being done according to his taste, gave us a delightful hour of agreeable and happy conversation! This is loyalty and a fellowship of the sort that makes business pleasant and life worth living. May hundreds of others imitate this good example. The work in our job printing department is artistic, prompt, and the price reasonable. Tell your friends about it.

—Bon voyage, a happy stay, and a successful return to Dr. W. C. Wicker, who left this week for a European trip! He will attend, as a delegate from the American Christian Convention, and also a representative from this State, the World's Sunday School Convention at Zurich, Switzerland. We wish the genial Doctor all happiness and rest that a faithful year's service deserves. He has promised to write often to THE SUN on his journey.

—Rev. J. W. Wellons, D. D., June 12th, writes: "I have been a reader of 'THE CHRISTIAN SUN' for sixty-nine years, its entire existence. I was personally acquainted with its first editor, Rev. D. W. Kerr, and every editor since, and was an assistant in editing it for two years. Its growth has been gradual from a monthly magazine to a weekly, of which we are all proud. It will compete favorably with any of the church papers I read. Every friend or member of The Christian Church ought to subscribe for it and read it. Its present large form and plain print are certainly gratifying. THE SUN's subscription list ought to double now that there is such improvement in the paper in every particular."

—Rev. J. S. Carden, pastor, reports a very pleasant and profitable day at Pleasant Ridge, Guilford county, last Sunday. It was Children's Day with a splendid program well carried out, a large congregation, and an inspiring occasion. Next Sunday, June 22, will be Children's Day at New Hill, Bro. Carden being pastor there also. Bro. Carden reports his work in good condition. He will hold revivals at all his churches, beginning at Hank's Chapel, Chatham Co., 1st Sunday in August.

—THE SUN's editor has received the following invitation, for which he expresses thanks and hereby gives notice of his acceptance: "Mr. and Mrs. David Samuel Farmer request the honor of your presence at the marriage of their daughter, Macie Virginia, to Mr. Alonzo Cleveland Hall on Tuesday, June 24th, 1913, at high noon, at Pleasant Grove Christian Church, News Ferry, Va."

—We are glad of it, genuinely and truly glad. Crowson of The Burlington News is homesick. He ought to be. He had no business hob-nobbing around Washington for a government job, when he was making so good a paper as The News. Crowson is an editor, and he might as well settle down to that. Listen at his longings as printed in his Washington letter to The News last week:

We enjoy the beautiful city with all of its places of interest but we sure do long to be back in Old North Carolina with the widow and the babies, even if the buildings are not so tall and grand, and even if the streets are rough and rugged, and not so well kept and beautiful. In fact, we had rather sit on our front porch and see an old wagon go jolting by and say "Hello Bill," to the driver and see him grin back a welcome salute than to sit and see the $5,000 automobiles, the gilt harness and handsome broughams go by.

"Kissed by sunshine, lulled by breezes, Lies my own my native land," are words that are dear to us today. In other words, we are homesick.

—Mrs. H. Y. Rush, West Milton, Ohio, whose late lamented husband so often enriched SUN columns with his sweet spirited pen, writes June 10, "Enclosed $1.50 for THE SUN to come to our home another year, as it has been a very welcome visitor so many years. My dear departed husband and I always thought THE SUN a sweet spirited paper, hence we both prized it very much."

—We learn from The Herald of Gospel Liberty that Rev. J. W. Bolton who was formerly pastor of our Greensboro First church died at his home in Middletown, Indiana, May 31. Bro. Bolton was an able preacher, and a consecrated Christian worker. We learn of his death with sorrow. He leaves to mourn their loss a wife, three sons and one daughter. Dr. J. P. Barrett, Dayton, Ohio, conducted the funeral, the interment being in the Middletown cemetery.

—We are in receipt of the following invitation, for which we express thanks and send our very best wishes to the good friends: Mr. and Mrs. John D. Kernodle request the honor of your presence at the marriage of their daughter, June Ray, to Mr. John Jay Henderson on Wednesday morning, the 25th of June, 1913, at ten o'clock, The Christian Church, Graham, N. C.

—Rev. A. B. Kendall, D. D., pastor of our Burlington church, has accepted the invitation of the Program Committee to preach the Convention Sermon at the approaching Young People's Convention of the North Carolina and Virginia Conference. The sermon will be Tuesday night July 15th. Those who attend may expect something good. The meeting place of the Convention is Haw River, N. C., the program to appear next week.

—Here is the kind of letter The Christian Publishing Company, in its job department, is getting and which it greatly appreciates, too, "Southern Christian Publishing Company, Elon College, N. C., Dear Sirs: I have received the card folder I ordered for the church work here and am very much pleased with the workmanship. I believe our publishing house is able to do any sort of work pleasing to any taste, and your prices seem to me below those of the best printers. Yours very truly, H. E. Rountree, Greensboro. N. C." Just try us brethren and friends when you want printing of any sort done, and see what takes place. All we ask is a trial order. We pay parcels post and deliver your printing to you.

A FEW REMARKS.

—The Youth's Companion gives the following advice which many will read, but few will heed: "Do not be angry with the fellow who climbs the ladder of success just ahead of you. The ladder was there before either of you saw it."

—Columbia College, Rutgers College, and the Reformed Church in America receive bequests estimated at $1,000,000 each by the will of Mrs. Mary B. Pell, of New York.

—Richard L. Metcalfe, of Lincoln, Neb., editor of Secretary of State Bryan's paper, The Commoner, was selected on June 3, by President Wilson to be civil governor of the Canal Zone.

—A Boston paper carries this news item: "One day last month two men were put on trial in a New York City court, charged with having committed an assault with a club on a tailor who refused to go on strike with his fellows. When his case was called, the prosecuting lawyer moved the discharge of one of the two prisoners on the ground that there was no evidence against him. As soon as he was discharged, he was placed on the stand, and testified that the other prisoner could not have committed the assault, because he himself had committed it. The other man accordingly went free, and so did the guilty one, for the Constitution of the United States does not permit any one to be tried twice for the same offense." Such procedure brings the law into contempt and not infrequently leads to violence.

—One thousand rifles with bayonets consigned from Germany to Belfast, Ireland, as "electrical fittings" were seized by the government on June 3. The arms were meant for Ulster Orangemen who are preparing to resist home rule. Another consignment of five hundred rifles addressed to Baron Farnham, an Irish peer, was seized on June 6, at Dublin.

—The world's altitude record for an aeroplane carrying a pilot and a passenger was broken at Buc, France, on June 3, when Edmond Perreyon and a passenger reached a height of 16,368 feet, or more than three miles.

—The officials charged with enforcing the statute at Washington have ruled that meat and meat products in interstate or foreign commerce, which have hitherto been exempted from the provisions of the Pure Food Law, may be seized if misbranded or adulterated. This means that manufactures of meat foods will at once be required to comply strictly with the Food and Drugs Act, as well as the Meat Inspection Law. Thus a long step forward in the matter of preventing adulterated foods, for when Uncle Sam takes a hand in such matters, he does not easily let up.

—Rev. Dr. Charles A. Briggs, a few years ago tried for heresy in the Presbyterian church, because of his too liberal theological views, and for forty years Professor of Theology in Union Theological Seminary, N. Y., died June 8.

—"A good farm is the land on which a good farmer lives," says the Youth's Companion. And, it may be added, a good store is one in which a good merchant lives, and a good school is one in which a good teacher lives. All of which is saying that there is nothing good without a good person behind it.

THE SONG OF THE BOB-O-LINK.

Have you ever heard the ringing,
In the dewy month of May,
Of the bob-o-link's sweet singing,
In some meadow far away?
"Till your heart stopped still to listen,
To the music's joyous strain;
On your cheeks the tear-drops glisten
From sheer joy, at the refrain;
And you revel in the singing
Music dropping from his throat,
"Till your heart-bells all are ringing,
In accord with every note:
And all the earth seems brighter,
There is not a grief or care;
And every burden lighter,
That your wearied soul must bear?
And the world with all its sadness,
Seems to slowly drift away,
As you drink in joy and gladness,
With the balmy breath of May?

So you bridge life's years of struggle,
On the bob-o-link's sweet strain,
To the golden years of childhood;
And you are a boy again.
And you wander back in childhood,
O'er its golden, sunlit ways,
Through the mossy dells and wildwood,
As you did in other days.
See the sunlight on the river,
And the shadows on the grass,
"Till your heart-strings throb and quiver
From the memories as they pass.
Now the song grows louder, sweeter,
"Till those intervening years
Seem like words of wondrous metre
Written to the tune of tears.
And like some mighty Master,
The bob-o-link does play
Upon life's sweetest feelings,
In the dewy month of May.

Across the wakening meadows
Lilts the soul-enchancing song;
And all life's mists and shadows,
By its sweeps are borne along;
And your spirit borne, uplifted,
With a great, glad hope elate,
On the music's surge is drifted,
Up to heaven's golden gate.
Adown the budding passes
Steals the fragrant breath of spring,
Bending low the wayside grasses,
Like the sweep of angel's wing.
And the rainbowed walls and towers,
Of the heavenly home divine;
In the many-tinted flowers,
On your raptured soul doth shine.
And heaven seems to loiter,
By each daisy brodered way,
When the bob-o-link is singing,
In the merry month of May.

A NEW DAY DAWNS FOR ELON.

The account of the Commencement which, last week, I was privileged to write for THE SUN, grew to such length that our genial editor had to amputate it. The amputation act began toward the close which contained an account of the doings of the Board of Trustees, and the Alumni Association. To compensate for that necessary abbreviation, the editor graciously permits me, this time, to write about the new day that has dawned for Elon.

This new day had its birth on the afternoon of June the 3rd. The Alumni Association was in annual session in the new building, which besides the fine new gymnasium for men, contains the College vault, chemical laboratory, physical laboratory, and forty-seven dormitory rooms, by unanimous consent regarded as the best building the College has, considering its cost. This building has just been thoroughly inspected by the Alumni, who were present. They were loud in their praises of it. At this psychological moment, Rev. W. T. Walters, Winchester, Va., introduced the following resolution, which was unanimously adopted:

"Whereas, the Alumni Association has not done anything of a permanent character for our Alma Mater, beyond providing the Alumni Scholarship for the Junior Class:

"And whereas, we feel that the Association, containing as it does more than two hundred members, is now in position to undertake a permanent work at the College:

"And whereas, we feel that at this time the College needs that funds be provided to pay for the New Gymnasium and North Dormitory;

"And whereas, the Alumni of other institutions no more loyal nor able than we are, have undertaken and are undertaking large things for their respective colleges:

"Therefore, be it resolved that the Alumni Association in regular business session commit itself to the task of raising money to pay for this building and its equipment, provided it meet the approval of the Board of Trustees, and suggest to them that it be known as The Alumni Building.

"In order to make this resolution effective, we recommend the appointment of a committee of three, who shall, acting with a like committee appointed by the Board of Trustees, appoint one member of each class to take active steps that each member of his class shall contribute to this purpose, and that this joint committee shall have power to make arrangements to carry out the interest of this resolution, and be a permanent committee till the money is raised.

"We further recommend that the Association use in the subscribing of this fund the blanks published for the Alumni Association Fund instituted by the class of 1913, and that the money they have raised under this head be used for the purpose of paying for this building.

"We also call upon those who spent two or three years here in study, but did not graduate, feeling that they too are loyal to their Alma Mater and anxious to help her at this time, because thoroughly imbued with her spirit, and request them to help us in the raising of this fund for this noble purpose."

The passage of this resolution, in the spirit in which it was conceived and adopted, marks nothing more nor less than the dawn of a new day for the College. It means that the Alumni have confidence in the institution's future and that they are willing to sacrifice to help it to its deserved sphere of greater usefulness and influence. The Alumni know the College in a personal way and their actions guarantee to the public their faith in it. This generous decision on their part to help Alma Mater in this handsome fashion should have the practical effect of encouraging others of means to contribute to its further needs, and it will have that effect. A new day has dawned and the Alumni Association has seen the sun of its glory, and it is a day that shall know no night. Our hearts are grateful for this gracious deed, and words fail us to give expression to the gratitude that wells up within us. Our best appreciation will be in better service and this we shall endeavor by our Master's help to render. Elon is grateful in the sunlight of this glorious new day. W. A. HARPER.

We are born for higher destinies than that of earth. There is a realm where the rainbow never fades, where the stars will be spread out before us like islands that slumber on the ocean, and where the beings that pass before us like shadows will stay in our presence forever.—Bulwer.

PALM STREET REVIVAL.

Beginning on Thursday evening, June 6, revival services at Palm Street Christian church, Greensboro, N. C., continued with increasing interest throughout the meeting until the close, Sunday evening June 15. Rev. J. V. Knight, who assisted the pastor from the beginning, has done the preaching, and his sermons have been plain, practical, and forceful. During the meeting the pastor explained to the congregation and the new converts, that the Christian church is broad in spirit, liberal in practice, and fraternal in fellowship, allowing individual interpretation of the Scriptures on all disputed doctrines and admitting into its membership people the most diverse in thought on minor doctrines and forms of religion, requiring them only to show by testimony and practice the evidences of Christian character. In a word that the Christian church is as broad as Christ and admits to its fellowship any whom Christ saves, without requiring them to be baptized by any set and exclusive form or mode, but allows them to exercise the right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience on such doctrines, on which good people in other churches differ. The Christian church is not controlled by the dogmatism of any organization, bishop, or priest; but refers its members to the Scriptures of the Old and New Testament as the final court of appeal and allows individual interpretation, individual faith, and individual practice on the questions that divide other denominations.

After this explanation of the broad fellowship and liberal spirit of the Christian church thirty people united with the church. Some of these were heads of substantial families, living in the community and owning their homes and some who have just been converted to the Christian faith. The meetings have been well attended by the members of churches of different denominations, who have taken an active part in the work. Our own people have been very active in testimony, personal work, and service in the meeting, and as a result about forty professions have been made. The work at this church has been vigorous and active not only during the meeting, but the church is awake to its duty and responsibility throughout the year. As a result of the activity of the church, 219 members of the Sunday-school were present last Sunday at Sunday-school, and at the last report of the cradle roll of this Sunday school, there were 75 members in this department. There are active Baracca and Philathea classes that bring things to pass in this school and the church is reaping the benefits of this work.

NOTICE!

To My Fellow Workers in the Western North Carolina Conference.

Dear Friends: The time is drawing near when we hope to meet you at the Young People's Convention of the Western N. C. Conference. The date of that meeting is July 25-27, and the place is in St. John's church, Randleman, N. C. We are going to have a great convention, and you can't afford to miss it. The one great purpose of this Convention is to create a deeper interest in Sunday school and Christian Endeavor work among our people in the conference, and to interest especially our young people. God has given us our boys and girls, and expects us to train them up to do service for Him, and there is no better place to learn how to do this than at our Young People's Convention at Randleman July 25-27. We want to urge that each pastor and Sunday school superintendent see that their school is represented in this convention. When the name of your Sunday school is called, please be there to answer. We also want to urge that the president of each organized class see that his or her class is represented in the Randleman convention. Each organization is entitled to one delegate for every 25 members. Any organization, however small, shall have one delegate. Begin now and plan to be at the convention. Each organization is expected to contribute two cents per member to the support of the convention, and one cent per member for the support of the General Young People's Convention which makes a total of three cents per member. Collect this amount, if possible, and send it to the convention with your report. Blanks will be sent to each school, and we urge that the secretary make a correct report and see that it reaches the convention, and the secretary of the convention, Prof. R. C. Cox, will see that it is placed in the minutes of the Young People's Convention.

I trust that you have had a great and good year, in your Sunday school work, and that you will meet me at the Randleman Convention, with a good report.

Watch for the program in THE CHRISTIAN SUN. We hope to have it out in a short time.

All together, fellow workers, for a great Convention.
J. F. MORGAN, Pres.

NOTICE!

Dear Brethern of the Alabama Christian Conference:

Please take notice: Our Missionary Association meets with the church at Antioch on Saturday before 5th Sunday in this month. Antioch church is making all necessary arrangements to entertain the meeting. We desire a good attendance, and a good meeting. Will you come? There will be conveyance at Roanoke, Ala., to meet those who come by rail, Saturday morning. Both trains will be met. Train going west arrives at Roanoke at 6:05 A. M. Train going east at 8:30 A. M. Please take notice brethren, and govern yourselves accordingly.

Yours in the interest of the church,

G. D. HUNT, Pastor.

Wadley, Ala., R. F. D.

BETHEL.

We held our second business meeting Saturday before the 1st Sunday in May and communion service on Sunday. The congregation was very large on Sunday. The church is in a good condition. Since the 1st Sunday in May, Bethel has lost one of her deacons, Bro. J. E. Herndon, a loyal member. We will protract our meeting the 1st week in August, beginning the 1st Sunday.

Mt. Zion held her memorial services the 4th Sunday in May. There were two services on Sunday. In the morning I preached the funeral of Bro. Allen Hays, who died last December. Age 46 years. He professed faith in Christ some weeks before he died, and died trusting in Jesus. He was a good neighbor and citizen. He will be missed. He leaves three uncles and one aunt.

Bro. Currie Walker and several friends from Graham, N. C., were present and gave us some excellent music. The congregation was the largest I have seen at Mt. Zion. We will have our meeting at Mt. Zion the fourth Sunday and week following in July. The church is working harmoniously.

NANSEMOND NOTES.

The people of this county had a great treat last week, when the Secretary of State, Hon. W. J. Bryan, delivered an address at Driver. A great crowd heard him with pleasure and profit. The spirit of the Gospel was in his message. He emphasized the importance of spiritual training. It means much for a man of his stamp to stand so close to the President of the United States. Political defeat will not obscure a man whose life and message have such high purposes. There never was a time, in the history of our country, when so many men stood for the higher moral life, in spite of the materialistic spirit of our age. Advanced thinkers are coming back to the teachings of Christ.

But I am trying to write a few notes, of local interest, about my church work. My pastorate is made up of five churches, located in Nansemond county. The work is moving very nicely, although there is room for much improvement. Since my last letter, has added other improvements to the church building. The Ladies' Union has recently purchased new chairs for the choir, and last week a new organ was installed. These improvements were made possible by the splendid work of the ladies in raising nearly $200.00 during the past month. The ladies of this church are always planning some helpful work for the Master's cause. On account of the rain last Sunday, the time set for raising Conference apportionments was deferred until next fourth Sunday. Envelopes have been distributed, and it is expected that the full amount of Mission money, $210.00, will be raised the fourth Sunday in June. The protracted meeting will be conducted in this church, beginning the second Sunday in August. Rev. C. H. Rowland, D. D., will assist the pastor.

Liberty Spring

This church had a Mission Day the First Sunday in April. The full amount of Conference apportionments for this church is $120.00. An offering was made, and in ten minutes $124.70 was raised in cash and pledges. This was done willingly and the people rejoiced.

On Thursday before the Third Sunday in May Memorial Day was observed. Rev. W. W. Staley, D. D., delivered an address which was appropriate and well received. A large congregation was present. The cemetery was well cared for, and the graves were decorated with many beautiful flowers. The cemetery will be enclosed by an iron fence at an early date.

On the first Sunday in June, Children's Day was observed at 8 o'clock p. m. A splendid program was prepared and well executed. The large congregation enjoyed the exercises. We hope to have a similar service next year.

A supply of Bibles was recently purchased for use in the services. These will meet a long-felt need, especially in the prayer-meeting services.

Oakland.

Memorial Day was observed third Sunday in May. The graves decorated, and a special service was conducted at the regular preaching hour. These services are interesting and helpful. A large congregation worshipped with reverence and spiritual uplift.

The third Sunday in July will be observed as Mission Day, at which time the Conference apportionments will be raised. A protracted meeting will be conducted, beginning the third Sunday in August. Rev. C. H. Rowland, D. D., will assist in this meeting.

Hobson.

We are glad to announce that the church debt was recently paid in full. This church has worked faithfully. A splendid building has been erected and is now paid for. The membership is small in number but large in faith and energy. We wish to thank all who have helped to bring this little church to its present efficiency.

Mt. Zion.

A protracted meeting will be conducted in this church, week after the second Sunday in July. Rev. H. H. Butler, a former pastor, will assist in the meeting. We are praying for a great meeting.

CHAPEL HILL.

A few weeks ago, I sent personal letters to the secretaries of all the churches in the Eastern Va. Christian Conference, except those I had visited, in the interest of the Chapel Hill Church asking for a free-will offering. I am glad to say, Damascus, Spring Hill, Liberty Spring, Berea, Nansemond, Newport News, Lambert's Point and Mt. Carmel have responded nicely, for which we return thanks and good wishes. Will not the other churches of the conference fall in line and help us complete our house of worship, so we can have preaching and hold Sunday school? I expect to send letters soon to all the churches to which I have not sent, hoping they will take a free-will offering for Chapel Hill.

The first Sunday and Saturday before, Bro. Lee Johnson and I exchanged appointments, he going to Oak Level and I to Catawba Springs. I found a hearty welcome, and an attentive congregation. The music was good, and the Sunday school was interesting. This church always responds to every good work; and it has shown much interest in the Chapel Hill work, for which we return thanks. Oh! If I could only visit all the churches we would soon have money enough to finish the house; but I haven't the time to do this. Why not send us an offering any way? You will, if you can; you can, if you will. May God bless you all.

It was a great pleasure to meet at Catawba Springs many old and true friends to whom I had preached in former years. But I missed many faces that I used to see. They have gone to the spirit land.

ELON COLLEGE NOTES.

Another commencement has passed. Another volume of history has been made by the College, and in this volume lie marks of devotion, sacrifice and service on both the part of friends and those who have taught. Not only with these, but with the students a hard year's work has been wrought out well and wisely.

The Alumni and all students of the College showed a sincere appreciation and a great spirit of loyalty last week when they undertook to raise money to pay for the new gymnasium. From this time this building will be known as the Alumni Building. It is the handsomest building on the campus and we are not surprised at the pride Elon's sons and daughters have in it. We look upon this structure now as the property of those who are making Elon great by having spent ample time under her leadership.

Friends from all sections were at commencement. A regular home-coming it was and we regret we cannot make mention of all the goodly number. But they were here and we shall expect them again.

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENTS

NORFOLK LETTER.

Some time ago I promised to say something through THE SUN with regard to the strategic importance of the Christian Church of strongly establishing and intrenching herself in the cities and great centres of population throughout the land if she would minister, as she may, to the increasing need of the times. I can but surmise the interest with which these observations may be received, although I trust that they may be not without a certain degree of relevancy to those among us who are making something of a study of these needs, with the end in view of satisfying them.

"As goes the city, so goes the nation" someone has said, and I suppose he is right. Our great, modern cities, with their vast influences, intellectual, social, financial and industrial, being, as they are, the very nerve-centres of our Twentieth Century civilization, could not do otherwise than constitute the factors which determine the bent and trend of our national life and character.

As a matter of fact, however, this is nothing new. It has always been so. Memphis dominated Egypt, Athens was more than Greece, Rome was greater than Italy, Paris today dominates France setting the pace for provincial immorality and corruption, and the time is here when New York, Chicago, Philadelphia and San Francisco will do the same for us, aided in lesser degree by their smaller sisters. It is no idle statement that here, in these crowded and festering centres the church must strike, if indeed she shall strike at all, the decisive blow which will determine what part she is to play for the betterment of the nation, and here she will find her battlefield and meet, whether as victor or otherwise, her Waterloo.

It seems to me that our church could not fix upon a policy which, if executed, would do more to guarantee her future sphere and usefulness than to begin to concentrate her forces wisely and well in the cities, looking, not now so much to the establishment of many small, struggling congregations, as the building up and development of one or two strong and commanding institutions, here and there whose equipment would be such as to command, in every way the recognition and respect of the older and larger bodies, as well as that of the general public. This would secure for us a prestige which nothing else could possibly do, as human nature looks at such matters today.

The other denominations everywhere know this, and are taking advantage of it, and, if done in the proper spirit, there would seem to be nothing wrong about the matter. Here, for instance, in Park Place, one of the most promising residence sections of the city, and a highly strategic point, both the Baptist and Methodist congregations are by way of putting up splendid plants whose cost and equipment will involve an outlay of forty or fifty thousand dollars, and these buildings when completed will almost overshadow our own little five or six thousand dollar church. Of course, I am aware that many will decry the matter and meet me with the objection that it ought not to be so but these buildings will, of themselves, make a very powerful appeal to the church going public generally, and attract many who will not attend smaller, or less imposing places of worship. If we even hold our own in Park Place, to say nothing of moving forward, it will eventually be necessary for us to meet this competition in some way or other. How or when we are going to do it I do not know, but it must be done somehow in the not too-distant future.

Now, both the great denominations mentioned have the advantage of us, not only in a much larger local membership upon which they may rely for support but, having gotten all the financial aid from these possible, there still remains their great state and general Boards of Home Missions and Church Extension from which several thousand dollars additional can be gotten either in loans or donations. We have practically nothing of this sort to draw from, I believe, and so must therefore develop, largely from raw, and as yet unsympathetic material, the backing which we shall need. I do not think, however, that our people have anything else whatever in mind but that such a building as that which the situation requires must eventually somehow come.

Again, the fact may as well be confessed frankly that men insufficiently equipped and of mediocre ability and attainment have small chance of winning a place of recognition or influence for their respective denominations in the great cities today. I do not say that such men may not be perfectly good and sincere, and consecrated to their work, but, in the midst of the feverish activity, the intellectual unrest, and acute skepticism of modern times, they can hardly make their voices heard after any convincing or forceful manner such as to bring their churches to the front in the thought and mind of the public. Many more virile characteristics besides goodness are necessary to the minister in the modern city, if he would succeed as he ought.

He must not fear to be intensely aggressive in the right way, nor should he be too deferential to cut and dried methods which are to be adopted only after having the due sanction of the federated pastor's Association. This Association is a fine thing, no doubt, but it isn't so benevolently disposed as to take anyone upon its shoulders and carry him forward one whit further than the average. If he goes forward further he must, after a way, go alone, and all the others have the opportunity if they can. Which, after all, is but just and fair.

One difficulty confronting many ministers is the fact that, upon coming to the city, having been largely reared in the country, they are utter strangers to the complex and involved conditions found there. Having been used to comparatively simple environments, they fail to comprehend the many-sided life of the city, and hence, but imperfectly adapt themselves to its needs and requirements. Thus, they are hardly able to sympathize with much which calls loudly for such sympathy. Having no practical working acquaintance with its problems, by contact at first hand they, in seeking to deal with these problems, often become mere theorists, and are led to espouse measures which, to the city man, born and bred, are purely visionary and win, instead of his support, his amusement, to say the least. The temptation is, therefore, to get discouraged and relax, with the conviction that no good can be done.

I would say that those who are charged, therefore, with the training and preparation of young men for the ministry in the Christian church, having in mind the peculiar call of the cities for men in the pulpits of the church, might serve it vastly by directing their attention to the necessity for a sort of training which is not generally gotten in our colleges and seminaries. The modern minister, in the city especially, needs to be no less a man of the other world. He should possess a thoroughly cosmopolitan culture, if possible, which can be acquired only by a generous contact with as many classes of society as possible. The academic pose which he may carry out from his college or seminary will, unfortunately, appeal to but few of the people with whom he may be brought in contact. The modern city knows little and cares less for poetry, scholarship, the Odes of Horace, the metre of Euripides or the sonnets of Shakespeare. Its ideals are those that pertain to the sensual and superficial and its speech is that of the counting-house and market-place. Its campus is not a place for reflection and deliberation upon lofty themes, but is rather a battlefield, where men and women are going down in bloody defeat and struggle every day. Let the city minister remember these things, and adapt his ministry thereto.

HENRY SPENCER BOOTH.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

A wire message came to me in Dover, Delaware, Sunday, May 25, in these sad words: "Florence Harvey is dying." Thomas F. Cheatham.

There was no train out of Dover, going South, till 1:18 A. M. Monday. I reached Suffolk at 11:00 A. M. Monday, to find my only granddaughter was dead. Leaving Suffolk at 10:50 P. M., Monday, I reached Roxboro at 9:30 A. M., Tuesday, one hour and a half before the funeral service. My wife and daughters had reached Roxboro before me, but after Florence died, she had been embalmed and looked as if she were asleep. The room was full of flowers, but the dead babe was the sweetest of them all; for she was the fading flower of our hearts. Millions have passed through similar experience before us; but this was our first dead. We had buried parents and other relatives; but this the first of our offspring.

The service was conducted from the Methodist church by Rev. Dr. R. S. Beamon of Durham. Rev. J. O. Atkinson had been called but could not come. A quartet, led by Mrs. Z. V. Gwynn, with Miss Julia Cole at the organ, rendered "Asleep in Jesus," "Go Bury Thy Sorrow," "Safe in the Arms of Jesus," and "Beyond the Smiling and the Weeping" with sweet effect and Dr. Beamon's prayer seemed inspired.

From the church to the cemetery, through the rain and a downpour at the grave, Heaven seemed to weep with them that wept. When the little mound was finished the flowers hid the new grave. Mrs. Governor Kitchen put the last touches of flower arrangement upon the darling's grave. Flowers had come from Franklinton, Louisburg, Suffolk, Burlington, and Oberlin, Ohio, till forty one pieces made a garden of sweet odors. Near by was a new baby grave with only a few flowers upon it; but no doubt that mother's heart felt all the pangs of grief that seemed to break the heart of Bessie; so far apart is the world in outward condition and so near together in real heart experience. At the head of the grave stood a floral harp the gift of Miss Florence Harvey who had recently buried her mother, and for whom Florence Harvey Cheatham was named; and at the foot a beautiful design bearing the names of Mrs. J. M. Butler and Mrs. O. S. Smith and "Cradle Roll;" and these pieces suggested the "angels in white" at the head and the foot of the tomb of Jesus when the women came to His grave.

That was a solemn night when we tried to bend the knee in prayer with broken hearts,

But "Jesus binds up broken hearts and comforts all that mourn," and He will sustain us in our sorrow. Florence was not two years old, being born September 16th 1911 and left us May 25th, 1913; but ages cannot remove memories that must last into eternity and sweeten heaven's joy.

A little child is not much to the average man, but to Jesus and the family heart it speaks of the Kingdom of God.

This letter is not written for Mr. and Mrs. Cheatham alone and Wm. Staley whose loss is great, but for all families that have little graves and great caverns in their hearts.

W. W. STALEY.

WINCHESTER LETTER.

The writer had the privilege of attending the commencement exercises at Elon College. It was the best commencement in the history of the institution. The exercises were of high order and more degrees and certificates were conferred than on any previous occasion. It was good to tread the familiar paths again and clasp the hands of friends and classmates. But that which does the old student the most good, as he visits his Alma Mater, is to see the great progress Elon College is making in better equipment and increased enrollment. The new gymnasium, with its large number of student rooms, is a splendid addition to the equipment.

Three forces are daily binding the people of the Christian church to Elon College. They are: (1) Its sacrifices and contributions. Every movement to raise funds for the college, with the exception perhaps of the amount sent up from the churches through the annual conferences, has meant sacrifice on the part of many contributors but with those contributions have gone a part of the love of the life and the prayer of the heart that the enterprise might be a success, and thus many people love Elon and are interested in Elon College because out of their hard earnings, they have been permitted to give something towards its maintenance and upbuilding. (2) The noble self sacrificing men who are at its head. The sterling worth, the strong character, the consecrated life, and the high type of manhood and womanhood of those who have stood by the institution in their labors of love and sacrifice, notwithstanding the fact that wider fields with larger remunerations, have almost constantly been open to them, have won the admiration and esteem of the church and have formed another tie to bind our hearts to our beloved college. (3) That it trains the heart while training the head and no parent or community can fail to admire the college when the boy or girl comes home not only filled with an ambition to be and do but with an ambition to be good and do good. The College gives to the church three special benefits, which I have not time to enlarge upon, viz: (1) A broader recognition. (2) A better educated and equipped ministry. (3) A better qualified and more efficient laity.

To those who like the writer are more or less isolated from the college and the leading men in our church work, it is a feast of good things to revisit our Alma Mater and we turn away from its halls filled with new and deeper impulses and higher aspirations to go out and do more and better work for God and our fellow men.

W. T. WALTERS.

ELON COLLEGE NOTES.

The Board of Trustees was well satisfied with the President's report for the year. Progress was evident in every department, which shows that the friends of the institution have stood by its administration and contributed to its interest.

The Sunday school for the summer was organized last Sunday with the following officers: C. B. Riddle, Supt., D. F., Parsons, Asst. Supt., Miss Alene Patton, Secretary, Miss Annie Watson, Asst. Secty., Mrs. J. R. McNally, pianist, W. T. Noah, Treas.

Dr. W. C. Wicker of the College Faculty left Tuesday for Dayton, Ohio, to attend the Sunday school Board meeting of the American Christian Convention, of which he is chairman. From Dayton Dr. Wicker will go to New York whence he will sail for France, and then to Zurich, Switzerland, where he will attend the World's Sunday school convention, of which he is a duly accredited member from North Carolina. After this Convention, Dr. Wicker will visit Germany, and will arrive on his return voyage in New York August 11th. Here is wishing for him a safe, pleasant, and profitable trip.

Prof. W. P. Lawrence received word on Friday of last week from the President of Defiance College, Defiance, Ohio, that that institution had conferred upon him the honorary degree of Doctor of Literature. It will be remembered that Dr. Lawrence lectured in Defiance College two summers ago, and this recognition comes for his valuable services rendered there, and in all other places where his services have been secured. Dr. Lawrence will wear his degree with dignity and becoming modesty.

Mr. A. L. Lincoln of the class of '10 who was for four years Private Secretary of the President, but who is at present a student in the John Hopkin's Medical University, Baltimore, Md., is spending his vacation here, and rendering service at his old post of duty, helping in the campaign for new students.

Plans have been drawn for the building for the Ladies' Hall, and the structure will be ready for use by the opening day. The Hall furnished board, light, heat, matron's services, and miscellaneous living expenses last year for $70.70 for the term of ten months.

The Directors of the Elon Banking and Trust Company met in business session Monday morning and elected Mr. W. L. Smith Cashier to succeed Mr. H. D. Lambeth who is expecting to lick stamps for Uncle Sam at this place shortly.

Dr. J. U. Newman, Dean of the College, will leave shortly for Northfield to spend his summer vacation. Dr. Newman is an earnest and faithful worker in the College and deserves this much needed rest.

Children's Missionary Stories

STORIES are—yes, must be—used by every wide-awake worker among, or leader or teacher of, children.

MISSIONARY STORIES seem to have been the one field well-nigh overlooked until Mrs. Alice Moreton Burnett, Corresponding Secretary for the Woman's Board for Home Missions of the Christian Church, made a compilation of thirty interesting, instructive stories pertaining especially and directly to missions that are sure to be appreciated by workers, teachers, leaders, pastors, fathers, mothers—and the children.

Some of the Important Events of both Home Missions and Foreign Missions are also included, together with Suggestions For Junior Leaders.

They make a book 5 x 7 inches in size, 128 pages, red cloth binding—a handsome, attractive volume. Price 35c per copy postpaid.

THE BLINDING EFFECT OF SIN.

Temperance Lesson for Sunday School on June 22.

Scripture.—Amos 6:1-8.

Time.—Between B. C. 765 and 750 (Hastings).

Place.—Amos was a native of Tekoa, about five miles south of Bethlehem. He prophesied in Israel, the northern kingdom.

Persons.—Amos, all Israelites, especially those of the northern kingdom.

Golden Text.—Seek good, and not evil, that ye may live.—Amos 5:14.

Leading Thought.—Depart from evil and do good.

Amos was a farmer, living in Tekoa, six miles south of Bethel. His specialties were sheep and sycamore-trees—trees that bore a small, figlike fruit. He lived about B. C. 793, in the reigns of Uzziah, king of Judah, and Jereboam II., king of Israel. Jereboam was a powerful king, but his kingdom was full of horrible iniquities. Against these Amos dared to preach openly, on his business trips to Bethel, one of the centres of idolatry and one of the king's homes. He was brought in danger of his life by his heroism, and was a splendid model for the Christian citizen of to-day.

Those "at ease in Zion" (v. 1) were the careless inhabitants of Jerusalem, the capital of the southern kingdom. Those that were "secure in the mountain of Samaria" were the confident ill-doers of the hill city of Samaria, the capital of the northern kingdom. These nations were both very powerful at the time, and yet Amos prophesied woe to their "notable men" (revised version, v. 1), to whom all "the house of Israel" looked for guidance.

Calneh, probably in Babylonia; Hamath, in Syria; Gath in Philistia—all were rich and mighty cities, but God had made Jerusalem and Samaria their equals if not their superiors. And how were they repaying the divine kindness? They were putting far away, in their heedless thoughts, the evil day of reckoning. They were bringing near, setting up in their very midst, the seat of violence—the benches of unjust and violent judges. They were living in wanton luxury; ivory beds to sleep on; couches to lie on while eating; dainty food—lambs and calves; idle songs, pricked out with tinkling music; wine, drunk not by the cup but by the big bowlful; anointings after baths with costly unguents instead of cheap olive-oil; most of all, they did not care about the swiftly approaching ruin of the northern kingdom, called "Joseph" because its chief tribes, Ephraim and Manasseh, were descended from him.

And the punishment? Judah should go into captivity to Assyria, but the northern kingdom, as first in wickedness, shall go first into exile, all their merrymaking come to a doleful end. God swears it by His holy name, for He hates "the excellency of Jacob"—that is, these idle dissipations in which the degenerate children of Jacob find their only excellency.

NOTES ON C. E. TOPIC FOR JUNE 29.

Subject: "Our Nation's Glories and Perils." (A Flag Meeting.) Exod 19:1-8.

During this week comes our annual Fourth of July Celebration. It is well at this time to think something of our nation—both of its glories and perils, hence our topic.

For this meeting get a large American flag and fasten it against the wall in front of the society. Divide the society into two groups. The first group will talk upon the glories and the second upon the perils. By no means let the meeting assume the form of a debate.

The Christian Endeavor World outlines some very attractive and interesting short talks on glories and perils. The leader may divide these among the members.

There are many sources of information for talks upon this topic. Any one who knows something of the history of the Republic or read the daily papers can find some thought upon our glories or our perils. No one person should talk over two minutes in this meeting.

THE PURPOSE OF THIS PAGE.

This page is primarily for news from the Christian Endeavor societies, organized and teacher training classes, Home department and Cradle rolls of our Southern Church. We want a correspondent for this page in every one of our nearly two hundred churches.

We want something from these correspondents every month. Every class reporter and corresponding secretary is also expected to contribute to the newspapers for the class or society.

What are our officers doing? Somebody is not doing his duty in every class and society in the church.

Address such matter to Chas. A. Hines, Greensboro, N. C.

TWO HUNDRED IS THE GOAL.

This the Number of New Organized Classes Wanted by June 1, 1914.

The field secretary reported slightly over 100 organized classes at the Burlington Convention for our Southern church. We want to triple this number in the next year. It will not be an easy task, but it is possible with united work. There are approximately 700 classes in our Convention composed of people over 14 years of age. Every one of these classes ought to be an organized class.

To the end that this aim may be reached, the field secretary, (Charles A. Hines, Greensboro, N. C.) wants to get in touch with superintendents who will cooperate with him in this work. If you are one, write him. If you are a member of a class that is inefficient, unorganized or poorly organized write to Mr. Hines and he will help you organize, or assist you in getting a poorly organized class into working shape.

Many have the idea that the organized class is for the city church, nothing is farther from the truth. The country church, is the ideal place for an organized class. There are fewer organized bodies in the country and men and women will give the class work a more undivided attention.

Officers and teachers in the school should set about organizing every class in the school whose members are 14 years of age and over. If officers won't do it; a few enterprising members should organize their class, and if this cannot be done successfully, withdraw from the class, organize a new one and set to work to build up the new organization. There is an abundance of good literature upon organized classes. Write to the field secretary and he will furnish you with it or give you a list and the place from which it can be secured.

POINTS FROM ELOQUENT PENS.

1. A nation's character is the sum of its splendid deeds; they constitute one common patrimony, the nation's inheritance.—Henry Clay.

2. Let our object be our country, our whole country, and nothing but our country.—Daniel Webster.

NOTICE!

Notice is hereby given of a proposed change in the constitution of the Eastern Va. Christian Sunday School Convention, reducing the representatives from each Sunday school to two delegates per school.

STANLEY C. HARRELL, Secretary.

NOTICE! NOTICE!

The Young People's Convention of the Western North Carolina Christian Conference will hold its annual meeting with the Randleman Christian church July 25-27, 1913.

The Sunday school at this church has extended to the convention a cordial invitation to meet there, which invitation the executive committee has gladly accepted; and we feel sure that with Randleman as our meeting place we can have one of the best conventions ever held in the Western Conference. That the convention may be a success I want to ask that every pastor and also every Sunday school superintendent begin now to make plans and have every school within the bounds of the conference represented. A large delegation is one of the very necessary things that go to make a convention a success. Brethren, please see that your school is represented in the Randleman Convention.

Yours in the work,
J. F. MORGAN, President.

"In the twenty-seventh Psalm the man of God prayed: 'Hear, O Lord, when I cry with my voice: have mercy also upon me, and answer me. When thou saidst, Seek ye my face; my heart said unto thee, Thy face, Lord, will I seek.' In making that prayer he expressed the gratitude of a responsive soul, the trust that held fast the promise of grace, and the touch of power that makes every acquisition and achievement possible to the child of God."

"He walks as in the presence of God that converses with Him in frequent prayer and frequent communion; that runs to Him in all his necessities; that asks counsel of Him in all his doubtings; that opens all his wants to Him; that weeps before Him for his sins; that asks remedy and support for his weakness; that fears Him as a Judge, reverences Him as a Lord, and obeys Him as a Father."—Jeremy Taylor.

The infinite Father does not stand by us to be catechized and explain himself to our vain minds. He is here for our trust; and if we will but lean on him, our chafing heart shall sleep the sweet sleep of recovery. We must not carry the habits and exactions of vision into the hours of its loss; if we do but take his hand, he will lead us as the blind by a way that we know not, and we cannot go astray while he abides.—James Hartineau.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE WOMAN'S MISSION BOARD OF THE SOUTHERN CHRISTIAN CONVENTION.

The Woman's Mission Board of the Southern Christian Convention met in the Y. M. C. A. Hall at Elon College, May 26, 8 P. M., with the following members present: Mrs. C. H. Rowland, Franklin, Va., Mrs. L. F. Johnson, Raleigh, N. C., Mrs. W. T. Walters, Winchester, Va., Mrs. W. H. Carroll, Burlington, N. C., Miss Bettie Stephenson, Boone, N. C.

The meeting was opened by devotional exercises conducted by the President, Mrs. Rowland. The first item to claim the attention of the Board was the consideration of a proposed constitution for a Woman's Missionary Convention for the Southern Christian Convention. The following was adopted:—

Constitution of the Woman's Southern Missionary Convention.

Article I. Name. This organization shall be known as the Woman's Missionary Convention, of the Southern Christian Convention, and shall be auxiliary to that body.

Article II. Object. The object shall be to promote the cause of missions within the bounds of the Convention, and to assist the woman's missionary work in the several conferences of the Convention.

Article III. Membership. This convention shall be made up of representatives from various woman's missionary conferences elected on the basis of one representative for every 25 members, or fractional part thereof, provided that where there is no missionary conference, the conference Woman's Missionary Board shall appoint representatives on the same basis, the president of the Woman's Missionary Conference and all members of Conference Boards shall be members ex-officio.

Article IV. Officers. The officers of this convention shall be a president, vice-president, secretary, corresponding secretary, treasurer, superintendent of literature and mite boxes, and superintendent of young people's societies and superintendent of cradle roll. They shall be elected biennially, and hold office until their successors are elected.

Article V. Meetings. Meetings shall be held in conjunction with the meetings of the Southern Christian Convention, and reports to that body shall be made through the president of this Convention.

Article VI. Funds. All funds raised by this Convention for missions, unless otherwise specified by the donor, shall be divided equally between home and foreign missions, after deducting necessary expenses.

Article VII. Executive Board. The officers of this Convention shall constitute the executive board, who shall have power to act for the Convention between sessions. The executive board shall meet annually as per adjournment or on call of the President.

Article VIII. Duties of Officers. The duties of the president, the vice-president, the secretary, and the corresponding secretary shall be such as usually devolve upon such officers,

The treasurer shall receive all moneys raised by this Convention or otherwise for the woman's mission work of the Convention, and shall keep a correct account of same. The treasurer shall pay over to the treasurer of the Southern Christian Convention Feb. 1, May 1, Aug. 1, and Nov. 1 of each year, such mission funds as may be in her hands, first deducting current expenses.

The superintendent of literature and mite boxes shall have charge of that branch of the work of this Convention; disseminate missionary literature and seek to organize mission study classes. She shall receive quarterly reports of auxiliary mite box and literature superintendents. She shall make a report at the regular meeting of this Convention.

The superintendent of Young People's Department shall seek to enlist the interest of pastors and churches in appointing superintendents of and organizing Young People's Societies, and shall receive the reports of the Conference Young People's superintendents.

Duties of Cradle Roll Superintendent shall be to have charge of the Cradle Roll work, secure the appointment of Cradle Roll Superintendents in Conferences, receive their quarterly reports and develop wherever possible Cradle Roll Work.

Article IX. This constitution may be amended by a two thirds vote of the members present at any regular meeting.

Board adjourned.

May 27, 1913—Woman's Mission Board met as per adjournment, Mrs. Rowland in the chair.

The Board recommended that the funds for Foreign Missions raised by the Willing Workers, Young People and Christian Endeavors be used for the Santa Isabel work, and that the funds raised by the Cradle Rolls be used for the Orphanage. Moved and carried Mrs. Rowland continue as editor of the Woman's Department, to work with the co-operation of the whole Board.

AN APPEAL TO OUR PASTORS.

The presence of so many of our pastors at the recent Woman's Missionary Mass Meeting indicates that some of our ministers are interested and willing to help in the work which we as women of the Southern Christian Convention are undertaking in organized missionary endeavor. I am well aware that many who are just as interested were hindered from attending by financial and other reasons. My appeal is to both classes, the interested and the uninterested.

We are launching a great work; great because it has for its aim and purpose the salvation of human souls, the greatest work of man, because it makes him co-worker with God. It is a difficult task for us in all its mechanical bearings, but the "love of Christ constraineth us" and we do it cheerfully for His dear sake. We believe, however, that whatever work is undertaken for His cause should be done in the very safest way if organized, done on the most economical basis of action. Now, the appeal that I am making is for the assistance of the pastors in awakening general missionary sentiment and enthusiasm, which is certainly the first requisite in the success of any organized missionary movement.

The matter of personal work by our women in the organization of local societies has been greatly stressed, and so far as the machinery is concerned, much of this is necessary, but think how her expenditure of energy can be saved and the work facilitated by a little activity on the part of the pastor in the form of a few missionary sermons and an earnest talk occasionally on this line, to say nothing of the conversational influence on his part when doing his pastoral visiting.

I know there is the time worn excuse of his busy life, but if the pastor is busy how about his wife and the wives of his parishioners!

Think for a moment, with her house work and sewing and the care of her children, what being out of her home two or three afternoons a week, or even one afternoon for several weeks, means to her! Yes, our work is begun and will continue, even at this price, but the question has already been asked, and it is a legitimate one, will it pay? Yes, even at this cost it will pay if that consecrated wife and mother doing such personal work, can do it and at the same time so wisely manage as to preserve the good order and happiness of her home and her health at the same time, but, personally, I am convinced that if any organized woman's work comes at the cost of overstrained nerves and the demoralization of home life it is too high a price, for it to be sustained on a paying basis. I know that I am by no means alone in this opinion. But, as I said, our work is begun, and we believe so far, is paying and it will continue, the call has come in the form of an opportunity and is being, and will be, met, but my plea is that in the beginning, in the very conception of our plans our pastors may so see their duty and opportunity in relation to this work which is identically the same as their own in its aim and purpose, that our cooperation may be such as to make for the very wisest and best investment of time and energy in attaining the end in view; the salvation of our fellow beings.

I am convinced that few, even of those who are interested, have seen the matter from the standpoint of this article. Will you not conscientiously consider the matter and bravely follow your convictions of duty in regard to the organized woman's missionary work? We believe you will.

Yours earnestly,

BETTIE STEPHENSON.

ADDRESS OF WELCOME TO THE WOMAN'S HOME AND FOREIGN MISSIONARY RALLY.

BY MRS. W. A. HARPER.

The first Christian missionary was a woman—the woman who talked with Christ at the well and then led many men of her city to know Him. We know also that women were the last to leave the Cross and the first to visit the tomb of the Master. Further than these Biblical instances, specialists in religious investigation tell us that women are naturally more religious than men—their religion being positive while man's is often negative. And the historians of the religious realm inform us that no great movement in the Church has ever gained a solid basis till it has been championed by the women of the Church.

These facts make the duty, the privilege I should rather call it, of welcoming you to our midst at this, the first Women's Missionary Rally of the Christian Church, South, a real pleasure to me. I am glad that our women are feeling the burden of the missionary obligation and I am glad that they are met together in our midst to discuss that obligation and devise plans to meet it.

I am fully persuaded that from now on our missionary work will take on newness of life—not only in the Women's Organizations and those auxiliary thereto, but among the men of the Church as well. We shall be informed as to missions ourselves. We shall study the needs. We shall devise plans to raise money and equip missionaries to meet those needs. And our work will be a joy, as all real Christian work is to the true Christian. This body of women, met here for these noble purposes, shall mark an era in our development, and so we are glad to welcome you.

And not the least cause for gladness on our part to have you with us is the fact that we here at Elon are what you and your friends have made us. A few years ago, some twenty-four to be exact, this College campus was just an ordinary thicket and these magnificent buildings just ordinary clay buried where it had been for centuries. Today we welcome those who have made this place possible with all its glorious work and with all its outlook on the future. You are certainly welcome to your own and twice welcome to our hearts. We trust your stay with us, brief as it is to be, will bring that joy to you which the thought of having you has brought us, and that the glorious cause you represent shall take on new zeal and life from this hour forth. You are welcome cordially to your own Elon.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY CONVENTION.

Response to Address of Welcome.

BY MRS. W. H. CARROLL, BURLINGTON, N. C.

Madam President and Ladies of The Convention:—

We have just listened to the very cordial address of welcome delivered by our corresponding secretary, Mrs. Harper. We desire to say in behalf of these dear women who have gathered here this morning, in this the first public missionary meeting of the women of our Southern Christian Convention, that we are all delighted to be here—this is the time and occasion our hearts have longed for, when the women of the Christian Church, South, should meet together to devise ways and means for the promotion of home and foreign missions. We deem it a great and glorious privilege to meet in these historic halls—the fountain head of learning in our Southern Christian Convention—and to mingle with kindred spirits engaged in the same great cause. As we come together this morning, we come praying the Father's blessing and for the presence of the Holy Spirit, with out which our meeting together will be in vain. There is a great work for us to do. A wide field in which to work, the laborers, are few, but the reward is sure and great—"And they that be wise shall shine as the brightness of the firmament; and they that turn many to righteousness, as the stars for ever and ever."

While we rejoice in woman's record in the past in spreading and proclaiming the blessed teachings of our Saviour, and of holding together His Church and in promoting His cause, we must not therewith be content. Let us not only rejoice in their glorious achievements, but let us emulate their example. Let us go forward and add new laurels to our Master's cause. Let us co-operate with united zeal and a consecrated purpose, resting assured that victory will also crown our efforts.

Let us remember that the Church is the appointed instrument of God in the evangelization of the world, and woman has ever been and still is, the heart of the Church, as she is the conscience of the race. She is the numerical majority of the Church, and her influence is greater today than at any other period of the world's history.

We fully understand the cause of our coming together, and we thank our Sister Harper again for her precious words of welcome, and are sure that we will enjoy this occasion, and look back upon it with pleasure as our work shall continue to prosper.

—Governor Craig has announced that he will call an extra session of the legislature to adjust the freight rate controversy, but has not as yet named the date when the session will convene.

—During April and May more than 200,000 immigrants came into our country through Ellis Island. All of these immigrants, who would accept them, were given a copy of the Bible in their own language.

—The Italians have been building a Palace of Justice in Rome. Now the Italian chamber is investigating charges of $8,000,000 graft in connection therewith. This would seem to make it the Palace of Injustice.

THE RIGHT SPIRIT WITHIN.

One cannot help feeling as he looks at working men that this more than anything else is what makes the difference between them—the presence or absence in their lives of some distinct superior purpose for their work, to which it is all dedicated. It may be the comfort of a family, it may be a good cause, the support of education, the fostering of the great work of the Church; whatever it is, so it be greater than the work itself, so the work is turned from an end into a means, it lightens the pressure of the work most wonderfully, it relieves the continual burden. Two dig across the field side by side, but one is always longing for the end where he can lie down and rest. The other rejoices in every stroke of his spade as if it were one more stone laid in the home that he is trying to build, in the cause which he decides to strengthen. And there is no work so lofty in itself that it does not need something higher than itself to be done for, something to lift its heavy pressure from the sore and weary backs of men. Even the work of the Lord Jesus, that work in which his soul delighted, the work of telling men of God and saving the world of sin—I think no one can read the gospels and not see that he was not always lifting the heavy pressure of that work by reminding himself that he was doing it for his Father. It is not very touching? He rests, beyond his own pleasure in his work, upon the consciousness that it is his Father's pleasure too. "I have finished the work that thou gavest me to do." That was the perfect satisfaction with which the Savior, as it were, folded his hands from his long task and went to hang upon the Cross.

That was the casting down, as it were, of his crown before his Father's throne.—Phillips Brooks.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

The Sunday school and Christian Endeavor Convention of the North Carolina and Virginia Christian Conference will convene with the Haw River Christian Church, Tuesday, July 15th, 11 A. M. An excellent program is being prepared and will be published in these columns next week. In the meantime, let every Sunday school, Christian Endeavor, and Organized Class within the bounds of the Convention arrange to be represented. The pastors and superintendents should come without fail. If every pastor, superintendent and teacher would only attend, what a great and profitable time we would have. Come and gain help and receive help.

J. O. Cox, President.

—The post office safe at Kernersville, N. C., was blown open by yeggmen last Sunday A. M., supposedly about 2 o'clock and $1,263 in stamps and $50 in money was obtained. The robbers made good their escape. Though there is little or no clue to reveal the guilty in this case, yet they will ultimately be hunted down and lodged behind prison bars. The way of the transgressor may seem easy for a season, but the lure of sin is relentless and "be sure your sin will find you out." (Numb. 32:23).

—A lady who was always punctual at church gave as her reason that "It is no part of my religion to disturb the religion of others." She had considered, better than many do, the importance of being on time at any church service.

—The North Carolina Medical Society has now 1,100 members. It held its annual Convention at Morehead City this week and about seventy-five additional physicians were granted license to practice in this State.

Dear Children and Friends:

Are you pleased with the report for this week? I have not found, within the last twelve months, a report as short as this one. This week's receipts will pay for two days' expenses. That throws us in debt for the supplies for five days. How long, at that rate, will it take to get so far in debt that we can't ever pay out?

I know this is a season of the year when there is but little money given. It is really looked upon as being a time of drought, in money matters.

But for this week, last year, the receipts were $70.16. A considerable fall-off. If I can get an average of that much each week, I will pay my bills and hold my head up; but I can't do it as it has been for the last month or so. I am constantly trying to plan some way to reach the folks and cause them to take care of this enterprise of the church; but I am aware that what will reach one will drive a dozen away. Is that true in this work? It seems like it. So I try to speak of things as they are to present them to the thinking Christian. In this I am trying to supply the needs of those who have sustained the greatest loss to be mentioned. The orphan has lost not only the parent: mother and father or either as the case may be, but the home is broken up. No institution can supply these in the truest sense of the term, but we can, with love and the proper training, prepare the child for usefulness in life. Are you doing what you can for this work, to help the helpless?

We are under many obligations to our friends who are supporting children in the Home. As to the cost, that will not amount to so much. In the report to the Board of Trustees it was shown that the cost of each child, per day, is 16 cents or $4.80 a month. I wish we might have a number of schools and societies to write us about this.

We prefer, however, that this be done by sending moneys; if clothing, only such articles as may be advised by superintendent or matron.

Yours in the interest of the institution,

E. M. CARTER, Supt.

McRae, Ga., May 30, 1913.

Dear Uncle Emory:

We are a little late but we have had a good time at Commencement. School is out and brother is at home all day with us. We are well. Love to all the cousins. Tell more of them to write to the corner. Enclosed find our dime for May.

I am glad to hear from the Denton boys again. It seems that most all of the cousins have gone into winter quarters; I would like for them to come out again and make the corner full of interest. Hope you will have a pleasant vacation.

THE PRAYER LIFE.

There is an under current of feeling among Christian people, that finds occasional expression, to the effect that we are sadly deficient in our prayer life. This is not the case because the people plan to have it so, but because they do not plan and purpose to have it other wise. Good people allow business activities to crowd out the prayer hour, not realizing as Martin Luther said that "prayer is the better half of service." I am sure that we would have better and more satisfactory reports to make, if the prayer life was more prominent. Our work suffers on the account of it. Men are selected for positions of trust and great responsibility, without first having a season of waiting upon God, in prayer, or His direction. There is a fitness that comes alone from above. God's ways are higher than our ways. It is a great thing to live with Him, and to keep "prayed up." We wonder what a different state of things there would be, if all Christians would do this.

But there are some things that we could well count on. Empty pews would be filled at our church services. The mid-week prayer meeting would be looked forward to with delight, and no trivial excuse would keep the worshipper away. The problem, that is now so difficult, of securing competent and consecrated Sunday school teachers, would then find solution. There would be a spirit of evangelism, instead of a spurt of occasional revival effort. People who are timid and "mum" in a prayer meeting, but who can talk all day about the things of the world, and shout themselves hoarse at a baseball game, would be able to testify for Jesus. If there was more real prayer there would be fewer empty treasuries. But after all it is easier to pay than it is to pray. It is prayer that brings things to pass, for it is the reaching up of the soul, to take part with God, in the things He ordains to accomplish through us. "And when they had prayed, the place was shaken where they were assembled together; and they were all filled with the Holy Ghost, and they spake the word of God with boldness." Acts 4:31. Our work, in many instances needs to be put upon a different basis, and rid of some questionable methods. Looking to this, more attention to the prayer life, is evidently a step in the right direction.

I said to a minister this morning, "that was a good sermon you gave us last night." He said to me, in effect, that he felt that he was not at his best, and seemed to feel that the reason for it was, "I was so busy yesterday, that I did not take the time to pray as much as I ought." Many others, doubtless, have had a similar experience. As our good editor, some time ago, spoke of himself, in reference to the mission question, that he was "waking up," so there are others who are waking up some what. And surely it is "high time," and I recall nothing, now, that it is more needful to awaken concerning, than that of the importance, the privilege and the possibility of the prayer

PARENTS! CAN HE TROT?

Birth once fixed the station of life in this country, but no such accident does now. Training fixes it. The question of your son's future success will not be "Who was his sire?" but "Can he trot?" To possess the ability to "do" he must have a strong body and a strong mind.

The fitting school makes both possible. It paves the way for a successful career at College, university or in life. It is an invaluable step between boyhood and manhood.

Probably the most widely known fitting school in the Southeast and the leading one in the state is the Oak Ridge Institute, located 17 miles northwest of Greensboro, in Guilford County. The work of this school is unusually high in preparing for colleges, technical schools and life. It admits to the State University without examination and graduates of its Business College Department are found in every part of the country. It appeals strongly to parents who want the best. A beautiful catalog can be had by addressing J. A. and M. H. Holt, Proprietors, Oak Ridge, N. C. Advt.

Salaries and bills due May 31, 1913, approximately 600.39

Total liabilities, approximately$8,580.55
This is $4,071.43 less than it was at our last published statement, for February, 1913. This is encouraging, notwithstanding the fact that February fairly represents the dullest period of our mission treasury and May the best period.

HOW THE CLUB SAVES YOU MONEY.

The fact that the best business men, including bankers, merchants, farmers and professional men are the most enthusiastic members of the Christian Sun Piano Club is pretty conclusive evidence that the Club is founded on a sound business principle and is conducted in a business like way. Every business man knows from his daily experience the big difference between retail prices and wholesale prices. He can therefore appreciate the advantage of clubbing his order with ninety-nine other subscribers in a big factory order for one hundred Pianos and Player-Pianos. The Club finances the deal and gives each member his percentage share of the saving. Each member is responsible only for his own purchase, and the Piano is shipped on receipt of the order. The Club member is thus relieved of the details and responsibilities of forming the Club and yet receives his share of the benefits, which amount to a saving of a hundred dollars or more, according to the style of instrument he selects.

If you are thinking of purchasing a good Piano or Player-Piano you will make no mistake to follow the lead of other good business men and join the Club. Write for catalogue and thirty-two page booklet containing letters from Club members. Address, Ludden & Bates Christian Sun Piano Club, Dept., Atlanta, Ga. Advt.

A MORNING TOOTH TALK.

The following is a very good letter on teeth:

"Good morning, Mr. I. C. Busyman. My name is Tooth—C. A. Tooth, of the North Carolina Tooth Company. My object in seeking this interview is not one of complaining, but merely one of explanation regarding the feeling and condition of certain members of our company who have been working faithfully for you for a number of years.

"It seems that you are such a busy man that you forget entirely to show proper attention to your teeth, those hard working servants and companions of your daily life. They serve you every day, and sometimes half the night, and so far have received nothing but neglect.

"Now, you are a reasonable man, and so I am sure you will realize the importance of showing some attention to those necessary partners of your activity. Of course, you have thought about it frequently, and I truly believe your inattention is not intentional; nevertheless, it is harmful, and so I warn you unless you get busy soon and show your teeth some decent attention your neglect will prove both costly and painful.

"Yes, I knew you would admit the justice of my remarks, and I certainly am pleased to have you say you will give these hard working members proper daily attention. They will be able to serve you much better, and, briefly, you will find it to your interest in every way. You certainly know they are wonderful little workers, and can do wonders for you, but when it comes to helping themselves they are helpless. Keep your word and do the needful, and I am sure you will find them ever true and grateful.

"Good morning, sir."

W. P. E.

Is there anything which feels more comfortable at the breakfast hour than a well washed face?

A well washed mouth and teeth.

Is there anything more impolite than to pick the teeth after meals?

Yes, to leave them unpicked or uncleaned.

Is it a good idea to thoroughly clean the nails at least once a week?

Yes, but it is a much better idea to put in some time with a soft stick, powder, and mirror in polishing every part of every tooth until it is clean. Dirty nails are a disgrace—but what of dirty

THE PROOF OF THE PUDDING.

An old adage says that the proof of the pudding is in the eating, and truer words were never written. For a year or more we have been telling the readers of the Christian Sun about the big saving in price and the many features of the Christian Sun Piano Club. We have been offering them the tempting pudding and they have eaten it, yes, in large numbers.

But the test is in the eating! What do the Club members say about the Club? How do they like it, now, that they have bitten into it and have learned by experience instead of hear say? In order that every intending piano buyer may know what the Club members have to say about it, we have printed their letters in a book which we will gladly send free to anyone on request. No two letters are alike. Each tells its own story in its own words, but all agree that the Club is a grand success from the standpoint of the piano buyer.

Write for a copy of the wonderful book, written by people whom you know either personally or by reputation. It tells how others have saved a hundred dollars or more on their pianos, how they like the easy terms, how they prefer the superb Ludden & Bates instruments to any they have ever heard, how they appreciate the courteous treatment that they have received at the hands of the management, and hundreds of other

NEW PROVIDENCE.

The work at New Providence is moving along nicely. We have a splendid Sunday school with four organized classes. The interest is good, and seems to be on the increase. These splendid people are putting forth an earnest effort to bring New Providence to life again and God is blessing their efforts. Within the last few weeks we have put a new roof on and papered and painted the inside of the church. These improvements add very much to the appearance of the building. We expect to paint the church on the outside at an early date. The improvements on the church cost something over $350.00, and we are so thankful that we have paid for same. We hope to soon have the money in hand to do the outside painting. As pastor of the church I am so grateful for the good work that has been done by the members of the same. I have not found a more loyal people anywhere than these. In behalf of the church I want to express our heartfelt thanks for the many friends of New Providence who are not members, for every donation, and assistance which they have given us. God will reward each of you dear friends.

On the first Sunday in June we held our annual Memorial Services. This being the first time this writer had been privileged to be present at this meeting, for him, at least, it was a pleasant service. The church and congregation seemed to enjoy the day, too. We feel that there were impressions made that will be helpful for many days.

On the first Sunday night we begun our revival meetings, which were continued until the night of the eleventh. The Lord was with us and gave us a splendid meeting. There were twenty-seven professions, and so far eight have united with the church, and others are expected to join later, as it was rainy on the last night of the meeting, and some who had intended to join did not get out. We give God the glory for these great blessings. The pastor was assisted in these services by his relative, Bro. W. T. Lewis, who rendered valuable service in song, and personal work. We were glad to have him with us, and shall be glad for him to come to New Providence again.

We were also glad to have present with us a part of the time, a number of the pastors of the other churches of Graham.

Our organist, Miss Annie Williams, was happy in performing her duty during the meeting. She was in her place at every service, and this means so much in a revival meeting, as well as in any other religious service.

On next fourth Sunday at 4:00 o'clock at Haw River we will administer the ordinance of baptism, and on that day the regular preaching service will be at night, rather than at 3:30 P. M.

I expect to report the work of my other churches after I hold each revival.

Yours in the work,
J. F. MORGAN, Pastor.

JOY AND ZEAL.

Wise people who give us advice do well to emphasize the importance of the little things, the importance of the commonplace. What we need is so firm a faith, so deep a consecration, so much earnestness that nothing which needs to be done by us shall seem to us trivial or commonplace. We need sanctified imagination to help us to be zealous in good work, and there must be reason back of it. List for yourself the reasons you have for zeal in the Christian life. It will help you to be zealous. If we are going to get joy out of life as well as make life better for the rest of the world, we have got to be enthusiastic about it. Christian zeal means joy.—Selected.

The Psalmist says, that when he considers only the heavens, he cries, "What is man, that Thou art mindful of him?" So do all of us; it is a very bad thing to keep the eye exclusively on masses of matter. Whenever you are oppressed, he says, by the glory of the heavens, you ought to remember that there is a "glory above the heavens." Whenever you feel dwarfed by the strength of nature, remember that there is a strength which, though ascribed to the babe, is higher than nature. What is that strength? It is the thing called meekness—the thing that stills the avenger in the breast. We uncover our heads in wonder before the stilling of a natural storm. But the stilling of a soul-storm is more wonderful far.—George Matheson.

Our Song Books teach the Gospel as fully in Song as our Preachers do in Sermon.

FLAVIL HALL F. L. ROWE S. H. HALL

THE GOSPEL MESSAGE IN SONG

Revised and enlarged by FLAVIL HALL, and S. H. HALL

This book has 205 hymns. The thought of a reformation in song book making prompted its compilation. In it the Gospel is taught as fully in song as the disciples endeavor to teach in sermon. No other such book before it had been published, nor has any other such yet been published, except our other new book mentioned below. The words and music are high class, and as sweet, inspiring and soul-stirring as any published. Published in both round and shaped notes. Out five years and over 60,000 copies sold. Endorsed by leading men and women in the Christian Church. Beautifully bound and printed.

YOUR ORDERS WILL BE GRATEFULLY APPRECIATED AT THE FOLLOWING PRICES: 30 cents per copy, prepaid; $3.00 per dozen, not prepaid; $3.50 per dozen, prepaid; $20.00 per hundred, not prepaid; 50 at the hundred rate.

REDEMPTIONS WAY IN SONG

By F. H. HALL, FLAVIL HALL, and F. L. ROWE

This book contains 115 songs as sweet, uplifting and soul-stirring as ever filled the hearts of the devotees of our "Risen Lord". True to its title—Redemption's Way, in its fullness, fearlessly and specifically presented. Convenient in size for Evangelist in Gospel tent work. The best book for any and all purposes. Published in both notations.

PRICES IN REACH OF ALL: 15 cents per copy, prepaid; $1.40 per dozen, not prepaid; $1.60 per dozen, prepaid; $10.00 per hundred not prepaid; 50 at the hundred rate.

VOCAL MUSIC LESSONS

By FLAVIL HALL

This book has 25 pages of plain, practical rudiments, and 28 pages of soul-stirring music. These songs are selected with a view to having practice material. Teachers of vocal music should, by all means, have this book for their classes. Besides theory, it contains some very important lessons for the church regarding Vocal Music. Prices: 10 cents per copy; $1.00 per dozen.

MARRIAGES

Rothgeb-Modesitt.

Leaksville Christian Church was the scene of a pretty wedding April the 29th when Miss Lena Virginia Modesitt became the bride of Mr. Ray Grove Rothgeb. The attendants were Mr. Earnest Hamrick and Miss Blanche Lionberger. The wedding march was played by Miss Iva Rothgeb, sister of the groom. Mr. and Mrs. Rothgeb are members of Leaksville Church, and are active in Sunday school and church work. The large audience present and the many valuable presents received are evidence of the esteem in which they are held. This writer joins their many friends in wishing the young couple many happy years of married life.

DEATHS

Guynn.

Mrs. Mary Adel Roach Guynn, widow of the late Claude L. Guynn, passed away at her home in Norfolk, Va., May 22, 1913 after long months of patient suffering. She was just past fifty years of age, having been born March 3, 1863. She leaves five children: Mrs. Lela Anderson, Mrs. Bessie Epes, Miss Ethel, and Claudius and Melvin.

She married Mr. Guynn February 2, 1881, the birthday of the Christian Endeavor Movement and she has ever since been an ardent Christian Endeavorer. Her departure from us was on the second anniversary of her husband's death.

Her mother, Mrs. Bartlett Curling, survives her as well as two grand children and four sisters and two brothers.

Mr. and Mrs. Guynn were active workers and devout Christians in the Memorial Christian Temple. They attended the International Missionary Conference of the Christian church at Piqua, Ohio, in 1901. They brought up in their family in the nurture and admonition of the Lord and all five of them are active workers in the church of their parents and will strive to fill faithfully the places made vacant so recently.

Sister Guynn was a noble woman, faithful, patient, kind, a true Christian. She blew no trumpets from the house top but served her Master with all the loyalty of her trustful and obedient life. We rejoice in her gain, and mourn our loss as a family and church and friend.

The funeral services were held at the church of which she has been a member so many years, and toward the setting of the sun on May 23, 1913 we laid her form to rest and covered her grave with flowers of love. The services were conducted by her pastor, the writer.

"IN ESSENTIALS UNITY, IN NON-ESSENTIALS LIBERTY, IN ALL THINGS CHARITY."

OUR PRINCIPLES.

- (1.) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the church.
- (2.) Christian is a sufficient name for the church.
- (3.) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
- (4.) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of church membership.
- (5.) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

Editorial Briefs

Thankful.

All have many things daily to be thankful for. It is impossible to count our blessings "one by one." They are too many. How little do we think of the blessings of health till sickness comes, of fortune till misfortune arrives, of friendship till ill-will is stirred up. The blessings of every day life are unbreakable and without number. How sweet and noble is the spirit of Paul in his expression, II Thes. 1:3 "We are bound to thank God always, brethren."

Ashamed of the Gospel.

It is strange that any one who knows what the gospel has achieved should be ashamed of it. It is the power of God unto salvation. It has done more to advance man, liberate woman, and make the world prosperous and happy than any other force or factor known. Other religions take away the liberty of the many, elevate the few to positions of power and tyranny, keep the masses in ignorance and engender all manner of prejudice and superstition. The noblest hearts of the world, the best lives, the most useful men and women are those who with Paul are "not ashamed of the gospel of Christ." The most glorious message ever proclaimed to man was the gospel of the Son of Righteousness. The only reason why any one can be ashamed of it is because one is stupidly ignorant or grossly indifferent as to what the gospel means to man, and has done for the elevation of the race.

The Weather.

An exchange enquires, "How can it be so warm so soon after being so cold"? Because, beloved, the weather was made for man and not man for the weather, and because God made both, in His own wisdom, without consulting either. The weather has never disobeyed God and so is in perfect keeping with His own will. We need not worry, therefore, about that. The weather is good; all weather is, for God controls it divinely, wisely, and well. Man has disobeyed God, and does disobey God, and therefore has a part in his own ordering. Therefore, we do not need to have a care and concern for man "For all have sinned, and come short of the glory of God." (Rom. 3: 23) Be not concerned about the weather. It is ever and always right. But your erring, wandering, disobedient fellow-man needs your interest, your sympathy and your service. He serves God most who serves man best.

Tariff and Temperance.

We of this country have come to think that our national prosperity and happiness depend more on our legislation about, and attitude toward, the tariff than about any other measure whatever. And so our national Congress spends more time and talk on the tariff than on any other measure. We deceive ourselves. The biggest single question in this country is our legislation about and attitude toward temperance. In his Select Notes Dr. Peloubet wisely states "Temperance is more than tariff, has far more to do with national prosperity and happiness; yet Congress has spent years, in the aggregate, on the tariff question." If we could regulate judiciously and well the matter of strong drink, narcotics and opiates, all other questions of legislation and state-craft would be easy.

An Object Lesson.

It is the custom of our Navy to name the big battleships for the States, and then allow the state for whom the ship is named supply the silver service to be used by sailors and soldiers manning the ship. Recently when the people of Texas were raising by subscription the money to equip, with a suitable silver service, the huge battleship, Texas, certain school teachers in that State refused to allow children in their schools to either contribute or solicit funds for this purpose. The grounds of objection were feasible and admirable. What use was there, reasoned the teachers, in teaching the children every day the lessons of peace, peace, and then allow them the object lesson of helping to prepare for bloody battle. For the time being the nations seem to have gone stark mad in the matter of spending millions for armament and in preparation for destruction and bloodshed. When the nations shall know more of Christ they will think less of war.

Men and The Sabbath.

Mayor Gaynor of New York spoke at a Presbyterian church June 20 in New York on "The Christian Sabbath," in which address he is quoted as saying: "The boys play baseball on the lots, rich men play golf on the links on Sunday. If we arrest any we should begin with the men, not the boys. What would Jesus do if He found boys playing baseball on the Sabbath? Arrest them? No, He would put His arm about them and tell them to enjoy themselves and He would bless them. You won't get men or boys into the church by driving them to obey a strict Sabbath. Rich men drink in their clubs on Sunday. Why should not poor men drink in the open saloon on Sunday?" The logic of this argument is exactly on a par with that of a wicked person in the community, out of the church who selects the most irreligious man in the church as his standard, and says "I am as good as he is, though he is a church member and I am not. Who has justified the rich man for playing golf on Sunday? Who has made it right for the rich man to drink liquor in club on the Sabbath? There is no Bible authority for either. Nor can Mayor Gaynor find any act or teaching in the life of Jesus to justify him in saying Jesus would put His arm about the boy who plays baseball on the Sabbath and bless him. Mayor Gaynor is more of a politician of the baser sort than he is of a moralist or a teacher of religion of any kind. His logic is as weak as his teaching is puerile and gratuitous.

Christianity and Woman.

It can never be forgotten that one of the greatest sermons our Savior ever preached while here on earth was delivered to one individual, the woman of Samaria. In that sermon, it must be remembered that for the first time He made known who He was, announced His Messiahship. It is nowhere recorded in Scripture that He ever condemned a woman, or used harsh language in speaking to her or about her. It can be truly said that Christ has done unspeakably much for man, but He has done even more for woman. Take a land like India where the saving power of the gospel has not gone to the relief of woman. In India, writers tell us, that "when a Hindu husband dies his superstitious relatives blame his widow for his death. They shave her head, strip her of her jewels and clothing, garb her only in a coarse white wrapper, and make of her an outcast to be forever spurned by all decent people. She can never marry again, and any man who stoops to marry a widow loses caste himself." In India today there are twenty-six million widows, ranging from six years of age and upward. There are four hundred thousand widows in India under fifteen years of age, doomed to drudgery, disgrace and dreariness the rest of their days. And often the wife is little less fortunate than the widow. India is full of proverbs, even in her sacred literature warning man against woman's wiles and wickedness. Says one Indian proverb, "Woman is the chief gate to hell." Another proverb is "To educate a woman is to put a sharp knife into a monkey's hands." What India's teeming millions of pagan men and suffering women need is the gospel of Jesus the Christ. Where the gospel goes, love and life and light go.

Let us continue to preach Christ and Him crucified. Let those preachers who have an inclination to discuss side issues leave these alone for a while and let all bend every energy toward spiritual development. It is of no great moment or benefit what one's views may be on the millennium or the mysteries of revelation. The salvation of souls is of moment and benefit.

The author of "True Wealth" tells of a friend who once showed Ruskin a costly handkerchief upon which a blot of ink had been made, saying, "It is spoiled, nothing can be done with that." But Ruskin carried the handkerchief away, and, using the blot as a basis, made a fine design in India ink and then returned the handkerchief to the owner more beautiful and more valuable than ever before. Even so, our stained lives may under the master hand of God be fashioned into lives of beauty, and power, and glory.—Biblical Recorder.

THE MISSION SPIRIT.

Large things become small, hard ones very easy, to any church when the missionary spirit is aroused. Our Norfolk Memorial church is not our strongest church, either in numbers, or in financial rating. But it seems easy for this church to give, beside all conference apportionments, and dozens of other things, a thousand dollars a year, or more, to foreign missions. There is a reason. This church has the missionary spirit. There are a dozen other of our churches that can do this, and more, and not be hurt, but helped by it. No, of course one does not think so now. The task looks difficult. And it is difficult, it is big, it seems burdensome; but let the missionary spirit become aroused, and the difficult task becomes not only easy, but no task at all, only a pleasure.

It is doubtful if there are ten churches in all our number in the southern conferences which could not give easily every year one hundred dollars and more to foreign missions, in addition to all conference calls, if only the missionary spirit could be aroused among them. The greatest benefactor the Christian church can have, will have for a hundred years, is the man or men who, fired with true missionary zeal, shall go in and out amongst us and awaken the missionary spirit now so dormant and lethargic amongst us. A few more years, and please God, we will look with pity and compassion upon the mere pittance we are now doing for missions. Brethren, by the help of Almighty God we must get in some way the missionary spirit aroused amongst us. Who will awaken and lead us?

SUNDAY SCHOOLS AND THE ORPHANAGE.

Every one of our Sunday schools should give one collection a month to our Orphanage. Bro. Superintendent, Bro. Sunday-school Secretary, have you considered this matter with your school?

In building the Orphanage it was planned that no church assessment should be laid for its support. Its support was to be a matter of free-will offering, and that mostly through the Sunday schools that the children in particular might have a large part in carrying on. So, no collection even is asked of the churches in this matter, save a Thanksgiving offering once a year. But the main support falls on the Sunday-schools. Some schools, fewer than seventy-five we believe, are giving one collection per month to the Orphanage. If all our schools will do this we will have plenty to go on, and to spare. There seems absolutely no reason why every school should not do this. Schools that have tried it testify that they get as much for self-support by keeping the collections of three Sundays and giving the collection of one Sunday as they did when they kept all. We know of one school in particular whose collections three Sundays in the month are much larger than they were when all four were kept.

Superintendent Carter's letters indicate that funds are needed to feed and clothe the children now in the institution. Expenses must increase as more children must be taken in from time to time. Bro. Carter is doing his best to awaken interest and make "both ends meet." It behooves all our Sunday-schools to help out. Bro. Superintendent, give your school a chance at this matter. Your effort is needed.

"Let God's way be your way."

NOTES AND PERSONALS.

—Sample copies of THE SUN are the silent invitations to secure subscribers.

—The Ladies Aid Society, Pleasant Grove church, News Ferry, Va., sends $5.00 for Dr. and Mrs. Bishop which has been forwarded and for which Dr. Bishop returns heartfelt thanks.

—Rev. H. W. Elder, Richland, Ga., is to assist Rev. L. I. Cox in a series of meetings at Apple's Chapel fourth week in July, and Rev. J. V. Knight first week in August at Berea, (Alamance) and at Shallow Ford second week in August. Bro. Elder is a man of spiritual zeal and power and our North Carolinian brethren are fortunate in securing his assistance.

—Mr. Alonzo Cleveland Hall and Miss Macie Virginia Farmer were happily married at Pleasant Grove Church, Halifax Co., Va., Tuesday, June 24, at high noon and left on an afternoon train for Washington, New York and Boston. It was a beautiful and happy marriage and their scores of friends will join us in congratulations and best wishes.

—Defiance College, Defiance, Ohio, honors itself in taking note of the meritorious attainment and growing scholarship of our Prof. W. P. Lawrence, head of the English department in Elon College. The degree of Doctor of Literature is deserved, and Doctor Lawrence, by his sturdy industry, and painstaking pursuits in his chosen profession, has well merited the honor thus bestowed.

—In transmitting the name and cash for a new subscriber from his congregation Rev. W. D. Harward, Newport News, Va., writes: "I desire to average at least one new subscription per week until THE SUN is shining in every home represented in our church here. If they do not subscribe I am going to give them a very good chance to hear about the importance of it. I am trying to use the sample copies you send me to good advantage."

—The recent visit of several days to Elon College by our beloved friend and dear brother, Rev. J. H. Barney, Clearsville, Pa., was much enjoyed by many friends here. Bro. Barney has been a brave true soldier of the Cross these many years, and his devotion to duty and the church is beautiful and praiseworthy. He loves Elon College for the great work it is doing, and has great hopes for its future and the future of the church to which he has given his life's zeal and energies.

—Rev. Warren H. Denison, D. D., Norfolk, writes recently: "Our first year with the Temple closed with the opening of June. 86 members have been received into the church. $225 on the parsonage has been paid, thus removing all indebtedness against the church and parsonage. $460 has been paid for foreign missions and $360 for missions and benevolences, in the home land; this our first year.

We begin our second year by the church pledging $1,000 for foreign missions alone.

—Sunday-School and Christian Endeavor General Convention: that ought to meet the demands of the brethren and measure up to their tastes. Now, why not the Conventions of all the conferences name themselves accordingly? Sunday-School and Christian Endeavor Convention. This signifies and covers the ground. Of course Organized Classes, and auxiliary Societies are attachments either of the Sunday-school or Christian Endeavor. If we use Sunday school Convention only we give no countenance to Christian Endeavor. The name seems to us as sufficiently inclusive and none to exclusive.

—The contribution this week, "The Church at Prayer," by Rev. P. S. Sailer, Lynn, Mass., is very lengthy, but exceedingly readable and thought provoking. Bro. Sailer is anxious for a prayer meeting revival and ably sets forth the reason why such a revival is needed and is kept away. He invites friendly controversy and criticism of his position. His heart is behind what he writes, and his message is certainly worth pondering.

—We do not know why people will send matter for publication without sending along their own name. Nothing is published by a respectable newspaper unless some name is sent in as being responsible. We have an obituary now signed "One Who Loved Him." We have no way on earth of knowing who that One is, so the obituary, in all respects all right, with the exception of no name given as the writer, must go in the waste basket. The name of the writer need not be signed to the contribution, but must ever and always be given to the editor.

—Rev. J. V. Knight who assisted Rev. W. C. Wicker in a recent very successful revival at Palm St., Greensboro, spent one busy day last Sunday, leaving on a night train for a vacation at his home, Lineville, Ala. Bro. Knight preached at Monticello, in Guilford Co. at 11 A. M. Sunday. In the afternoon he baptized about 30 members for the Palm St. church, Greensboro, married a couple at 5:15 P. M., Greensboro, and preached for Dr. Wicker at Palm St. at night. Bro. Knight has spent a busy year as a student in Elon College and pastor of some nearby churches and richly deserves the rest he is now taking with his home people in Alabama. Bro. Knight is to return to N. C. week following 4th Sunday in July to engage in revival services during August. While at home Bro. Knight will assist Rev. H. W. Elder in meetings at Oak Grove and Kite, Ga.

—Among the very deeply interested young women who attended the recent Woman's Missionary Mass Meeting at Elon College was our fine friend and enthusiastic worker for missions, Miss Mamie Holland, of Suffolk, who has an exceedingly interesting Young Girl's Missionary Society and who is successful and happy in her work. The following from the Suffolk correspondence to the Norfolk Virginian-Pilot shows some fruit of the Elon College meeting:

Suffolk, Va., June 17—The Girl's Missionary Society of the Christian church met on Monday night at the church. Miss Mamie Holland, who was a delegate from this society to the Missionary Mass Meeting held at Elon College, North Carolina, in May, gave an interesting account of the meeting. Marmaduke Woodward sang "Like as a Father." Miss Phoebe Artman read an article on missions entitled "Not Interested—Why Not?"

The following committees were appointed for the next three months: Program, Miss Virgie Holland, chairman, Misses Inez King, Lillian Hosier. Membership, Miss Martha Jones, chairman; Misses Phoebe Artman, Eloise Crocker. Literature, Miss Mary Andrews, chairman; Misses Maud Norfleet, Marian Cob. Mite Box, Miss Doris Turner, chairman; Misses Etha Richards, Mabel Edwards.

—His brethren and many friends throughout the Church generally greatly sympathize with Rev. J. W. Holt, Burlington, N. C., in the loss of his beloved wife who peacefully fell on sleep Wednesday, June 18th. Hers was a most excellent and noble Christian career, loyal to her church, true to her friends, faithful to her God. Dr. Fleming who conducted the funeral gives an account elsewhere of Sister Holt's life and departure. The following ministers were present at the burial, participating in the services, Rev. P. H. Fleming, D. D., Rev. Dr. Murray, of the Presbyterian church, Graham, Dr. A. B. Kendall, Christian church, Burlington, Revs. J. W. Wel-lons, D. D., J. F. Morgan, J. V. Knight and J. O. Atkinson, Elon College, N. C. A large company gathered to pay tributes of respect to the deceased. The Burlington church choir had charge of the music. The following furnished beautiful coral designs for which Bro. Holt felt exceedingly grateful, and through us expresses his sincere appreciation: Mr. A. T. Whitsett and Family, Dr. G. W. Whitsett and Wife, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Holt, Ladies Aid Society of New Providence, Ladies' Aid Society of Union church, Union Ridge, N. C., Ladies' Aid Society of Burlington, N. C., Ladies' Aid Society of Bethlehem church, Altamahaw, N. C., Mrs. A. J. Walker, Miss Ada Denny, Miss Minnie Lutterloh, Miss Martha A. Patterson, Mr. John A. Wood.

A FEW REMARKS.

—An excursion train was derailed near Rochester, N. Y., and fifty persons were injured, many seriously, at 9:30 A. M., Sunday, June 22. "Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy."

—Seven men were killed in the wreck of a freight train near Clinton, Iowa, Sunday, June 22. "Six days shalt thou labor and do all thy work, and the seventh shalt thou rest," was spoken a long time ago, and in wisdom, but man has not learned the economy and the benefit of it.

—The number of agencies engaging in fighting tuberculosis in the United States is 2,500 as compared with 1,500 two years ago, a gain of 50 per cent. In 1905 there were 19 Anti-Tuberculosis Societies, on May 1, 1913, there were 1228 such Societies. There are now 177 open air schools; but consumption goes on with its quiet, but deadly work, and still remains "the white plague," and the most destructive of all diseases.

—The War Department has been notified that 50,000 veterans of the Blue and the Gray will take part in the reunion at Gettysburg in July. The Government, however, has arranged to take care of only 40,000 and the Secretary advises that he will not be responsible for the keep of the extra 10,000. This is the semi-centennial and is to be the greatest reunion in many particulars since the War.

—President Wilson delivered in person the second message of his administration to the United States Congress in joint session Monday 23rd inst. The message was on currency legislation with which, in conjunction with the tariff, Congress is considering in extraordinary session. President Wilson is smashing precedents and giving little heed to antiquated customs.

—It is left with the State authorities to prosecute offenders of the Webb interstate-liquor shipment law. Under date of June 19 the following was sent out in the dispatches:

Washington, June 19.—The Webb law forbidding interstate shipments of liquor into "dry" States is not a criminal statute and violations of it cannot be prosecuted in United States Courts. Attorney General McReynolds so declared in instructions sent today to every United States Attorney in the country. The law merely prohibits such interstate traffic and contains no penalty for infractions.

"Its purpose," said the Attorney General, "is to permit State laws to operate in respect of intoxicating liquors moving in interstate commerce."

The law simply deprives shippers of any privileges they might claim on the ground of interstate commerce and permits the application of State prohibition laws to interstate commerce in liquors.

Unless our hearts go out to the people we shall never reach their hearts. We may talk to them forever, but unless we have this loving sympathy we might as well be silent.

OUR CHALLENGE AND TASK.

The ministerial students of the Christian Church are face to face with a challenge, and have before them a task that must be worked out. The accusation has been made against our church that a man of almost any sort of education can secure license to preach. This statement may be so to some extent, but if it be such, the correctness of it is with the past and the future of our denomination will not entertain such, and the man who is sent out by our church in the coming years must be well fitted for his task. I say this because every indication possible points that way and the line of thorough preparation has been drawn and we must come to it.

It is with a glad heart that I express myself in respect to this advancement of our denomination and look forward to the day when our Church will be as conservative as any church in respect to the education of its ministry. The minister is acknowledged to be a man of leadership, or at least is looked upon as a man who should lead. But when a man fails to be able to lead, his flock will certainly go in some direction. My view point is, I know, unpopular with many; but if a certain side of a question be unpopular, that is the side to advocate so as to make it popular; provided that side be worth while, and certainly it is when it comes to matters so vital as this on which I write.

Our position is that the standard of education and fitness for almost every position continues to advance, and an institution so great and mighty, so important and having such vital prominence as the kingdom of God demands the best that men can achieve and prepare for. Men are learning that the man who cannot do anything except preach cannot do that thing well. The pulpit has made a call for brains as well as body, and the demand must be met, or the Kingdom will suffer. All honor to those who have blazed the way for the Church and may their memories live through all ages and be crowned with heaven's jewels. I know no aged minister in the denomination will take issue with me, for they are the sons of those noble heroes who stood the charge at Gettysburg and suffered the march of Sherman and the devastation of public property and school houses. And too, one with fair judgment will say that I am too progressive, for what I have said and will say is only giving my endorsement to what authorities have done for us as a denomination. The Board of Trustees of Elon College in session two weeks ago passed a rule that no ministerial student could serve more than two churches as pastor while in College. We have advocated something similar to this, tho' with some unpopularity. But the day is not far ahead when we believe our view point will be brought to a clear light, and the way of the minister in the Christian Church found in the same manner as that of other denominations.

Never have we seen the day that such demands are being made for strong men; strong physically and mentally, and with tact and disposition to accomplish things and foster the cause of the Church. Many places all over the country would support a Christian church if we had the proper man to place beside other denominations to build up the cause. Because there are a half dozen churches in a city or town, is no reason why another cannot be built and is no reason why it should not be built. Hundreds of people are found in every town of any great size that are non-church members and need the help of the church. All people will not join the same church and the more churches the more people you will get into the church. So, our field is wide and needs to be cultivated, but that cultivation, like our present-day farming, must be done with the proper training and knowledge.

We have stated in these columns before that just now new life is being received by us as a denomination, and growth is evident. We have too much to do to antagonize other denominations, the time is too short to argue with men who differ with you, the call from the Kingdom is too urgent to waste any time, the demand on us as a people is too much to do the work carelessly and without plan and tact. Let efforts be put forth to help save the world, but let these efforts be made in such a manner as to count for most and do the greatest good in the short time in which human hands are permitted to labor. We trust our position will meet with the approval of all and be sanctioned by THE SUN's congenial editor. C. B. RIDDLE.

TWO OMISSIONS FROM ELON COLLEGE COMMENCEMENT.

In the account of Commencement appearing in THE SUN recently by oversight no mention was made of the winner of the Jas. W. Wellons General Scholarship Medal. This medal was established in honor of Dr. J. W. Wellons, his life long friend, by General Julian S. Carr of Durham, North Carolina, and is a medal of great distinction, going to that member of any College Class who makes the highest average grades for the current year. The honor this year went to Miss Nellie Sue Fleming, High Point, N. C., daughter of Dr. and Mrs. P. H. Fleming, whose average grade for the year was above ninety-seven, a remarkably fine record.

Another omission was in reference to the winner of the Alumni Scholarship for the year 1913-1914. This scholarship entitles its holder to a draft for fifty dollars to be used in paying his or her literary tuition in Elon College and is given by the Alumni Association. It is awarded for scholarship during the first two years in College, deportment, and general merit and desert financially. The winner this year was Mr. W. J. Cotten, Dendron, Va.

It is with sincere regret that the writer did not notice these omissions in his reports to the papers, and a pleasure to him to call attention to them in this public manner, and to plead indulgence for the oversight.

At the end of this valley was another, called the Valley of the Shadow of Death; and Christians must needs go through it, because the way to the Celestial City lay through the midst of it. Now, this alley is a very solitary place.—Bunyan.

Moral courage is nothing in the world but just the capacity for doing what we know we ought to do. Give that to every man, and only think with what a stir of eager and vivacious interest this dull world in which we are living would wake and start!—Phillips Brooks.

LIFE'S GREAT RULE.

(The baccalaureate sermon before the graduating class at Elon College Sunday, June 1, 1913 by Rev. Warren H. Denison, D. D., Norfolk, Va.)

"Whether therefore ye eat, or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God."
1. Cor. 10:31.

A philosopher, seeking for information in a card catalog, found many of the minor words, but the principle word had been omitted. He was annoyed, and said, "Many are acting out the same occurrence in their own lives,—leaving out the principle thing."

What Is Life's Purpose?

What is the chief end of man? To glorify God and enjoy him forever. This is the principle of my text, which I ask you to consider with me.

There is much beauty and grandeur in the sweeping universality of this principle that teaches that all life and every act of life may be consecrated by holy motives to the glory of God.

A characteristic of the great mind and heart of the apostle is that he is ever ascending to great principles and leading us with him. Here he begins with what seems in a homely, practical, almost trivial discussion concerning idol feasts, but again and again he rises to some sublime truth and principle. Can there be any grander precept in itself or any more worthy of acceptance than the truth of this text: "Do all to the glory of God."

What is the glory of God, this principle of human life? (a) It is the bringing into prominence His attributes: spirituality, eternity, wisdom, holiness, justice, goodness, faithfulness, and these attributes are to be incarnated in our lives. (b) It is the working out of His purposes by intelligent and voluntary beings. How can men do aught for God's glory? Surely not by mere invocation of God's name, but by getting in harmony with His purposes, reverencing His laws, recommending His service, uttering His praise.

A child honors its father when it cherishes reverential and proper thoughts concerning him, when thankful for his favors, obeys his laws, endeavors to advance his father's plans and interests, so acts as to cause others to cherish good opinions of his father's character. So we live to our Father's glory when we honor Him in all the relations which He sustains to us; when we keep His laws and accept His favors with thankfulness, and with a deep sense of our dependence, when we pray to him, when we so live as to cause others to cherish elevated opinions of His goodness, mercy, holiness.

Whatever plan or purpose that tends to advance His kingdom, to make Him better known and loved will be to His glory. We glorify God by lives of service and unselfishness.

In this principle the apostle extends the sentiment of a spiritual mind over all duties.

We are not like trees that can grow only in certain soils and climates, not like animals that are found exclusively in one locality; we are not creatures limited to our immediate surroundings. To form a human soul a world and a universe of worlds are needed. Influences acting on us are not counted and tabulated by the intellect of the senses. The sphere of the inner life is forever widening beyond the sphere of sensuous existence. Growth is within, but there is no self-nutrition; all the materials that build up the man come from without, hence it is not by looking at ourselves and at our capacities, but by regarding the world and the universe as furnishing the occasions and supplying the means of development, by the grace of God stored up in all things for our enrichment, that we learn to measure our ability.

It is like this: every lesson in astronomy, botany, geology, geometry; every new truth grasped in study of rock, plant, flower, chemistry, brings you to a new and larger vision of God and places you under greater obligation to honor and praise Him. In a large sense then, where we are interprets what we are. In view of this the apostle lays down the principle of the text. Its range is immense. The world is not to be cut up into fragments and the glory of God identified solely with them as such. Then a primary condition of glorifying Him is to see that He is in whatever He has created; is to realize that others are a part of ourselves and we a part of them. Nothing selfish must appear in it. Adopt this principle and it will deliver you from a miserable and debasing self-seeking.

How many do things primarily for the glory of self, and what a degrading and deteriorating influence does such an aim exercise over the character of those adopting it? But this principle conduces to the well being of all.

When all men seek their own, society has discord and is threatened with dissolution, but when all seek the Master's honor, this common aim and endeavor tend to sympathy, harmony, and co-operation.

This principle of the text is an aim in life that is just and satisfying to the mind, a right aim and motive, and the only one of which we shall never repent and never feel ashamed. It is an eternal principle, and when we are translated into the presence of God, place and occupation may be changed, but the end and aim of our being remains the same. So I plead that your aim may be to distinguish this vital and enduring element from all that is local and temporary, to extract those divine lessons that bear on the deepest realities of your individual lives. Here then lies one grand condition of all true nobility of character and deed: Every man is great and honorable in proportion as he makes the glory of God the definite and conscious aim of his existence.

In proportion as we recognize the fact that all the springs of our beings are in God, that all the faculties of our nature, all the resources, materials, and relations of our life are from Him, we shall feel that our existence answers its true end; and that life is worth living just so far as it fulfils His purposes.

In all your study of these years I am sure you have learned this lesson: that the inferior creatures show forth His glory by fulfilling the ends for which he has created them, and that their service is rendered by a law and necessity of their being which they have no power to resist. The myriad forms of lower life of earth, air, sea, cannot but obey the instincts of their nature and in that blind instinctive obedience the end of their existence is attained.

But, to man belongs the mysterious, self-regulating power by which it lies with ourselves to determine whether we will respond to this divine appeal or refuse to do so.

These inferior creatures are intended to be the instruments of our higher purpose. We are crowned with glory and honor above them all, that we may interpret their voices and utilize their powers in presenting to God our living tribute of gratitude, love, service. Our daily life in its deeper moral meaning proclaims how far this is really the case with us. As every new day dawns upon us God throws it upon us afresh to decide whether we will use the world as we ought to use it by living to his honor, or will abuse it by following the impulses of our own self-will and serving the ideals of our imagination and carnal appetites.

God calls you to make this great rule of life your life rule. There are many life rules, but this alone is flawless. God must be the Sun of our system, then order and well being will result, and our own interest and that of others will not be prejudiced, but be bettered.

This life aim applies to everything, to all life and every part of life, to small as well as great, secular as well as sacred. It destroys the distinction and makes all things sacred. Nothing then is insignificant; it makes everything interesting and useful. The apostle particularizes the most commonplace and familiar things—eating and drinking. No interest in life is so wide, no relationship so sacred, no occupation so honorable as not to come under this principle, which will give dignity and sweetness to all the functions of human life.

The acceptance of this rule of life involves the acceptance of Christ. Apart from Christ we are the enemies of God. Our lives may be moral, but the rejection of Christ is like mixing poison with food, the result is a poisonous mass. Yes, it involves starting at Calvary, continuing in worship. Christian enterprise and labor, improvement in mental and spiritual health.

From this great apostolic injunction let us get three great truths: (a) The spiritualization of the things of daily life; (b) A correct and better understanding of success and failure; (c) That every life has a divine vocation. First. Sacred places, utensils, days, words, are easy to get and keep, but what we need is a sacred everyday life. We have come to understand that Christianity must be a daily bread and not a Sunday dinner, and that we cannot keep our Christian life separate from our ordinary life. We are not always in the same mood; sometimes sad, sometimes gay, serious, frivolous, but none of these are necessarily irreligious. We are not at all times to think of the deeper problems of life and destiny, nor is it desirable, theological meditation is not the whole of religion.

This principle will involve not going where we cannot take God with us; and we should be able to ask His blessings upon our gayest feast.

Charles Lamb said he felt as much inclined to return thanks when he opened a new book as when he sat down at the table.

Would you see the divine meaning in nature, then we must learn to use both the spiritual and material.

We need greater faith in God, not a God distant in time and space, but who is not very far from us, apart from whom we are literally nothing. We must believe in the immanent God; great enough to hold the earth in its orbit; great enough to teach each little tadpole how to swim; a God who does not keep himself apart from this world which we call bad, but which He called good when He had created it. We want that faith which sees God not only in the miraculous, but in the commonplace; in the rain and snow as much as in the whirlwind and the thunder, which sees every common bush afire with God. Religion is not a means of escape from this wretched world, but it is the perpetual realization of God, the spiritualization of daily life, a way of living better in the world and of making it less wretched.

Second. A truer idea of success and failure. How liable we are to get a false idea of these.

We must attain to a strength and excellence that are going to count in a longer than earthly existence. Here we are God's apprentices practicing some of the lower forms of the arts that are eternal. Present success is secondary. It is this way: The young engineer studying under an older one is trained in various departments of his science, but he does nothing of importance in any. He practices drafting until he becomes somewhat proficient, but draws no plans worth keeping or selling; he estimates here and there, but builds nothing except as his work disappears in the mass of what the master is building, but those half drawings and scraps of estimates, and partly worked problems will prove more to him than any early job of engineering.

You see a great painting and say "that was worth doing." You do not see the hundreds of studies that litter the artist's room or which having no sale value he has thrown away, yet those had more to do with making him a great painter than had the piece that was paid for in the market.

Life's worth is what it works at rather than in what it works out. What pay could the world give Michael Angelo for designing St. Peters, or Leonardo for painting the Last Supper, or Luther for smiting the devils of superstition? Their reward was in the doing and in it they found their deepest joy. The world counted Christ a failure. Remember that seeming success may be only the shuck; life's value is what develops inside.

Third. That there is a divine vocation for every man. Christ said, "To this end was I born, and for this cause came I into the world, that I should bear witness unto the truth." This is a universal truth and admits of a common application. There is not only work for all, but a divinely appointed task for everybody.

The careful housekeeper's motto—a place for everything and everything in its place is the rule of the universe. In the material world that is a parable of God, nothing is accidental or chaotic, but every atom and world rolls in the deep grooves of a wise design; the curve of the comet's orbit, the position of each grain of sand, the swell of the ocean wave and the glitter of the dewdrop are alike the result of divine wisdom and power.

The opening of a violet, the germination of a seed are as much a part of the plan of the universe as are the splendid diagrams and the sublime mathematics of the heavens. So every person has a divinely appointed mission, an end to gain, work to do, place to fill and usefulness and happiness depend on fidelity to our calling. I would not have you think of pulpit, altar, pew, as less sacred, but of school, shop, home, fields, as more sacred.

Some have the idea that God would heed the formal petition of a King, while deaf to the low, bitter, sob of the orphan and widow; or like selfish gods and servile men ready to help the strong and bless the rich. We hear God in the awful tumult of Dayton's flood, and the thunder of the earthquake and never doubt the sound of his footfall, but how deaf and heedless we are when He speaks in the vernacular of His love and gentleness.

But the Gospel presents to our faith and love a universal, impartial Father, who sees the sparrow's fall as well as that of an empire, who clothes the grass and paints the flowers as well as causes the sun to shine; whose angels care for infants as well as potentates, who calls a Dorcas as truly as a Paul. God is no respecter of persons and in his perfect providence has a plan for each human life, great or humble, for every heart whether beating beneath a bishop's robe, a soldier's uniform, or a farmer's coat.

And it is true that the most of us must be humble and unknown workers. The world needs an occasional genius. The silent springs and modest rivulets of my native state are of much more value than her far famed Niagara. One such torrent is enough for a continent, one such prodigy enough for America.

It is superstition that makes the cataract vocal with God, but does not hear him in the ripple of the gentle stream. How we mistake the relative importance of events.

The sailing of the Mayflower in July of 1620 excited no wise surprise, no special attention; but all Europe watched with breathless interest the sailing of the Spanish Armada. Yet, how soon the proud fleet of Philip disappeared, vanished like the foam of the sea while the little storm tossed bark that anchored at Plymouth came freighted with the seeds of empire—came to dedicate a new world to the claims of God and the rights of man.

The births of heirs to thrones have been heralded with cannons and banners, but who, in all the great world, cared for the birth of Luther, save the humble parents rejoiced that a boy was born in the rude home of a German miner.

Yet, he was born to such a crown and scepter as belongs to no royal family.

See Paul, travel-stained, weary, coming down to the sea at Troas, responding to the cry of Macedonia, wending his way among classic islands and cities, the pioneer of a new religion and a new life. How trivial in the estimation of all beholders that voyage of Paul and his associates, yet they represented a mightier power than ever floated over the Aegean before. In contrast, think of the interest and awe with which the world looked on Xerxes and his millions when he came to cross the Hellespont for the conquest of Greece, and yet, save on the historic page can you scarcely find a trace, a foot-print of Xerxes and his triumphs, while Paul is still a living power, his name and fame belting the globe with an ever increasing zone of light and hope. There is no life but may have a special divine purpose. Nature and revelation teach that there must be a place and mission for each soul.

God says of every seed, fruit, tree, insect, animal "for this purpose it is created; for this cause it is made. It is for the acorn to produce the oak. He has a place for each particle, a mission for each grain, must he not also have a place and mission for each life?

Nature and holy writ teach us plainly that we have a vocation in which we find or attain to our fullness and completion and answer our creation. To the Class of '13 let me say in conclusion:

Develop the germ divinely implanted, be ambitious to fill your own mission, only then will your lives be successful; be what you ought to be, and attempt what needs doing and what ought to be done by you; do it well, do your best. These years of discipline have been invaluable to you. Rest assured that you are called to that life-labor in which you can build a noble Christ-like character. The highest possible result of all labor, the more than golden reward of toil is a Christ-like manhood and womanhood.

Within the reach of the hardest hand there is a crown that no wicked prince, no sharp millionaire, no faithless king can ever purchase or command—the crown of immortal manhood and womanhood.

You may not all reap the reward of genius, that is, its special lesser rewards, but you may all win that which is better, that which is highest; for, with all that art, power, knowledge and gold can give, you may be something less than true men and true women.

The Christian spirit was never more buoyant than it is today; the field of Christian service was never more faithful or more promising.

The eagerness of the workers is the eagerness of soldiers who have the final victory in sight. If it was ever worth while being a Christian and doing Christian service for the joy of it, now is the time. Now is the time for pressing up to the heights and rendering the largest possible service. Learn to do all things to the glory of God. You learn the deepest truths of things only when you come to see spiritual principles, laws and issues enshrined in them; that every thing in fact, in the root of it, in its inmost heart and core bears some relation to that higher part of you which will endure forever.

Life for the most part is an aggregate of many little things. To some it may seem a monotonous round of trivials, but infuse something of a devout and godly soul into them and they are no longer common.

Reverence for God and love to Christ can give shape and beauty, consistency and harmony to everything you may do. Learn to fill your common everyday life with the inspiration of a high and holy purpose; then your life will be more real, more satisfying, less like a feverish pursuit of unsubstantial shadows; then it will become a thing of imperishable beauty and worth; its outward incidents will be but as the scaffolding within which the structure of a holy character and glorious destiny is being raised.

Take this spiritual view of things and yours will be consecrated lives in which every work you do will be sacred.

You have divine vocations. For some end you were born, for some work endowed; you are girded for some race, armed for some conflict, ordained for some divine mission.

He who made the bird for the air, the fish for the sea, the goat for the mountain cliff, the camel for the desert, has not forgotten man, but made him for a vocation that shall honor God and bless the race.

The potter can make one vessel for fruit, another a vase for flowers, another a place for food, so God makes men one for one service, one for another, forming their bodies, endowing their minds, inspiring their souls by his own love and wisdom.

It is our duty to thankfully accept ourselves, body and mind, brain and brawn, ten talents or two, the soul of a poet or the muscles of an athlete and then reverently, cheerfully fill our place and do our work with fidelity. That is true greatness and often reveals the highest heroism.

This is a world full of work waiting to be done and you are noblest when you are doing well that to which you are called.

One great need is to get the right person in the right place, then it may be said, as it was of Caesar, "He found Rome brick and left it marble." You may find the world poor, corrupt and ignorant, but you may contribute your part to leave it prosperous, enterprising, hopeful with the means of making it not marble but golden, not material but Christian.

It is important then both for the world and for yourselves that you consult in a teachable spirit, and yield to the Great Teacher, even Christ, whose wisdom is infinite and whose plan of grace embraces all means for the consummation of his love.

Be reverent and obedient.

As you stand on the threshold of life, and are now beginning to write the preface to the book of your life. I pray you be not mere

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENTS

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The Committee on Foreign Missions of the Eastern Virginia Christian Conference has set apart, as a "Foreign Mission Rally Day," June 29th and the place of meeting is the Suffolk Christian church. Rev. Warren H. Denison, D. D., pastor of Memorial Christian Temple, Norfolk, Virginia, has been chosen as the chief speaker. There will be three services on that day: A sermon on "Foreign Missions" in the morning; an address on "The Laymen's Missionary Movement" at 3:30 in the afternoon; and an address on "Our Denominational Foreign Work" in the evening at 8 o'clock. Each church in the Conference has been requested to have as many men at the afternoon service as possible.

This meeting is intended to instruct, interest, and inspire this Conference with a larger and more intelligent missionary zeal. It is to be educational in its conduct and results.

THE "SUN" has not erred in saying that we have only "played at missions," and that we must "come" to this obligation seriously, earnestly, liberally, or "we die." That is a solemn challenge to the conscience of the constituency of the Southern Convention. The laymen of the church must awake to the sense of an obligation that rests upon them as the trustees of wealth. If ministers were rich the means would be available for missionary enterprise; but ministers are limited in earning capacity and opportunity. It is not their business to make money, but to make men; but they cannot do this, unless laymen will heed their teaching and respond to their calls. The time must come when laymen will think deeply, pray devoutly, plan wisely, and give liberally for the cause of missions. They must learn and appreciate the fact that missions is a great business—the most important enterprise entrusted to man. There is no field so vast, no work so ennobling, no demand so urgent, no service so gratifying and so sure of reward. Receiving is belittling compared with giving, which ennobles life. The beggar receives; the giver is more blessed. Getting rich has no reward; using riches has great reward. The prodigal received his portion of his father's estate; but the welcome upon his return was better than gold. The wealth of the church will never satisfy the members until they use it for the good of humanity and the glory of God. The coal in the mountains never enriched the nation until it went to the sea and beyond the seas. It is the consumption of coal that enriches mankind. It is the distribution and use of wealth that makes it worth the name. It is the consumption of man that makes him useful. The ashes in the furnace tells of energy released and work performed. It is the spent life that adds to the sum of human salvation. "The blood of Jesus Christ cleanseth from all sin." If Jesus had been rich His name would be no better known than that of Croesus. He gave Himself. That was all He had. Laymen of means, give of your means to save mankind, and thus save yourselves in the largest sense. If men invest in souls they can carry their wealth into the heavenly world. They will come bringing their sheaves with them. It will be pitiful in the great day to see a rich Christian coming into the kingdom with nothing but himself; it will be an inspiring sight to see a rich Christian who gave liberally to missions coming in with souls saved from lands he had never known.

NORFOLK LETTER.

What is this strange fever in the blood, this vague, half-defined yearning, this mystic vision of weird hands beckoning in the distance, ever luring the Soul onward to the far, purple summits of the Unattained, and preventing perfect satisfaction with present conditions; no matter what they are, nor how pleasing others may consider them? We may think of it as being the inextinguishable glow of some spark of the Godlike and Divine permeating the soul, which, when fanned by the slightest breeze, is ready to flame forth into action and achievement.

In some natures, more than in others, this spark seems to exist, ineradicable and unquenchable. Sorrow cannot quench it, adversity stamp it out, misfortune dim it nor activity satiate it. Enclosed in prison walls, it cannot yet be restrained nor smothered, nor will pain and long-suffering compel it to give up a single ounce of its energy. Its radiant force enables him who possesses it to mount above the mutable things of this life, and through the darkest night of calamity it lightens his pathway into a land of sunlight, gladness and victory.

This is that eternal Urge, which has led men upward from the chasm of the Beast, and which shall still lead him onward to whatever high destiny may await him. Perverted to unholy ends and uses it has no doubt sometimes been, but waiving the quality of their deeds for the present, the Doers of Things have always been actuated by it. Where it is not present in the individual to arouse, to excite and to impel onward, that life will inevitably fall flat, moving in conventional ruts, and along old, dusty, long trodden ways, insipid, colorless and lukewarm from the cradle to the grave.

The fever in the blood, the yearning, half-defined, the sense of beckoning hands always are these the characteristics of the great constructive spirits, and Pioneers of the world. Beyond the sky-line bounding the sphere of the seen, there gleamed upon their vision the beautiful Aurora of "things unseen and Eternal," and, led on by this vision, it became impossible for them to rest where they were, "having a promise of yet better things to come."

The Pioneer lust, the constructive, creative passion makes men spurn the short cuts, the lethargy-producing devices and the ready-made situations of life. Leaving the fertile, long-tilled fields, the ancestral mansions, and the fat acres of sleek kine he who is actuated by such a spirit, shoved outward and onward by the mystic Urge, plunges straight out into the Unknown, and there he will hew out a new domain to be added to that which he left, after which he will set out again. For him, there can be no rest.

There will always be found plenty of men to do a thing if we make that thing hard enough.

But such men, those who love the quiet and staid ways of life are, as a rule, very uncomfortable and disagreeable companions. Things are not likely to stagnate where they are. The cumberer, the idler, the shiftless, the weakling; all of these are more or less disturbed and perturbed in their ease when one of these Pioneers comes upon the scene.

In their progress toward the goal which beckons, these men are, as often as not, guided more by intuition in shaping their course, than by the cold processes of reason. Necessarily they must be so since they often attempt many things for the doing of which no precedent whatever exists and where no basis for logical calculations can be found. Hence, their intuition is always keen, and often remarkable for its accuracy.

Because of this, the Creators and Pioneers are a source of incessant irritation and confusion to the man of logic who is unwilling to admit of any undertaking or enterprise not founded wholly upon what he calls Reason. He styles such men zealots, fanatics and visionaries until he is silenced by the indisputable results of their foresight.

There is a certain right kind of Restlessness and Discontent which ought to be encouraged. It is that sort which stirs us up to larger achievement in the Name of Him who has given us being, and who seeks through the medium of our lives and actions the revelation of His own Power and Glory.

Needless to say, such a spirit will not let us rust in idleness, not pass the precious, golden days with folded hands while everywhere the fields are white unto harvest. In a dream, Paul saw a hand, beckoning, and heard a voice, saying, "Come over into Macedonia and help us." Today, there are still beckoning hands, and voices calling from every quarter for help, inspiration, stronger manhood and messages of hope and love. Far beyond the rim of the horizon bounding our little individual lives is the inviting lure of green fields of heroic effort which have not been entered, and upon the blown breezes are whispers, speaking of tasks which yet await us.

O, for the fever in the blood, the irresistible yearning to be up and doing, the Pioneer lust, which shall lead the mighty army of the church still onward today into greater campaigns, mightier victories and more glorious conquests than she has ever known before.

HENRY SPENCER BOOTH.

THE CHURCH AT PRAYER.

In my former article on this great question of The Prayer Mutiny, I dealt with the fact cold, hard, and disagreeable,—of non-attendance at the weekly church prayer-meeting. In this, I wish to deal with a theory which you may all help me to transform into a fact.

My theory is, that all church members may be induced to attend the church prayer meeting, and that all of the people of the community may become church members. In order, however, for this theory to be transformed into fact, it will be necessary for worldwide co-operation on the part of those who profess to be Christians.

Now, gentle reader, don't trouble yourself with the thought of my failure to appreciate the skepticism with which my claim is likely to be received. I haven't been dealing with people for twenty years in matters of faith without discovering the great majority of people to be exceedingly doubtful of the practicability of the teachings of Jesus. Nor, must I fail to inform you that among my most painful discoveries is this incontrovertible fact, that I have yet to find the first individual anywhere, who accepts unqualifiedly the teachings of Jesus. Now, I suspect I shall be thought an incurable dyspeptic. So deem it necessary to show why I make a statement like this. No very long interval ever elapses in my own life without discovering some principle taught by Jesus, as having application to my life, which had not previously been recognized. Why? After years of prayerful searching for an answer, this is the most satisfactory I have been able to find:

In all previous announcements (reading) of the principle by Jesus, there was some reason which seemed sufficient at the time, for seeking to interpret that principle in such a way as to obviate the necessity for changing either my thought or action so as to bring me into harmony with that principle. The inevitable result of such a method of interpretation is clearly to change the teaching to accommodate one's desires. This does not occur with reference to all of the teachings of our Lord, because at some time in the past, the true interpretation was discovered by one or more persons truly desiring the establishment of the Kingdom of God, and by such discovery a standard was set up, which was accepted by others. Having been willing to accept this standard because I have been permitted to recognize its righteousness by its fruit, I am not at the same disadvantage with the application of this particular principle of my life, as I am in the case of such others as have not yet been illustrated in fruitful living by any, whom it has been my privilege to observe. I must, therefore, discover for myself their true significance. Various methods may be employed to secure this knowledge. All of these methods, however, should include prayer. "If any man lack wisdom, let him ask of God." It must be clear to every thoughtful mind that voicing is not thinking. The parrot voices the thought of another, and so does the phonograph. Are the thoughts voiced theirs? Edison is the father of the phonograph. Suppose the machine is made to say, "Our father who art in heaven, hallowed by Thy name." The machine's father doesn't believe in heaven; much less does he dwell there. As an expression of the machine it is meaningless. Much which passes current for prayers is no more the expression of heartfelt desire than is the voice of that machine. We must concede, then, that James had in mind something more than a more-or-less careless asking. One must desire with all the earnestness of one's soul the thing asked for. Perhaps the most prevalent method by which new discoveries are made as to the real teaching of Jesus, is when you are made to feel the sting of another's sin. "Not one member of the body suffereth, but all the members suffer with it," is just as true of the great body of the entire race as of the household of faith. In practically every church are to be found people of the type which I shall here describe by quoting the prayer of one of my deacons last Friday night: "Our Father, we thank Thee for the prayer-meeting, where we can come and forget the busy cares of our everyday life." I am not quoting this to condemn my deacon in a way which offers no opportunity for defence. I do not wish to condemn him at all. Who am I that I should condemn my brothers, whose soul may be purer in the sight of God than my own. This deacon, moreover, is an excellent man, even according to my own estimate of his character. He has yet to learn the lesson which Jesus so clearly taught, and which I have been endeavoring to make clear to him, that it is his privilege to lay down his burden at the feet of Jesus while continuing to carry his work. This in spite of his fine character and religious life. To him (he is a contractor and builder) the saw and the hammer have no place in the Kingdom of God. They, and what he may have to do with them,—unless he nails a shingle on the church roof and saws a board for the front step on the meeting house—are entirely apart from the Kingdom. Therefore, from his viewpoint, he must of necessity give the major part of his time to things which bear no relation to that Kingdom of which he is presumably a part. It will probably be fair to say he gives nine-tenths of his time and energy to those foreign interests. Yet, there is perhaps no other member of the church who gives so much time and thought to it as he. In his business transactions he is considered—justly, I believe—an exceptionally upright man. Whence think you, however, come his ethical standards for doing business? From the teachings of Jesus? No! He will frankly tell you that his business is apart from the Kingdom of God. What, then, does his religion exert no influence in his business? Oh, yes! The community has a peculiar something which aims to do service as a conscience. It is not a very well educated conscience; not very consistent, but it may be more or less clearly apprehended, and an offence against that community conscience must not be committed, lest the religion of my brother, the deacon, be called in question, and he may thus bring reproach on the name of Christ. Now this man loves God, and is trying to live a Christian life, but he has not learned the secret of prayer. "He that dwelleth in the secret place of the Most High, shall abide under the shadow of the Almighty." My deacon does not dwell there. He visits the most High, but does not dwell with Him. He suffers this isolation from God because he believes it to be his duty to do so. To him it would be sacrilege to ask God about making a contract. Yes, that contract must be made in such a way that the man who signs the contract must be careful that as a contractor he must not offend the public conscience against his other self, the Christian. The thoughtful reader will readily see at what a disadvantage this man has placed himself. Trying to live in two worlds at the same time is not an easy task. It is too much like trying to serve God and mammon. In His sermon on the Mount Jesus showed very clearly His reason for the statement, "Ye cannot serve God and mammon." He follows it with:

"Therefore I say unto you, take no thought for your life, what ye shall eat, or what ye shall drink; nor yet for your body, what ye shall feed on. Is not the life more than meat and the body than raiment?"

We are so conscious of having accepted other standards for our business life than the teachings of Jesus, that we have tried to ease the conscience of persuading ourselves that our industrial and business life is a thing entirely apart from our religious life. Jesus was anxious to show how utterly impossible it is to really serve two masters. The service of mammon is, according to his interpretation, the service of self. The service of God is the service of our fellows. Personal desire is a very exacting taskmaster, and makes peace an absolute stranger to the servant. Self-interest is the blindest sort of a blind beggar. It makes the most specious pleas imaginable. It is capable of making you believe light to be darkness and darkness light. You are persuaded to think of your attitude toward others as exceedingly fair when in point of fact their attitude toward you being the same means subjecting you to gross injustice if you are allowed to be the judge. We all nominally accept the words quoted as falling from the lips of Jesus, "The Son of man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister" as genuine. Do we all profit by their teaching? How often do we quote "Self preservation is the first law of nature," in self-defense, when attempting to set aside in our practice the life of service which Jesus taught? Carefully examined, the above quotation is seen to be one of the most dangerous doctrines imaginable. The law of nature says to the cellular life within the egg, "You must love yourself, for I must transform you so that you shall become two individuals instead of one." This process continues until nature transforms a cell into a living creature with such manifold faculties as never could have been realized by that cell in its self-preservation. Self-preservation looks more like an attempt to violate nature's law than to render obedience thereto. "Whoso seeketh to save his life loses it," doesn't entirely harmonize with that article which is so popular in the creed of so many professed Christians, "Self-preservation is the first law of nature." Our greatest sin consists in attempting to force the gospel to a new birth, instead of submitting ourselves to the painstaking period of gestation necessary to passing through that experience described by Jesus in his talk with Nicodemus. Reformation of a mild sort most of us are willing to consent to, but few of us are willing to have the revolutionary forces serge through us, which are calculated to transform and make over that one of the first steps in the process is found to be death. "Except a corn of wheat fall into the ground and die, it abideth alone." If we are truly born from above, we are henceforth citizens of another country. Whatever activities we engage in then must be undertaken with the machinery of heaven. The laws of the kingdom of heaven must govern then, rather than the law of the jungle such as we have been subject to.

Now, heaven's laws are beneficent in their design. When we find ourselves being thwarted in our purpose then, we shall appeal to the court of heaven, that the powerful machinery of its law may work for us, where through ignorance we find ourselves threatened with defeat. We must bear in mind, however, that we cannot hope to invoke the aid of heaven's law, while wilfully violating its provisions. If the power of prayer is to be demonstrated, it must be applied in something like systematic fashion. You can't deliberately set fire to your house, and expect the law of heaven to respond to your appeal to save it from the flames. You can't encourage the System which fosters Beef Trusts, so that in obedience to the law which gave them birth they bring into your home meat which has been inspected and passed, while full of disease, and then expect heaven to heed your prayer for salvation from the effects of that kind of food. The same System fosters the setting up of ethical standards for our railroads whereby they force from a gullible public dividends of from 20 per cent. to 40 per cent. on the actual investment, by watering stock. In the various manipulations, if the company's plans require special legislation, means are discovered by which such legislation is secured. The gentlemen on the inside are then prepared to transact a "perfectly" legitimate business, and only an anarchist, or a despised muckraker, will ever question their absolute right to run trains over roadbeds where rotten ties permit spreading rails, and spreading rails permit ditching trains, and ditching trains permit undertakers' quarrels as to who shall have the job of burying the victims.

Fall River is noted for its cotton mills. About a year ago, one of our ministers residing in that city was telling me, with a fine sympathy, which for the moment put me to shame, that, in a conversation with a prominent mill man a short time before, he had discovered a very important fact. Now, what do you suppose that fact was? Mark this: I am not disposed to doubt the truth of the mill man's assertion—I believe every word of it. He told my friend that they had advanced labor 10 per cent. voluntarily, to avoid a

"THE VICTORIES OF FAITH."

Subject of International Sunday School Lesson for June 29, 1913.

Subject of the Year's Study.—Old Testament, Genesis to Joshua.

Review Lesson Topic.—The Victory of Faith.

Reading Lesson.—Acts 7:9-16; Heb. 11:20-22.

Golden Text.—This is the victory that hath overcome the world, even our faith.—1 John 5:4.

Teaching.—Faith is the substance of things hoped for.

Our eleven historical lessons of the quarter cover the life of the patriarch Jacob. In three lessons Jacob is the prominent personage, in eight Joseph occupied that position.

We have studied a great variety of experiences—sorrow, joy, defeat, victory. There have been terrific soul cries, mighty heart struggles, thrilling character tests. Jacob, selfish, tricky, false, morally an exceedingly crooked specimen of sinful humanity, repented and was gloriously converted—became a twice-born man to be used of God. Joseph, in the midst of circumstances the most adverse, forbidding, crushing, trusted, was saved, and was used of God. Both Jacob and Joseph, in spite of sin and circumstances, and all the devil's efforts to thwart the plan of heaven, became important factors in the great scheme of God that culminated in the coming of the Christ.

God can pardon and cleanse the sinful heart. God can overcome circumstances. God reigns. He is going to have his way in his world.

Review.

Time.—According to Ussher the lessons from Genesis belong to the eighteenth century B. C., and those of this quarter coming between the years 1760 and 1707. Other scholars give other centuries. The temperance lesson belongs to the eighteenth century B. C.

Places.—Beersheba, Bethel, Dothan, Hebron in Canaan, Haran in Padan-aram. Egypt and its capital city (probably Zoan), and the land of Goshen.

Persons.—Isaac and Rebekah and their sons Esau and Jacob. Jacob's wives and twelve sons, most prominently Joseph. Pharaoh and Egyptian courtiers and servants.

The Golden Text.

This is the victory that hath overcome the world, even our faith.—1 John 5:4.

In the ultimate, faith in the false must lead to defeat, and faith in the true must lead to victory. Everything depends upon the object of faith.

"Our faith" is the true God who is able and wise and good, therefore there results the victory that overcomes the world—that is, every evil thing.

Jacob's faith in deception, in falsehood, in selfish, wicked tricks, brought him into trouble. All that is admirable in his life is the result of faith in God.

Joseph's almost perfect character was the development of a never-failing faith in the true, holy God.

WHY NOT BOOST YOUR SCHOOL?

If your Sunday school and organized classes are doing any thing these times you ought to get it in print. If it is an election of officers, a picnic, a class contest, or what not, it should be recorded on this page.

By all means elect a press reporter for the school, class or society and let the world know what your school and church are doing. If dead, send an obituary; if alive, let us have some evidence of it.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR PRAYER MEETING.

Topic for July 6—"The Ideal Christian. VII. His Courage." Josh. 1:1-9.

The subject for this meeting is Courage. Let it be demonstrated by members of the Society. Show the courage that it takes to arise in the meeting and speak for Christ. This is the monthly consecration meeting. It calls for a definite active part in the meeting, aside from singing of every member of the society. Let some definite work be assigned each member and then let every member be in place on time.

Let the leader be chosen two weeks in advance, and then he and the prayer meeting committee will take the Christian Endeavor World, divide up the matter furnished among the members and have each one to give substantially, without reading, the argument or incident furnished.

The leader's talk should not be long, but should be a manly definition of courage and an outline of the things to be considered in the discussion.

Here are some topics for members:

Bible Instances of Courage.

Abraham leaving his native land to go out into an untried country.

David in his fight with Goliath.

Daniel when he defied the King's Decree.

Christ before Pilate.

Noah when he faced the jests that were hurled at him as he built the ark.

Brave Men of Modern Times.

Tell something of these heroes of the Cross who faced danger for Christ:

1. Martin Luther
2. John Wesley.
3. David Livingstone.
4. Mackay, of Uganda.
5. Bishop Hannington.
6. Other Missionaries.

Thoughts Upon the Topic.

There is much heroism in every-day life: the firemen that risk their lives to save others; the fishermen that go down to the sea; doctors that assume risks when investigating dangerous diseases; nurses that attend infectious cases; workers in cholera and leper hospitals.

To attack hard and disagreeable tasks in school calls for courage. The will must be whipped into line. To plod on and do a thing well and master it rather than let it master us develops invaluable courage for life's harder tasks that all must face soon or late.

The foe of courage is fear. To overcome it we must learn to analyze the situation and try to know that we can do all things that God wishes us to do. When the will is determined to do its very best and refuses to be flurried, we are a long way on the road to success.

If a financier came to us with a proposal, just a little crooked, by which we might earn a million dollars, should we have courage to say, "No"? Is it true that every man has his price? Is there a point at which our wills would break and we should accept the fruits of wrong-doing?

DATES OF APPROACHING CONVENTIONS

All Schools, Classes and Societies Urged to Elect Delegates to These.

North Carolina and Virginia Conference—Young People's Convention to be held at Haw River, N. C., July 15-16, 1913.

Western North Carolina Conference—Young People's Convention to be held at Randleman, N. C., July 25-27, 1913.

Sunday schools, organized and teacher training classes and Christian Endeavor societies are urged to elect delegates to these conventions right away. Be sure that your school is well represented. Superintendents and pastors are members of the convention by virtue of their positions.

Interesting programs have been prepared, and the conventions will be well worth while.

SUNDAY SCHOOL EXCURSION.

The First Christian church of Greensboro is planning an excursion to Mt. Airy about July 9th. The train will leave Greensboro at 7 a. m. and returning will leave Mt. Airy about 6:30 p. m.

Nothing is more real than what is spiritual, as approaching nearest to the nature of all reality—namely, God himself.—Thomas Boston.

The happy state of mind, so rarely possessed, in which we can say, "I have enough," is the highest attainment of philosophy. Happiness consists, not in possessing much, but in being content with what we have. He who wants little always has enough.—John G. Zimmerman.

To be hindered in the work and yet not be impatient with God's way or doubtful that the work is going on—that was the exile's problem on the little dry island of Patmos. And it has been the problem of many a man who was tempted to think himself forsaken ever since.—Hilton Jones.

High ideals are to be used as guiding stars, not as stumbling-blocks in our pathway. That is what a man always does when he knows so well what ought to be done that he is not willing to attempt anything. Every man owes it to God and to all other men to use his little knowledge as truly as a genius is bound to use his genius.

"But it cannot be that they should long obey God from fear, who are deaf to the motives of love." So wrote John Wesley in crossing the Atlantic when he observed that persons who were religiously inclined in the midst of a terrific storm so soon seemed to forget their gracious Deliverer, some even asserting that there had been no danger. Mr. Wesley was entirely correct in his comment. Fear may produce spasmodic religious impulses and moods, but only love can constrain to unselfish and continuous service.

EVERY-DAY RELIGION.

Religion is for every day. Its blessings and benefits, its comforts and consolations, its guidance and its inspiration are for the commonplace men and women. It is something to take with one, something that will never be out of place anywhere, something that will add to life's joy its best touch of sweetness and will mix with all life's sorrows, hope and courage and power. A man who has every-day religion in good wholesale quantity can easily afford to be without a good many other things.—Christian Guardian.

THE BEGINNING.

The first gathering of the women of the Southern Christian Convention in behalf of Missions (or any other causes as for that matter) was held at Elon College, May 26-27th. If you have entertained any thought as to our women not being interested in this great theme, or not being in earnest about accomplishing something in behalf of this great cause, you can clear your mind of all such ideas for all time. There were something like thirty-seven delegates present, representing all the Conferences of our Convention save one. The eagerness with which they desired to learn, and the earnestness which they manifested in the work, proved beyond a doubt that our women are ripe for organized effort and are willing to do their part in carrying out the one great mission of the church.

Nor were our ministers lacking in interest or in support of the work. Some fourteen or more were in attendance many of them taking part in the discussions. The addresses by Drs. Atkinson and Denison were among the most inspiring features of the Convention; while the presence of our venerable Dr. Wellons at each session was the benediction of the aged upon the efforts of those younger in the cause.

The papers and reports read were full of information and inspiration and were well calculated to arouse to greater activities those interested in doing something to bring all men to a saving knowledge of our Christ. All of these will be given in the columns of this Department and we bespeak for them a careful reading by THE SUN family.

The Treasurer's Report showed that during this, our first year of organized effort, $722.27 have been paid into the treasury. While this is a very small amount when compared with what we might have done, if we were fully aroused to our duty and opportunity, yet it is encouraging when regarded in the light of the past, with no record of anything undertaken or accomplished.

The report of the Corresponding Secretary showed that in almost all of our Conferences, the work is being furthered and in most of them considerable progress has been made.

The Report of the Superintendent of Young People's and Cradle Roll Departments showed that there were a number of organizations along these lines of work. During the coming year it is hoped that greater attention may be given these departments as they are great possibilities in each of these. In the beginning of the work, the greater amount of interest has been centered in the organization of the women. With these as the nuclei from which to work, it is hoped that the various departments may be developed as occasion and opportunity may demand.

There were several matters of importance passed upon by the Board in its annual meeting, the proceedings of which appeared in this Department last week. Among these we mention the following: Mrs. L. F. Johnson, Raleigh, N. C., was made Supt. of the Cradle Roll Department; Mrs. W. H. Carroll was made Supt. of Literature and Mite Boxes and each conference is asked to appoint a Supt. of the same for the Conference. Funds from the Cradle Roll Department are to be used in the support of the Orphanage at Elon College, while those raised by the Y. P. Department, are to be used for the Santa Isabel field. In the support of this field we are to co-operate with the Young People of the A. C. C. Something like $450 will be required, and it should not be a difficult task for our young people to raise $200 or $250 of that amount. C. E. Societies are asked to make a contribution to the support of this work, inasmuch as where there are C. E. Societies, in many cases, it would not be wise to organize a Y. P. Society. Miss Bettie Stephenson is Supt. of Y. P. Department and will have something to say at an early date concerning the work of her department. Mrs. W. A. Harper and Mrs. J. W. Patton were appointed to prepare suggestive programs for the monthly meetings of the Missionary Societies.

The great need of having a Field Secretary was discussed, but no action was taken in regard to providing such a person. Provision was made for a similar meeting to this one to be held at the same time and place of the Southern Christian Convention next year.

The interest manifested in this Convention or Mass Meeting has strengthened the conviction that our women have been waiting an opportunity to do something through organized effort, to help in the spread of the Gospel. There is promise of a great awakening of our people to the cause of missions. Let our women lay the foundation and ceaselessly pray, for "Without me, ye can do nothing." May we never lose sight of Him who is the source of all our power. Let every woman put forth greater effort this coming year that there may be great progress in the work.

Mrs. C. H. R.

POSSIBILITIES OF YOUNG PEOPLE'S MISSIONARY SOCIETIES.

(Read before the Woman's Missionary Mass Meeting, Elon College, N. C., May 28th.)

Before considering the possibilities of Young People's Missionary Work, let us turn for a moment to a familiar Bible scene. There is famine in the land of Canaan. For the second time the sons of Jacob have come to Egypt to buy food; and this time they have brought with them the beloved Benjamin, whom the devoted father has so reluctantly allowed to go. Joseph, still unknown to his brothers, gives them a final testing by declaring his intention to keep Benjamin. For a while, the brothers are dismayed beyond words. Then, most eloquently, Judah pours forth his soul in a plea for his younger brother. "Ah," he cries, "how can I go unto my father, if the lad be not with me?" To-day, into our own souls, this searching question burns its way. How can we go to our Father and ask Him to bless our missionary endeavors, if the boys and girls of our churches, the young people in the most impressionable period of life, are not with us in this great work? In the development of this Young People's Missionary Movement, some of the responsibility rests on the pastors; but a great deal of it also rests on the women. It is a trust in their keeping. Are they willing to plead and sacrifice for it, as Judah did for Benjamin?

The intrinsic value of Missionary Work for young people is the development it brings to their own hearts and lives. No one can work intelligently and earnestly for Missions without deepening the heart throbs for humanity, and broadening the vision of the soul. It awakes and calls into action the noblest impulses of life. Nor does the inspiration it gives detract from that youthful vivacity which every one admires and enjoys. Instead of taking it away, work for Missions serves to give it the meaning and worth. Is it not true that in the young people of the present day, there is far too great a tendency to irreverence, listlessness, or unworthy ambition? Vigorous, well-organized missionary work among boys and girls, young men and women, will do much to purify, keep steady, and ennoble their thought life and activity.

From only an intellectual stand-point, the study of Missions is worth while. A subject for such far-reaching interest easily takes high rank in the curriculum for a broad-minded, liberal education. In its study of men and affairs, it readily interlinks with the sociological subjects prescribed in our college courses, and so widely discussed at the present time in magazines.

Organized work of any kind with a purpose worth while, is beneficial. Our boys and girls need to learn early in life to do things by systematic methods, such as apply in all kinds of business, and, in fact, have to do with the principles of living.

There is still something else missionary work has to offer. If properly planned and directed, it should give pleasure, real diversion, such as all normal people enjoy. Publishing Houses now are carrying a full line of such varied and interesting missionary supplies that there really seems no good reason for any society's being dull and unattractive. Meetings should be planned with the thought of giving pleasure as well as instruction. If the people who attend our meetings can be given a good time, and made happy, they will be in a suitable frame of mind to do their best work for this great cause. Japanese Teas and Evenings in China, India, South Africa, and Porto Rico, can be made occasions of just such social enjoyment as all young people delight in. Similar pleasures can be planned, suitable for children of all ages. Instruments that enlarge postal card views have been used successfully, adults enjoying them as heartily as children. Literature abounds in interesting missionary stories. Object lessons too numerous to mention make children open their eyes in wonder.

Young People's Missionary Work also has possibilities for the development and growth of the Christian denomination. The church universal is one of the great institutions of earth. As a means of working for the whole great institution, we work through denominations for convenience; but our part is not successfully done, unless we have a proper spirit of loyalty for our own denomination, and see that its part of the work is well done. No denomination is on a strong and sure foundation, unless its young people are trained to fill efficiently the place of their elders. No church can do wide-awake, satisfactory missionary work without the co-operation of its young people. For this reason, it is urged that every Woman's Missionary Conference Board have a Superintendent of Young People's Work, and that she seek to have organized in every church of the conference a young people's missionary society.

Some of the small country churches seem unsuitably situated for the monthly meetings of a society. A church of this kind, then, might have some one appointed as Young People's Missionary Superintendent, whose business will be to distribute mite boxes and literature and collect mite box offerings at stated intervals.

If the possibilities of Young People's Missions went no farther than individual and denominational development, it might, after all, become a selfish unworthy undertaking; but its possibilities are immeasurable, because they reach out to all the world. Our motto is "the whole wide world for Christ," but to work most effectively we have to concentrate our forces on one small part of the great mission field. All funds raised by our Young People are to be used for the Santa Isabel mission in Porto Rico.

The entire support of the Santa Isabel field has been assigned to our young people, and it is earnestly desired that, by January 1914, there shall be enough annual pledges and contributions to meet this need. The aim cannot be realized without sincere prayer, and faithful, persevering work. The amount needed annually is $450 or $500. The work there is now in charge of a young man of Porto Rico, Mr. Juan R. Romero. He is an earnest, sincere worker, and through him, God is prospering the efforts being put forth for that field.

Societies are asked to be careful that all contributions for Young People's Funds are sent to the Conference Board treasurers with proper instructions, as, heretofore, the money from our young people or Willing Workers has been included in the offerings of the Woman's Societies, because our Young People's Department was not fully organized. Contributions from individuals would greatly help, and are always gladly received. Christian Endeavor Societies are also being asked to pledge some amount annually to our Young People's Funds; they are asked to take shares at the rate of $2-50 a share.

As we are assembled in Convention to-day, there is a part each one of us may have in the spread of this organized missionary work among our young people. Only as women are willing to give time and energy to the organization and development of this work, will the desired results be accomplished. Yet, even the most willing effort is vain, unless our wills are in tune with God's will, and we learn to work by His direction. Then, that the need of consecrated workers may be met, will all in the Convention take a share in the responsibility, through sincere, believing prayer? In being true to our younger brothers and sisters, we shall do what is most pleasing to the heart of our loving Father.

WINCHESTER LETTER.

The Burlington Convention.

The Young People's General Convention held at Burlington was full of interest from start to finish. It emphasized the importance of making more effective our Sunday school and Christian Endeavor work. The future membership and activity of our churches depend largely upon the work of these two organizations, hence the need to do all we can to stimulate and encourage them to their best efforts along the best lines and by the best methods. This is what our conference conventions and general convention are trying to do and the writer feels that it is a mistake on the part of many of our ministers and leading laymen, that they do not take more interest in this great factor for the up-building and strengthening our church membership.

The change of name from the Young People's Convention to the Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention, and some changes in the constitution remove some of the objections, that had hitherto been brought against it, and at the same time define its position. The present arrangement gives every local organization of our people a representation in a general convention without any overlapping.

The local churches are represented through their conferences in the Southern Christian Convention; the Sunday schools, Christian Endeavor Societies, Organized and Teacher Training Classes in the Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Conventions, and all Missionary Societies, including the Women's Young People's and Willing Workers will have representation in the Missionary Convention to be organized next year, at the meeting of the Southern Christian Convention.

Each convention also has its distinct work. The Southern Christian Convention plans for, and directs, the efforts of the church members in the general enterprises of the church, viz: Publications, Missions, Education and the Orphanage. The Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Con. looks after the training schools (Sunday schools) from which the membership of these churches is recruited, and the organization (Christian Endeavor Societies) in which they are trained for service, after entering the church. The Missionary Convention stimulates an interest in Missions and organizes forces for the advancement of that part of our work.

Financing the Convention.

The annual expenses of the convention, including the employment of a Field Secretary and Editor for the department in THE CHRISTIAN SUN, distribution of literature, postage etc., is about $200 per year. There are three plans by which this fund is raised. (1) Personal contributions (2) An annual offering from every Sunday school, organized class, and Christian Endeavor Society. The Executive Committee decided to call for this offering the first Sunday in September. We trust that all our Sunday schools and Christian Endeavor Societies will show their interest in the work by sending to the treasurer of this convention the offering for that Sunday. (3) A contribution, from the conventions of all the conferences of one cent per member of its enrolled constituency. If the last two contributions are made as they should be, the first can be dispensed with. The financing of any movement, for the church, should be borne by the whole body and not by the personal contributions of the small per cent that attend sessions of the convention or conference.

The Hand-Book.

The matter of printing the minutes was left with the Executive Committee. This committee, after some investigation as to the cost, etc., decided, if the co-operation of the several Conventions can be secured to publish a Sunday school and Christian Endeavor Hand Book containing the minutes of all the conference conventions and of the general convention. The following is the plan: The Secretary of all the conference conventions to furnish the minutes of his convention, condensed as much as he can consistently do so with clearness, and to send to the treasurer the amount of money the convention has been paying to have its own minutes printed. In return for this the Executive Committee proposes to furnish every convention with approximately the same number of copies of the Hand Book that they have been getting of their own minutes. Mr. C. A. Hines, the editorial and field secretary is to edit the book, and Rev J. O. Cox, the treasurer, is to have the financial management of it. We hope to have the hearty cooperation of all the conventions in the work.

The Department Secretaries.

One important change in the Constitution was the doing away with standing committees and putting in their place department secretaries. The convention felt that one person, upon whom was laid the responsibility of looking after a department, would do more than a committee of three, none of whom felt the individual responsibility.

It is hoped that the change in name and the plans for carrying forward the work will meet the approval of the brotherhood and that we may have the cooperation of all the conventions and of every local Sunday school, with its auxiliary organizations and of every Christian Endeavor Society.

THE CHURCH AT PRAYER.

strike, and that they had in consequence declared no dividend. Do you blame my friend for wasting sympathy on a wealthy manufacturer? Let me give you the sequel to this story:

Recently, during the present special session of our national legislation, a certain gentleman whose name I can give any gentle reader who will take the trouble to ask for it, appeared before the chairman of a certain committee, and informed him that if the proposed changes were made in the tariff, the manufacturers of Fall River, whom he represented, would be compelled to take one of two courses open to them. The one alternative was to close their plants and throw many deserving people out of employment; while the other was to cut wages. The chairman of the committee asked him what kind of a dividend his particular firm had paid last year. "Six per cent." came with an air which seemed to indicate that men could not be expected to do business for less. "What did you get the year before?" "Six per cent." "What was your salary as manager?" "Twenty-five thousand dollars." "Do you sell all your goods direct to the trade or through a selling agency?" "Through a selling agency, but we only pay the agency 4 per cent." "Do you own any stock in the selling agency?" "Yes." "How much?" "A third interest." "What did your share amount to last year?" "Eighteen thousand dollars." "Did not your manufacturing firm declare a stock dividend three years ago of 100 per cent?" "Ye-e-e-s."

But even that, you see, was only 37 per cent. in the way of dividends, and $43,000.00 salary. Just think of the burden of responsibility a man assumes who receives an annual dividend of 37 per cent and $43,000 in salary. Men of that type voluntarily relieve most of their employees of such responsibilities. In the mills of the American Woolen Company, of Lawrence, a man who was on the ground at the time picked up a number of pay envelopes, some of which he showed me. One, of a spinner, for 54 hours' work $4.95; another for 5 hours, $5.20; and another of $3.46 for four days' work. Yet, I affirm my confidence in the truthfulness of the Fall River man's statement that no dividends were paid in some of the plants last year. There may have been some small stockholders in those firms whose business experience had not trained them to assume the heavy responsibility of 37 per cent. dividends, but who in their ignorance were all too willing to risk an experience of that kind. If they failed to receive any dividend at all for one year, perhaps they would then be willing to yield the burden to those who were more accustomed to carry similar loads.

The market price of stocks has a convenient way of dropping at such times, so that these light stockholders perhaps enjoy a double advantage of being relieved of part of the principal, as well as all of their interest.

Now of what use is a prayer meeting engaged in by people who build and feed these fires calculated to burn up human energy to no good purpose, and who then pray for relief from the consequences of their folly? To ask God for direction, and then yield ourselves to the direction of these gigantic forces which we have helped to foster is certainly far from entering into the spirit of prayer such as Jesus taught his disciples. Listen:

"Our Father, who art in heaven,"—where? The Book says "in heaven." Brother, sister, how can you and I convince men that we are children of a Father whose nature is such as to create a heavenly atmosphere, and at the same time show our allegiance to a System whose very existence creates hell? You and I are not personally responsible for the existence of these evils only in so far as we either aid and abet them, or fail to register our protest against them. I am fully persuaded that we shall not have effectual fervent prayers of righteous men ascending to heaven until our righteousness is aimed high enough to "exceed the righteousness of the Scribes and Pharisees." Brethren of the ministry: It will probably prove a helpful exercise for us all if we commit the whole book of James to memory. His bitter sarcasm may sting us into wakefulness. We have allowed ourselves to become almost asphyxiated by the gas from the fires of oppression suffered by the poor. We have been wont to content ourselves by professions of belief in God. Hear James:

"Thou believest that there is one God; thou doest well; the devils also believe, and tremble." Suppose we actually became aroused to the importance of the Kingdom of God? Pastoral work would not then mean what it seems to mean to most of us now. Instead of spending a goodly portion of our time preparing sermons, which we have no reasonable assurance will be taken seriously by any considerable number of our parish, we should be conducting seminaries where disciples would be found training for the conquest of the world for Christ. Some of these disciples would be in training as firemen to put out the fires of avarice and greed, while others would be trained for patrol duty to prevent the fires from being lighted.

Prayer would come to mean taking counsel with God as to the best methods to be employed for carrying out His program. When Jesus was seeking to meet and relieve human need, he said of a particularly stubborn case, "This kind goeth out only by prayer and fasting." When one gets in earnest about his heavenly Father's business, or serving his fellows, he wants to talk over the proposition with God. He doesn't drone by his bedside half asleep, asking God to bless the sick and afflicted the world over, and then if one of his children gets sick in the night, expect his wife to get up in the cold to give the needed relief. Until prayer comes to mean more than it does in the average prayer meeting, the attendance and interest cannot be expected to increase very rapidly.

One seldom goes to a prayer meeting that he does not hear something about forgiveness. How much of it is practiced? Yet Jesus taught that if we fail to forgive we shall expect forgiveness in vain.

Again and again we hear people say, "I can forgive, but I can't forget." Usually that means there is absolutely no disposition to forgive. I once heard a woman say she had forgiven another whom she had discovered to be innocent of the charge she held against her. She really knew so little about forgiveness that she failed to see it was she who needed to be forgiven, rather than the one whom she professed to have forgiven.

Shall we have a prayer meeting revival? It will be gratifying to me, and I trust may serve to arouse interest in the subject, if the brethren will kindly discuss this theme. Anything that I have written which may seem to be unsound I shall be glad to have criticised severely, but would prefer for the sake of all concerned a kindly spirit to preclude the criticism.

Children's Missionary Stories

STORIES are—yes, must be—used by every wide-awake worker among, or leader or teacher of, children.

MISSIONARY STORIES seem to have been the one field well-nigh overlooked until Mrs. Alice Moreton Burnett, Corresponding Secretary for the Woman's Board for Home Missions of the Christian Church, made a compilation of thirty interesting, instructive stories pertaining especially and directly to missions that are sure to be appreciated by workers, teachers, leaders, pastors, fathers, mothers—and the children.

Some of the Important Events of both Home Missions and Foreign Missions are also included, together with Suggestions For Junior Leaders.

They make a book 5 x 7 inches in size, 128 pages, red cloth binding—a handsome, attractive volume. Price 35c per copy postpaid.

DONATIONS:

Class, "Little Workers," Waverly, Va., two oak rocking chairs; the ladies of Berea, Alamance, 105 pounds sugar. The good people of Pleasant Hill, Alamance, made up a load consisting of 2 bushels corn; 1 bushel wheat; 25 pounds sugar; 4 gallons soap; 6 bars soap; 1 bushel peaches; 1 gallon dried fruit 1/2 dozen cans of fruit: peaches, berries, etc. For all of this we are indeed grateful. Thank you. I hope we may be remembered again this year as last, with these donations.

Two of our girls are at home for a short vacation: Amanda Nipper and Mary Low Mitchell. Many of the children want to go, but it is becoming a custom with like institutions, for various reasons, not to allow it; and we think it is a good idea.

Dear Uncle Emory:

I am sending my dime for June. Daddy has gone to Chapel Hill to attend the summer school. Mamma and I miss him lots. Grandmother Seymour is with us while Daddy is away. We are so glad to have her with us because she is so much company for us. She plays with me lots while mamma is out doing her work.

Lovingly your little cousin,

Yes, sir, we are glad to have you come with your dime. I know how boys appreciate "Grandmother," I suspect she pets R. P. C., Jr.

DOES IT PAY?

Following the above heading, in "Our Children," the organ of the Baptist Orphanage, Greenville, Ala., are some suggestions I want to present to our folks; as you read them apply them to our own work.

"This is said to be a commercial age, and so we often hear the question asked, 'Will it pay?' While it is usually applied to commercial undertakings, it may as well be applied to the Orphanage work.

"Why are such institutions maintained, any way, and why should our churches and Sunday schools be called upon to support them?"

"In the first place, it was Christ who first established the Church, and while He clearly taught that we are not saved by works, yet He as clearly declared that love for our fellow man, and the desire to help him was the outgrowth of this Christian experience. For many years, churches undertook to care for the orphan children of their community, but in many cases the burden became heavy—and so the denomination began the work by selecting a point in the state and erecting a home where helpless and dependent ones could be sent and where their support would be divided among the churches as to not become burdensome. So it was that our orphanage at Evergreen was established and for these twenty years has carried on this great work.

"What this work of educating and training these children has contributed to the general welfare of the state of Alabama, eternity alone can tell. Many steady and reliable men and women would gladly testify as to its helpfulness in their lives.

"Where can one place his means and reap greater rewards than in helping to carry on the work of fitting these children for future usefulness? Many of them come to us bearing evidence of neglect, and to see them respond physically, mentally and morally to their new surroundings makes one feel that the work is indeed worth while. Christ said, 'For the poor ye have always with you, but me ye have not always.' It is not argued for a moment that the Orphanage is superior to the home for raising children, but many of these children, deprived of their homes by causes for which they are certainly not responsible, have found the Orphanage a wonderfully helpful institution. At the same time it has offered the opportunity to carry out the commands of the Master in a practical way. So that every man or woman who puts their money in an institution of this character puts their money in the future citizenship of the State, a monument more enduring than stone or bronze."

For the above mentioned institution Miss S. G. Follansbee, at her death, left a bequest amounting to three hundred and thirty-three dollars and thirty-three cents. For this I offer congratulations. The amount will be used to equip a department for repairing shoes.

A WONDERFUL TREE.

In far-off Persia there grows a shrub which is called the sorrowful tree. Another name for this tree is the night Jasmine or the sad tree. The reason why it is called the sad or sorrowful tree is because it blooms only at night.

When the first star appears in the sky, the first bud opens on the wonderful tree. As the evening advances, the buds open more rapidly until the tree is covered with the delicate blooms and it appears like one vast flower. The bloom is quite fragrant and the odor is like the perfume of the evening primrose. As the stars begin to grow dim and the dawn approaches, the flowers begin to fade, and by the time the sun has risen not a flower can be found on the tree.

During the hours of daylight the tree appears to be withering as if it had been injured in some manner; but in reality it is simply regaining its strength in order to put forth new blossoms on the following night.

This tree is held in high esteem by the natives of the country where it grows, and is looked upon as a curiosity by florists throughout the world. When cut down, these trees send up sprouts from the roots that will mature into a flowering tree in a very short time.—Apples of Gold.

The advertisement of the Agricultural and Mechanical College at Raleigh appears in another column. This College is fulfilling its mission as a place for first-class technical training. Turn where you will and its graduates are making their mark on the industrial life of the State. The demands on the institution for men are increasing from year to year. If a young man wants to equip himself for leadership in agriculture, engineering, cotton manufacturing and allied pursuits he should consider the admirable opportunities offered by this busy College.

It is only at the moment of going out from ourselves that we are truly made a people of the Lord, although until then we may have been always consecrated to Him by the life of His grace; since it is in this day that the soul, losing all propriety, finds itself disposed to be received into God. It becomes also peculiarly His people in that, having gone out from itself, it resists God just as much as it remains in itself, and it becomes to him so much the more supple the more it comes out.—M. Guyon.

MOTHER BELIEVES IN HORNER. Had Four Sons Taught Here.

"I have great respect for the training given at the Horner Military School, in proof of which my husband and I have had four sons taught there. All along, within my intimate knowledge of it, at intervals from 1884 to 1902, the same wholesome discipline and careful oversight have been kept up, the same thoroughness and impartiality insisted on. We have not been disappointed in a single instance. With its present improvements and a principal whose more than twenty-five years in the management of boys have taught him what they need, parents having sons to educate may feel that they are in safe and competent keeping. I feel confident that my boys are well taught, well cared for and surrounded by good social and Christian influences."—Mrs. Annie F. Winborne, Tyner, N. C.

Horner Military School has for its purpose: (1) The thorough preparation of boys for entrance to colleges, universities, government and technical schools. (2) To give a thorough secondary preparation for a business career. (3) To cultivate in the boys truthfulness, self-control, a right sense of honor, habits of systematic and close application in the performance of all duties. (4) To help the boys to grow physically and morally into the highest type of Christian Manhood. Does it better today than it ever did.

The Best Bargain You Ever Made

HOW do you measure the value of a bargain?

Suppose you bought an engine that did practically all of your hardest work for you—sawing, pumping, grinding, etc.—and that paid for itself in a short time. Would you call that a good bargain?

An I H C engine will do all that, and more. Having paid for itself, it continues to earn its way by working steadily year after year until you, like our Clay County friend who has used an I H C engine for six years, will say, "My I H C engine is the best bargain I ever made."

I H C Oil and Gas Engines

are thoroughly dependable, and unusually durable. The fine-grained, grey cast iron cylinders and pistons are worked together to a perfect fit. The ground piston rings insure maximum power from the explosion. The ignition apparatus can be understood at a glance. The fuel mixer is the most effective and simplest known. Moving parts are perfectly balanced. Bearings are large and carefully fitted.

I H C engines are made in all styles—vertical and horizontal, portable and stationary, air and water-cooled; in sizes from 1 to 50-horse power, to operate on gas, gasoline, naphtha, distillate, kerosene or alcohol. Gasoline and kerosene tractors, 12 to 60-horse power.

The I H C local dealer will show you the good points of the I H C engine. Get catalogue from him, or, write

PALM STREET REVIVAL.

Have been thinking for several days that I would attempt to write something of this meeting, but found that Dr. Wicker had already written.

I will write in particular of the closing service which took place this evening (Sunday). I verily believe every one who attended the morning and evening services was blessed.

The meeting as a whole was one among the best I have ever attended. Dr. Wicker and this good people know how to make any one who comes among them enjoy life and Christian service.

The people here are kind, devoted to their pastor, and loyal to their church, and its cause in every respect. Never have I seen the small boys and girls in any community more interested than are the "little boys and girls" at Palm Street.

Some of the best church music I have ever heard was rendered by this choir composed mostly of the young men and women of the Baraca and Philathea Classes. May God bless them in all their undertakings.

But I started on the "Closing Service." At the eleven o'clock service today the pulpit was filled by our good brother, H. C. Smith, who delivered a fine discourse.

I arrived at the church at 1 o'clock P. M. and at 3 P. M. we gathered at "Revolution Pond," where baptism was administered to 25 applicants all by immersion; three were sprinkled.

In this company were noted two brothers strong young men, and their wives, a brother and sister, one little girl about 12 years old and a father who was near his 70th round on the ladder. All were happy as we engaged in this most beautiful and solemn service.

From here we went to No. 8 Spruce street to the home of Miss Sudie Harris where a scene of a beautiful home wedding was enjoyed by a number of friends and well wishers.

Immediately after 5 o'clock the bride and groom (Mr. Eber. L. Brown and Miss Sudie Harris) accompanied by a number of attendants marched into the parlor while this writer read the words that made them husband and wife. They will make their home in this same community.

From here the crowd accompanied by the bride and groom went immediately to the church, only to find it filled to the utmost seating capacity where we enjoyed the last service.

After this writer had spoken from the theme "Our Importance and Responsibilities in the Kingdom," more than fifty strong stalwart young men and women stood up and said "If God calls us to the gospel ministry we will answer Here am I, send me." From this number we may look for ministers, missionaries and Christian workers. May God bless and call some of these into Christian service and may this good people and their pastor prosper.

I'm now waiting for South-bound train No. 29 for Atlanta and other points in Georgia and Alabama, where I shall engage in evangelistic service.

CLUB SAVES ONE MEMBER $150.

The management of the Christian Sun Piano Club has just received a letter from one of its members who joined about six months ago and who selected the Self-player Piano. He describes the Player as "The Prince of Home Entertainers" and continues as follows:—"After investigating two other makes during a recent visit to New York, I concluded that I saved one hundred and fifty dollars by buying from you."

This letter is a fair sample of the daily correspondence of the Club. Practically every mail brings similar expressions from those who have received their instruments and are delighted with the quality, price, terms and privileges afforded by the Club.

Every subscriber is cordially invited to write for a copy of the Club's illustrated catalogue which pictures and describes the Pianos and Player-Pianos and explains the big saving in price which results from Club membership. Address the managers, Ludden & Bates, Christian Sun Piano Club Dept., Atlanta, Ga. Advt.

THE ART OF KEEPING COOL.

Keeping cool in hot weather is no easy job. In fact, few people can hold that job down to their own satisfaction. But it is a proposition that we shall all be up against for the next three or four months, so we may as well try to make the best of it. Here are some valuable suggestions which have helped others. They may help you.

First of all, don't worry about the hot weather. It is going to come, and all the worrying you can do will not make it any cooler. Reconcile yourself to hot weather and nearly half the battle is won.

The next thing to do is to dress for hot weather. Wear light colored, light weight, porous clothing. Remember that tight clothing and tight shoes particularly in summer, are for a few women only. All men and wise women will leave such things strictly alone.

Plenty of water is really the best thing known for hot weather. Drink lots of it. Bathe yourself in it inside and out. Drink until you perspire freely. It is not a disgrace to perspire. It is an aid to health and comfort. Perspiration on your skin is nature's own way of keeping you cool.

Regulate your diet to fit the season. In hot weather leave off meats, fats, gravies, butter and other heat producers, and eat fruits and vegetables in abundance. By drinking an abundance of water you can keep your sewer system flushed out. Remember, you never will be comfortable, particularly in hot weather, if you are constipated.—N. C. State Board of Health.

JOIN THE CHRISTIAN SUN PIANO CLUB.

And exchange your old piano for a splendid new Self-player Piano that can be used and enjoyed by every member of your family from the little tots of five or six to the old gray headed folks who love music but who didn't have the opportunity to take lessons when they were young. This delightful home entertainer is the greatest musical instrument of the age, for it makes home the most interesting and delightful place in all the world for the young and old alike.

In speaking of the Self-player furnished by the Club, Rev Len G. Broughton, D. D., formerly of Atlanta, now of London says:—"All who have ever heard it are in an agreement that it is one of the very best combinations that has ever been put on the market. Persons desiring such an instrument will certainly do well to examine yours, and if they will only give it a trial I feel sure they will try no further."

Write for your copy of the Club's catalogue and see how easy we have made it for you to own a first class piano or player piano. Address the managers, Ludden & Bates, Christian Sun Piano Club Dept., Atlanta, Ga. Advt.

SLEEPING IN HOT WEATHER

Nothing so fortifies one against attacks of hot weather as a good night's sleep, and for lots of people nothing is harder to get. If you haven't taken a reasonable amount of exercise, perhaps you don't deserve much sleep. If you are troubled with indigestion, eat a light fruit supper, or omit supper entirely. If your room or your bed is hot, or if you are too warm to go to sleep quickly on a hot night, take a cool bath just before retiring. A tub bath is excellent, but a cold rub down with a sponge is almost as good. After thus becoming thoroughly cleansed and cooled by such a bath, it is comparatively easy to get a good night's sleep in spite of the hot weather.—N. C. State Board of Health.

A VALUABLE REPORT FOR SUNDAY SCHOOL WORKERS.

After a serious delay on account of the floods at Dayton, Ohio, the printed Minutes of the Third Annual Meeting of the Sunday School Council of Evangelical, Denominations for the United States and Canada are at last available. This important report contains the complete findings of the Council, representing twenty-nine denominations, touching such matters as Sunday-school standards, exhibits, lesson courses and summer schools for Sunday school workers, together with the report of officers, sections and committees and a complete membership roll of the Council by denominations. The statistical table shows that in ten of the twenty-nine denominations, the Sunday-school enrollment exceeds number of communicants exceeds in numbers varying from five to fifty per cent. of the total number of communicants. In the remaining nineteen denominations the number of communicants exceeds the Sunday school enrollment by percentages varying from eight to one hundred and thirty. Altogether the eighty pages of the report are crowded with valuable information regarding Sunday school work, viewed from the interdenominational standpoint. Pastors and Sunday school workers of evangelical churches can obtain the report by sending their application accompanied by ten cents in stamps to the Secretary of the Council, Henry H. Meyer, 150 Fifth Avenue, New York.

THE PERMANENCE OF INFLUENCE.

In his search for the pedigree of a certain family long extinct, a gentleman in England made a visit to the little hamlet of Finderne. He sought for the ancient ancestral hall, but not a stone remained to tell where it stood. He carefully scanned the musty records of the church, but not a Finderne name was there. Hoping to glean some stray tradition or hint of the Finderne family he accosted a villager.

"Finderne?" said the rustic, "Finderne? We have no Findernes here. But we have something that belongs to them; we have Finderne flowers."

"Show them to me," was the eager and instant reply.

He took the visitor into a field, where some faint traces of a terrace seemed to indicate that a stately edifice once had stood.

"There," said he, pointing to a bank of flowers growing wild, "there are the Finderne flowers brought by Sir Geoffrey Finderne from the Holy Land. And, do what you will, they will never die."—M. B. Lambdin, in Christian Observer.

her hull will be thoroughly scraped with sharp knives to rid her of these small sea animals, no larger than the end of one's thumb, which for six months have been tenaciously attaching themselves to her bottom and sides. The captain further tells me that we are losing two knots an hour, or one-seventh of the speed which we are capable because of these little hinderers. When I begin to compute how over six hundred persons are losing forty-eight hours out of a trip of two weeks, and think of the capital which practically lies idle and the unnecessary fuel consumed because of these pernicious little habitants of the deep, I am impressed with the amount of damage that can accrue from a very small and seemingly harmless animal. We pursue our way unhindered by sharks, whales, and other mighty monsters of the great sea, but the little barnacles are the great enemies of all sea-going craft.—American Friend.

A KEEN SENSE OF TIME.

At a trial in the South a colored man was put on the witness stand, and testified that a man who had been knocked down lay on the ground five minutes. The opposing lawyer challenged the statement.

To test the accuracy of the witness he took out his watch and asked him to tell when five minutes had passed.

The witness told him to the second.

"Look here, Rastus," said the lawyer, detaining the witness in the corridor at the conclusion of the case, "I will give you a handsome treat if you will tell me how you managed to announce that time so correctly."

"Yes, sah, Mistah James," replied the colored man. "Dis yer chile jes, done figured it out."

Figured it out! exclaimed the lawyer with a puzzled look.

"Yes, sah," replied Uncle Rastus, "by de clock dat was on de wall behin' you."

to say about Damascus. He is a skilled photographer, and one of his most attractive snapshots is that of a group of children in the street called Strait—a street which we need to be reminded is really straight, and not, as Mark Twain unaccountably relates, crooked as a corkscrew. The pride of Damascus lies still in its rivers Abana and Pharpar; but it does not hinder the citizens from polluting them with the refuse of the streets, making the water quite undrinkable in summer. Water is brought from a distance and sold in the streets at about a farthing a quart; and to buy a cup of cold water and give it to "one of those little ones" is a typical act of Eastern charity. Pious Moslems will buy water and then gather the thirsty children round them, using almost the very words of Isaiah—"Ho, every one that thirsteth, come ye to the waters, and he that hath no money; come ye, buy and eat; yea, come, buy wine and milk without money and without price."—(Isaiah, 55:1).

DEATHS

Simmers.

John W. Simmers died April 16, 1913 in his 64th year. He leaves two sons, 3 sisters to mourn his going. His wife died about eight years ago. I was called to his bedside, received him into the church and baptized him just a few weeks before his death. The burial took place at Linville on April 18, 1913. A. W. ANDES.

Dovel.

Calvin B. Dovel was born March 1, 1868 and died April 26, 1913, making his age, therefore, 45 years, 1 month and 25 days. Bro. Dovel was a member of the Christian Church at St. Peter's for about 25 years prior to his death. He leaves one brother, two half brothers, two sisters, seven children, and a second wife, to whom he was recently married. His first wife died about four years ago. The burial services were held at St. Peter's, April 28. A. W. ANDES.

Hedgepeth.

Helen Hedgepeth, daughter of the late James Madison Hedgepeth and Mrs. Sarah Gussie Hedgepeth, died at the home of her mother, near Holland, Va., June 16th, 1913, at the age of fifteen years. The funeral services were conducted by the writer at the home and the body placed in the family cemetery near by. Helen was a member of Holland Christian church and a good girl. She was a great sufferer and there seemed no human relief. She leaves a mother, four sisters and three brothers, besides a large number of other relatives. To all of them we extend our sympathy in their great sorrow. N. G. NEWMAN.

Bland.

William Henry Bland, of Raleigh died on his automobile June 11th en route to Fuquay Springs on a business trip. His little son Herbert was with him when the end came. Mr. Bland was a native of Chatham county, but he had lived in Raleigh since 1890. Age fifty-two years. He had been in poor health for a long while, but owing to the fact that he was rearing and schooling a large family he would not give up, but stood honestly and faithfully to his post until the end came. He leaves a wife and six children. He was formerly a member of New Elam Christian Church, Chatham County, but later united with the Christian church at Raleigh. He was at one time Secretary-Treasurer of the Christian Sunday school.

The funeral was conducted from New Elam church by the writer in the presence of many faithful friends and relatives. The remains were laid to rest in the church cemetery beside his parents and loved ones to await the resurrection.

L. F. JOHNSON, Pastor.

Holt.

On Wednesday, June 18th, 1913, at her home near Burlington, N. C., Mrs. J. W. Holt, wife of Rev. J. W. Holt fell asleep in death. She was a daughter of Austin and Margaret Whitsett, and was born February 27th, 1847 and was 68 years, 3 months and 21 days old when death came. She had been a sufferer for more than five years which suffering she bore with much patience and great fortitude.

She was married March 6th, 1878 to Rev. Jerimiah W. Holt who survives her in sorrow and loneliness. She leaves to mourn her death four brothers and one sister and a host of other relatives and friends. She professed faith in Christ and united with New Providence Christian church in early life and lived a consistent Christian until death. She was for many years the organist at New Providence and was active in Sunday school and church work. She was kind and generous in her dealings with all.

A good woman, a devoted wife and a kind friend has passed from labor to reward. The funeral services were from New Providence church and the interment was made in the church cemetery.

The large audience, the attending clergymen, the sweet music and the many and beautiful floral tributes all attested the esteem and love in which the deceased was held. The Lord comfort and bless the bereaved ones.

A SAFE SCHOOL FOR BOYS.

There are two features of Oak Ridge Institute, Oak Ridge, N. C., which will especially interest careful parents. One is the pronounced moral and refined character of the village of Oak Ridge and the marked absence of temptations and diversions from study so often present in larger towns and cities. And the other is the close personal attention and training the boy receives at the school.

Here, the mother may know that the moral and spiritual welfare of her boy is in safe keeping, and at the same time, be sure that he will receive the best mental and physical culture which the most thorough equipment and conscientious effort can provide.

The aim of Oak Ridge Institute is to grow men—physically, mentally and morally; to turn out good and valuable citizens—honorable and conscientious gentlemen in the best sense of the word. Parents interested in a preparatory school should write for this school's handsome catalog. Address either Prof. J. A. or M. H. Holt, Oak Ridge, N. C. Advt.

"I believe the mother is the greatest sufferer, especially from earth's moral troubles."

OUR PRINCIPLES.

- (1.) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the church.
- (2.) Christian is a sufficient name for the church.
- (3.) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
- (4.) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of church membership.
- (5.) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

Editorial Briefs

Breweries and Churches.

It has taken line upon line, and precept upon precept, but it seems that the tide is turning at last. In 1906 there was spent for building breweries and distilleries in the United States $14,578,000, and for churches $5,632,731. Six years later, 1912, there was spent for building breweries and distilleries $2,937,783, and for churches $14,879,506. The first four months of this year there were spent for breweries and distilleries $429,500, for building churches $4,389,986. People will spend their money where biggest and best profits are to be obtained—when they are convinced and come to know.

Seeking Happiness.

Happiness comes not from being, but from doing; not from submission but from conquest; not from idleness and listlessness, but from interest and activity. Thomas Carlyle said, "Man's unhappiness comes, in part, from his greatness. There is an infinite in him, which, with all his cunning, he cannot quite bury under the finite." When the infinite in man struggles to overcome the finite there is unhappiness; when it overcomes there is happiness. The infinite in man is the Christ of God, man's elder Brother. So perfect happiness comes only when the lesser self is subdued by the true and greater Self, even our Savior and Redeemer. We get happiness in action, in doing, in achieving for His sake and His name. John 13:17: "If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them."

For Use.

Every school-boy reads Aesop's Fable on the Miser to this end: Once upon a time a Miser used to hide his gold at the foot of a certain tree; but every week he would go and dig it up and gloat over his gain. A robber watched the Miser, and, finding where the gold was, went and dug it up and disappeared with it. When the Miser next came to see his precious treasure and gloat over it he found nothing but the empty hole. He tore his hair and raised such an outcry that his neighbors came around him, and he told them his trouble and how now he was deprived of his precious gold. "Did you ever take any of it out?" asked one of his neighbors. "Nay," said he, "I only came to look at it and enjoy having it." "Then come again and look at the hole and keep that," said the neighbor; "it will do you just as much good." This fable teaches, says the wise Aesop, that wealth unused might as well not exist; and a hole in the ground is as good as gold in the ground. But Aesop lived, you know, a very long time ago, and school boys forget when they become men much wisdom that they learned of and read about in their early days. (Read Matt. 25:24-30.)

The Message of History.

The story of Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, as told in the Sunday school lessons recently, and that of Moses and the Israelites to follow, is a record of man's weakness and God's strength; man erring, God correcting him; man going astray, God showing mercy unto him. When the correct history of the world shall be written it will be His story. For the men of our time are prone to blunder, and commit sin. So the message may be enlarged and the declaration set forth in words that Lyman Abbott uses: "The history of the world has been simply this: man sinning, God forgiving; man diseased, God healing; man destroying himself, God redeeming him from self-destruction; man sordid and selling himself into slavery, and God recovering him from slavery and crowning him with loving kindness and tender mercies." Men have profited some by their past, but sin and suffering still abound. And so there is yet need that we cry unto God of our fathers, and look to Him for daily strength and perpetual guidance. (Isa. 45:22).

The Battle Scarred.

After fifty years the veterans who wore the blue, and those who wore the gray, and who flew at each other's throats like mad men then, are met at Gettysburg this week to go over in memory, and happy reminiscences, the events of one of the world's greatest and most desperate and bloody battles. Fifty years ago men went to Gettysburg to show how fearlessly men could fight, how fearlessly they could endure, how courageously they could die. They went there to kill and be killed. That they made a success of their bloody business the world has never doubted. History tells us that in those three days, July 1-3, 1863, there were 5,664 men killed on the field, and 27,206 wounded. It was a field of carnage, cruelty and death indeed. Now men have gone back to that same field, many of them bearing their scars and wounds with them, not to cause or call up pain, or sorrow, or anguish again, but purely on pleasure bent. This is life. Often that which has been the hardest in doing comes to be the most pleasant in memory.

It is sometimes hard now to give the dollar, make the sacrifice, suffer the inconvenience of the time for the cause of our Christ. But the day will dawn when all these hardships, all these scars, these wounds, will be pleasant to remember. "It will be pleasant some day to remember" these—trials, troubles and tribulations endured for righteousness' sake.

Wherein Is Life.

We mortals naturally love life. We cling to it. It is sweet. It invites. We loath to give it up. We hate to die. How wonderfully true this is may be surmised from a statement just given out by the National Association for the Prevention of Tuberculosis.

Within the last five years five hundred distinct fraudulent cures have been tried upon credulous consumptives. The promoters of these "cures" have reaped a clear profit of $50,000,000. The Association estimates that $20,000,000 is invested in manufacturing and exploiting these fake cures for tuberculosis and that the annual income to these concerns is $15,000,000. It is estimated that not less than $10,000,000 a year is taken as a profit, "blood money" from ignorant consumptives. And it is highly probable that if the members of the Association who make these estimates were "taken" with consumption they would themselves join the great host who thus spend their money seeking a cure from this dread disease. The fact that no cure has been found and settled upon causes a casting about by the suspect to find a cure if possible at any price. All of which justifies the well-nigh universal fact that we mortals love life and shrink from death. Is it not strange though that we will pay so much for the life that now is, short as a hand-breadth, flitting as the moments, and give or do so little for the life everlasting, the life that shall never end? And that life is sweet indeed and is a gift. (Psa. 133:3).

Nobody's Business (?)

The brilliant editor of The Louisville Courier Journal, Col. Watterson, can't see what business people have with whether Col. Roosevelt drinks, or does not drink, nor why there should be a trial for libel about it all out in Michigan. "With what purpose is his proceeding and to what end? Whether he drinks wine or beer or cocktails or mint julep—or doesn't drink at all, might be said in a sense to be nobody's business but his own. Surely nobody is concerned except the immediate circle around him." Col. Watterson forgets that Col. Roosevelt, in a large measure, belongs to the public. He is in the public eye. He serves the public. He wants to be esteemed by the public. Therefore that public calls him to account. And for that reason Col. Roosevelt went all the way to Michigan to vindicate his name and to seek to prove his sobriety. But there is a far deeper fact than all this. That fact was proclaimed centuries ago and set down for us in Holy Writ: For none of us liveth to himself, and no man dieth to himself. (Rom. 14:7). A man's influence and example extend beyond the "immediate circle" around him and goes out to persons and places we know not of. Therefore, under God, we are each concerned in the sobriety, the integrity, the virtue, the godliness of all. Col. Watterson simply asks the question of Cain, "Am I my brother's keeper?" And the whole Word of God, combined with the virtue and wisdom of the ages, declare that we are.

EDITORIAL

A CALL TO ACTION.

In the Missionary Convention at Waynesville, N. C., last Saturday, Dr. W. W. Pinson, Executive Secretary of the Foreign Mission Board of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, made an appeal for a special offering for missions, declaring that unless something was done a large part of the work by their church in foreign fields would have to be abandoned. In response $140,000 was given in cash pledges, one church in Atlanta pledging $20,000. That is business. That is the King's business attended to in royal fashion. A man with his heart burdened and bleeding for a great cause made a plea, the people gave heed, and piled up the money. Of course they did. The people always respond to a person with a cause behind him and with his heart breaking with a desire to help and save others.

Here is the weakness with us of our Christian churches. We have not got under the missionary burden. We profess to be a missionary people, but we are not doing the missionary work. We want to share the missionary joy, but will not take up the missionary task. We know full well that God requires us to do this thing. But we remain listless; we turn the deaf ear; we are indifferent.

We abandoned much of our missionary work in the foreign field. We are not sending out any missionaries and are calling home, or keeping at home, many of those we did send out. Have you heard of any burdened souls, any clarion calls, any bleeding hearts amongst us on this account? Not much.

We do not know how others feel about it, but as for the writer's part, he feels that the backward step, the retrenchment, the retrogression in our foreign mission work the past four or five years has been the most egregious blunder, the severest blow, and the greatest hinderance to our Christian church that has befallen us in a quarter of a century.

Let it be understood that this writer, THE SUN's editor, regards our present methods, and continuous attitude thereto in dealing with the great subject of foreign missions as puerile, heartless, and unpardonable.

Here is a theme for men. We are dealing with it like children. Here is a cause to engage the wisdom of angels. We are indifferent to it. Here is an issue upon which, as upon no other, the progress of the church depends. We are listless and asleep as touching it. Here is that in which our Lord Christ is leading. Our response and our following are insignificant. We must come to it, beloved. Every man, woman and child in the Christian church must be brought face to face with the missionary cause; and the burden of evangelizing the pagan millions must be laid upon our hearts. In our attitude to that burden will be found the progress or the regress of the church for the next quarter of a century.

What hope is there that every individual amongst us will this year hear a missionary message, and be urged to contribute something to missionary undertaking? Little indeed. The missionary measure is an individual measure. Individuals who are interested must take the matter up and carry it home to individuals who are not interested. What if every man, woman, and child in the churches of our Southern Christian Conferences could this year hear an intelligent plea for missions, be brought face to face with missionary needs and privileges, and then be given a chance to make a free will offering for missions! What would happen? Our conviction is that our offering to missions would be increased ten fold, and all would be the happier, and the church would move forward for the task.

Missions are no longer a theory, they are a problem, a duty, an obligation laid upon the church. And be it said forever that the church which shrinks back, or fails to do its part in solving this problem, to that extent commits suicide, inflicts destruction upon itself.

As sure as the sun shines, beloved, we have got to put first things first. We have relegated missions to the rear and they belong in the foreground. God cannot prosper a non-missionary people and keep His word. Missions must occupy first place amongst us before we ever come into our own.

HIS FATHER'S SON.

Virtue as well as vice, virtue rather than vice, may be transmitted from father to son. The world's greatest evangelist, the most successful man on earth in persuading men to accept Christ as personal Savior, is "Gypsy" Smith. This man of so much heavenly power was born in a Gypsy's tent and reared as a wandering Gypsy lad. He lost his mother when very young, but remembers her song of victory as she lay upon her dying bed, and went out to meet her God. But the Gypsy boy had a praying father; has yet a praying father; and though the boy is now a man known by fame wherever the English tongue is spoken, and honored by the great and small, rich and poor of all English lands, he has not forgotten his humble, pious, godly father.

Here is attribute this Gypsy recently paid his father that is beautiful to contemplate:

My father is like a tree planted by the rivers of water, still bringing forth fruit. When I go to see him I kneel at his feet, as I used to do when I was a boy, and say: "Daddy, give me your blessing. All that I am I owe, under God, to the beautiful life you lived in the old gypsy wagon." And with a radiant, heavenly smile on that noble old face, he answers, with tears of joy in his eyes, "God bless you, my son! I have never had but one wish for you, and that is that you should be good."

Many fathers wish only for their sons that they may be great, famous, rich, renowned. Few, indeed, are they whose only ambition for their son is that he may just be good.

THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH IN CHINA.

We wrote in these columns recently of the significance of the missionaries in China moving in the matter of church union. We doubt if SUN readers have yet realized the full meaning of this movement. In the Missionary Review of the World for July the editor of that journal writes of the conference and the movement as follows:

John R. Mott, representing the Edinburgh Continuation Committee, held five sectional conferences with the missionaries in various parts of China, and, finally, March 11 to 14, conducted a national conference in Shanghai. Delegates came from the churches of the whole nation, and canvassed the results so far obtained in the evangelization of the Chinese people and the principles upon which the further development of the missionary enterprise in that land must be prosecuted. There were 120 mission representatives, two thirds foreigners and one-third Chinese.

The conference spoke with positiveness in favor of a single missionary church in China, eliminating all Western denominational lines. Even pending actual organic union, it was urgently recommended that all churches should discard every distinctive name and assume only the single title, The Christian Church in China. Churches which already enjoy intercommunion were urged to combine at once, while federation, local and provincial, was recommended where churches felt unable to surrender denominational peculiarities. A hymnal for all union churches and a book of prayer for voluntary use in public worship were ordered prepared by committees appointed. It was also recommended that the Chinese be received to a share in the administration of foreign funds used for the support of their churches; that church buildings as far as possible should be built on ground not owned by the missions; and that Chinese congregations should be encouraged to send representatives to local and district organizations in which missionaries have no part.

The boards at home were urged to send only the most thoroughly trained and educated missionaries, men and women, already tested as to their ability to acquire a foreign language. No candidate should be considered qualified for any form of mission work in China unless he is regarded as capable of assured success in similar work at home. All workers entering China for the first time should be sent out for a period of service as itinerants in the field, in order that they may become thoroughly acquainted with Chinese conditions. Schools for instruction of missionaries in language were recommended in Peking, Canton, Nanking, and Hankow.

NOTES AND PERSONALS.

—Rev. J. W. Patton is in a revival at Liberty and is hopeful of a successful meeting.

—The Ministers' Council of the North Carolina and Virginia Conference meets at Elon College July 8th. The theme for discussion is Evangelization.

—Raleigh formally opened its $85,000 new Y. M. C. A. building last Sunday, thus removing from itself the unenviable distinction of being the only capitol in the U. S. without a Y. M. C. A. building.

—We trust all our women readers, and some thousands of the dear men also, will read that brief, but pointed, and practical and powerful contribution this week, "Facts for The Women," by Mrs. H. W. Elder, a member of our Woman's Missionary Board of the Southern Convention, from Richland, Ga. Sister Elder certainly does not waste words, but comes to the point at once.

—Sunday-school Superintendents should see to it that their schools are represented in the Sunday-School and Young People's Conventions convening this month. From these Conventions much is to be learned, and much inspiration obtained for the local school. The Conventions at Haw River, Randleman and Suffolk should all be well attended and will result in great good if they are attended.

—Dr. Staley and the Suffolk church had a missionary rally day last Sunday. Brethren, we are beginning in a measure to take note of our missionary indifference and to make some effort to wake up. If every church in the Southern Conferences will have a missionary rally day and give the people a chance you will see something doing for missions that is worth while. We must get under the missionary burden and realize the missionary needs.

—We acknowledge receipt of the following: Mr. and Mrs. Hugh M. MacAlister announce the marriage of Miss Mary Lou Pitt to Mr. J. Callaway Robertson on Thursday, June 26th, 1913, Lumberton, N. C. At home after July 24th, 203 Linden Avenue, Suffolk, Virginia. We wish for the newly married pair years of happiness. Rev. Mr. Robertson is pastor of Oxford Methodist church, Suffolk, and Miss Pitt has been for some years one of Elon's most popular and beloved music teachers.

—Rev. J. U. Newman, D. D., preached for the Burlington people Sunday last, the pastor, Rev. A. B. Kendall, D. D., being in a meeting with Rev. L. I. Cox, at Reidsville, N. C.

—We acknowledge receipt of the following: Prof. and Mrs. W. P. Lawrence announce the marriage of their cousin, Cora D. Lawrence, to Mr. James G. Anthany, Thursday, June 26th, 1913, Elon College, N. C. At home

High Point, N. C., after July 1st. We extend our best wishes and heartiest congratulations to these splendid young people.

—Will the Secretaries who are preparing programs for the Young People's and Sunday-School Conventions now about to be held kindly bear in mind that we have our own publishing house now where these programs will be as neatly and as cheaply printed as they will be any where. Don't wait till the day before your Convention meets to have your programs printed and then be driven, by the necessity of negligence, to rush to some local house a few doors off to get your printing done. Send along the programs, give us a little time and we will deliver the work in good shape. Try us.

A FEW REMARKS.

—We may, or may not, think much of Secretary of State Bryan's peace plan here at home, but already fourteen nations have approved and adopted it, China being the last.

—Aviators get killed, but others equally as bold carry forward the work of navigating the air. Recently a Frenchman flew from the suburbs of Paris to Berlin, a distance of 674 miles, in 457 minutes.

—A copy of the A. and M. College catalogue, Raleigh, N. C., just received, shows an enrollment the past year in that institution of 669, with 310 in the several courses in agriculture. There were 59 graduates.

—Illinois has enacted a law allowing women to vote on all statutory measures—the largest State in the Union allowing woman suffrage on so sweeping a scale. "The cause" goes forward in spite of the antics of the militant suffragettes. This is the tenth State to adopt woman suffrage.

—The world's greatest living evangelist, Rev. Gypsy Smith, is to begin a meeting with Alabama's famous evangelist, Bob Jones, in the Sam Jones tabernacle at Cartersville, Ga., Sunday, August 3rd. The miracle of the age on the religious platform is Gypsy Smith and fortunate indeed are they who come under the haring of his magnetic voice and won't the hearing of his magnetic voice and won't.

—One of the significant gatherings of our time, and one that indicates a great moving forward in moral lines is thus told of in the dispatches of June 29:

Washington, June 29.—With the purpose of taking the last step necessary to crush out the international traffic in smoking opium, cocaine and other noxious and habit forming drugs, representatives of nearly all the Nations of the world will gather at The Hague next Tuesday to continue the international conference which adjourned in that Capital January 23, 1912. The purpose of the present gathering is to ascertain whether a sufficient number of Powers will join in ratifying the International convention looking to the suppression of the opium traffic, drafted by that conference to insure its successful operation.

Opium has long been a cause of serious international conflict, China and Great Britain having gone to war on the subject in 1904, when the "Opium War" finally resulted in the cession of Hong Kong to Great Britain. The recent movement for the suppression of the trade in habit forming drugs is American in origin.

—The Charlotte Observer, in noting that Postmaster General Burleson is going to put Thomas Jefferson's head on the new issue of postal cards, suggests that it would be very appropriate to place Mr. Cleveland's head on the postal cards for some time. Which indicate that the Observer does not believe Cleveland has had all the honor due his greatness as President and statesman. As the years pass the name of Grover Cleveland looms larger and larger on the horizon; and in all human probability when the true and accurate history of our country is written Cleveland's name will stand right beside that of Washington, Jefferson, Jackson and Lincoln and will not suffer in comparison with these. The greatness of a great man is not manifest in his own day, nor in the succeeding decade, and may be long obscured by prejudice and passion; but it comes to light as the years roll by and as God wills.

FROM OUR MISSION SECRETARY.

Ishinomaki, Japan, June 7, 1913.

Editor of THE CHRISTIAN SUN:

Dear Brother—Just a few words from Japan. With Dr. Woodworth I am spending a few days in and around Ishinomaki, trying to understand the field and work. Miss True and Pastor Irokawa are keeping us well occupied. Yesterday afternoon a hard driving rain gave us some rest, but was supplying the land with needed moisture. In the evening all four of us went to a spacious farm house in Takayashiki, a mile or more west of Ishinomaki, for service. In spite of inclement weather Pastor Irokawa had a Sunday school (on Friday afternoon) of thirty children, and in the evening there were probably fifteen adults and a dozen children present. I had a chance to speak, and Dr. Woodworth and Pastor Irokawa followed to really set the truth before the people, as no foreigner can do who is not conversant with Japanese modes of thought and language. (Frequently I have noticed that the interpreter starts with my last word and proceeds backwards in rendering my thought. A few days ago I was puzzling over a Japanese sentence with "interlinear" translation, and completely failed to untangle the thought from what seemed to me a jumbled-up order of words.

Of course no one can estimate the results of such meetings as the above mentioned. From that home came a young man who is now pastor of our new Tokyo church. All the people present last evening seemed open-minded and receptive. I wish that I could picture the home just as it appeared last evening, but that is impossible.

In a little more than a week the annual Mission meeting will be held, and any itinerary among our churches will practically close. Good interpreters have hindered me from saying unwise and foolish things to the people, and the missionaries have kept me from doing unwise things. The missionary microbe is working in my system with unwonted vigor, although I must admit that flea bites operate somewhat as counter-irritants. Often I long for ability to speak Japanese.

Congratulation on the great improvement in THE CHRISTIAN SUN since it got into its own home.

Let the friends remember to give and pray for the Christian work in Japan.

Sincerely yours,

M. T. MORRILL,
Foreign Mission Secretary.

"THE SECRET PLACE."

Deep in the middle of the ocean the waters quietly lie, though the wildest tempests are raging above, and the fiercest currents are running. Over the tortured and plunging waters of the cataract there lies unmoving, though its particles are in perpetual flux, the bow of promise and of peace.

So over all the rush and thunder of life there may stretch, radiant and many-colored, and dyed with beauty by the very Sun Himself, the abiding bow of beauty, the emblem and the reality of the divine tranquility.

The Christian life is continual warfare, but in it all, "the peace of God which passeth understanding" may "garrison our hearts and minds." In the innermost keep of the castle, though the storm of war may be breaking against the walls, there will be a quiet chamber where no noise of the archers can penetrate, and the shouts of the fight are never heard.

Let us seek to live in "the secret place of the Most High"; in still communion with Him, keep our inmost souls in quiet, while we bravely front our enemies and our difficulties. We are to be God's warriors; let us see to it that we neglect not "the secret place" the stronghold of poise and strength.—Living Church.

FIRST OF ALL, LIFE.

All that a minister says and does is "less than nothing and vanity," if there is not in him some of that Life which is "the light of men." Pre-eminently this is a case of biogenesis. He may give his fellows information about the past ages and bygone worthies, about the Bible, Sinai and Galilee, Moses, Jesus Christ, St. Paul; he may impart notions critical and philosophical, and instill prepossessions and aversions; but unless he gives them an impetus amounting at its highest to a "new birth," he does little for them in the religious sphere. A minister serves by communication—the communication of his own inner life. "My minister had the bread; he had knowledge of life's supremest values and an experience of life's victorious forces; he brake the bread, and giving thanks shared it with me. To beget truth in my inward parts he must needs be true. He had to love me before I learned love, or if not me personally he had to love in such obvious sincerity that my fire kindled by mere proximity. If he had not done that for me, why trouble to heap on the fuel?" Never was there an age when the need of ministry was greater than to-day. there is abundance of fuel, but too many fires look like dying.—Rev. W. G. Tarrant.

NOTICE! NOTICE!

The Young People's Convention of the Western North Carolina Christian Conference will hold its annual meeting with the Randleman Christian church July 25-27, 1913.

The Sunday school at this church has extended to the convention a cordial invitation to meet there, which invitation the executive committee has gladly accepted; and we feel sure that with Randleman as our meeting place we can have one of the best conventions ever held in the Western Conference. That the convention may be a success I want to ask that every pastor and also every Sunday school superintendent begin now to make plans and have every school within the bounds of the conference represented. A large delegation is one of the very necessary things that go to make a convntion a success. Brethren, please see that your school is represented in the Randleman Convention.

Yours in the work,

J. F. MORGAN, President.

THANKS.

We were robbed, but were not left to bear it alone. We want, through this medium to express our appreciation and render our thanks to the following friends who came to our relief: A check of $10 from a very dear friend, a check of $1.75 from Hon. Samuel L. Adams, of South Boston, Va., 1 ham from J. H. Smith, not a member of any church, 50 cents from G. W. Barker, and offering in cash from our congregation at Clinton. To all of these we render our hearty thanks, and pray God's blessings upon them.

Theirs gratefully,

P. T. KLAPP.

FROM OUR CONTRIBUTORS

DR. WICKER TRAVELS.

Dear Editor:

On Tuesday morning, June 17, I left home for the meeting of the Sunday-school Board of the American Christian Convention and travelled by the Southern to Lynchburg, Va., thence by the Norfolk and Western to Cincinnati, Ohio, reaching there at 7:20 A. M., June 18, thence by the Big Four to Dayton, Ohio, where I arrived about 10 o'clock A. M. I was met at the station by Dr. J. P. Barrett and Bro. Netum Rathbun and conducted to the Christian Publishing House where I met the members of the Board, Mrs. E. L. Goodwin, Boston, Mass., Rev. W. O. Hornbaker, B. D., Albany, Mo., Rev. McD. Howsare, Eaton, Ohio, Bro. Hermon Eldredge, Erie, Pa., and later in the day Rev. S. Q. Helfenstein, D. D.

The Board proceeded to business and held a busy session for the entire day with only one hour for dinner. The study and adoption of modern methods of Sunday-school work was considered and many important steps taken for the future of our work.

The Front Line Standard was modified and approved, and it was decided to have wall certificates printed and sent to all schools to stimulate them to strive to attain this standard of excellence. When the several points have been reached, the Secretary of Sunday-schools will sign and seal the certificate and enroll the school as a Front Line School.

It was decided to adopt Preparation for Teaching by Oliver as a first Standard Course and Preparing the Teacher by Harper and others as an Advanced Standard Course, of teacher training. When teachers' diplomas are issued by the International Department the Secretary of Teacher Training, Pres. W. A. Harper, LL. D., is to attach the official seal of this department. All examinations for diplomas in teacher training are to be held under the direction of Pres. W. A. Harper, Secretary of Teacher Training.

All certificates issued by the International Sunday-school through the State associations to Adult, or Secondary Bible Classes must be sealed by the Secretary of Sunday schools for the A. C. C. or by the Secretaries of these departments. Stickers of the proper color will be used for these certificates.

Bro. Herman Eldredge was requested to prepare a folder containing the work done by the Board, by which the entire Convention may be informed in regard to the work for the future in our Sunday school efforts. It was decided to give more space in the Officers' and Teachers' Journal to modern methods and to devote a part of the space devoted to the Sunday school department in the Herald to Sunday school methods.

The question of Graded Lessons was discussed but the Board thought that graded teachers, teaching and methods applied to the uniform lessons would accomplish more good than the adoption of a graded lesson system.

The question of improving our Sunday school literature was discussed at length, many suggestions were made in regard to saving time and expense by not duplicating the work of note writing and comments by using the same matter for the Teacher's Journal, the Herald, and the Adult Bible Class Quarterly rather than having this work done by three men in three forms; but no definite action was taken to become effective at present. Perhaps recommendations on this point will be presented to the next meeting of the Quadrennial Convention. There were various other questions considered but the results of our meeting will be fully set forth in the Herald and in the folder prepared by Bro. Eldredge.

After the meeting, I remained over at Dayton for a few days visiting friends, and spent a most pleasant time in the homes of Bro. Netum Rathbun and Rev. J. P. Barrett, D. D. During my stay in Dayton, I had opportunity to see some of the effects and marks of the great flood and judging from the present high water marks, the destruction of property and the masses of ruins of splendid buildings, I am confident that the newspaper reports could not have been far wrong except in regard to loss of life. That was even heavier than the official reports would indicate.

On Friday afternoon I took the Erie train for New York City, traveling on the Pullman Car, Broadway, for twenty four hours a distance of eight hundred miles. Modern travel has been worked to a fine art. Everything is done for comfort and convenience that thought, training and culinary art could accomplish. Passing from the Great West along south of the Great Lakes through western plains along the fertile valley of the Susquehanna which is enclosed with beautiful, picturesque mountains made a most delightful journey for part of the trip. Then the more picturesque mountains along the Hudson to New York made a delightful study of nature. On my way, I stopped over Sunday with Mrs. Ella Hurst, of Middletown, N. Y., who is the eldest sister of Rev. J. U. Newman, D. D., and spent a very pleasant visit and had the pleasure of visiting one of the most beautiful little cities nestling among the hills and mountains of New York State.

Monday, June 23, I came to New York City secured my transportation to Zurich and return, Cook's travelling Cheques for the safe and convenient handling of money in foreign countries, and requested envelopes sent to a number of friends who might like to write to me during my absence. When everything was in readiness to sail I secured lodging at a hotel in Hoboken, N. J., so as to be convenient to the Ryndan which sails at 10 A. M. tomorrow, June 24th.

ELON'S BOARD OF TRUSTEES.

It is the custom of the Board of Trustees to meet during each annual commencement season. There are eighteen members of the Board and thirteen of them were present at the session which met in connection with the twenty-third commencement exercises. This was the largest number ever to be present at any one time and the session was considered the most satisfactory by many of the members. Those present were: Dr. W. W. Staley, Dr. J. W. Wellons, Rev. W. G. Clements, Dr. P. H. Fleming, Dr. G. S. Watson, Dr. R. M. Morrow, Col. J. E. West, Brother Willis J. Lee, Brother K. B. Johnson, Brother J. Beale Johnson, Brother C. A. Shoop, and Brother D. S. Farmer. Dr. J. Pressley Barrett, Brother Wm. H. Jones, Jr., Brother G. W. Truitt, Brother A. T. Holland, Brother John A. Mills, and Col. E. E. Holland were not able to be present, much to the regret of their colleagues on the Board.

It has been my pleasure to serve with a great many boards of good men for various purposes, but I have never seen a finer body of business men met together than Elon's Board of Trustees and they are at the same time devoted followers of the Master. They serve the College without money and without price, even insisting on paying their own travelling expenses, and their counsel is almost perfect in its accuracy and absolutely unerring in its consecration to a high service. The Christian Church is fortunate in having as the policy-makers of its College a body of men like this, with whom it is a joy to meet and work out plans.

The Board heard Rev. L. I. Cox's report as treasurer with great pleasure, showing the receipt of $73,242.21 from all sources during the year and disbursement of $72,228.24 for all purposes, with all current expenses paid, $7,656.75 being paid on the Special Fund indebtedness and $27,694.52 expended for improvements of a permanent character during the current year. Of course Brother Cox was unanimously re-elected for another year.

The President's Report showed progress along all lines and suggested problems needing the Board's attention, to which they gave generous and strict heed. The enrollment during the year totaled 358, which it will be the pleasure and the privilege of the friends of the College to surpass next year, if they can, and they can. Daily they are sending in names and writing letters and making trips and doing personal work with this very ambition in view. So long as Elon's friends work as they now are, they will continue to see their College grow and prosper. And they know that every word they speak is appreciated here and supplemented by our poor effort and earnest co-operation.

Two problems of grave import faced the Board of Trustees and they decided, as I am sure the future will prove, wisely. The first problem was proper housing for the Young Ladies Co-operative Boarding Department. Last year, tho' inadequately housed, this department furnished living expenses and laundry for $70.70 to each inmate and brought the College some twenty-five earnest, energetic, studious young women, full of ambition and of the Elon spirit, but even the house they last year had was not available to them. The Board decided to erect a modest building to accommodate forty-four for next year. The other problem was an adequate water pressure. The old wooden tank on the roof of the West Dormitory did not hold but 10,500 gallons and so left no reserve in case of accident or fire. Besides it was decaying and becoming unsafe. The Board decided to erect a 50,000 gallon steel tank on a hundred foot steel tower. These two decisions were wise and necessary and will mean much for our College and the Church it endeavors to serve.

CHURCHES, CONVENTIONS, COMMENCEMENT.

Many things of interest have transpired among my churches since I last wrote. Union (Virgilina), Mt. Auburn, and Pope's Chapel observed their annual memorial day, during the month of May. All of these services were well attended. I have found that churches having these annual services are helped by the same. The cemetery is more neatly kept, many who are gone from the community are kept in closer touch with the church by this annual gathering. Then, too, it has the tendency to keep in mind a proper reverence for those who have been faithful in the past in all good works.

In July all my churches hold their 3rd quarterly business meeting. Some elect a pastor for another year or take steps toward same. The election of a pastor annually is a custom I doubt the wisdom of, but inasmuch as it is done by most of our churches, it is a great mistake to defer so important a matter till in the Fall near conference. In this same month series of meetings begin. Mt. Auburn, Liberty (Halifax) and Fuller's have meetings in July. Virgilina and Pope's in August and Liberty in September.

I had the very great pleasure of attending recently the Young People's Convention in Burlington and two sessions of the Woman's Missionary Convention at Elon College. Then, too, through the goodness of my faithful people at Virgilina I had a Sunday off and remained over for Elon College commencement.

Brother Kendall and the Burlington people are unsurpassed in their hospitality. The Young People's Convention was a success as planned. No finer array of scholarly speakers was ever gotten together at any gathering of our church. And yet, while not assuming the role of a critic, I was impressed that the field of work undertaken was too broad. The primary purpose or purposes of the Convention were not specific enough to insure best results. This mistake I believe will be eliminated by changes suggested and made during the recent session.

The Women's Missionary Convention marks a new era in the mission work of the Christian church. I wish that one representative from every local church could have been there. This Convention impresses me with the great responsibility upon the pastor of the local church. The pastor must take the lead. The organization of a Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary society in each local church is dependent largely on the pastor. Our people do not always follow readily; but when they realize that we are in earnest they gradually become more interested.

Elon College commencement was great. Everything about the institution gives expression of an era of prosperity. The president, faculty and students were all in fine spirits and everybody felt welcome. To us who knew the institution in the days of struggle, the present Elon is marvelous. But those struggling days have been rich in results. They tested and proved for all times the loyalty of our people, and convinced for all times that we could do things though not so many in number nor rich in purse. Eternity alone can reveal how much as a church we owe to those apparent dreamers or visionary men of the '80s who saw the needs of the church and had faith in the possibilities.

A SIGNIFICANT GATHERING OF MEN.

The annual banquet of the Inter-Church Association of Greensboro was held last night, June 24, in the banquet hall of the Y. M. C. A. One hundred and forty-four men were present. I was happy to be one of them. The repast was a sumptuous one given by the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Y. M. C. A.

Mr. J. Norman Wills, Pres. of the Merchant's Association, presided as Toast Master. The following men responded:

Rev. Earl J. Harold, Secretary, Annual report.

Mr. E. P. Wharton, Pres. Chamber of Commerce, subject, "Community Welfare as an Assistant to the City."

Dr. J. I. Foust, Pres. The Normal College, "The Child and Municipality."

Dr. J. P. Turner, "The Value in Men and Money of an Adequate Health Department."

Mayor T. J. Murphy, "The Municipality as a Foremost Agency in Social Service."

A. W. McAlister, "A Voice in the Wilderness."

Rev. Egbert W. Smith, Nashville, Tenn., "Co-operative Christianity."

Clarence Poe, Raleigh, N. C., "Greetings from the North Carolina Conference on Social Service."

Dr. William Louis Poteat, Wake Forest,

"The Leadership of the Church in Social Service."

The significance of the gathering was "Church Unity." Points of Church Unity are, service-work, and common good to fellow-man. Each man spoke briefly and to the point. Dr. Smith said it was the most significant gathering he had ever attended in this city. (This is his home city).

Mayor T. J. Murphy said in the course of his remarks, "A half century from now, I expect there shall be but two great denominations, the Catholic church and the Christian church." He did not refer to our denomination, and it probably did not occur to him at the time that there is such a one; but he did mean to refer to the great spirit for which our denomination has always stood, and in that I think his prophecy is correct. I can hardly believe that denominations will so lose their individuality or identity, but I do believe that this great spirit will prevail, and we will all be one even as He and His Father are one. One of the significant signs of the times is that all Protestant missions of China have united and are satisfied to call themselves, "The Christian Church of China." This is more significant when we know that our denomination has no church in China and no part in this union as far as I know. The fact is, it must be this way, and the time is coming when the great spirit of the world must be the same.

Our Inter-Church Association, of Greensboro, stands for civic righteousness, purity, child-welfare, and co-operative Christianity; and the seventeen white churches of this city are thus laboring together to these noble ends. Greensboro is a clean city now, comparatively; but the result of the co-operative spirit among the churches is going to be a great power in mutual helpfulness and uplift, and aids to law-enforcement. Yea, rather citizens some day will observe the law through desire and brotherly love, rather than police enforcement.

H. E. ROUNTREE.

DAMASCUS, (GATES COUNTY, N. C.)

Lest some should forget this community, or perhaps think that it has ceased to exist, it is thought well to let the outside world know what has been going on in this section for some months past.

Just before the last Annual Conference, which was held at this place, the church was overhauled, and painted. A new organ was bought and paid for, and other improvements made on the church yard.

Rev. H. H. Butler, of Suffolk, Va., was called to serve the church this year.

The church took up a regular collection for the Orphanage at Elon College about Thanksgiving day. Later it took up a special collection for the work at Chapel Hill. It has not missed a regular preaching day so far this conference year on account of bad weather.

In the Sunday school it seems to be doing very good work. Or it seems to be the consensus of opinion that they now have the best Sunday school in the history of the church.

At Christmas time a treat was given the younger members of the school. The second Sunday in June was observed as Children's day, and a collection was taken for the Orphanage again. At the Sunday school the attendance is good for a country church, the attention and interest seem to be increasing, and the collections are very good. The school is planning to have a picnic later in the summer.

The revival in this church is to begin the Monday after the first Sunday in August, and it is expected that Rev. Mr. Ryan who was here some years ago will assist the pastor.

A Missionary Society has been organized among the ladies, and this is the first one in the history of the church so far as we are informed. They have some very good members, and it is hoped that it will continue to grow.

The Ladies' Aid Society, or the young people's meeting, is doing good work. It meets once per month with some member, and the dues are collected, all of which are applied to some work of the church.

During its history it has raised a good deal of money for the different purposes of the church, besides getting the young people of the church interested, and giving them something along the social line at the same time. It seems that the reason it is so hard to get young people interested in the Church is because the older people do not think that the young people can do anything. If they can be gotten to work the problem is solved. X.

BARACA NATIONAL HYMN.

(Following is the hymn of the Baracas. It is sung to the tune of "America." Cut it out for your scrap book.)

Baraca's name we take,
All forms of sin forsake—
We pledge our word,
We have a common tie,
'Tis love and sympathy,
And by our lives we try
To serve our Lord.

We have no other sword
Than God's own Holy Word
In which we trust.
It makes us brave and true,
Gives us the spirit, too,
By which we dare to do
For Jesus Christ.

Then let Baracas cheer
From churches far and near,
All join and sing;
How God hath used our class,
To bring great things to pass
Until in heaven en masse
We'll crown Christ King.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

Those expecting to attend the approaching session of the Sunday school and Young People's Convention of the Eastern North Carolina Christian Conference which meets with Pope's Chapel church near Franklinton, N. C., will notify Herbert Holmes, Youngsville, N. C.

Please state whether you plan to come by rail or private conveyance. Those coming from the South will come on Monday. The following trains will be met—North bound No. 12 due about one o'clock P. M., and the "shoo-fly" due at 6 P. M. Those Coming from the North may come Monday P. M. on No. 11 due at 3. P. M. or on the "shoo-fly" Tuesday morning.

Remember the time of meeting. Tuesday and Wednesday after the 3rd Sunday in July.

All visitors will be welcomed just as members of the Convention. C. E. NEWMAN.

APPRECIATION.

To the members and friends of the North Carolina Christian Conference: I wish to take this method of expressing my heartfelt appreciation and thanks for the financial aid, prayers and other kindnesses which you have so kindly rendered me during the past year. To one who is preparing for more effective work in God's ministry, these kindnesses are as welcome as is rain to the parched ground. To each and every one of you I pray that God will send a rich blessing and that all gifts, all prayers may be returned unto you a hundred fold.

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENTS

NORFOLK LETTER.

The Third Church Sunday-school enjoyed its annual picnic last Thursday at Ocean View. Every family in the congregation, with the exception, perhaps, of one or two, was represented, and it would be difficult to conceive of a day more enjoyably spent. The beautiful location, overlooking the broad Chesapeake, the delightfully cool ocean breezes, plenty of eat, the presence of hundreds of others also upon pleasure bent, and an abundance of opportunities for pastime in various ways; all these conspired to make the occasion almost an ideal one.

Shortly after we had reached the View, Mr. Walter Pitt, a member of our Bible class, most kindly invited Dr. Manning and myself to get in a boat and go fishing with him, an invitation which we lost no time in accepting. Personally, however, I felt just a bit dubious about my ability to hold my own, especially with the Doctor, for he has an especially good record as a disciple of Isaac Walton hereabouts. With reference to Mr. Pitt's qualifications in that respect I was in total ignorance for I had never heard him talk much about fishing, although I saw that morning that he had a look in his eyes which indicated to a careful observer that he at least knew how the thing is done.

Well, we got a boat, with a colored man to row and bait our hooks for us and we set forth. About a half mile off shore we cast anchor and threw out. The tide was right, the wind was setting from the proper quarter, and, according to the ebony oracle who had us in charge, we were just in the nick of time for a handsome "catch." We waited, almost breathlessly, to see which of us should land the first finny denizen of the deep. Manning was toward the bow, I amidsthips and Pitt was seated in the stern.

Some little time passed before there was any excitement. Then I saw Manning sort 'o stiffen up, like, and a look of triumph spread over his face as he began to draw in his line and I knew he had gotten the first fish. Reaching out over the gunwale, so as to let his line come clear he cautiously maneuvered until he had his catch out of water and on deck. Glory, it proved to be a "spot" and was fully four inches in length, but, anyhow, it was a fish, and the first one caught, so the Doctor's record was safe.

It wasn't long until I landed one and then Manning got another, after which we kept almost even until we had each caught ten or twelve, at which point he got ahead of me and kept so till the finish.

In the meantime, what of Pitt? During the first two or three innings, he caught nothing but crabs. Back there in the stern, neither Manning nor I could see very well exactly how many crabs he was getting nor could we tell just the precise time that he stopped. He didn't talk much, we noticed, nor did he make any noise to speak of, so at last I concluded that he was still catching crabs, and thought he might be getting discouraged. Therefore, I spoke a few kindly words of hopefulness to him exhorting him to be patient and to persevere and told him that there was still a chance for him to get a few, and Manning also added a word or two of sympathy.

Well, what do you suppose? 'Pon my word, when the time finally came to quit, and we counted up, Pitt had more fish than I had. With artful skill and cunning, he had been catching fish back there all the time and hadn't let Manning or myself know about it, and there we were thinking he was still hauling in crabs for us to bait our hooks with. Never again will I waste sympathy on a fellow unless I am positively, dead-sure that he is getting crabs and nothing but crabs. This is a hard, "crool, crool, world" and even when he's "a fishin'" a fellow can get fooled.

Mr. Editor, what would you think if you should catch a fish four inches long and thirty-six inches between the eyes? That would surely be "some" fish, wouldn't it. Well, I heard of a fellow catching one of that description though I do not now remember whether Pitt or Manning was telling about it.

Furthermore, Mr. Editor, when are you coming down to take a fishing trip with me about which we were speaking when I was "up to Elon," last month? I shall be so glad to have you come.

Well, our Sunday-school folk returned to Norfolk from their outing, tired, but still rested, and better in every way, I think, for the day's recreation and play. Everything went off nicely, and I think that we all feel that the time was well spent. We live in such a hurry these days and see so little of each other in the main, that such occasions are to be cultivated and looked forward to with pleasure.

HENRY SPENCER BOOTH.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

No doubt the schools of a nation determine in large measure the character and usefulness of its citizens. The great teachers of Greece made a classic nation; of Rome, a military nation; and the professional and business schools of America play a large part in the progress of this country. The theological schools of religious denominations anticipate the pulpit ministrations in the denomination.

The change in the teaching force of schools must necessarily change the results in education. There is no field in which woman has come so nearly into control as in our public schools. There are five hundred thousand public school teachers in the United States and four hundred thousand of them are women. Four women to one man in this fountain head of forming citizens out of boys and girls. It is not necessary for women to vote in order to control the nation. To say nothing of mother influence over children for the first seven years of their lives, these female teachers can fashion the thought, the governing principles of conduct, the morals, and manners of the nation. Besides this, male teachers do not remain in the teaching business as long as the female teachers, and this increases female power over the young. There was a time when the "school mam" was a sort of reflection; now society recognizes her rights and her worth. She has added at least three valuable assets to education; clean premises, clean persons, and clean speech, and these count much in a nation's welfare; for they touch the home, the character and society.

Another thing in modern public education leads one to believe that the religious side of school life is holding its place, if not gaining in the public conscience. Most of the High Schools have at the close of their sessions a regular Commencement. They have exercises of a high order, a Literary Address and a Baccalaureate Sermon. This keeps the religious and the literary in touch with each other and impresses the students and the community with the idea of "Christian Education." There is no way by which we can estimate the extent of influence exerted by these commencements. The diploma elevates the aspiration of parents and of the High School graduate and deepens the interest of the public in public education. When diplomas were so far away from the average home the majority did not even aspire to one; but the public school system has put this much prized instrument within the region of hope for the average home. This will increase the number of college students in the coming years and the whole trend of education will be upward and onward. Our schools are not growing less religious, but more religious; and this army of teachers and pupils is so vast that armies and navies are small when compared with it. The magazines for ammunition do not contain such power as the thought-power in this army of young people; and the votes they will cast will be mightier than the missiles projected by all the guns on land and sea. The female school teachers are the officers that are leading the army that will defend and save the nabages of the nation's leaders. Bronze statues badges of the nation's leaders, bronze statues and granite monuments may perish, but the ideas and ideals which these women put into the minds and hearts of our youth will endure while the stars and stripes wave over a free people.

W. W. STALEY.

WINCHESTER LETTER.

The Memorial service at Timber Ridge, second Sunday in this month, was largely attended. The cemetery there is old and contains a great number of graves. Many friends from the surrounding community and quite a number from a distance came to pay tribute of respect to their departed dead. The large church was crowded and more than a hundred failed to gain admittance. Flowers were distributed on the graves and an appropriate though short, service was held in the cemetery, after which a bountiful dinner was spread for friends and visitors. Owing to sickness, the writer was not able to enjoy any of the latter.

At three o'clock in the afternoon the people again came together for service and the writer tried to preach. Thus closed the day's services. It is well to pause now and then in the rush and hurry of life, to think of those who have gone before, to remember our treatment of them and to still practice the good we did them with present associates, and to avoid the mistakes where we were unkind and ungrateful. It is helpful to recall a mother's love and faith, a father's kindness and wisdom and a friend's sympathy and encouragement. Perhaps not the least helpful feature about these services is the directing of our minds to our own paths and the facing of the question as to where the path leads. We go from these services richer in life, higher in ideals, and closer to God because of the hallowed influences of the day.

The Young People's Convention held with the Timber Ridge church was a great success. Rev. A. W. Andes will write it up for THE SUN so I shall not give a lengthy description here. However there are two things worthy of special mention. One was the active interest taken by some of the young laymen in the work. We are getting glimpses of a more efficient conference organization as these young men come to represent their respective churches and take an active part in the proceedings of the conference sessions.

Another fact worthy of note was the spirit of determination that pervaded the convention. Not many resolutions were introduced by committees but special emphasis was laid upon the fact that the convention was not to vote favorably upon any resolution unless the delegates were going home and carry it out in their local organizations.

Bro. J. C. Bradford, who has been president for a number of years, presided over the sessions with his usual promptness, and kept the business moving, so that the program was executed without any unnecessary delay.

We had a good day at Winchester last Sunday. Owing to inclement weather the attendance was not as good as usual, but those present were interested and plans were laid for more efficient work. The pastor is spending a few weeks among the churches of the conference, raising funds for the church debt. Rev. R. L. Williamson, of Luray, will fill my appointments while I am absent.

W. T. WALTERS.

NEWPORT NEWS LETTER.

Last Sunday evening our church service was given over, for the most part, to the children, who rendered well the program that had been prepared for the occasion. The children greatly enjoy exercises of this kind, and there is something attractive, too, for the grown people, as shown by the number who attend, when these programs are to be rendered. We had a full house. An offering was taken for conference apportionments.

Tuesday, the 17th, our Sunday school had its annual picnic at Buckroe Beach. The weather was fine. We carried a good crowd, and everybody seemed to have a good time. The children would be disappointed not to have an annual outing of this kind. Buckroe is a good place, in some respects, for such an outing, though it is not, in some things carried on, an ideal place for a Sunday school picnic. But most of these sea-side summer resorts have features that, to say the least, are questionable. Attractions are introduced that promise a good time for the young people, and they are entitled to a good time, to be sure, within proper bounds. This leads me to remark, somewhat, on this thought of our young people having a good time.

And this is to be in no spirit of unfriendly criticism or desire to deprive those whose hearts are set on having a good time, of any thing that they should enjoy. But there are some things that are for the world, and should not be engaged in by those who profess to be living Christian lives.

It is unfortunate that young people should ever feel that to live the Christian life means the giving up of too many things that promise them a good time in life. A young lady said to me, "I love the dance too well to give it up for the Christian life." It is said that a young lady once asked Mr. Moody, as to whether or not she might continue to dance if she became a Christian. His reply was, that if she became a Christian she might dance all that she wanted. When she became a Christian, she is reported to have said, "I see now what you mean, I do not want to dance any more." A member of our Sunday school professed faith in Christ recently, and spoke of joining the church. Later she said, "I still want to dance." She has since been dancing but now says that she is not going to dance any more.

Young people need to be shown a vision of their possibility in Christ, in service to Him and in the winning of others for Him. They need to have pointed out to them, that there is nothing that has so much promise in it for a real good time, as in consecrated service to Christ. Surely, as the poet expressed it, "religion never was designed to make our pleasures less."

But the church, while not first of all a social institution, has failed too largely to direct and develop the social life of its young people. The church can not compete with the world in furnishing entertainment and amusement, but the church has a problem on its hands and should not neglect it, that of diverting the young people away from those places that rob them of their spirituality and power for effectual and influential Christian service. How beautiful to see a young life dedicated to the service of Christ and the church, a life that is too devoted to Christ and appreciative of His love and sacrifice to engage in questionable things. It is a great privilege and pleasure to work with young people in the hope of winning them to a life of this character.

Sincerely,

W. D. HARWARD.

PORTSMOUTH LETTER.

The first Sunday evening in June was a time of more than usual interest to the Portsmouth congregation. The entire building was filled to overflowing to hear the brilliant Japanese orator, Rev. Yutaka Minakuchi, who is working under the auspices of the Laymen's Missionary Movement of Virginia. He is a real orator and held the close attention of his audience nearly an hour. His message was along the missionary line and his appeal strong in behalf of the missionary cause. He is a living product of missionary effort and a powerful product at that. He made a profound impression. It is wonderful to see the grasp he has upon the great world problems and the relation that Christianity sustains to them.

To follow him in his thought can but enable one to enlarge his conception of the Christian religion. The average Christian does not realize the greatness of the religion he possesses. If we can but get one good look at the world-wide achievements of the Christian religion we will become strong advocates of the missionary cause.

It is high time that the Christian church was taking this look and waking up to take hold of the great task of the church in earnest. As our Editor so forcefully says, we have not gotten the mission cause on our hearts. There is little giving and less praying for the cause. And when it comes to missionary educational work there is practically nothing being done in the whole southern church. Missionary education is a continuous process. It must reach through the entire and also through every year. One great missionary rally will not wake up even a preacher, much less the other folks. It goes without saying that you have to reach the preacher before you can reach his people and win them to the great missionary cause. I must admit for myself that I have largely been asleep on the question all these years of my ministry. I have been interested, but had not gotten the cause really on my heart, so as to feel the missionary obligation that has all the time been resting upon me and all Christian people. The Lord help me and my dearly beloved brethren to awake, lift up our eyes and look till our hearts shall be wedded to the mission cause. Truly God is calling us loud and strong. He is calling us to the greatest task of all the ages, a place where the life consecrated to God will count for most and produce the largest fruitage. Shall we heed the call?

In conclusion let us remember that while we wait thousands are perishing and that about 700,000,000 people are without a single preacher of the Gospel of Jesus Christ. Is it nothing to me that they have never heard of my Christ? Do I love Him and the people for whom He died? Would I be selfish with the richest treasure that heaven offers to men?

ELON COLLEGE NOTES.

Dr. J. O. Atkinson is erecting a nice residence on the lot between his home and the Winborne house.

Mr. C. W. Montgomery, Business Manager of the Southern Christian Publishing Company, returned from his trip to Troy and other points in Ohio last week. Mrs. Montgomery will spend some time yet with friends and relatives before she returns.

Dr. W. P. Lawrence was prevented from going to Summerfield last Sunday to make an address before the Bethel Township S. S. Convention on account of sickness. We are glad, however, to state that Dr. Lawrence is out again and is recuperating.

Dr. Robert Ramey, of the University of Chicago, one of Elon's warm friends, sent the glad message last week that he had made a donation to Elon's Library in the way of a number of books and that the same would arrive in a few days. This gift is gratefully accepted by the College and will help to make better the now well equipped library of the institution.

Dr. E. E. Randolph, once a professor in the College, was a pleasant visitor among us Monday. Dr. Randolph was indeed a favorite among the student body during his stay here. He is at present holding a position with Erskine College in South Carolina.

"Uncle" Wellons is this week taking his vacation and spending the time with friends and relatives at Selma and Smithfield, N. C.

President Harper and Dr. T. C. Amick made addresses before the Morton's township S. S. Convention at Berea Christian Church near here last Sunday.

A force of carpenters and brick masons are busy at work on the Ladies' Hall building and the indication is that this handsome structure will be ready for use by August 15th.

THREE FAMOUS SAYINGS.

A pamphlet issued by the "World Peace Foundation," entitled "Washington, Jefferson and Franklin on War," recalls to many of us the utterances of these great Americans.

Washington wrote in his "Farewell Address": "My first wish is to see this plague to mankind banished from the earth, and the sons and daughters of this world employed in more pleasing and innocent amusements than in preparing implements and exercising them for the destruction of mankind." In the same tone Jefferson in a letter to Sir John Sinclair, said: "I recoil with horror at the ferociousness of man. Will nations never devise a more rational umpire of differences than force? Are there no means of coercing injustice more gratifying to our nature than a waste of the blood of thousands and of the labor of millions of our fellow-creatures?" In 1783 Franklin gave utterance to the following in correspondence with Sir Joseph Banks: "I join with you most cordially in rejoicing at the return of peace. I hope it will be lasting, and that mankind will at length, as they call themselves reasonable creatures, have reason enough to settle their differences without cutting throats; for in my opinion, there never was a good war or a bad peace."—Our Dumb Animals.

FOR SALE.

I offer my two story, six room dwelling, and farm of 53 acres, almost adjacent to College campus, for sale at reasonable price. A fine location for those wishing to educate their children. Correspondence solicited.

THE CHILD MOSES SAVED FROM DEATH.

Sunday School Lesson for Next Sunday One That Brings to Attention, "The Boy"

Throughout this broad land of ours there are thousands of boys who need a discoverer. just as Moses had—some one to pull them out of the bulrushes of sin where they will eventually perish spiritually if not rescued.

Let's bring it a little nearer home. There are hundreds and thousands of boys in our Southland—in reach of our own Christian churches—that need to be discovered. This is just the work of our Sunday school and Christian Endeavor convention. In every church there are bright boy members of the family who are not receiving the attention they deserve. We are permitting them to find sin more alluring and attractive than the church. These boys need to be organized for Bible study and service. They will follow if the leader will take charge, and eventually be leaders.

Who knows the capabilities and possibilities of a boy or girl? There are so many latent possibilities, so much suppressed energy and enthusiasm in every young person. We need those who will help loosen these in the right direction. Oh, I wonder if some day we shall not have to answer for our almost criminal carelessness with reference to the boy and the girl.

The Lesson in Brief.

The date of Moses' birth is doubtful, recent authorities ranging from B. C. 1578 (Beecher) to B. C. 1300 (Petrie and Breasted). The Pharaoh of Egypt was probably Rameses II, the great builder. He belonged to a new dynasty, and the favor which the old dynasty had shown to the Hebrews was changed to oppression. The cry of the new party in power was "Egypt for the Egyptians!" They sought to drive out all Asiatics and destroy all Asiatic influence. This is the key to the transformation in the condition of the Hebrews that led finally to the exodus.

The Hebrews were growing rich and strong, and were correspondingly feared and hated by the new rulers. Therefore they were set to servile labor, and made to build the great store cities of Pithom and Raamses (Rameses). These were in the land of Goshen, where the Hebrews lived, east of the Nile Delta. Pithom was discovered in 1883 near the Suez Canal, and Raamses ten miles further west.

The most severe item of oppression was the command that all male children of the Hebrews should be killed, so as to ensure the absorption of the race by the Egyptians.

Moses' father was Amram, his mother Jochebed, and his elder brother and sister were Aaron and Miriam. He was placed in an "ark," or basket, of bulrushes, i. e., papyrus reed, which grew along the Nile. Its thin layers were spread out and pressed together to make a very inferior paper. Our word, paper, is derived from papyrus. The "slime" with which it was daubed to make it watertight was bitumen. Skiffs thus made were in use on the Nile at the time. The basket was laid among the flags or reeds at the edge of the river to keep it from floating down-stream.

The Egyptian princess was expected to bathe in the secluded spot, for it was a custom and a sacred duty to bathe in the holy river. Her attendants kept guard by walking along the bank of the river. When the babe was found it was known to be a Hebrew child from its fairer skin, or its features, or because only a Hebrew mother would thus hide her child.

Moses may have remained with his mother for several years. The name, Moses, means "drawn out," "brought forth," and there is a pun in the name, as if the princess had said, "This is my son, because I brought him forth—out of the water."

"SPEAK NOT EVIL ONE OF ANOTHER."

This the Subject for the Christian Endeavor Service on July 13th.

Let the leader talk of the power of speech. Tell how it distinguishes men from other animals. Language is the basis of progress and civilization. How wonderful is this power of communicating thought. While wonderful, it is likewise terrible. A single word may wreck a life. How often does an unkind word to a member of the family make the whole day a blue one. A kind word in the morning may make the whole day full of melody and song for a loved one.

Harsh words stab as do daggers; kind words are like balm to the worn body and tired heart. Ugly words will provoke difficulties and make enemies. A soft answer will turn away wrath and make friends. Do not use expressions that are capable of misconception. If you do unwittingly, and discover it, explain at once. Sometimes friends are alienated because of an expression misunderstood.

The story is told of a man who came to his office one morning feeling as gay and happy and healthy as ever he did in his life. He did not know that the others in the office had conspired against him. When he walked in the janitor said, "Mr. Jones you are not looking so well." To this he answered, "I am feeling fine." As he went in the office the boy said "You must not be feeling well." Soon another man in the office said "Sorry you are looking so pale this morning," and Jones admitted that he wasn't feeling well. A caller was given the tip and he remarked on going out "You are looking fearfully bad this morning." Jones looked at himself in the mirror, and as it was nearly the noon hour went home. Discouraged by the remarks he had made, his wife observed his worried expressions when he got home and asked what was the matter. In a little while he was in bed and sending for the doctor.

OUR YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK.

Perhaps many of us felt that our Young People's work was less stressed in the Mass Meeting than its importance warranted, but we are interested and are hoping for, and expecting, telling results the coming convention year. Already we have a number of live societies, and as soon as the Conferences all secure the appointment of Superintendents of Young People's work the mechanical part will be better understood and so the interest will be increased. In the meantime I trust that the work of organization will go steadily on.

Now just one word of explanation. If you have a Conference Y. P. Superintendent, send your local society's quarterly reports to her and your money, with instructions as to what it is to be used for, to the Treasurer of your Woman's Conference Board. But in case your conference is yet unorganized in Woman's Work, then send your reports direct to me and your money to Mrs. W. T. Walters, Winchester, Va., the general Treasurer. Write to Mrs. W. A. Harper for report blanks.

If you want instructions about the details of the work, either local or general, write to me and I will try to answer promptly.

Watch this page for general information and inspirational matter.

All Young People's Missionary Societies of whatever name and all Willing Worker's Societies are included under this department. A few children's societies have been organized under other names, but as the above is the adopted name for the children's societies of the Southern Christian Convention we would appreciate the adoption of the same by all.

I trust that all will be prompt and careful in the matter of making reports, both local society officers and Conference Superintendents.

Remember, young people, that in the care of our Santa Isabel work we have a responsibility to share together with the young people of the whole denomination, and we want to loyally and liberally do our part. In any specials which we undertake we will bring blessing both to the cause helped and to ourselves as well.

Instructive and intensely interesting mission study books await our attention. Let us not waste time but immediately get busy in the Master's cause which we love.

FACTS FOR OUR WOMEN.

I was asked by a Baptist lady of our town to assist her in getting up some references on Women's Work in olden times. In doing so I find we are so far behind that I thought a few facts might help our women just a little.

Of course, I know some think there is no place in the church for women, except a seat, and I know, too, that some women don't have much showing at home, and if they had to learn from their husbands, they would not be suitable to teach at Sunday school. But others think and act differently.

We want to use a few Bible facts. It seems that God has not changed like people, for when the tabernacle was to be built, every man and woman had a chance to give something for that cause. Read Exodus 35:22, where the men and women who were willing-hearted brought of their jewelry and placed it on the altar of God for service. The women did not stop here. (Exodus 35:25) "And all the women that were wise-hearted did spin with their hands and brought that which they had spun * * * ." Exodus 36:3, "And they brought yet unto his free offerings every morning." Just think of it. Women having time to work and bring something every day. How sublime!

We read on further where they brought so much more than enough for the work. Wouldn't that sound good to some hard pressed church builders of today? Did you ever hear of a building committee sending out a report, saying, "It is enough. Stop the people from giving." Yet that was done; they had to be restrained from giving.

I am sure God wants His work done in decency and in order, and I am sure, also, if we use the Bible plan it will be done. Is it because people are poorer than they were then, or are we more ignorant? There must be some cause. Almost every issue of THE SUN brings an appeal for help, for some church just must have help in building. The pastor feels it a necessity and puts forth a strenuous effort, but, alas! When completed, the first notice is that funds are short. What a pity! God's work; God's chosen ambassadors, and the building in debt. Oh! What is the trouble? Some one tell us, quick.

Did you men have a mind to work? Were your women willing to give of their jewelry? Are the men of the church doing all they can, and is the responsibility on us women? If it is, it is a fearful responsibility.

Dear fathers and brothers, have you given as God wants you to? Have you laid by on the first of the week as God has prospered you? Have you made the promise, if the Lord would prosper you, give you plenty to eat and raiment to wear, that you would give Him the tenth? If you have, then woe unto the women, for there is a tremendous shortage somewhere. Has the edict gone forth: Let neither man nor woman make any more for the house of the Lord?

Dear members of the church, don't take what I have written as your guide, but read the book of Exodus; pray over the situation, and I am sure good will come of it. Taking ten hours per day, suppose every member of the church would give the proceeds of one hour, what would the results be? Would our Mission treasury be empty? Would the pastor have to walk twelve hours per day trying to get people to subscribe so much for building new churches? No, indeed. When the burden of building was laid on the pastor's heart, he would not have to lie awake at night praying for a way to open up, for the way would already have opened up.

Dear friends, the time is short; we are only here on probation. Let us not be workmen that need to be ashamed. Will God have to take our talents and give to another? Have you got jewelry that you love better than you love the Lord? Do you love your rook parties more than the prayer-meeting? Do you love your games more than the house of worship? Remember, if we have money to keep these up and do not give to the church of which you are a builder, that will be rejected in the last day. We can spend dollars for amusements, but how it hurts to give quarters to the church. We are put here for a purpose. Let us build here so we will be a part of the building not made with hands.

NOTICE!

As has already been stated in THE CHRISTIAN SUN by President J. F. Morgan, the Young People's Convention of the Western North Carolina Christian Conference will meet with our church at Randleman on Friday before the last Sunday in July. An excellent program is in preparation which will appear in THE CHRISTIAN SUN next week.

I shall mail blanks for reports to all Sunday schools by July 15th. The Secretaries will please fill out the reports completely and accurately and either send by the delegates or mail to the secretary at Randleman so as to be in hand at the first session of the Convention.

The amount of money required by our constitution is two cents per member of our local convention and one cent per member for the general Young People's Convention, or in other words, three cents per member enrolled, officers and teachers included.

Let every Sunday school, every organized class, every Christian Endeavor Society throughout the conference begin now to plan for this Convention. Prepare your report, see to it that the dues are sent along with the report and, more important still, be sure to have your delegates representing your Sunday School, Organized Classes and Christian Endeavor Societies each present throughout the entire sitting of the convention.

Let everybody pull together for a good Convention. Give us full reports; lend us the presence of your representatives. If your Sunday school is succeeding you owe it to the Convention to give to others your experience. If your Sunday school is not alive then by all means send delegates to the Convention in order that they may catch that inspiration which will enable them to put life, system, and organization into the local Sunday school and churches.

Yours for a greater Convention,

R. C. Cox, Secretary.

THE TOUCH OF HUMAN HANDS.

Among the hills of Galilee,
Through crowded city ways,
The Christ of God went forth to heal
And bless in olden days.
The sinning and sad of heart
In anxious throngs were massed
To catch the Great Physician's eye
And touch Him as He passed.

We have not in our hours of need
His seamless garments pressed,
Nor felt His tender human hand
On us in blessing rest;
Yet still in crowded city streets
The Christ goeth forth again,
Whenever touch of human hand
Bespeaks good will to men.

Whenever man his brother man
Upholds in helpfulness;
Whenever strong and tender clasp
A lonely heart doth bless,
The Christ of God is answering
A stricken world's demands,
And leading back a wandering race
By touch of human hands.

WITH OUR YOUNG PEOPLE.

We have just finished the task of helping make out a program for the Young People's Convention of the Western N. C. Conference. The outline is rude and the execution of this program is another stone unpolished. When we say the execution of this program far more is meant than to have each speaker present. It means putting into operation all good suggestions, lining out the resolutions made, profiting by the experience of other schools and making a claim on the young people of the S. S. for the church and for Christ.

Not only in the Conference which we have mentioned is the task before the young people to make well in its program, but in each Convention of the Southern Christian Convention. Never has the door of service been opened so wide to our young men and women, and never has the attractions of the world been so great and alluring. A great challenge confronts us. The church is making its pleas and the social world is making a desperate effort to use the best manhood and womanhood to be found.

In view of these facts the church stands in jeopardy, and the church that fails to give its young people something to do must suffer soon. I will cast my vote as many times as the average man to give the hoary head a place in the S. S. and in the Church; but when a young man is willing to work and wanting to make himself useful and active, my cry is ever to harness him up and put him to work. I may be pardoned if I say the young people in our church are not as active as the young people of other churches. I may be mistaken in this assertion, but figures are rather on the low scale.

This summer, the summer of 1913, is the time for our young people to rally and do things that will count. This is the time that every S. S. should be presented and a great and good gathering planned for the Master's work. Begin now and make the resolution that your school shall be represented in the Convention and the cause of the kingdom strengthened by your efforts. Begin today, work through the morrow, through next year and be found on the battle line when He bids you go hence. C. B. RIDDLE.

WITH MY CHURCHES.

Children's Day was held at Cypress Chapel last fourth Sunday. The work was well done. The children all did fine and everybody enjoyed the services. We want to thank all who took any part whatever in getting it up. They deserve the praise of all. May the children continue to improve until they shall find themselves, indeed, men and women, a power in the church for God.

Our protracted meeting will commence at Damascus on the first Sunday in August. Rev. C. C. Ryan, of Vaughnsville, Ohio, will conduct the meeting, the Lord willing. We are looking for a glorious revival of religion.

The meeting will commence, the Lord will, at Cypress Chapel the fourth Sunday in July. We are expecting a good meeting at that place. We do not expect any ministerial help, unless some preacher will kindly drop in with us. I hope someone will call to see us during that week. We will surely give him work to do. We cannot promise him anything else.

Antioch is making improvements on her house of worship, which will be a beauty when completed. We want all the members and friends of the old church, which is the mother of churches, to come up to her help. Brother, sister, don't wait to be invited to help; you know your duty. Come like men and women and do your duty. God help you to act now

Our meeting will commence at Oak Grove, Gates Co., N. C., on second Sunday in August. We are expecting a gracious revival of religion at that place. They are a working little band for Christ and His cause.

H. H. BUTLER.

TO THE ALUMNI OF ELON COLLEGE.

Dear Fellow Alumni:

The initiative taken by the class of 1913 in establishing an Alumni Association Fund followed by the unanimous action of the Alumni Association, in committing itself to the task of paying for what is now known as The Alumni Building, was a great step forward in the right direction. There has long been a feeling among us that the association should do something permanent for our "Alma Mater," but the time had not seemed ripe for action until the present. To accumulate funds with which to erect a creditable building would have taken years. The task of paying for one already built is easier and affords us an unlooked for opportunity of showing our interest in the college and our loyalty to its material advancement. The plan is easy and within the reach of all our members. It is as follows: give a note running ten years, with ten annual payments bearing interest. All of which is to be applied on the first cost of the building. The rent of the rooms in the building will pay the interest on the investment. One member from every class has been selected to co-operate in carrying out the above plan. It is hoped that the members of every class will cheerfully respond to the call of their respective leaders and thus enable each class to bear its share of the obligation.

With the extension of membership to all who have taken college work, our numbers have been greatly increased, making the task we have assumed far less difficult of realization. I do not believe there is a body of Alumni in America that loves its "Alma Mater" better than we love Elon College and in making this appeal for your co-operation in this great work, I know I am appealing to men and women who love the institution and who are willing to express that love in a substantial way, even though it may mean some sacrifice. We want every one of our number to have a part in the work and shall look to every one for a hearty co-operation in the movement.

Thanking you in advance for your interest. I am with best wishes,

Sincerely yours,

W. T. WALTERS, Chm. Com.

APPRECIATION.

Sometime ago Sister Sallie Renn, of Liberty Vance, who has been afflicted for the past two years so as to be a part of the time confined to her room, in the goodness of her heart undertook the work of doing something handsome for her pastor's family. As a result of her labors Mrs. Newman and myself are the recipients of a beautiful and valuable memory quilt. May the Lord reward sister Renn and those who assisted.

WANTED AT THE ORPHANAGE.

There is needed at the Christian Orphanage, more help both in the kitchen and house work. The larger girls assist and do much, but women of experience in cooking, in house keeping, in sewing etc., are needed. Applicants should address Rev. E. M. Carter, Supt., Elon College, N. C.

Children's Missionary Stories

STORIES are—yes, must be—used by every wide-awake worker among, or leader or teacher of, children.

MISSIONARY STORIES seem to have been the one field well-nigh overlooked until Mrs. Alice Moreton Burnett, Corresponding Secretary for the Woman's Board for Home Missions of the Christian Church, made a compilation of thirty interesting, instructive stories pertaining especially and directly to missions that are sure to be appreciated by workers, teachers, leaders, pastors, fathers, mothers—and the children.

Some of the Important Events of both Home Missions and Foreign Missions are also included, together with Suggestions For Junior Leaders.

They make a book 5 x 7 inches in size, 128 pages, red cloth binding—a handsome, attractive volume. Price 35c per copy postpaid.

SEEKING CHURCH UNION.

The Protestant Episcopal Church in October, 1910, appointed a Commission to bring about a Conference for the consideration of questions as to the faith and order of the Christian Church, in the hope that such a Conference will promote the cause of Christian Unity. That Commission is inviting all Christian Communions throughout the world which confess our Lord Jesus Christ as God and Savior to unite with the Episcopal Church in arranging for and conducting such a Conference. More than twenty such co-operating Commissions have been appointed, including all the leading Communions in the United States and the Church of England in England and Canada. Invitations are now being sent to other leading Communions outside the United States as fast as the names and addresses of their officers can be obtained. The Episcopal Commission is publishing leaflets, explaining the scope and methods of the Conference, and giving a list of books on Christian Unity, and those leaflets have been circulated all over the world. The Commission is glad to send them free to any one who will apply for them to the Secretary, R. H. Gardiner, Gardiner, Me. He has received probably ten thousand, or more, letters on the subject, coming from every part of the world and from members of every Communion, Protestant and Catholic. Persons applying are entered on a permanent mailing list, so that they will receive all future publications.

The Episcopal Commission is trying to carry on the undertaking in the spirit of Bishop Brent, who urged, at the meeting when the Commission was organized, that the side of organization shall not be made too prominent, but that we shall seek spiritual power. The first step shall be, in a new and full and deep way, to rededicate ourselves to God, free from past prejudices, in order that, so losing ourselves, we may have a spiritual power simply compelling.

Ministers and lay men and women in North Carolina to the number of 124 have already been brought together, at least to the extent of enrollment on the list, which is arranged geographically so that those who are interested enough in Christian Unity to apply to be placed on the list may obtain the names of others in their neighborhood also interested, with whom they can meet for united prayer for the reunion of Christians and for conference as to how it can best be brought about. The list includes Disciples of Christ, Congregationalists, Baptists, Episcopalians, Presbyterians, Moravians, Reformed Church in the U. S. and Roman Catholics. The Executive Committee of the Commission of the Episcopal Church, of which the Rev. W. T. Manning, D. D., Rector of Trinity Church, New York, is Chairman, has recently issued a circular letter urging such local conferences. The World Conference may not be held for a number of years, for it will be a long undertaking to get the approval of all the leading Communions all over the world, though the project is being received with great cordiality.

HEALTH.

The vacation season is here, so be careful. Yes, we mean just that—be careful. The summer resort dangers are many and should be avoided. Two very important matters to be looked into are flies and water supply. The summer resort keeper whose houses or cottages are not well screened and who does not keep the flies out of his kitchen and dining room and the mosquitoes out of his bedrooms is not a safe person to patronize. Shallow wells in close proximity to outdoor toilets are also dangerous.

The summer days are here. Take good care of your ice box. Keep it clean and sweet all the time. A good way to do this is to wash it, say, once a week with boiling water containing a little soda. Also be careful to keep it free from stale and decaying foods of every kind. Scrupulous cleanliness is the only way to avoid the danger of ptomaine poisoning and even the lesser intestinal disorders that are caused by eating soured, stale and partially decayed foods.

When listening to advice from a mother who tells you that she has buried three children and knows something about raising babies, better find some mother who has her children still with her and let her tell you how she saved them.—N. C. State Board of Health.

Senator Works, of California, has introduced an amendment to the Constitution of the United States, prohibiting the manufacture, sale, or importation of distilled alcoholic liquor except for mechanical, scientific, or medical purposes. This would allow the use of beer and wine.

It was my privilege to be with Rev. J. S. Carden and his good people at New Hill last 4th Sunday. The occasion was Children's Day. A large crowd and a very pleasant day's service, indeed. The choirs of New Elam and Christian Chapel took part in the music and, to say it was grand would not express it. Bro. Carden preached at 11:00 o'clock, and I at 2:00; at which time I presented the needs of the Orphanage and received a liberal response, as you will see in the report.

We have a better showing, this week, in the amount of dues paid. I wish more of the children would become interested.

One is making application for a Mite Box. That gets the "ball to rolling"; now who else think they would like to have one.

Mr. Woodard reports about seven tons of hay (vetch and oats). And, we have, in the garner, 266 bushels of wheat. This is just about enough wheat to do us nine months. We will need 100 bushels more. Now, I would like to make this suggestion: while those of our country churches have their wheat put away, nicely, for their use, it would be easy for them to make up this amount for the Orphanage.

They can do this and never miss the wheat from their garners. One of these churches has already a number of bushels of wheat promised—this is one of the churches that is standing to us all the time—and we hope to be able to go for it in a short while.

The Sunday school at Ingram, Va., having assumed the obligation of caring for a child, sent this week, 3 dresses, 1 pair shoes, 1 hat, handkerchiefs, hose, 2 skirts, 10 yards of cloth. Besides this, they send two dollars each month. Some other school might do this well.

VACATIONS.

That summer is no more a dream, but a reality, admits of no argument. This is the time when many of our busiest folks are seeking rest. Hence they are missed at Sunday school for they are away on a vacation. When this is the case we have smaller collections for the Orphanage; and we would remind the good people that the needs here are as great now as when the school is full and money is plentiful. Now, would it not be the thing to do, before you are away for the vacation, to take a special collection and send to us that our expenses may be met? It might help you enjoy your vacation more and the rest be more refreshing. The very fact that we have done great things should be a stimulus to inspire us to greater ones. Do this next Sunday and send it right along, remembering that food clothing and everything the children get is furnished them by freewill offerings; and, our only aid is the church.

E. M. CARTER, Supt.

Macon, N. C., June 24, 1913.

Dear Uncle Emory:

Here we come with our five months' dues ($1.25). We are enjoying our rest and freedom, and all the delights of summer—fruits, flowers, and song of birds. What has become of all the cousins? We miss their letters in The Sun. Think we will have to have a general rally.

Well good by till November.

With best love,

HELEN W. SCHOLZ,
HERBERT SCHOLZ, JR.,
ELIZABETH SCHOLZ,
JESSIE LEE SCHOLZ.

Now, isn't that fine, to have so many good things? You make me hungry. Yes, I think a general rally would do us good. I wonder if we can't have a homecoming.

Lawyers, Va., June 23, 1913.

Dear Uncle Emory:

We thought as so few cousins wrote last week that we would write this week. Hope more will write soon. We are going to have Children's Day Thursday at the church. We attend Sunday school at ———. Enclosed you will find 10 cents for each of us. Wishing you all much success for the Orphanage.

Fondly,

CARRIE DUNN,
BESSIE DUNN,
ROY DUNN,
FLOYD DUNN,
GEORGE DUNN.

P. S. Send me one of your Mite Boxes and I will get what I can for you.

CARRIE D. DUNN.

I am glad you are so thoughtful and wish many others could realize how much this Department needed. Carrie, you are the first to ask for a Mite Box. I hope you will have much success.

"THE WORDS OF MY MOUTH."

At a meeting of railway secretaries of the Young Men's Christian Association, one man spoke of the boys who play about the railway yards, and how their lives are influenced by the words they hear the older men use. He told the story of a great tree that, when it was cut down, showed near its heart the scars that had been made upon it while it was yet a sapling—scars that must have been made by an Indian Tomahawk, for the tree was well-grown when the first white men came to this country.

"Even so," he said, "I bear in my own heart the scars of words that I heard while I was a child. I would give much to be able to obliterate them. I can remember the day, the spot and all the circumstances when I first learned the meaning of the words that, although I have never uttered them, come often to my memory and almost to my lips. Whoever thus stamps an evil word in the memory of a boy does him a life-long injury. Again and again I pray that the words of my mouth and the meditation of my heart may be acceptable in God's sight."

The discussion that followed showed that others had had the same experience. Every one who spoke agreed that men who work in any capacity upon the railways ought never to forget the presence of boys who like to be about the cars, and who learn good or evil from the words the men speak in their hearing.

We are beginning at last to realize the abiding influence of mere words. Instead of being easy to forget, they are as nearly immortal as anything human can be. Lincoln said at Gettysburg that the world would little note nor long remember what was said there, but that it would never forget what the soldiers had done there. Lincoln was mistaken. His words at Gettysburg will be remembered and cherished when it may be necessary to add a footnote to the address to explain in what war the Battle of Gettysburg occurred.

Words good or bad, have an immortality of their own. We do well to pray both for the words of our mouth and the meditation of our heart.—Exchange.

By executive action the Wilson administration has placed meat and meat food products under the pure-food law, which will make manufacturers of such products comply with the food and drugs act as well as the meat-inspection laws. Unwholesome, adulterated, or misbranded meat or meat-foods make those responsible liable to prosecution.

THE YOUNG PEOPLE'S CONVENTION OF THE VIRGINIA VALLEY CENTRAL CHRISTIAN CONFERENCE.

The above named Convention met at Timber Ridge, Hampshire Co., W. Va., June 11, 12 and 13. The Convention was called to order by the President, J. C. Bradford.

The following ministers were enrolled: W. T. Walters, A. W. Andes, R. L. Williamson. The following churches were represented by one or more delegates: Antioch, Bethlehem, Concord, Leakesville, Linville, New Hope, Winchester, Timber Ridge. There were present three S. S. Superintendents, thirteen S. S. teachers, two Presidents of C. E. Societies, two Presidents of Young People's Missionary Societies, and four delegates from C. E. Societies.

The Welcome Address was delivered by R. A. Larrick, to which response was made by Pres. J. C. Bradford.

The Annual Address was delivered by Rev. A. W. Andes.

"Echoes from the Va. State S. S. Convention" was the subject of a short address by Rev. A. W. Andes.

Mrs. W. T. Walters read a paper on "The Essential Qualification of a Good Teacher."

Rev. W. T. Walters made an address on "The Spiritual Development of the Child."

The subject of "Temperance" had been assigned to Rev. H. C. Moore, but as he was absent it was discussed by several of those present, among whom was Prof. B. F. Sine, who had just been invited to a seat as a deliberative member.

Alva C. Richards of Winchester was elected to deliver the next Annual Address, with E. L. Depoy of Linville as alternate.

The Convention ordered $12.35 set aside to be used in having our minutes printed in a Sunday-school and Christian Endeavor Handbook to be gotten up by the Sunday school and Christian Endeavor General Convention, and to contain the minutes of the S. S. and C. E. General Convention, and the minutes of all the Conventions in the South if they will co-operate. However should the proposed Handbook not materialize then the $12.35 is to be used in having our minutes printed as heretofore.

The session Thursday night was taken up in listening to an excellent sermon by Rev. R. L. Williamson.

"Some Practical Phases of Christian Endeavor Work" was discussed by Rev. R. L. Williamson.

"How to Keep up the Interest in Christian Endeavor Work" was the subject of an address by R. A. Larrick.

It was ordered that hereafter in lieu of reading the reports from the various Sunday-schools and Christian Endeavor Societies the secretary shall make a statistical table and post it during the session of the Convention.

The following officers were elected for ensuing year: Pres., J. C. Bradford; Vice-Pres., Roy Hosaflook; Sec., A. P. Liskey; Assistant Sec., Geo. Mayes; Treas., R. A. Larrick.

Rev. A. W. Andes delivered an address on the subject "What We Should Do in the Mission Cause."

The Constitution was amended, changing the name of the Convention from Young People's Convention to Sunday-school and Christian Endeavor Convention, in compliance with the request of the General Convention held at Burlington, N. C., May 28-30. The membership of the Convention consists of the Christian ministers belonging to or having work within the bounds of the Conference, S. S. superintendents and teachers, presidents of C. E. Societies, and delegates elected by the above organizations on a basis of one delegate for every twenty-five of their enrolled membership, provided that each local organization shall be entitled to two delegates. All the officers of the Convention shall be elected annually. Standing Committees are done away with, and in their stead shall be elected annually Department Secretaries in the following departments: Christian Endeavor, Normal and Teacher Training, Organized Classes, Home Department, and Cradle Roll. The Program Committee shall consist of the President and Secretary, and one other to be chosen by them. Every organization connected with the Convention is asked to contribute two cents per member annually upon its entire enrollment for Convention expenses.

The Treasurer was authorized to pay the membership fee of $5.00 to the Conference Missionary Association, and to pay $10.00 to the work of the S. S. and C. E. General Convention.

Rev. John H. Barney of the Ray's Hill and the Southern Pa. Conference was present during the Convention, and often contributed to the worth of the Convention by his timely admonition and advice.

There is some evidence of growth in interest in the Convention, and in the work all along the line. Yet some of our churches and people have not seemed to fall in line as they might. As the influence of the Convention widens and deepens throughout the bounds of the Conference we shall expect to see them falling in line. The Convention is attracting more attention each year, and is making itself felt more and more in our work.

The Convention will meet next year at Leaksville, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, including the second Thursday in June.

A BOOKLET.

Atlanta, Ga., June 26,—In the effort to encourage Southern farmers to raise more hogs, the Southern railway, through its Live Stock Department, has issued a booklet entitled, "Hog Productions and Conditions for Success in the South," a copy of which will be furnished on request by F. L. Word, Live Stock Agent, Atlanta, Ga.

The booklet contains much practical and valuable information as to the care and feeding of hogs, selections of breeds, treatment of diseases, and cutting and curing meat. Chapters on each subject have been supplied by experts.

That the South consumes more pork and raises less than any other part of the United States despite the fact that pork can be produced more cheaply in the South than in the North or West, is a well known fact and a condition that greatly impedes the progress of the section. The longer open season and the great variety of food crops at his command give the Southern farmer the opportunity to make more money raising hogs than is possible in any other territory.

The Live Stock Department of the Southern Railway devotes its efforts entirely to stimulating interest in live stock raising in the territory along the Southern Railway and the services of its experts are available without charge of any kind of any farmer or other person interested in live stock.

GRANDPA'S BIBLE.

• Little Mary wanted to learn her Sunday-school lesson. It was Saturday afternoon and the time was passing; but she had been busy with her doll's dress and the lesson was yet unlearned. At length her older sister took a Bible from the bureau and said:

"Come, Mary, I will help you to learn your lesson, and you can go back to your play."

Mary came to her sister's side ready to begin her lesson when she suddenly began:

"Sister, let us study it out of grandpa's Bible."

"But what difference can it make?"

"Why, grandpa's Bible is so much more interesting than yours."

"Oh, no, Mary, they are just the same exactly."

"Well," replied the observing child, "I really think grandpa's must be more interesting than yours; he reads it so much more."

There are a good many young persons who would do well to get a look at grandpa's Bible. Possibly if they would look at it carefully they would find something in it that they have never found in their own, and if they would pray as a Psalmist, "Open thou mine eyes that I may behold wondrous things out of thy law," they would find a blessing in the Word of God such as careless readers never discover.—Little Christian.

FROM THE TYROL.

A most gracious letter from a loyal friend of our work, well known to thousands of our readers, Mr. John L. Stoddard, says: "It is inconceivable that the precious quality of mercy and kindness is not more valued. No child or man can be made gentle, compassionate and merciful to the animals around him, without bringing him measurably nearer to the divine ideal. If one is kind, and considerate of the dumb beasts, he will almost certainly be so to his fellow-men, and that is at least one half of the commandment of Jesus. . . . In confronting the sufferings of helpless children and animals on this blood-stained planet, one meets the most awful and mysterious problem ever presented to him."

A volume of rarely thoughtful and beautiful poems came a little time ago from the pen of this lover of all sentient life. They ring with the musical note of genuine poetry and breathe the spirit of the widest human sympathy. Mr. Stoddard speaks of his home at Meran, as "that pocket of Tyrolean sunshine."—Our Dumb Animals.

Whether viewed from the standpoint of health, accessibility, beauty, moral and social surroundings or freedom from evil influences, the location of Oak Ridge Institute is IDEAL. In the Piedmont hills of Guilford county, 1000 feet above sea level, in view of the beautiful Blue Ridge.

It is in "God's country," away from the distractions and temptations of town or city life, while on the other hand, the quietness, high moral tone and wholesome atmosphere of Oak Ridge, combine every incentive to perfect physical, mental and moral development.

The thoroughness and completeness of the School's work needs but little telling; the success of its graduates is its best recommendation. The classical and preparatory courses are arranged to provide every essential for entering college or university life, while the Commercial School has been the leading training school for the business men of North Carolina, Virginia and South Carolina for the last thirty-six years, and has given the business world thousands of young men highly fitted for book-keepers, stenographers, bank clerks and other position of responsibility. Special advantages in music are also offered.

Our faculty is composed of experienced college-bred men, neither too young nor too old to meet the American boy upon a happy footing of mutual helpfulness.

Athletics is a feature. We have 150 acres of campus; trees, grass, gravel, athletic grounds, race track and tennis courts.

Abundance of sunshine, shade and pure, fresh air. Oak Ridge Institute has held the school baseball championship in North Carolina for 30 years practically undisputed. Our buildings are second to none in the state. Two handsome, well arranged study buildings, and three commodious, perfectly ventilated dormitories. Students may enter at any time. Rate only $250 per session. For illustrated catalog and other literature, address

FREE HELP FOR THE FRUIT GROWER.

The J. Van Lindley Nursery Company, well-known nurserymen of Pomona, N. C., are giving away 10,000 copies of their book "How to Plant and Grow Fruits and Ornamentals." The forty pages of this book are chock full of valuable information on the care of fruit and ornamental trees, shrubs, vines, etc., and besides giving sound methods for making the orchard and garden produce more, illustrates many economical ways to add beauty and attractiveness to the home by the artistic arrangement of ornamental plants, etc. It answers nearly every question necessary to be known in successful flower, fruit and lawn culture. Write for free copy at once, before the edition gives out. J. Van Lindley Nursery Company, Box 207, Pomona, North Carolina. Advt.

Perfect love does not talk about its share; when you really love, you never feel that you can do enough.

SOUTHERN SCHEDULES.

Ashville, N. C., May 7,—Better facilities than ever before given for reaching the tourist resorts of Western North Carolina are provided in the summer schedules and through car arrangements just announced by the Southern Railway.

Beginning June 1, two sleeping cars will be operated daily between New Orleans and Asheville, one via Mobile, Montgomery, and Atlanta, and the other via Meridian, Birmingham and Chattanooga. On the same date the sleeping car service between Memphis and Asheville on trains 35 and 36 will be extended to Lake Toxaway and a through sleeping car line will be established between Memphis, Asheville and Waynesville, the car to be handled on the "Memphis Special." Through sleeping cars between Savannah and Asheville will be put into service June 1, between Charleston, Asheville and Waynesville on June 2.

Greatly improved service between Augusta and Asheville has been arranged. The parlor car service which was operated last year in connection with the "Carolina Special" will again be given and in addition a new sleeping car line will be inaugurated via Blackville and Columbia, leaving Augusta at 11:45 P. M., arriving Asheville at 2:10 P. M., and leaving Asheville at 4:30 P. M., arriving Augusta at 8:20 P. M.

On June 15 a sleeping car line will be established between Jacksonville and Asheville in addition to the car operated between Jacksonville and Cincinnati via Asheville. Daily sleeping car service between Atlanta and Lake Toxaway will be established on June 22, additional trains being operated between Hendersonville and Lake Toxaway to handle this car. Parlor car service on trains 5 and 6 between Asheville and Lake Toxaway will be inaugurated May 25.

Tickets will be on sale June 23 to 28 inclusive. Final return limit to reach original starting point by midnight July 13, 1913.

MARRIAGES

Barbour-Rich.

Elon College, June 26th. At 8:00 o'clock this evening Mr. Hugh Lane Barbour and Miss Bertha Rosebud Rich were united in marriage by Rev. J. W. Patton.

Under the direction of Mrs. J. O. Atkinson and Mrs. Patton, the spacious double parlors at Dr. Atkinson's were beautifully decorated. The nuptial vows were there taken under the arch prepared for that purpose.

Mrs. Patton played Lohengrin's wedding march as the bridal party entered and the wedding march by Mendelssohn as a recessional, and soft music during the ceremony.

The party entered, led by Miss Virginia Rich, the bride's sister, followed by little Gwendolyn Patton and Master J. Oscar Atkinson, Jr., as bower girl and ring bearer, the former strewing flowers and the latter carrying the silver platter containing the ring.

The bride wore a beautiful gown of white meslin.

The number of useful presents attested the high esteem of the large company who attended the marriage.

They left on the west bound train at 9:27 P. M. They are to make their home in Greensboro, N. C.

J. W. P.

Robertson-Pitt.

Rev. J. Callaway Robertson, pastor of the Oxford Methodist church, Suffolk, Va., and Miss Mary Lou Pitt, of Chuckatuck, Va., an Elon College graduate, and for several years a teacher in its music department, were happily married in the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. M. McAlister, Lumberton, N. C. June 26, 1913. Miss Maggie Pitt, sister of the bride, was maid of honor; Mrs. H. M. McAlister, formerly "Miss Ramsay" of Elon College, was dame of honor; Mr. E. M. Hastings, of Ashland, Va., was best man; and the bride was given away by Mr. H. M. McAlister. Just before the bridal party entered, Misses Linda Barnes and Ethel Clements sang "My Dear One." The bridal marches were rendered by Mrs. E. M. Hastings. The bride wore a traveling suit of dark blue, and carried a prayer-book; the maid of honor, white embroidered voile with white picture hat, and carried white carnations; the dame of honor lace robe of apricot satin with white picture hat and carried cream roses. The color scheme was white and yellow, yellow daisies, gladiolas and potted plants being used. Receptions were tendered the bride and bride's maids Tuesday at noon by Mrs. E. L. Holloway; Tuesday afternoon by Mrs. T. A. McNeal, Jr., and the entire bridal party Wednesday evening by Mr. and Mrs. H. M. McAlister. The magnificent colonial home of Mr. and Mrs. H. M. McAlister was joyous and beautiful with its gracious hospitality and the marriage was as happy as generous friends and united love could make it. Mr. Robertson was a popular minister in Suffolk and the bride has been for some years one of Elon's most efficient and beloved teachers. The souvenir ring ceremony was; used by the officiating minister, The Sun's Editor. J. O. A.

Hall-Farmer.

Pleasant Grove church, Halifax Co., Va., was the scene of a happy marriage at high noon June 24, 1913, when Alonzo Cleveland Hall led to the altar Macie Virginia Farmer. The attendants were Nannie B. Farmer, maid of honor, Mr. Arnold Hall, best man; Roy Lovelace Wilson, Claude Fonville, Burlington; Nannie D. Wilson, Elon College; Vitus Holt, Burlington; Bessie McPherson, Burlington; Charlie Powell, Halifax Co., Va.; Mary L. Foster, Burlington, Charlie B. Lovelace, South Boston; Lila Newman, Elon College; John Farmer, Halifax Co., Va.; Maude Pritchard, Chapel Hill; Joe Farmer, Halifax Co., Va.; Ollie Hall, Burlington; Frank Farmer, Halifax Co., Va.; Carrie Boyd, Halifax Co., Va.; Willie Hankins, South Boston; Edna Greenwood, Vernon Hill; Wilson Farmer, Crewe; Ruth Hall, Burlington; Willie Greenwood, Vernon Hill. Miss Lizzie Boyd sang "O Promise Me," and Miss Mabel Farmer played the marches. The father of the bride, Deacon D. S. Farmer, Trustee of Elon College, gave the bride away, little Miss Tune, a perfect fairy for beauty, was ring bearer. The bride wore crepe de chine over chamuse, with bridal veil and carried a shower bouquet of carnations and sweet peas; the maid of honor blue chamuse in train, the bride's maids white lingere dresses with hats to match trimmed in sweet peas. The church was elaborately and beautifully decorated. An ante-nuptial reception was given the bridal party at the home of the bride on the evening of the 23rd and the merry hours amid music, games, flowers and dainty refreshments passed off all too quickly. The bridal presents were costly and abundant. The souvenir ring ceremony was read by the Sun's editor. The bride and groom are well known to Sun readers, are graduates of Elon College, and the groom of Columbia University, N. Y., also, and are exceedingly popular. J. O. A.

DEATHS

Tatum.

Little John Morris Tatum was born December 31, 1912, and died May 26 1913. He was a bright, strong, well grown child and was the joy and pride of loving parents and little brothers and sister. While sleeping this fair child by some movement pulled the large pillow, which held the fly netting over his face and was smothered to death; but in death as in life he was beautiful and child-like, though short, has left its impress and has gone to Him who said—"Suffer little children to come unto me." The many friends of Bro. W. A. and Sister Irene Tatum, the four parents, join in heart-felt sympathy for the loss of this fair child. Burial services by the writer from the home near Disputanta, Va., May 27, 1913, in the family burying ground.

Our Song Books teach the Gospel as fully in Song as our Preachers do in Sermon.

FLAVIL HALL F. L. ROWE S. H. HALL

THE GOSPEL MESSAGE IN SONG

Revised and enlarged by FLAVIL HALL and S. H. HALL.

This book has 205 hymns. The thought of a reformation in song book making prompted its compilation. In it the Gospel is taught as fully in song as the disciples endeavor to teach in sermon. No other such book before it had been published, nor has any other such yet been published, except our other new book mentioned below. The words and music are high class, and as sweet, inspiring and soul-stirring as any published. Published in both round and shaped notes. Out five years and over 60,000 copies sold. Endorsed by leading men and women in the Christian Church. Beautifully bound and printed.

YOUR ORDERS WILL BE GRATEFULLY APPRECIATED AT THE FOLLOWING PRICES: 30 cents per copy, prepaid; $3.00 per dozen, not prepaid; $3.50 per dozen, prepaid; $20.00 per hundred, not prepaid; 50 at the hundred rate.

REDEMPTIONS WAY IN SONG

By F. H. HALL, FLAVIL HALL, and F. L. ROWE

This book contains 115 songs as sweet, uplifting and soul-stirring as ever filled the hearts of the devotees of our "Risen Lord". True to its title—Redemption's Way, in its fullness, fearlessly and specifically presented. Convenient in size for Evangelist in Gospel tent work. The best book for any and all purposes. Published in both notations.

PRICES IN REACH OF ALL: 15 cents per copy, prepaid; $1.40 per dozen, not prepaid; $1.60 per dozen, prepaid; $10.00 per hundred not prepaid; 50 at the hundred rate.

VOCAL MUSIC LESSONS

BY FLAVIL HALL

This book has 25 pages of plain, practical rudiments, and 28 pages of soul-stirring music. These songs are selected with a view to having practice material. Teachers of vocal music should, by all means, have this book for their classes. Besides theory, it contains some very important lessons for the church regarding Vocal Music. Prices: 10 cents per copy; $1.00 per dozen.

ELON COLLEGE, N. C., JULY 9, 1913

NO. 28

"IN ESSENTIALS UNITY, IN NON-ESSENTIALS LIBERTY, IN ALL THINGS CHARITY."

OUR PRINCIPLES.

- (1.) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the church.
- (2.) Christian is a sufficient name for the church.
- (3.) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
- (4.) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of church membership.
- (5.) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

Editorial Briefs

Self-Condemed.

A man was on trial in New York recently for stealing a package from an express company. "I was given the package by the company's agent to hold, and when he turned his back I walked away with the package." The prosecuting attorney without calling a witness said to the prisoner, "Look into the face of your judge and see if you think he believes your statement." The prisoner obeying and seeing the just, steadfast eye of the judge on the bench, said, "I plead guilty." So likewise when we stand before the Judge of all the earth, the One steadfast and all-seeing eye, no further witness, attorneys or jurors will be necessary, and the guilty will acknowledge his guilt, and, self-condemed, will accept the verdict as wholly and absolutely just. Psa. 9:8, "And he shall judge the world in righteousness, he shall minister judgment to the people in righteousness."

Unfulfilled Prophecies.

Various prophecies in Scripture were fulfilled in the coming of Christ to the world, but not all. There were many prophetic visions and declarations that looked far beyond the coming of our Lord to the world, and are yet unfulfilled. One of the notable ones is Jer. 23:3, 4: "And I will gather the remnant of my flock out of all countries whither I have driven them, and will bring them again to their folds; * * * and I will set up shepherds over them which shall feed them; and they shall fear no more, nor be dismayed, neither shall they be lacking, saith the Lord." The remnant driven into all countries (the Jews) have not yet been gathered, but they will be, for God's purposes and plans work out in the world though they be far off from mortal gaze or comprehension. The Jewish tribes, as well as other tribes of all the earth must be brought to a saving knowledge of our Lord and Savior.

Conventions.

The pilgrimage across the continent to Los Angeles by the Christian Endeavor hosts for the 26th annual International Conventions calls to the fore the fact that more people will go further for their religion than on any other account whatsoever. There are political conventions, labor conventions, manufacturer's conventions, and all the rest, calling together their thousands, but Christian Endeavor and Sunday-school Conventions call together their tens of thousands. There have been as many as 56,000 persons present at one Christian Endeavor Convention. And in individuals journey across the continent at their own expense for the joy and satisfaction of attending these Christian gatherings. We sometimes get it, altogether erroneously, in our heads that religious assemblies are the most poorly attended and poorly conducted of all assemblies. The exact opposite is the true status of affairs.

The Sunny Side.

Many will not agree with ex-President Taft in his religious views, nor subscribe to his doctrinal nor political creed, but all will applaud him for his happy, hopeful, cheerful disposition, and his ability to smile and look on the sunny side. At the Yale Alumni banquet Mr. Taft is reported as saying, "It has been a great comfort to me to be next to the President of Princeton. I went to Princeton when President of the United States to help inaugurate a President of Princeton, and, some time later, in Washington, I assisted in a similar function with a President of Princeton. You may not believe it, but I had great pleasure at both functions." Mr. Taft has not seemed to manifest the first feeling of resentment to the people who defeated him, nor of envy or jealousy to the President who succeeded him. He was cheerful in defeat and is happy in retirement. In this particular at any rate the defeated chief executive manifest that which Paul called the chiefest of virtues: 1 Cor. 13:4, "Charity envieth not."

Our Brother's Keeper

The courts are constantly driving home the ancient philosophy, the common experience, and the eternal verity that we are our brother's keeper. A plaintiff in court the other day recovered $150.00 damages for a tooth broken in trying to bite a piece of mince pie purchased in a restaurant. The plaintiff claimed that he was lured into the eating place and to purchase the pie by an advertisement over the door reading, "Mince Pies as Mother Makes Them." The pain from the broken tooth and the mental anguish over the insult to his mother's cooking were possibly not compensated even by the award of $150.00, but the court held that the restaurant keeper was responsible for what went into his pies, and that failure to look after his customer's safety was just cause for penalty. The pure food laws are based upon the principle which this court was acting upon, and though ludicrous in its setting is another declaration of the utterance in Rom 14:7, "For none of us liveth to himself, and no man dieth to himself."

Other Friends.

Our heavenly Father so arranged it that we should go, not by companies and communities, but at intervals one by one. Was not this done in wisdom, and in love, so that we might have friends over yonder to attach us to that land and life, as well as some friends here to unite us to this. An elderly Christian woman said to this writer not long since: "I would love very much now to go and join my friends and loved ones on the other side. I have more friends there than I have here, for they have been going one by one since my girl-hood, and most of those I have loved best have already gone. I would welcome the Master's summons to go and meet them just as soon now as He sees fit to invite me up higher." Gradually, by transplanting our loved ones, our Father takes our affections off of things below and centers them on things above. So our Savior, when He had won the affections and admiration and lasting friendship of His disciples said, "It is expedient for you that I go away" (Jno. 16:7). By that He meant they would run faster, steadier, with more safety and zeal the race before them, because He himself had gone on before and would be awaiting them as a dear Friend at the end of the journey.

Comrades and Soldiers.

After fifty years soldiers in blue and gray met at Gettysburg last week. It was a costly experiment. The heat was terrible. The money out-lay was enormous. The veterans, used now to conveniences, comforts and luxuries, many of them, and deserving them all, were put to bodily hardships and endurance. Some died. But the achievements were well worth the price. It was a glorious event, and though purchased at a tremendous expense, is not to be regretted. Far from it. The sentiment of the occasion was sublime. The spirit of patriotism ran to high tide. It was clearly demonstrated that the last vestige of sectional bitterness and of a divided country has disappeared. On the scene of former struggle the men who had opposed each other in deadly combat, not only shook hands, but embraced each other in the mellow light of happy and softened memory. But besides all that former foes, now friends forever, said and did, the reunion was worth its while to evoke the manly and most noble utterance of President Woodrow Wilson, the closing paragraph of which is: "I would not have you live even today wholly in the past, but would wish to stand with you in the light that streams upon us now out of that great day gone by. Here is the nation God has builded by our hands. What shall we do with it? Who stands ready to act again and always in the spirit of this day of reunion and hope and patriotic fervor? The day of our country's life has but broadened into morning. Do not put uniforms by. Put the harness of the present on. Lift your eyes to the great tracts of life yet to be conquered in the interest of righteous peace, of that prosperity which lies in a people's hearts and outlasts all wars and errors of men. Come, let us be comrades and soldiers yet to serve our fellow men in quiet counsel, where the blare of trumpets is neither heard nor heeded and where the things are done which make blessed the nations of the world in peace and righteousness and love."

Northwestern University figures that a college education costing $2,400 increases by a total of $25,000 a man's earning capacity. His increased enjoyment of life and enrichment of character cannot be estimated.

Wellesley College has received $400,000 toward its endowment.

EDITORIAL

A WORD IN SEASON.

A word in season not only saves nine, but often saves a future and makes a career. True there are many words spoken to us that we never remember, but we are what we are today because of words spoken to us by some one or ones. After all words are the weightiest things in this world. They convey ideas, those mysterious indwellers of mind and heart which are the cream, the essence of life. We are ideas, and with the spoken words, the symbol of ideas, we inject our lives into other lives.

Just about this time of year, this most seasonable time then, many young men and young women are forming an idea, creating and cultivating a nation as to their future in the matter of education. "Shall I go to school or shall I not? Where shall I go to school and where shall I not?" The idea is in embryo. It is being born, taking shape, fixing the future, sealing the fate of the one thus debating.

A word in season saves not only nine, it often saves a future and creates a career. Now is the season. This is the day, the hour of opportunity. Every CHRISTIAN SUN reader has influence. All of us have weight with some.

Now is the time to use that influence for weight and worth in the future.

SUN readers know Elon College. They know something of the sacrifice by which it has been brought thus far, the prayers from devout hearts that have ascended, and do daily ascend, in its behalf, the wise and capable Board of Trustees who shape its policies, the efficient and Christian Faculty who daily direct and constantly watch its career and influence, and the hundred and one streams of purity and efficiency that pour into it to make it a Christian and a capable college.

President Harper is now, today, every day, pouring into the volume of its life his own life, his manly energy, his Christian zeal, his wise, consecrated scholarship, his prudent, safe and sane, management. It behooves every friend of the Institution we love, and which well deserves our love, to speak a word for the College now, help Dr. Harper in his stupendous and his most meritorious task of making Elon College the equal of the best institution of higher learning in all the land. CHRISTIAN SUN reader, think for a moment over these things, and of what it may mean in future for you to influence a boy or girl to go to Elon College to share its benefits and receive its blessings. Speak the word in season. Now is that season.

A word in season saves nine, and often saves a future, too, and creates a career.

This is a worthy matter to engage our serious and sober thought. If there be any virtue think on these things.

HIS BEST "PROFESSOR."

Violent winds that bend the giant oaks hither and thither serve, by such process of exercise, to send the roots deeper into the soil and so strengthen instead of weaken the trunk of the blown tree. In similar figure Martin Luther declares he was fitted and strengthened for his great task in life. "It was my temptations and corruptions that best prepared me for the pulpit. The devil has been my best professor of exegetical and experimental divinity. Before that great school master took me in hand I was a sucking child, and not a grown man. It was my combats with sin and with Satan that made me a true minister of the New Testament. Without incessant combat and pain and sweat no ignorant stripling of a student ever became a powerful preacher."

Sin and Satan have their place in the economy of grace, as the howling winds, the furious lightning, and the beating tempests. These are to tempt and test and try the weak to see if they are able to stand, and if they stand, to give them strength and sympathy and safety. Everyone who, being tempted, resists, becomes stronger to do, to dare and to resist. God is doing all He can with the forces of evil, even as with the forces of good, to make us all stronger, better, mightier creatures in Him. We will see one day, even as Luther saw in his mature years, that temptation resisted is our best teacher. We shall, therefore, not despair nor become alarmed when temptation and trial come, but shall live bravely in the hope that a brighter hour and a stouter heart are in the future for us.

RECOLLECTIONS.

Our beloved brother, Rev. David E. Millard, D. D., sends us from his home in Portland, Michigan, a letter marked "personal" but we are willing to violate even the laws of friendship to give our readers the benefit of what he writes. It is so full of suggestion, of tender memories and valuable facts that we are not justified in withholding it and shall crave our brother's forgiveness when we meet again: July 1st, 1913.

Dear Brother Atkinson:

Sixty-one years ago to-day—July 1st, 1852—I received my certificate as a graduate from the Meadville (Pa.) Theological Seminary, and entered at once upon the work of the Christian ministry, to which my life has been devoted ever since. Not a member of the class of '52 except myself, is now living. All of the class of '53 are gone, and of the class of '54 only one—the Rev. George G. Withington, of Massachusetts, remains on the field—the others have all "entered unto their rest." Truly God has dealt kindly with me in sparing me so long to work in His Vineyard. Among my associates, while at Meadville, I recall with pleasure the names of J. R. Hoag, Wm. Bradley, A. S. Dean, T. M. McWhinney, Tyler C. Moulton, B. S. Fanton and S. A. Hutchinson; all faithful ministers of the Christian denomination, who having finished their work, have gone to the "Home over there"—

"Where rivers of pleasure flow o'er the bright plains

And the glory of noontide eternally reigns."

More than one hundred others of my associates in the Christian ministry, fifty years ago, are on "the other shore," where, by the grace of God, I expect to join them soon. The principles of the Christians never seemed dearer to me than they do to-day; and the work and office of the ministry never more inviting. Our schools and colleges and our religious publications, are of the progressive type, and are doing noble work for the cause we love. I still read The Christian Sun, as I have for many years, but never with such interest as I read it now.

Sincerely your brother in Christ,
DAVID E. MILLARD.

THE PRICE OF BLOOD.

In a Young Men's Christian Association building in New York the other day was posted an advertisement offering twenty-five dollars a quart for good, pure, human blood, with a bonus provided the operation of transfusion was successful. Several offered their blood at the price named, that of a Western athlete being accepted. It has long since been established that there are certain diseases which cannot be healed except by the infusion of the uncontaminated blood of man. So likewise was it established by indisputable testimony centuries ago that the disease and pollution of sin could not be wiped out save by the power of the blood. Heb. 9:22, "Without shedding of blood is no remission."

Archdeacon Hudson Stuck, with three companions, reached the highest point on Mt. McKinley on June 7.

NOTES AND PERSONALS.

—Rev W. L. Wells, Columbus, Ga., writes June 30th: "We are in the midst of a good revival. The Lord is blessing us. Will write more about it later."

—Dear Doctor Denison, of Norfolk, has our sympathy in the illness of his little daughter from typhoid fever, and we sincerely trust the recovery may be speedy. We know what the weeks of anxious waiting by the bed of a loved one burning with the slow cruelty of typhoid fever means.

—Rev. H. E. Rountree, Pastor First Church, Greensboro, held special services, of a patriotic nature, for married men at 11 A. M. last Sunday. His theme was "The Test of National Righteousness." There was special music. In the evening the services were 45 minutes long only, as advertised in the papers, and the preacher's subject was "Mountain Reflections of God."

—Bro. J. W. Payne, Corbin, Ala., writing to The Roanoke Leader of July 2nd, says: "This writer, his wife and daughter attended the meeting of the Missionary Association of the Alabama Christian Conference at Antioch, four miles south of Roanoke, Saturday and Sunday. We had a splendid session." This Conference has a mission rally day once a year, and is working along right lines.

—We are in receipt of "The Challenge of Social Service," a booklet of 80 pages, containing six of the notable addresses delivered at the Southern Sociological Congress at Atlanta, Ga., April 25-29th, 1913. The Congress is getting out, in book-form, all the addresses delivered at the meeting named, under the caption, "The South Mobilizing for Social Service." This organization appears to us to be doing some very valuable work along a much needed line, that of calling attention to and studying analytically, social conditions in the South that need improving. The booklet to hand is a valuable publication and shows that men of merit are behind this movement.

—Though our brother, Dr. A. W. Lightbourne, Dover, Del., has been in impaired health, he remains resourceful, active and vigorous in prosecuting his work, as is evidenced by The State Sentinel, of Dover:

Twilight services will commence at the People's Church on Sunday evening, July 6, with a sacred concert. An excellent program consisting of solos, quartettes and choruses, is being arranged, with a number of new selections for the choir that are of a most pleasing character. The music will be up to the usual high standard of this organization. Special rehearsals are now being held.

On Wednesday evening of next week a social will be held in the assembly room of the church, and everybody is welcome. Refreshments will be served. The ladies of the Lend-a-Hand will have charge.

Regular services on Sunday with preaching by the pastor at 10:30 and 7:30 in the evening. Song service in the evening. Morning class at 9:30 led by Mr. Stevenson.

—Rev. A. C. Dixon, of Cleveland Co., N. C., now pastor of the Spurgeon Tabernacle, London, England, is on a month's visit home. Dr. Dixon's theology is of the old type, and he preaches the gospel of the Bible as he finds it there. He believes that the trend of thought now is back to the Bible. He has not found any word that Jesus ever discounted by any subsequent thought advanced by any man of science. "The preachers who are preaching the Bible and 'Christ and Him crucified,' are holding their congregations," Doctor Dixon said last night, "and those who have been preaching the other kind of stuff are losing out." "I am going back to Cleveland where I anchored my faith years ago," he said. "There are many things in common between us. I want to be back there where we think of God alike. We may not have been reading the same things all the time, but we have something alike in God."

—After a brief illness from paralysis Mrs. C. A. Boone (or as hundreds affectionately called her "Aunt Mollie") fell peacefully and sweetly on sleep at her home here, Elon College, last Saturday night and was buried in the cemetery here Monday, July 7. Sister Boone had not finished her work on earth, but had begun it so well and carried it forward so nobly that scores whom she influenced for righteousness and truth will carry her earthly work forward, and so, in completing that which she had so well begun, will pay tribute to her beautiful and unselfish Christian career. Her sons are men of Christian character and influence, her daughters women of exalted piety and thorough consecration, her husband a preacher of righteousness and a true father in Israel. Her influence was all for good, and the community in which she lived is the poorer for her going. Dear Bro. Boone and the other sorrowing ones have the sympathy of a host of friends, and the banks of flowers on mother's grave do but symbolize the fragrance of this life whose sweet influence shall abide the passing years.

A FEW REMARKS.

—Heavy fighting the past few days has been reported between Servians and Bulgarians, the latter having an army of 100,000 men and the former 80,000. The line of battle extended 50 miles. Peace between Bulgaria and Servia seems remote as their differences have grown wider daily.

—We come year by year to a sane "Fourth" of July, but we are a long way from safety yet. There were 41 fatalities reported from various parts this year, the same number as reported last year. It is the irony of fate that more people have lost their lives celebrating the outcome of our Revolutionary War than were killed in that famous seven years' struggle for freedom.

—Racing to break the world's record in a 200 mile automobile run, Harry C. Knight, of Indianapolis, going at the rate of 70 miles an hour was thrown from his car when it blew a tire and instantly killed on the race track at Columbus, O., July 4. The temptation to go faster in this world than common sense and the law allow has lured many a man to his grave before his day.

—The search and seizure law in this State is in operation, when an officer who cares will operate. "Suspecting" that 144 pints of booze were in three express packages directed to three men at Louisville recently, the deputy at that place seized the package at the express office and issued warrants for the men the packages were addressed to. The "suspicion" was well founded and purchasers and express company had their trouble for their expenses.

—We are in receipt of an invitation from the Faculty and Senior Class of the Appalachian Training School, Boone, N. C., to the commencement exercises July 11th. There are fourteen members in the graduating class. It has been said, and we give it approval, that this school does more for the State than any institution under its patronage—for the amount of public funds given it. Miss Bettie Stephenson is a member of the faculty and Elon College has liberally supplied members of the teaching force from time to time.

—In an address before the veterans in their reunion at Gettysburg last week Governor Cox of Ohio said he believed the time had come when the United States government should take care of those who wore the gray as it did those who wore the blue; that there were more Soldiers' Homes in Ohio now than were needed by federal veterans and he was willing to turn over one of these homes for the use of North Carolina confederate veterans. Whether this wish shall materialize or not, the sentiment expressed by such authority is worth thinking over. We have indeed come upon a better time, and the sectional prejudice of former days has passed away forever.

THE DANCE-HALL EVIL.

The Bureau of Social Hygiene, of which John D. Rockefeller, Jr., is chairman, in its first report on vice conditions in Manhattan, gives considerable attention to the dance-hall evil. The following paragraphs are quoted from Mr. Kneeland's report:

"The public dance hall was found to justify the worst that has been said of it. Of seventy-five dance halls reported, only five were characterized by the investigators as decent. Nor are these dances attended only by hardened profligates. Young girls, some innocent, others, if not wholly innocent, at any rate not depraved, and young men, not yet altogether vicious, attend the gatherings in search of amusement and change. Many are innocent working girls who seek legitimate recreation. The sinister element in attendance is the hired cadets who attend with the cold-blood purpose of finding new subjects of debauchery and of subsequent exploitation for gain.

"These agents of commercialized vice are usually well dressed, well mannered, and introduce themselves easily and politely to strangers. They often pretend to love at first sight and exhibit marked devotion, by which the girls are deceived, and to which they often yield. When the debauchery of the girls is accomplished, they are put on the street, and their ruin is complete."

Is this not a place where the Church may step in? For what is true of Manhattan is probably true of most cities in the country. The Church can help close such places. Can the Church not go further, and help provide healthful recreation and amusement as a substitute, either directly or indirectly, by helping to further such substitute as may be provided by the city? The providing of proper recreation and amusement is one of the main offices to which various city morals commissions are giving their attention.

READY TO ENJOY.

"I used to pray only for strength for the day—strength to do its duties, bear its burdens, and resist its temptations," said a lady in middle life, "but now I ask quite earnestly that I may be ready to appreciate its blessings and enjoy every sweet and pleasant thing that comes into it. We miss so much of what life should be—of what God intends it to be—by not being ready to enjoy what He gives."

We are all eager for happiness, for some great, satisfying draught that we vaguely hope may come somewhere along the way, but meanwhile each day offers its tiny golden cups of sweetness that we too often forget to taste. The pleasant morning hour on the piazza, the unexpected call, or letter with its note of good cheer, the delightful ride that circumstances unexpectedly slip into a busy day, the glory of sunrise or sunset—all these and their like are as much a part of the day God ordains as any work that comes into it. They are sent for our cheer and comfort, and learning to recognize them as they come, and to enjoy them to their utmost, is as much a means of grace and growth as any other duty faithfully done. The Father who cares for our holiness cares for our happiness, also, and sends into all the common days these gifts for our enjoyment. But learning to enjoy is, strangely enough, one of the lessons we are slow to learn.—Forward

PROVERBS OF A YOUNG LAYMAN.

He who serves God deserves good.

Preach the Word, not simply words.

Let every man love himself—wisely but not too well.

Temper is the one thing a man cannot get rid of by losing.

The English language is rather to be spoken than the English language.

Some men pray for a blessing and then do not recognize it as a blessing when it comes.

Pray today and do today. There is time enough tomorrow to pray for tomorrow's doing.

The hypocrite is the sort of man who gets mad at prayer meeting if he isn't called on to pray.

The man who prays because he thinks he must pray eases his conscience; the man who is grateful that he may pray, eases his heart.

Man is co-creator of himself with God. To remember his Creator in the days of his youth he must think much of God and much of himself.

Jesus walked upon the water. The man who follows Him may walk upon the water, not miraculously, but by means of boats. Jesus also walked upon the air, when He left this world. The man who follows Him may walk upon the air, not miraculously, but by means of the balloon and aeroplane.—N. Y. Advocate.

THE HEALTH OF THE AMERICAN GIRL.

That many girls do not dress sensibly and healthfully is patent to all. Visit the high schools on a zero morning and face the facts. In a room which the janitor finds it difficult to bring above sixty degrees Fahrenheit, there are dozens of girls clad in lingerie waists, low neck, and elbow-sleeves, minus any undervest except an apology for one made of the thinnest gauze. Their feet are arrayed in low shoes, with embroidered silk stockings. When they leave the school room for home, a thin jacket to match the skirt is donned, and, in some cases, no covering for the head.

The practice of going without suitable head-gear is, according to the physician's verdict, causing catarrh and even deafness among our young girls. Consider for a moment the style of skirt which these girls affect. There is the tight skirt which ties the knees together, permitting no freedom of action. Where, I say, are the mothers of these girls, that they are allowed to dress in so unsuitable a manner? It seems to me that our women's clubs, which talk so loudly about reform, could do society a great and lasting benefit by arraying themselves against the styles of dress for women which have been in vogue for so long. If the American mother is a slave of fashion, what can be expected of her daughter.—Margaret Woodward, in Suburban Life.

BE READY.

In a place in New Jersey the town officers had just put some fire extinguishers in their big buildings. One day one of the buildings caught fire, and the extinguishers failed to do their work. A few days later at the town meeting some citizens tried to learn the reason. After they had freely discussed the subject, one of them said, "Mr. Chairman, I make a motion that the fire extinguishers be examined ten days before every fire."—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

THE DEVELOPMENT OF AN IDEA.

(The following is the President's Address, delivered at the Young People's Convention, Burlington, N. C., May the 28th, 1913. Reproduced from notes, which accounts for it being far from verbatim. W. T. WALTERS.)

All men have ideas and men largely succeed or fail in proportion to the effort they put forth to carry out their ideas. The same is true of organizations. Some men and some organizations start out with a wrong idea and make a failure in their endeavor to develop it because of the principle involved, but in the main the organization that labors to carry out its ideas is the one that succeeds.

Different Kinds of Ideas.

I want to class ideas under two heads, viz: Individual and Co-operative. (1) Individual: The sculptor has an idea and with his mallet and chisel labors unaided upon the block of marble or granite until his idea is realized in the figure of a hero or the face of an angel. The painter with his brush and colors transfers the idea from his mind to the canvas in the features of a Madonna or the beauty of a sunset. Robert Fulton, amidst scorn, ridicule and ostracism of his fellow men, worked out his idea of steam navigation, and John Wycliffe, filled with the idea that every man should be able to read his own Bible, made the translation of it into the English language, the great work of his life.

(2) Co-operative: The above class of ideas can be worked out by individual effort without any aid, suggestions or even encouragement from others, but there is another class of ideas which by their very nature cannot be realized without the sympathy and co-operation of fellow laborers. Martin Luther had an idea that a change was needed in the religion of the Catholic church, but others had to see the same thing and believe the same way before the great Reformation could be accomplished. John Wesley had an idea that religion should be experimental, and through the co-operation of others the great Methodist church was founded. Frances E. Willard got a vision of the evils wrought by intemperance, and dominated by the idea that they could be lessened, set herself to the task of bringing it about. She was discouraged by politicians, by society and by the church, but she persisted in her efforts and gradually others co-operated and the movement grew until the White Ribbon encircles the globe and before its marching army the saloon keeper has closed his shop and the brewer has stopped his fire. Clara Barton thought the condition of prisoners could be made better and, though discouraged on all sides, she enlisted the co-operation of others and the idea grew until the haughty lawmaker listened and the stern commander obeyed and now wherever the flag of war is unfurled, the Red Cross waves by its side and mingled with the rattle of musketry and the roar of cannon is the soothing voice of the Red Cross Nurse as she flits here and there on her errands of mercy.

Francis E. Clark's idea of giving the young people in the church something to do, has through the co-operation of others developed into one of the greatest spiritual forces the world has ever seen.

The Christian Church.

Among the men who had co-operative ideas were James O'Kelley, Abner Jones, Barton W. Stone and others who conceived the idea of a non-sectarian church, broad enough in its fellowship to include every follower of Jesus Christ. Like other movements of reform it met with opposition, but the idea was persisted in and the Christian church came into existence.

Later some one formed the idea of a central organization and out of that movement grew the Southern Christian Convention, the main idea of which was the furthering of the cause of the kingdom of God as represented by the Christian church, but just as around every great idea there are other ideas that are subsidiary thereto, so around this central idea of building up the Christian church are clustered other ideas of ways and means which are subsidiary.

The first of these to be developed was that of publications, and out of that idea grew THE CHRISTIAN SUN, which still shines as an inspiration and help to our southern brotherhood.

The next idea that was found necessary for the success of the new movement was some means of educating and enlightening the members of the new church and especially the ministry, hence the efforts to provide educational institutions. This idea finally developed into the establishment of Elon College, which stands as the pride of the whole brotherhood.

Following this came the idea of enlargement through missionary efforts, both at home and abroad.

The last idea to be developed into a tangible form was the Christian Orphanage, which has become firmly fixed as our charitable institution.

Young People's Convention.

Some progressive men among us conceived the idea of the Young People's convention, the main idea of which was to develop the spiritual life of the church and especially of the young people. The associated or subsidiary ideas were the organization of Bible and Teacher Training classes and of Christian Endeavor Societies. These are the organized forces, which make possible the development of the main idea.

The Work of the Two Conventions.

There is no conflict between the work of the two conventions. The Southern Christian Convention disseminates knowledge through its publications; it plants churches at home and abroad through its missionary efforts; advances the educational work of the church through its college and cares for the homeless at its orphanage.

The Young People's Convention trains workers in both old and new fields through the Christian Endeavor. It enlarges and makes more efficient the Sunday School through its organized and Teacher Training classes.

And thus while the Southern Christian Convention diffuses knowledge, spreads into new territory, cares for the educational interests and provides for the charity, the young People's Convention makes stronger and more efficient that great feeder for the church—the Sunday School—and deepens the spiritual life and trains for more useful service those who enter our churches.

Co-operation.

The idea of the Young People's Convention is a co-operative idea and if it is fully developed it must have co-operation.

It needs the co-operation of the following:

(1) The pastors. They are the leaders and as such they have an influence that will go far towards promoting or discouraging any movement connected with any phase of church work. The work of the pastor is the strengthening of the church and the winning of souls, therefore it is his duty to encourage and aid as far as he can any movement that advances his work. The things advocated by the Young People's Convention have proven their value as helpful methods in church work and as such they deserve the support of the pastor in the local church, the conference convention and the general convention.

(2) Sunday School superintendents, Christian Endeavor presidents, and Sunday School teachers. These are leaders in their various fields and should lend their influence and activity to whatever strengthens those fields.

(3) Church and Sunday School members. Anything to grow must have an atmosphere in which it can grow. It is the work of the church and Sunday School members to create this atmosphere.

The Need.

With the present growth of our church and its interest in Missionary work, we can see that there is a need for more effort and a larger vision. The greatest hope of meeting this need lies in training our young people for the task. Therefore it is our duty as a people to give them every advantage possible.

LITTLE JOURNEYS INTO MISSION LANDS.

(By W. P. Lawrence, Lit. D., Prof. of English in Elon College.)

I. Mexico.

Our first little missionary journey is into the land of Mexico. This is a country just south of the United States. The Rio Grande river forms a considerable part of the boundary. The states bordering on Mexico are Texas, New Mexico, Arizona, and California.

Geography.

Mexico lies between the Pacific Ocean and the Gulf of Mexico and extends south from the United States to Central America. It contains about 750,000 square miles, the greater part of which is elevated above the sea-level from six thousand to nine thousand feet. The border lands along the coast are low, hot and crowded with tropical life. The upland region is possessed of a mild temperate climate. The soil here is fertile but water is scarce, due to light rainfall. The country, therefore, needs a system of irrigation on a larger scale to make it important as an agricultural country.

History.

The Spaniards found a highly civilized race of Indians living here in the sixteenth century. William H. Prescott's "Conquest of Mexico" contains many interesting things about these ancient people known as Aztecs. It is also spoken of as the land of the Montezumas, because Montezuma was the Aztec ruler who was on the throne when the Spaniards came, and who surrendered to the Spanish conqueror, Cortez, in 1519. The Aztec empire crumbled like ashes before the superior energy of the Spanish invasion. In 1550 Mexico was added to the other Spanish territory in America under the name of New Spain, and was ruled by a vice-roy appointed by the crown. The name Mexico, now borne by the country and the capital city also, is from the name of an Aztec deity, Mexitli. Though Spain pursued a policy of collecting enormous tribute from New Spain, yet it rose to be the most important of all the Spanish colonies in the world. The Roman Catholic church was given large powers with little restrictions. Aztec institutions were suppressed, and Mexico came to be Spanish. But the spirit of liberty, which set up a republic in the United States, filtered down into Mexico, and after a desperate bloody struggle in which Spain was accused of wanton and heartless cruelty even in war, Mexico won her independence in 1824. Texas was then a part of Mexico, but seceded a little later and won her independence in 1836.

Since 1824 Mexico has been the scene of unsettled government, its history being punctuated by frequent reversions and revolutions. The election of General Diaz to the presidency in 1884 and his continuation in that office for practically twenty-five years gave the country a strong, capable ruler and a stable government. Within the last three or four years the country has turned aside from peaceful, prosperous pursuits, and we have revolution and insurrection without end, and Mexico is making a miserable mess of government.

The People.

James D. Eaton, D. D., a missionary of the American Board since 1882, in a recent account says that there are about sixteen million people in Mexico, one third native Aztecs, or Indians, one tenth white, and the remainder of a mixed race of all hues and colors. Roman Catholic is the prevailing religion, yet it is so infused with heathenism as to be very much unlike the Roman Catholic religion in America or in Europe. The Spanish language is the speech of the vast majority, yet there are twenty or thirty tribes that yet speak their ancient tongues. There are two classes, the aristocratic or ruling class and the peasant or toiling class. The former control the government and the property. The poor class live in huts widely inferior to the average negro cabin. They are not only poor but are ignorant as well. They are the toilers on the vast estates of the wealthy ruling class. The passage of a compulsory primary educational law about the beginning of Gen. Diaz's rule, by which parents violating the law were fined and imprisoned, has set up a tendency to create a respectable middle class, although this law provided only two schools for every twenty thousand inhabitants, one school for boys and one for girls. Higher education is free but not compulsory. The lower class as well as many of the upper class have the reputation of being deceptive and treacherous. John L. Stoddard, in his lecture on Mexico, gives some idea of annoying propensities of the average Mexican when he gives as the reason why the railway companies had no air brakes on their cars that the natives persisted in cutting off the rubber connections of such brakes.

Religion.

The Aztecs believed in one supreme creator and ruler of all things. They had a tradition that their diety was once upon the earth as an instructor in agriculture and other useful arts, that because of cruelty to him he departed in a canoe one day over the eastern sea (Gulf of Mexico) towards the rising sun, and that he would return again. It is reported of Montezuma that shortly before the coming of the Spaniards that he frequently consulted the oracle by which he was informed that the return of the offended diety was at hand and that his empire was at an end. It was on this account that he, on hearing of the arrival of the Spaniards on the coast, sent rich gifts to them hoping to avert, as far as possible, what he fully believed was the impending doom of his people. Thus half conquered through religious convictions the Spaniards found him and his empire an easy mark, which yielded up its authority after a brief struggle of only two or three weeks. His capital city, which was also the center of the Aztec paganism with its vast priesthood of five thousand religious officials, in turn became the capital city of the invader and a magnificent Christian cathedral was built on the spot of the pagan temple in the center of this splendid city. (The Roman Catholic cathedral in the center of the City of Mexico was half a century in building and is one of the most magnificent temples of worship in all the western world.) From this center the Roman Catholic church has held sway over the vast territory of Mexico for nearly four hundred years. It seems to have been so weakened by admixture with the pagan Aztec religion that its vital Christian force is almost entirely lost. A French clergyman fifty years ago, in the time of Maximilian, that unhappy Austrian prince who lost his life in an effort to give Mexico good government, said that the religion of Mexico was more like a baptized paganism than it was like Christianity.

Missions.

The opportunity of the gospel in Mexico, it is evident from the foregoing brief account, is to infuse a new and a better life into that sin-cursed, yet rich and beautiful country. The Roman Catholic church has failed. Perhaps it has done the best it could. The opportunity is now for Protestantism. I believe Protestant missions will save Mexico. The task is a hureculean one. We shall have to encounter the bitter opposition of the Roman Catholic church as well as the strongholds of sin itself. In the murder of President Madero a few months ago, Protestantism lost a friend that could have aided the missionaries materially. January 8, 1912, he accepted a Protestant Bible in Spanish from a committee of missionaries from the Methodist Episcopal, the Baptist, the Presbyterian churches and the American Bible Society, and in his speech of acceptance said: "I am exceedingly grateful for the gift. I hold the same belief as you concerning the value of its principles for the elevation of the people, inasmuch as I am sure that only through Christian morality are the nations uplifted. I heartily congratulate you on the good work you are doing in co-operating for the moral uplifting of the Mexican people. The Mexicans have noble sentiments, and they are good and heroic, they have only lacked enlightenment, and it will be one of my greatest efforts to work for this, so that they may be able to understand the high principles of the Book. Continue your good work and you will thus co-operate with me in uplifting the masses of the Mexican people."

Protestant missions were begun in Mexico in 1870, the American Baptist Home Mission Society being the first to enter the field. Other organizations followed until there are now eighteen American and Canadian societies or churches and one British society supporting the mission work there. These societies have a total of 294 foreign missionaries in Mexico with 529 native workers, ordained and unordained. The gain in missionaries from 1902 to 1912 was from 210 to 294. The increase in communicants for the same time was 4,000 being a gain of 25 per cent., and the gain in adherents was 300 per cent. These facts indicate the rapidity with which the Protestant church can give to Mexico a vital enlightening religion.

AIDS TO GOOD HEALTH.

It is well for us to ask God to spare our lives, and give us good health. It is also well for us to use those aids to life and health which are within our power. It is not consistent in any person to pray God to preserve his life, and grant him good health, yet will not do his best to accomplish these things. A writer in a leading religious paper in New York, says: "Hudson Maxim, inventor and author, celebrated his sixtieth birthday at his home in Brooklyn recently, and gave common-sense opinions on several subjects, especially on the secrets of health and vigor at three score years. He said: 'I never felt better in my life. I think the greatest thing that will give a man longevity is a sense of humor. That, and outdoor life, are pretty good tonics for poor health. A sense of humor gives him a pleasant outlook on life. Instead of a feeling of antagonism to the world, it relieves a man of a good many disappointments. Good humor is a species of good health. Another thing conclusive to long life is a sane philosophy, where one only expects to get out of life what he earns out of it. My mother was an optimist, and I have been one myself for many years. I feel that the world is a great benefaction, and that we ought to be very thankful to be in it to live.' There is a great deal of sound sense in those words. They contain much good philosophy. I ask those of my readers who are in the habit of indulging in gloomy words, to put into practice what Mr. Maxim says. Some of you may not be naturally gifted with a sense of humor, but you can get into the habit of being somewhat mirthful. Look at 'the funny side of things,' and get all of the pleasure that you can from it. Permit me to refer to myself. Although I do a great deal of very sober thinking, yet I give free play to mirthfulness. I enjoy a clean joke. I am often so boyish that I get ashamed of myself. I am past sixty years of age, yet I feel briskly young. I am still full of vigor, both in mind and body. Laugh hard, and live long! C. H. WETHERBE.

SOMEWHAT CONFUSING.

Some years ago, when this scribe was playing editor, an editorial was turned over to a compositor who proceeded to give it a peculiar squint which, when revealed in the proof, was corrected and sent back. The typographical error occurred in the following sentence: "In the civilization of this day, we must face some of the most serious problems." The proof showed instead, this: "In the divilization of this day, we must face, etc."

To be exactly frank with SUN readers, I may say that the compositor's version in that particular instance was not far from expressing what was in the mind of the editor, although he did not want to express it just that way.

In my article for THE SUN on "The Church at Prayer," appearing in the issue of June 25th, I am made to say in my opening sentence, "In my former article on this great question of The Prayer Mutiny, I dealt with the fact," etc., whereas I wanted to say "Prayer Meeting" instead of "Prayer Mutiny." Some of us are perhaps mutinous enough when we are admonished to pray, but that was not just the thought I wished to express. Again, about the middle of page 7, in the quotation from Jesus concerning our physical needs, instead of "nor yet for your body, what ye shall put on," we read "feed on."

The law of nature speaking to the cellular life within the egg, at the bottom of column 2 page 7 reads, "You most love yourself," for "lose yourself."

In the reference to the Lawrence mill workers, the pay is made to appear as more than one dollar per hour for one of the poor workers, whereas it was only about nine cents. Instead of "another for 5 hours, $5.20," we should read "for 57 hours, $5.20." I suggest these corrections for the sake of clearness.

Sincerely yours,

P. S. SAILER.

VACATION WISDOM.

Little Mary went into the country on a visit to her grandmother. Walking in the garden, she chanced to spy a peacock, a bird she had never before seen. She ran quickly into the house and cried out:

"O, grandma, come out and see! There's an old chicken in full bloom!"

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENTS

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Rev. W. H. Denison, D. D., Pastor of Memorial Christian Temple, Norfolk, Va., was with us the last Sunday in June at our "Rally Day" in the presentation of "Foreign Missions." Dr. Denison preached on "Foreign Missions" at the morning service; delivered an address on "The Laymen's Missionary Movement" at 4:00 p. m., and spoke on "Our Denominational Foreign Work" at night. That Sunday was fairly pleasant out of many hot days; the congregations were good at all three services, and the people were pleased and edified by the new preacher. The pastor had preached twice the previous Sunday on "Missions" as a preparatory service to this "Rally Day," as the committee on Foreign Missions had requested. Dr. Denison's little daughter had typhoid fever and he returned to Norfolk on a late train Sunday night. He has the sympathy and prayers of the friends in Suffolk for her recovery.

Dr. Denison's face and manner in the pulpit are so much like Dr. W. B. Wellons, the founder and for sixteen years pastor of this church, that those who have been in this congregation since the early seventies were delighted with his visit and his message. His thought is clean, his interest is intense, his delivery enthusiastic, and his feeling is spiritual. His visit has awakened new interest in the subject of Missions and that was the object of the meeting. Visitors from Union, Surry, Wakefield, Oakland, Holland, Isle of Wight Court House, Driver and Norfolk added to the interest of the day.

The great Reunion at Gettysburg during the first days in July has taken the drainage tube out of the side of the Nation from the wound made by the civil war. Of all the great things said during the encampment, the words of Governor Wm. Hodges Mann of Virginia were the greatest. In his address he said: "If we had known each other as well in 1861 as we do today, the war would have been impossible." That sentence practically says that national ignorance was the cause of civil strife. The most expensive education is that which the human race has paid in the school of war. It is a more expensive proposition to live in ignorance than to pay the price of education in school. Education looks expensive, but it is the cheapest thing men buy. The ignorance of mankind costs more than the schools of the world. In this age any youth can work his own way through college and be all the better educated because he worked through himself. I have been through many of the greatest tunnels in the world. It was easy for me to go through, because I went through on the train; but I the men who dug through the mountains and made it possible for trains to pass through from France into Italy or through the Swiss Mountains. I like the club life for students at Elon College. It not only reduces expenses for young men and young women, but it gives them practical experience while they acquire literary knowledge. They are trained for life when they leave college. The new building for young women, now under completion, will be an addition of real value to the Institution. It will add two score of noble young women to the student body; it will develop women of sturdy character and practical accomplishments. These two classes of students—those whose parents are able to pay the regular college prices, and those who are willing to club in order to reduce expenses so as to make it possible for them to go to college—will mingle together in class-rooms, society halls and various religious societies. Both will be benefited by each other; and out in the world the rich and the poor must meet together. Hence in such a school they have already learned how to live together and to appreciate one another. Elon College is, therefore, a real school as well as a real college.

W. W. STALEY.

NORFOLK LETTER.

Considering the vast number of people there are in the world, representing so many varieties of temperament, taste and disposition, it is strange and deplorable that anyone should suffer from loneliness, and still, I presume it is a fact that we all, more or less, do so. Notwithstanding the fact that we have friends and acquaintances upon every hand there is, nevertheless, a sense in which we must always stand isolated and apart from our fellows. Between ourselves and others some strange, indefinable barrier seems to exist, intangible, it is true, and yet stronger than adamant, which cuts off that perfect communion between heart and heart and soul and soul for which we long and yearn. A perfect understanding of each other's motives and purposes is out of the question here. At the best such an understanding can only be approximated between the most intimate of earthly friends and acquaintances. No matter how devoted, neither husband or wife can wholly enter into each other's lives, nor can father and mother fully fathom and divine the lives of their own children.

And still, how we all crave to be understood. How we dread and shrink from the isolation and loneliness of life which seems to gather about us more and more as the years advance. We want that our fellows should appreciate us, that they should enter into communion with us and know us for what we ourselves know and feel. We are anxious to share our mental and spiritual pleasures with others as we are to share with them our material joys. Unless we thus share them, we feel that we ourselves are deprived of a large portion of their benefits. Which is really so.

I think that perhaps it is true that, as a rule, the more gifted and talented men are, and the greater their aptitude for the higher and loftier pursuits and vocations, the less likely they are to be fully appreciated by those who are less finely and sensitively organized, and whose perceptive faculties do not travel much beyond the common range of thought and feeling characteristic of the multitudes. Hence, some of the best, noblest and truest spirits who have ever lived and wrought among men have complained bitterly of the fact that they were misunderstood and not appreciated.

To the majority of people the great masters and artists in all callings have been known as cranks and fanatics, because of the fact that the very traits by which their work was made possible are traits which are not possessed by the average man or woman, and the average man or woman, as is well known, cannot tolerate with much patience any individual characteristics or peculiarities which vary from the conventional or commonplace.

And yet, the masters and artists, as we may well believe, are not themselves desirous of being different from others less gifted. Without doubt, as a musician feels himself carried to empyrean heights by the swing and power of the melody which echoes through his own soul, he fain would so give expression thereto as that all others might likewise be lifted and exalted, and the bitter disappointment to him is that, either they are not at all, or else if so, only imperfectly so. The highest aspiration of the author is that he may so give expression to the concept by which he has himself been moved, as that others may see and be moved. The painter seeks to so throw upon canvas the picture which has gleamed upon the eye of his own soul as that it may gleam likewise upon the souls of innumerable others. And all of these feel that, in a great measure they have failed if these things be not so. In other words, and again, we derive our highest joy in whatever gifts or talents our Father has seen fit to bless us with, only when we are permitted to share the fruits of these with our fellows.

But, sadly and pathetically we must confess it, it so often happens, the dull, indifferent, materialistic world will not have us share with them our offerings, even though they be modest, in that measure and degree in which we would. We can only be content to go patiently upon our way, in the hope that sometime, somewhere, in the light of a more perfect day, we shall see "eye to eye and face to face," and that we shall "know, as also we are known." Then, in that blessed dawning, the shadows will flee away, and we shall forget the long, dreary years of loneliness and waiting in the dear assurance that at last all that we have toiled and striven for is taken at its true worth. HENRY SPENCER BOOTH.

WINCHESTER LETTER.

The time is approaching for the election of delegates and the filling out of reports to the annual session of the Virginia Valley Central Conference which meets in Winchester, Va., August 14-17.

It is hoped that we may have a full delegation from all the churches and also a number of visitors. The Winchester church will be glad to furnish homes for all who come. We want the people of the Conference to come and see the church they have helped to build. A cordial welcome awaits all who can attend.

Delegates should be elected, as far as possible, from the leaders in church work. The work of the Conference is important and should have the best talent and the wisest counsel the church can send.

According to a resolution adopted at the last session, all church letters are to be filled out and sent to the secretary ten days before the meeting of conference. We hope that all our churches will send up the full apportionment this year as we shall need all we have called for. Both pastor and members should see that every church bears its proportionate part of the general expenses as collected through the Conference. This promises to be one of our strongest conferences and those who fail to attend will miss a great deal in the way of inspiration and practical help in church work. The following visiting brethren will be present, to aid the conference by their counsel and addresses: Dr. J. O. Atkinson, Editor of THE CHRISTIAN SUN, Dr. W. A. Harper, President of Elon College, Dr. J. P. Barrett, Editor of the Herald of Gospel Liberty, Dr. J. F. Burnett, Secretary of the American Christian Convention, Rev. E. M. Carter, Superintendent of the Christian Orphanage, Rev. W. G. Clements and Rev. J. H. Barney. The presence of these brethren with our local membership assures an interesting session.

The crowning event of the session will be the dedication of our first city church, which has been made possible by the prayers and sacrifices of people interested in building up the work in our conference and in the salvation of souls.

Rev. J. O. Atkinson, D. D., will have charge of this service, which will take place August the 17th. W. T. WALTERS.

ELON COLLEGE NOTES.

The Minister's Council of the North Carolina and Virginia Conference was in session here Tuesday with a good attendance.

Dr. T. C. Amick spent three days last week in High Point, N. C., attending the general conference of the Methodist Protestant Church.

Miss Mildred L. Atkinson, class of '08, is spending the summer with her uncle, Dr. J. O. Atkinson. Miss Atkinson has a position in the city schools of Ashland City, Tenn., as instructor in the Latin and English departments.

Mr. Jennings S. Lincoln, Wakefield, Va., of the class of '11, was a visitor in the village Saturday and Sunday. Mr. Lincoln has been for some time connected with the Rock Hill News, Rock Hill, S. C., but is at present connected with the Wakefield, Virginia, High School.

Miss Nettie McCullers, Durham, N. C., has accepted a position with the Christian Orphanage as Housekeeper and entered upon her duties last week. Miss Sudie McCauley, Chapel Hill, N. C., has also accepted a position with the Orphanage as assistant matron and will in connection with this teach in the graded school of the village.

Rev. N. G. Bethea, a Methodist Protestant minister of Henderson, N. C., has purchased Mr. C. R. Heater's place and will move here some time soon. We hear that other M. P. ministers are contemplating moving here, which seems to indicate that the M. P. and Christian churches are on familiar terms and the relationship of the two churches may some day be one.

Two Elon graduates are to serve in the Greensboro City Schools this year, namely, W. F. Warren, class of '10, who will teach English, and E. T. Hines, class of '11, who will teach Latin. Mr. Warren has taught successfully at Reidsville, N. C., and Mr. Hines with eminent success at McLeansville, N. C., and we predict a most successful year in their respective departments of the Greensboro Schools.

The work in the President's office is such that the President is unable to leave to make several trips that he has anticipated for some time. This is a fine indication that friends and students are hard at work in interest of the College in all quarters, and a continuation of this will certainly mean success for Elon this year.

Dr. S. A. Ware, Mrs. Sadie Jones, Miss Ruby Michael and Mr. J. P. Huffman were elected on last Sunday to represent the Sunday school of this place in the Young People's Convention of the North Carolina and Virginia Conference which meets in Haw River July 15-16. The Sunday-school for the summer has an enrollment of 113, and while not so many as compared with the school of the college months, a good attendance is always recorded and active work is being done by both students and teachers.

The Vacation Number of the College Bulletin is now in press with The Southern Christian Publishing Company of this place and will be ready to mail next week. This publication will be bound in the 1913 Senior Class colors and contains information worth while to every young man and young woman whose object it is to educate themselves in the right way, in the right time, and in the right place. Application to the President's Office will bring any reader of THE SUN a copy of this excellent publication free of charge.

THE SUN's proof reader robbed us of a most interesting note in our items last week when he left out an account of the wedding of Miss Cora Bell Lawrence to Mr. James G. Anthany on the evening of June 26th, in the home of Dr. and Mrs. W. P. Lawrence. The wedding was of a quiet nature and witnessed only by a few relatives and the officiating minister, Rev. J. W. Wellons, D. D., the bride's pastor. Mrs. Anthany is well known among us and is highly esteemed for her Christian character and pleasant disposition which we all admire. Mr. Anthany is a prosperous wholesale merchant of the town of High Point, N. C., where the contracting parties expect to make their home after a few weeks' outing in Western North Carolina and other places.

It is with sadness and regret that we chronicle the death of Mrs. C. A. Boone, which occurred on Saturday evening last. Mrs. Boone was stricken with paralysis on last Wednesday morning about seven o'clock while preparing to go to Burlington. Every effort possible was used to bring relief, but she never regained consciousness, lingering for nearly four days and passing away quietly. Mrs. Boone was in her 70th year and leaves to mourn her taking away two sons and two daughters, Dr. W. H. and Mr. D. L. Boone, Durham, N. C., Mrs. J. P. Avent, Jonesboro, N. C., and Mrs. J. M. Saunders, Durham, N. C. The funeral was conducted from the home at noon Monday by Dr. J. O. Atkinson, assisted by Dr. J. U. Newman, and the body laid to rest in the village burying ground in the presence of a large concourse of friends and relatives. The pall-bearers were her two sons, her two sons-in-law, Messrs. J. P. Avent, Jonesboro, N. C., and J. M. Saunders, Durham, N. C., and two of her newhews, Mr. J. Adolph Long, Graham, N. C., and Mr. Moody Stroud of Sanford, N. C. The floral designs were many and beautiful and marked the high esteem in which "Aunt" Mollie was held and the sincere appreciation of her strong Christian character. C. B. RIDDLE.

A DELIGHTFUL TRIP.

It was my first trip to Elon College. I had long had dreams of visiting Elon but time, duties, finance, distance had all thrown obstacles in the way and the pleasure had been denied me. Now the realization of the hope was about to be fulfilled and the anticipation about to become a reality. I had read all that had been said about the institutions there, and met frequently the genial President and many of the faculty, and felt pretty well acquainted in absentia, but that was not quite like seeing for one's self. I wish I could say to my readers of THE SUN, especially the young people who are thinking of college, that catalogues and letters and newspaper write-ups are not like seeing Elon College. I was favorably impressed and pleased with the institution, the evidences of its work, spirit of its faculty, the bearing of the student body. The spirit of development in the plant itself is heartily to be commended. The Alumni seem to be undertaking to do things. None can do more for an institution than its Alumni. President Harper has an ideal home, an ideal wife, and it seems to me that they make an ideal President of Elon College. This delightful home was enjoyed by Mrs. Denison and myself during our stay there. Then there is the Publishing House, too, new, commodious, the home of the enlarged CHRISTIAN SUN. Its genial editor is endeavoring to get it into all our homes and why should it not be there? We all need from one to ten religious papers and we should not leave out THE SUN from that list. The editor's generous hospitality and cool, large porch make one feel at home at once. One of the most delightful parts of the whole trip was to meet Mr. and Mrs. Chas. W. Montgomery. Mr. Montgomery is the Publishing Agent and the Elon people are already finding that he knows his business and that he is an expert in his line. I was their pastor for eleven years at Troy, Ohio. You need not be afraid to send your job work to him and all you will have to do is to give him one half a hint what you want and it will come back all right.

No trip to Elon College is complete without a walk up the hill to our Orphanage. Already its capacity is being taxed and the brotherhood should help to make this institution all that it can become. We have no other such institution as this among us and it should appeal to the generous hearted friends of the orphans and homeless. We have an interest in a similar institution in Sendai, Japan, but none in this country. It is to be hoped that this young institution may be a great blessing and become an ideal home for those who have no home. There is no end of opportunity for such a home and we hope that its usefulness may not be limited on account of lack of finance.

We are glad for the privilege of meeting so many of the leading spirits of our work in this section of our Zion, for the delightful spot that has been chosen for various interests of our work, for the kindly welcome generally received, for the pleasure of meeting Dr. A. B. Kendall, the successful pastor of the Burlington Christian church. On our way home we came by way of Raleigh that we might have an hour between trains and get a little squint at the Raleigh church that is being remodeled and to greet the pastor, Rev. L. F. Johnson, for a brief hour. They are hoping to complete the work soon. May the Lord lead them in securing a successor to brother Johnson who feels called to other fields. Speeding along at rapid rate we watched through the car windows that we might get a little view of the new Franklinton Christian College. Its corner stone had been laid the week before. For the first time we saw it and thanked God that it had been put into the heart of some to establish a school for our colored brethren. The whole trip was very pleasant and a joy to see Elon College, the Publishing House, the Orphanage, the Burlington and Raleigh churches, Franklinton, the meeting of the Elon student body, faculty, old friends, and the effort to bring some messages of help to the cause.

WANTED AT THE ORPHANAGE.

There is needed at the Christian Orphanage, more help both in the kitchen and house work. The larger girls assist and do much, but women of experience in cooking, in house keeping, in sewing etc., are needed. Applicants should address Rev. E. M. Carter, Supt., Elon College, N. C.

On June 23 was launched in New York the American Society for the Prevention of Cancer. The society will undertake a nation-wide campaign to combat the disease

"MOSES PREPARED FOR HIS WORK."

Notes and Comment on the Sunday School Lesson
For July 13th.

Scripture.—Exodus 2:11-25.

Time.—About B. C. 1317-1277 (Sayce); 1531-1491 (Ussher).

Places.—Egypt, Midian.

Persons.—Moses, Hebrews, Egyptians, Pharaoh, Reuel and daughters, Zipporah, Gershom.

Golden Text.—Blessed are the meek: for they shall inherit the earth.—Matt. 5:5.

Leading Thought.—The humble are willing to be led by God.

Lesson Contrasts.

Perhaps no greater contrast can be found in the natural world than that between the fair and fertile Valley of the Nile, and the rugged barrenness of the Arabian Desert. The contrast between that scene of Moses' childhood and this scene of his manhood are typical of the contrasts between his early and his later life. In Egypt he lived in a palace, in Arabia he dwelt in a tent. There he was surrounded by wealth and luxury, and could live at ease; here, his was a life of poverty and toil supported by coarsest fare. There he had comradeship with princes and wise men; here, he was partner with ignorant shepherds. He who had been accustomed to command, now had to obey. But while in the gay and bustling life God has perhaps been oft forgotten, in the calm and quiet life he won an attentive hearing. He who had been rash and self-confident became under the tutelage of God the meekest of men.

The Lesson in Brief.

Moses is said to have been a student at the great university of Heliopolis, twenty miles north of Memphis, "the Oxford of ancient Egypt." There Herodotus and Plato studied. Moses had there at his disposal a library of 20,000 books. His education included mathematics as far as trigonometry, music, astronomy, chemistry, history, law, medicine, painting, architecture, and literature. He made good use in latter years of all this learning. He also had a military training, and is said to have seen active service against the Ethiopians.

Moses was forty years old when he slew the Egyptian taskmaster, and as a result had to flee from Egypt.

The land of Midian, to which he fled, was probably in eastern Arabia, near the eastern branch of the Red Sea. There, by helping the daughters of Jethro (also called Reuel) draw water for their flock, he won the favor of Jethro, who was the chief and priest of the tribe, and married his daughter Zipporah. There he remained for forty patient, growing years, and there his two sons were born, Gershom ("a sojourner") and Eliezer ("God my helper").

Toward the end of this period of forty years Rameses II. died, and was succeeded by his son, Merneptah, a weaker king, under whom there was a chance for the Israelites to escape from Egyptian bondage.

NOTES ON C. E. TOPIC JULY 20TH.

Subject.—"Favorite Verses. III. In the Prophetic Books.—Hos. 14:1-9.

The meeting, like all meetings, should be planned by the prayer meeting committee and the leader. This is the only plan of program-making that has found general favor. It is suggested that members of the society be paired—a younger member and an older member in each pair.

In the meeting the younger member of each pair will speak first, quoting a favorite verse and adding, if he can, his comment. The older member will immediately follow, perhaps with additional comment on the verse read by his partner, and will read another favorite verse for himself. The prayer-meeting committee should keep a duplicate set of cards. If desired, the cards may be numbered, and the number called out in the meeting. The names of the different prophetic books may be written on the cards and the partners may be asked to find a verse from the book assigned to them in this way. This would prevent the verses from being chosen from one or two books.

Favorite Verses From the Prophets to Be Quoted.

1. Can a maid forget her ornament? or a bride her attire? Yes my people have forgotten me, days without number.—Jeremiah 2:32.

2. Yea, in the way of thy judgments, O Lord, have we waited for thee; the desire to our soul is to thy name, and to the remembrance of thee.—Isaiah 26:8.

3. Seeing thou hast forgotten the law of thy God, I will also forget thy children.—Hosea 4:6.

4. When my soul fainted within me I remembered the Lord; and my prayer came in unto thee, into thy holy temple.—Jonah 2:7.

5. O Israel, thou shalt be forgotten of me.—Isa. 49:14.

6. O Lord, I have heard thy speech and was afraid; O Lord revive thy work in the midst of the years, in the midst of the years make known; in wrath remember mercy.—Habakkuk 3:2.

7. Remember me, O my God, and spare me according to the greatness of thy mercy.—Nehemiah 8:22.

8. O Lord, thou knowest, remember me, and visit me, and revenge me of my persecutors.—Jeremiah 15:15.

9. Come let us join ourselves unto the Lord in a perpetual covenant that shall not be forgotten.—Jer. 30:14.

Some Choice Verses from Isaiah.

1. This book is the greatset of the wonderful prophetic writings. We have this entire gold field in which to mine for our consecration meeting.

2. Even a stupid animal, that knows its owner, is wiser than the wisest man if he does not know his God (1:3).

3. "Cease to do evil, learn to do well," is a comprehensive formula of religion on its outward side (1:16-17).

4. Red is the color farthest removed from white, and yet the most scarlet soul can be made white as snow (1:18).

5. When the world knows God, the most useless thing on earth will be a sword; it is to be transformed into one of the most useful things on earth, a ploughshare (2:4).

6. To "cease from man" is merely to begin with God (2:22).

7. Every man feeds upon his past—bitter food or sweet, yet he must eat it (3:10).

Besides the $2,000,000 Widener Memorial Library, Harvard University has received gifts amounting to $1,100,000 during the past year.

C., and tell him when and how you will come, by rail or by private conveyance. Trains from High Point arrive at Randleman at 9:30 A. M. and at 3:30 P. M. The trains from Aberdeen and Asheboro arrive at Randleman at 11:30 A. M. and 4:30 P. M. All these trains will be met by the entertainment committee on Friday, July 25th. Please notify Mr. Swoney at once so homes may be provided for you.

A. P. GASTER.

From a financial point of view preaching pays less than law, medicine, teaching. Statistics of Harvard, Yale, and Princeton graduates, compiled in 1901, show that for the first ten years after graduation teachers averaged $784.72 for the first year and $1,779.16 for the tenth year; clergymen, $520 for the first year and $1,714.25 for the tenth year; lawyers, $355.20 the first year and $4,994.88 the tenth year, and so on through the professions.

Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Dep't.

This Department is edited by Mrs. C. H. Rowland, Franklin, Va., assisted by other members of the Board, to whom all items of Missionary interest and matter for the Department should be sent.

Members of the Board.

Mrs. C. H. Rowland, Franklin, Va., President and Editor Woman's Missionary Department in The Christian Sun.
Mrs. L. F. Johnson, Raleigh, N. C., Vice President and Supt. of Cradle Roll.
Mrs. W. H. Carroll, Burlington, N. C., Recording Secty. and Supt. of Mite Boxes and Literature.

REPORT OF CORRESPONDING SECRETARY OF THE WOMAN'S MISSION BOARD OF S. C. C.

The duties of the office of Corresponding Secretary have been as follows:

To get up stationery for the various officers and express it to them. To have the blank reports printed and distributed.

To send out requests for the statistical reports and to urge upon all churches and their pastors and also on all societies to be represented here at this time.

To supply at intervals the program for THE SUN.

To attend to the printing of programs for this Rally.

To publish in THE SUN such notices as seemed necessary.

To prepare the following statistical table for information and consideration:

Eastern Va. Conference—11 societies (3 Mite Boxes), 291 members, 31 Christian Missionaries taken, 4 Mission Study classes.

Eastern N. C. Conference—8 societies, 124 members, 3 Mission Study classes.

Western N. C. Conference—6 societies, 1 Mission Study class.

Va. Valley Central Conference—1 society (1 Mite Box), 23 members, 30 Christian Missionaries taken, 1 Mission Study class.

N. C. and Va. Conference—5 societies, 4 Mission Study classes.

In addition to these facts the reports show that the Conference Boards have either three or five members, that some of these Boards have a mid-year meeting, that no one of them has a field worker nor a Literary and Mite Box Superintendent. Our Conference has a Cradle Roll Superintendent and also a Superintendent of Young People's Work. All except one say their Boards have no special work and that one does not say what the nature of its work is. Nor have the Mite Boxes been distributed, according to the reports sent in, tho' I am sure some have been distributed, perhaps without the knowledge of the Conference Board's officers. The Winchester, Va., Society reports a children's society. There are like organizations at Memorial Temple, Norfolk, Franklin, Va., and Burlington, N. C.

These facts indicate that we have made a beginning, but that we have a tremendous work yet to do. We should take courage and press on, nothing daunted by the giant task awaiting us. The responsibility of it is great, but the necessity of it is equally great and the outcome eternal in its import.

Respectfully submitted,

MRS. W. A. HARPER, Cor. Sec.

THE PROSAIC SIDE OF MISSION LIFE.

Mrs. Gray, of the American Presbyterian Mission at Nanking, China, describes the work of a woman missionary in a way which should give the average Christian food for thought:

"If she is the right kind of a woman," so the letter runs, "she will, on coming to China, gird her armor on a little tighter and fight the powers of darkness as never before in her life. She will find it more difficult to get time to read her Bible and pray in China than it ever was in the midst of busy American life. She will have to smile over disappointing interruptions and to live with critical human eyes constantly upon her.

"Some morning she gets up early, takes an old Chinese woman warranted to be staid and steady, some bedding and some food to eat, Gospel and tracts to distribute, a hand basin, towel, comb and cake of soap and off she sets at daylight on the back of a donkey forty li, sixty li, or eighty li, to a little country place, where she lives a month in the chapel and goes out into the homes of the people to teach and preach. Perhaps she rides a wheelbarrow to her next place; possibly she can rent a boat and go by water; but probably she walks, for she wants to get there. If it rains she pulls on her rubber boots, tucks up her skirt, puts up her umbrella and goes just the same.

"If a baby is burned or a foot is cut or a man comes down with chills and fever, she becomes doctor. She may have to give her patient a bath before she can diagnose the case, but she does not hesitate at that near so much as does the patient. Does someone refuse to eat rice gruel? She opens a tin of beef extract and makes a bowl of nourishing beef tea. Has someone heard of foreign vaccination and wants his family vaccinated? She gets the points from Shanghai, goes out to the family and it is soon over.

"Does a woman want a bit of sympathy? The missionary listens and comforts. Is there a quarrel? She resolves herself into a Hague tribunal and tries to adjust it. Does a poor fellow need work? She tries to find it for him. Is a family without shelter? She manages to tuck them into an old house in her compound until a place is found. She walks out on the hillside to be alone and to rest, meets a poor peasant or coolie, dives into her bag for a tract, then, remembering that he cannot read, she tells him of God and gives him the tract to give to some one else to read to him.

"There are city street chapels and classes in the catechism, classes in Chinese character and perhaps classes in cross-stitch or crochet work in order to persuade women to study the Gospel. She entertains crowds of women and children, drinks gallons of tea, asks and answers the same questions thousands of times, and shows troops of people through her house, even to turning down the bed and exhibiting two clean sheets. She plans new buildings for the work, interviews contractors, buys land by proxy, exhorts the servants to be honest, writes multitudes of notes in addition to her business and friendly correspondence and goes to committee meetings to plan new work to do.

"She must look after her house, train a new servant, revise her wardrobe and devise ways to keep both house and wardrobe respectable and still have money enough left to keep a boy and girl or two in school, pay a Bible woman's salary, buy tracts to distribute, contribute to famine funds, bury a servant, help buy a coffin for a poor neighbor; and a little gift to the new bride, put a dollar into the Christmas collection, give a tea to the Christian Endeavor women, hire a rickshaw for women with tiny feet whom she needs to help her in the street chapels, purchase a gown for a deserving woman whose gown was stolen, build an addition to a crowded chapel, buy a few conveniences for the country chapels, and it takes not a little of her time to decide what is best not to buy.

"She takes her faithful Bible woman with her and off they go up the street to visit women they have never seen before, to tell them about the Gospel and to leave them some portions and tracts. As she makes her way in and out of cold, cheerless homes, often followed by children or passers-by, she is a diversion in the colorless lives of the women, who ask her questions no one in the home-land would dare to ask, questions about her food, her dress, and much else. Between questions she tries to tell them that Jesus died for them.

"She goes to look up delinquent church members, carries flowers to sick ones, and encourages the discouraged just as you do at home, and it fits the needs of the Chinese heart just as well as it does any heart at home."—Record of Christian Work.

GREENSBORO CHURCH.

The church services last Sunday were devoted to "Missions." The choir rendered a lovely hymn, "Reapers are Needed," followed by five little girls in a dialogue, "The Need of the Nations," at the close of which they sang "Little Missionaries." We had a map talk on our work in Japan and the need of better equipment there.

Mr. Rountree, our pastor, preached an eloquent sermon on "Christian Stewardship," full of true missionary zeal. Our church is awakening to the vital importance of missions and, with a "missionary pastor," we are bound to crown this interest with success.

The books, "Sunrise in the Sunrise Kingdom," for our Mission Study Class, have been received. Thank you for your promptness.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

Besides writing a personal letter to each Sunday-school superintendent, I take this means of calling attention to the Sunday school and Christian Endeavor Convention of the Eastern N. C. Christian Conference. The Convention meets at Pope's Chapel, Franklin County, Tuesday after the third Sunday in July. The railroad station is Franklinton, N. C. Arrangements will be made to accommodate all delegates, so let every Sunday school Superintendent and every Christian Endeavor President see that his organization has the full representation. Every one is earnestly requested to do all in his power to make the convention a great one, and one that will mean much for the work of the young people of the Conference and for the extension of His cause. J. C. STUART, Sec. Pro tem.

WITH THE VANGUARD.

Some Notes and Comment on What Sunday Schools and Societies are Doing.

The Young People's Convention of North Carolina and Virginia Conference will be held at Haw River, July 15-16. The program was printed here last week. Every school should be represented. If your delegates have not been elected, elect them at once. So should Endeavor societies.

The Young People's Convention of the Western North Carolina Conference will be held at Randleman, July 25-27. Only two more Sundays are left in which to elect delegates. This convention should be well attended, for the program is a very attractive one.

A Brooklyn society recently played a trick on the members who come to the business meetings late—after the business is over and in time for the refreshments. This time they reversed the program, had the refreshments first, and the stragglers got in just in time to hear the reports and addresses.

The 26th International Convention of Christian Endeavor will be held at Los Angeles, July 9-14. By the time this issue of THE SUN reaches the reader the convention will be at work. Endeavorers should follow closely the proceedings of the convention as they appear in the daily papers and C. E. World.

Next Sunday is World's Sunday School day. Special prayers should be offered for the World's Sunday School Convention then in session at Zurich, Switzerland. The superintendent should have a special program, but if this cannot be arranged, he should at least devote five minutes' talk to it. There are now 300,000 Sunday Schools in the world, with more than 30,000,000 officers, teachers and scholars.

The Sunday School of the First Church, Greensboro, conducted an excursion to Mt. Airy, Wednesday of this week, by way of Winston-Salem. Cheap round trip fares were offered. In addition a large crowd from the school there were many others from Greensboro and intermediate towns who took advantage of the low round trip rate.

At a recent meeting of the Charlotte Baraca-Philathea Union strong resolutions were passed expressing disapproval of Sabbath desecration carried on at Lakewood Park in that city. The resolutions set out that there are 1,250 Baracas and Philatheas in Charlotte, and it appears to be a power for good.

The Baraca class of the Christian Sunday School, of Norwood, Ohio, on Saturday, February 15th, undertook and accomplished successfully the feat of building themselves a class room in a single afternoon. The class had been meeting in a small room in a basement, but had outgrown it. So money was raised, material purchased and the afternoon set as the time to do the work.

The Seward Bible class of the Central Hill Baptist Sunday School, Isle of Wight Co., Va., claims to be the largest distinctly rural Bible class in the country. It is in a strictly country church and has a membership of 156. It was organized less than four years ago with 8 members. This class shows what a country class can do. Its history is interesting. The Adult Bible Class Monthly this month gives more than a page to the class.

The Atlanta, Ga., council has passed an ordinance forbidding negroes to rent or purchase property in a city block when a majority of the inhabitants desire their exclusion.

HOW I CAME TO WRITE MY STORY, "THE ORDINARY MAN."

By Harold Begbie.

An unknown correspondent, the librarian of a university in America, writing to me about Broken Earthenware and In the Hands of the Potter, asked me some months ago to write a book dealing with "the conversions of ordinary people, respectable men and women, who do not indulge in drunkenness, or theft, or lying, or gross immorality." He went on to say: "Because of the conditions that surround them, many people know only those who belong to the respectable classes, and I am sure that many of your readers, of whom I am one, would welcome a work narrating the religious experiences of our brethren who belong neither to the 'submerged tenth' nor to the 'fourhundred.'"

Of course the supreme test of religion is its influence upon the central host of humanity. If education and refinement can safeguard civilization, and if the bulk of mankind can advance in virtue and righteousness without religion, such conversions as are narrated in Broken Earthenware might well become merely curious and interesting problems in psychology.

The conversion of a respectable man can be as wonderful and beautiful a thing as the conversion of a great sinner; but it is seldom that the result of that conversion utters itself in an uprush of burning and torrential love which bursts into the flood-gates of self-repression, and flows over the whole brotherhood of man in a tide of self-forgetting care and compassion.

And now in this book I show that conversion is a quite common experience among ordinary men, is very often nothing more than a secret turning of the face toward God, a private decision to live a new life, a personal and wholly tranquil choice of the soul for Christ as its Master and Saviour. No priest appears to be necessary, the excitement of the revivalist preacher are absent; in the privacy of its own soul, the spirit turns from evil and faces toward good.—N. Y. Advocate.

NOTICE! NOTICE!

The Young People's Convention of the Western North Carolina Christian Conference will hold its annual meeting with the Randleman Christian church July 25-27, 1913.

The Sunday school at this church has extended to the convention a cordial invitation to meet there, which invitation the executive committee has gladly accepted; and we feel sure that with Randleman as our meeting place we can have one of the best conventions ever held in the Western Conference. That the convention may be a success I want to ask that every pastor and also every Sunday school superintendent begin now to make plans and have every school within the bounds of the conference represented. A large delegation is one of the very necessary things that go to make a convention a success. Brethren, please see that your school is represented in the Randleman Convention.

Yours in the work,
J. F. MORGAN, President.

Children's Missionary Stories

STORIES are—yes, must be—used by every wide-awake worker among, or leader or teacher of, children.

MISSIONARY STORIES seem to have been the one field well-nigh overlooked until Mrs. Alice Moreton Burnett, Corresponding Secretary for the Woman's Board for Home Missions of the Christian Church, made a compilation of thirty interesting, instructive stories pertaining especially and directly to missions that are sure to be appreciated by workers, teachers, leaders, pastors, fathers, mothers—and the children.

Some of the Important Events of both Home Missions and Foreign Missions are also included, together with Suggestions For Junior Leaders.

They make a book 5 x 7 inches in size, 128 pages, red cloth binding—a handsome, attractive volume. Price 35c per copy postpaid.

MRS. C. A. BOONE RESTS FROM HER LABORS.

Aunt Mollie Boone dead! Those four short words will carry a pang of genuine sorrow to many a heart, touched by her life and inspired by its example. Nearly a quarter century ago Mrs. Boone, known to Elon students as Aunt Mollie, and her husband, Rev. C.A. Boone, Mollie, and her husband, Rev. C. A. Boone, known likewise more intimately as Uncle At, came to Elon among the first of those far-seeing, faithful members of the Christian Church, who saw in Elon the hope of our brotherhood, and built a home here, which for many years was Elon's most popular boarding establishment for young men. In those days the College had no boarding accommodations for young men, and it was by the influence and success of its private boarding houses that the College was enabled to establish its reputation for good, wholesome board at reasonable rates. And chief among these establishments was the Boone House.

And the chief attraction of the Boone House were the two devoted Christians who were its inspiration and its light. Aunt Mollie and Uncle At were not satisfied merely to provide good things for the physical man, but they gave themselves in loving service to the boys. Loving counsel, words of sympathy, tender and heart-felt, words of encouragement, generous and inspiring, for deeds well done, words of reproach, sweet, gracious, tearful, for the mistakes of buoyant, exuberating, over-enthusiastic youth—these were the real secrets of the hold Aunt Mollie and Uncle At had on the Boone House boys. They were father and mother to them, and were loved and honored as such.

This writer counts himself fortunate, when as a fourteen-year-old boy he sought education at this sacred place, that his path was directed to the Boone House and that for five years he enjoyed the fellowship and the uplifting counsel of these great-hearted, noble-souled Christians. Aunt Mollie immediately adopted me into the inner circle of her counsel and gave to my life the direction it so much needed at that time. I can never live long enough to thank her memory sufficiently for her loving sympathy and tender counsel; and what she did for me, she did for every Boone House boy during the eighteen or twenty years during which she kept her home open to young men. In the lives of these young men she has erected for herself a "monument than bronze more enduring" and has gotten for herself, all unconsciously on her part, a grateful memory of her in their hearts that the flight of years cannot obliterate. And every one of them who chances to read this poor tribute to her great life by one who knew her sterling worth, will say, "Truly a good woman has gone to her reward; truly a mother in Israel has fallen."

One of the characteristic qualities of Aunt Mollie's make-up was that she had the implicit confidence and unalloyed affection of every inmate of the Boone House and yet never took their part in any matter of discipline or difference of opinion between themselves and the Faculty of the College. She would not allow the officers of the College to be criticised in her presence without immediately coming to their defense. This attitude of hers was excellent for the young men and of tremendous influence in assisting the College administration. A smaller soul than hers would have pursued a different policy and eventually have found a smaller place in the affections of the very ones whose friendship she was anxious to enjoy. She was the old-style type of friend, who aimed more at helping than at gratifying her household, and she did both and they loved and honored her for it. Long may her kind continue, for of such is the Kingdom of Heaven, and they are the light of the world and also the salt of the earth.

Borne to her resting place in the burying ground of the community she loved so well, and for whose up-building she had labored and sacrificed for so many eventful years, upon the strong arms of her two sons, Dr. W. H. Boone and Mr. D. L. Boone, her two sons-in-law, Messrs. J. P. Avent and J. M. Saunders, and two of her numerous nephews, Messrs. J. Adolphus Long and Moody Strowd, through a double line of floral bearers of the Ladies' Aid Society of her church, followed by one of the largest concourses of sorrowing loved ones and friends ever assembled for a funeral here, having fallen on sleep in her seventieth year from a paralytic stroke four days before, her last end seemed suited to the excellent life she had lived. Tenderly her mortal remains were laid in their final resting place, covered with flowers, around which grief-stricken hearts lingered, weeping softly, for many minutes after the benediction was said, to return to the sterner duties of life, enriched by her example and inspired by her life to live nobler and work worthier in the Master's appointed place.

We have some letters and dues for the Corner, but came just too late for this week, as I had made out my report before they came. They will appear next week.

The larger children are planning great things for the "4th." We are hoping they will not be disappointed, though the weather is very warm.

I hope the brethren will take notice of the letters we have mailed out to them, this week, and govern themselves accordingly.

We are having very encouraging prospects for crop and garden. The rains have not been too much and everything is growing and looking fine.

At the meeting of the Trustees it was left with Dr. J. O. Atkinson, Chairman, and the Superintendent to secure the help needed at the Orphanage. Together with Miss McCullers, of Durham, we have arranged with Miss Sudie McCauley, of Chapel Hill, to fill the places.

Miss McCauley will teach in the graded school, during the school-year, and at the same time assist in the work here. We want to leave no stone unturned for the educational advantage this year.

DONATIONS:

We have received, this week, from the Lewisburg Christian church, Lewisburg, Pa., a very valuable package. It contained, 24 dresses, 1 skirt, and 11 pieces of underwear. These goods were all newly made up in good style and are very much appreciated. This supplies our smaller girls very well, and if some more of our churches will send us a bundle for the larger girls—ages, from thirteen to sixteen—it will be very gratefully received. You might arrange it this way: Say your church wants to make up a box of this kind, each family could furnish a garment, or one family the goods and another make it up. Let's see if we can't have school-clothes for our boys and girls by the time school opens.

GOOD YEAR FOR ORPHANAGES.

This is a good year for orphanages. The annual report of the superbly administered Baptist orphanage at Thomasville shows money in the treasury. The Presbyterians are in the midst of a campaign to raise a fund of $50,000 the income from which will go to the support of their institution at Barium Springs. The Methodists are planning great developments of their model Children's Home at Winston-Salem, three new buildings being in immediate prospect. The plans for this home have not been fully announced, but The Chronicle learns that, through the generosity of two individuals, two new $10,000 cottages, one for babies and one for girls, are to be erected immediately, the contracts to be let probably within a few days. A little later an administration building to contain also the school, will be erected at a cost of $25,000 to $30,000, $10,000 of this money being pledged by Charlottee Methodists. A model school is planned for this institution to have not only the ordinary courses but vocational branches, such as stenography, book-keeping, banking, courses in mechanics and wood working, printing, domestic science, millinery, agriculture, etc.

There has been a very perceptible quickening of interest in charitable, educational and uplift work in North Carolina and this section during the past few years. This quickening has been reflected in a number of movements and in none more than that for giving the orphans a better chance. People are beginning to want every child to have the opportunity to develop any talent that may lie within him.

Full many a gem of purest ray serene
The dark unfathomed caves of oceans bear.

Full many a flower is born to blush unseen
And waste its fragrance on the desert air.

It is the duty of people with means and knowledge and opportunity to search out and polish these gems and to cultivate these flowers. The fact that a child is brought up in an orphanage is no mark or indication of that child's native capacity and certainly it is no discredit to the child that he was unfortunate enough to have his parents die when he was but a babe.

Let the good work for the orphans keep up.—Charlotte Evening Chronicle.

CLUB GUARANTEES SATISFACTION.

We have frequently called attention to the fact that everyone who has secured a piano or self-player piano through the Christian Sun Piano Club has been pleased and that not a single case of dissatisfaction has occurred. That is a remarkable record.

What is the cause?

The explanation is very simple. The Club is so organized that dissatisfaction is absolutely impossible. The privileges given to Club members protect them perfectly against every form of dissatisfaction. As a result every member is pleased, or as most of them express it, "Delighted."

The great saving in price which is made possible by uniting our interests in a Club of one hundred buyers is a big feature, but only one of the many attractions to the Club. Write for a copy of the illustrated catalog and study the plan. It will save you upwards of one hundred dollars and will insure absolute satisfaction. SWALLOWING SUNSHINE.

Lily stood one glorious morning by a sunny window, through which came a flood of rich, warm sunshine.

"What a lovely morning," said Lily. So she picked up a spoon and put it right in the sun-ray, and then in her mouth. "O, mamma, I have swallowed a spoonful of sunshine," she cried, with a merry laugh.

"I will tell you at bed time whether you have or not," said mother. And when the Sandman's hour came around, it was found that through all that long summer day Lily had been sweet-tempered and bright.

"You have, indeed, been my little sunbeam," said mother as she tucked Lily in bed and kissed her good night.—Phyllis Rowland.

"HASN'T FAILED YET"

CHRISTIAN PATRIOTISM.

"Righteousness Exalteth a Nation, but Sin is a Reproach to Any People."

In a striking sermon on patriotism yesterday, the Rev. H. E. Rountree, pastor of the First Christian church, drew a parallel between the passion of patriotism and the passion of religion, between the devotion to country and the devotion to Christ.

He drew his text from Proverbs, "Righteousness exalteth a nation, but sin is a reproach to any people," and he called the subject of his sermon, "Christian Patriotism."

He began by defining patriotism. He declared that it is not an ill feeling towards one's neighbors, that it is not a lack of respect toward someone else, that it is not an air of superiority, that it is not even superiority itself, but that it is an unflinching belief that one's country has a mission to perform, which it is impossible for any other country to perform, and a uniting to give the best we have that this purpose may be fulfilled. It is an unflinching belief in the world-task of our compatriots and a zeal for helping in this work.

In this season of the national holiday, said the Rev. Rountree, when our thoughts naturally turn to the celebration of the independence of the nation which was purchased by the blood of our forefathers, it is appropriate for the church of the living God to consider its responsibility to make the nation what it ought to be and to reproduce in its citizenship the pattern of Christ.

No nation needs a high-strung patriotism more than America because it is such a cosmopolitan nation. No nation includes such a variety of races and any such nation must have a high-strung and real patriotism if it is to secure unity of conviction and action.

No other nation is so gigantically resourceful as ours and it takes patriotism to conserve resources to the highest good of the nation and of other nations in the earth.

There is a tendency to let fade the great significance of America, of the Revolutionary war, of the Fourth of July. The birth of independence made us free, gave us life, liberty, and the pursuits of happiness, and for us to digress from that liberty and for which our forefathers died is unwise and approaches treason.

The older nations were built on the principle that the people existed for the state, not the state for the people. Even the church, which should inculcate the Christian principle of the equality of all men, and this aristocratic principle grafted upon it and came to be a governmental hierarchy.

Out of the breaking down of that hierarchy by the Reformation was born our nation. Even after the Reformation in Europe the new principle of equality was not fully realized and it was not till the propagandists of the Reformation reached the virgin soil of America that they could make that principle flourish.

Liberty was born as the fruitage of brotherly love and was the application of government founded upon Christian principles. If we do not continue our government upon Christian principles we are traitors to our birth-right. The Declaration of Independence was not indeed to be the herald of the Christian religion, but it was the outgrowth of Christian principles and that act stamped us before the world as a real Christian nation, and the first of nations to practice principles of equality.

Hence the lesson of our national holiday ought not to be excluded from the pulpit, from the school, or the home. The true idea of citizenship should be grounded into the very fibre of growing life. It is our duty not only to make men citizens, but to make them citizens worthy of the present life as of the life to come.

The greatest danger to America is that it will fail to recognize the leadership of God as did the Israelites of old. Patriotism is not superiority, a patriot is not the politician who speaks loudly of the flag, and then robs the public coffers. A true patriot is he who adheres to righteousness and therefore with exalts the nation, fighting against sin, which is a reproach to any people. The patriots are they who truly and faithfully do their duty to their country and to their God. Love of country is born of love of God.

Jesus himself was a patriot. He died for His country and His people. We are only patriots when we give to our country unswerving devotion of our lives. Men, the fate of our country is in your hands and you are not doing your duty unless you are always at the poles voting for the side of righteousness, if there is such a side. Never fail to vote, unless it happens that both sides represent sin to such an extent that you cannot honestly vote for either.

Whiskey is unpatriotic because it is driving the nation to ruin and yet there are some who purpose to be Christian who will tolerate this sin which is "a reproach to any people." In our common deeds, in our every act, we are unconsciously declaring as from the house-tops that spirit which is within us. Patriotism is a spirit belonging to the inner recesses of a man's soul. Love for country is in harmony with love for family and love for God.

Then the speaker drew his parallel between patriotism and Christianity, defining Christianity as an unflinching belief that the church has a mission which it is impossible for anything else in the world to perform. We need, said he, a high-strung religion because we embrace all peoples, all tribes.

President W. A. HARPER,
Box 79 ELON COLLEGE, N. C.

Nothing but a stringent religion will unite such a people. Nothing is so resourceful as Christ in the conservation of peace and love.

There is also a tendency to let fade the significance of Christ and his birth. But any digression from that significance is as truly treason as digression from the significance of the birth of independence. Our great danger in religion is that sin will be grafted upon the church. God is to rule; let him rule. Jesus died for us and we are fulfilling our destiny only when we give our greatest devotion to Him.

Christianity is for the uplift of man, the home, and the nation, and we need no greater proof than the fact that the greatest nations have always been those founded on Christian principles to show the validity of the truism that righteousness exalteth a nation, but that sin is a reproach to any people.—Greensboro Daily News.

A JUDGE'S OPINION OF HORNER.

A Successful Graduate of That School

"It was my good fortune to be prepared for college at the Horner Military School when its principal was Mr. J. H. Horner, who was then regarded as one of the ablest educators in the State. At that time the school ranked easily with the foremost institutions of its kind in the South. Owing to changed conditions, which called for better school facilities, and the consequent development in educational methods, it has steadily and greatly improved in every respect, and now, under the able management of Mr. Jerome C. Horner, a son of the former principal, it is equal to the best. Any boy who enters this institution of learning will always be surrounded by the best influences and advantages for moral, mental and physical training. It is an excellent school and deserves to be strongly commended to public favor and patronage."—Hon. Platt D. Walker, LL. D., Associated Justice Supreme Court of North Carolina.

Horner Military School has for its purpose: (1) The thorough preparation of boys for entrance to colleges, universities, government and technical schools. (2) To give a thorough secondary preparation for a business career. (3) To cultivate, in boys, truthfulness, self-control, a right sense of honor, habits of systematic and close application in the performance of every duty. (4) To help boys to grow physically, mentally and morally into the highest type of Christian Manhood. Does it better today than it ever did.

Elon College

For Both Men and Women

Elon College, North Carolina

For a quarter century Elon College has rendered the best families of the South a paragon service in providing young men and young women with the best mental, moral and physical training under positive Christian influences, tho entirely free from sectarianism.

Karl Lehman, of Boston, testifies that "of all the Colleges I have visited as International Field Secretary of Christian Endeavor during six years, the spirit of Elon College appeals to me as most genuinely Christian." Elon College is situated in the delightful hill country, a section unsurpassed for beauty, with a climate far-famed for its healthfulness. There is no medical fee, for there is no necessity for it. Its campus, comprising twenty-five acres of native oak and hickory, shrubbery, winding walks and driveways, is one of the most beautiful in the South and, with its two unsurpassed gymnasias, provides abundant opportunity for recreation and relaxation.

The splendid equipment of Elon College was only made possible through liberal endowment. It maintains seven elegant new buildings, especially designed and appointed for college work. These are furnished with every known convenience; steam heat, electric lights, running water, baths and sewerage. The College plant is conservatively valued at $300,000.00.

Elon College is distinctly a high-grade institution, though its charges are moderate. Its graduates are admitted to the graduate departments of all the great universities without examination. Its literary and scientific courses are arranged in various departments which lead to the degrees of Master of Arts, Bachelor of Arts, Bachelor of Science, Bachelor of Philosophy, Bachelor of Pedagogy, and a three-years' course leading to the degree of Licentiate of Instruction, designed especially for teachers. This institution affords special opportunities for training in Piano, Voice, Expression, Fine Arts, Normal Training, Physical Culture and Commercial Practice.

The Faculty consists of twenty-one specialists; men and women selected not only for their superior teaching ability, but also for their exemplary character and manners.

The student body numbers nearly four hundred and comes from thirteen states.

The lowest Rates in the South, only $131 to $191 per College session of ten months. Fall Term always opens the first Wednesday in September. For full descriptive catalogue and view-book, address

A YOUNG INVENTOR.

Among the curiosities of the United States Patent Office is an invention by a six-year-old boy. This is a toy with sliding disks, capable of making a delightful noise—to a six-year-old—and its inventor is said to be the youngest person in the world to whom a patent has ever been issued.—Selected Moulinais, who flew in an aeroplane from Paris to Warsaw, 930 miles, in one day, continued to Dvinsk, Russia, and thence to St. Petersburg, covering in all, within a week, 1,600 miles, a record for cross-country flight.

Edward Perreyon, a French aviator, recently broke, at Vienna, the world's record for altitude flight in an aeroplane carrying two passengers, reaching a height of 15,480 feet.

On June 17 Maurice Prevost, a French aviator, made an aeroplane flight at Rennes, France, at the rate of 111½ miles an hour.

The total number of deaths in aviation is 313, of whom 71 have perished since January 1.

Funds aggregating more than a quarter of a million dollars are bequeathed to various activities of the Presbyterian Church by the will of J. Milton Colton, a former Philadelphia banker.

SOUTHERN SCHEDULES.

Ashville, N. C., May 7.—Better facilities than ever before given for reaching the tourist resorts of Western North Carolina are provided in the summer schedules and through car arrangements just announced by the Southern Railway.

Beginning June 1, two sleeping cars will be operated daily between New Orleans and Asheville, one via Mobile, Montgomery, and Atlanta, and the other via Meridian, Birmingham and Chattanooga. On the same date the sleeping car service between Memphis and Asheville on trains 35 and 36 will be extended to Lake Toxaway and a through sleeping car line will be established between Memphis, Asheville and Waynesville, the car to be handled on the "Memphis Special." Through sleeping cars between Savannah and Asheville will be put into service June 1, between Charleston, Asheville and Waynesville on June 2.

Greatly improved service between Augusta and Asheville has been arranged. The parlor car service which was operated last year in connection with the "Carolina Special" will again be given and in addition a new sleeping car line will be inaugurated via Blackville and Columbia, leaving Augusta at 11:45 P. M., arriving Asheville at 2:10 P. M., and leaving Asheville at 4:30 P. M., arriving Augusta at 8:20 P. M.

On June 15 a sleeping car line will be established between Jacksonville and Asheville in addition to the car operated between Jacksonville and Cincinnati via Asheville. Daily sleeping car service between Atlanta and Lake Toxaway will be established on June 22, additional trains being operated between Hendersonville and Lake Toxaway to handle this car. Parlor car service on trains 5 and 6 between Asheville and Lake Toxaway will be inaugurated May 25.

Tickets will be on sale June 23 to 28 inclusive. Final return limit to reach original starting point by midnight July 13, 1913.

DEATHS

Harrell.

Clinton Parker Harrell, son of Joel E. and Cora Harrell, departed this life on June 6th, 1913, aged 1 year and 3 days. He was a bright little child, but was greatly afflicted during his brief life. The parents have the sympathy and prayers of many friends in their bereavement. The funeral service was conducted at Liberty Spring Christian church, by the writer. I. W. JOHNSON.

Allen.

Near Haw River, N. C., July 3rd, 1913, in the seventy-third year of her age, Barbra A. Allen, the wife of the late Levi W. Allen, to whom she was married June 24th, 1866. She was a consistent member of Long's Chapel Christian church, where her funeral and interment were conducted by her pastor, assisted by Rev. P. H. Fleming, of Burlington, N. C. Mother sleeps in Jesus. May God comfort the bereaved family.

JEREMIAH W. HOLT.

Kernodle.

Whereas, It hath pleased our heavenly Father to remove from our Society, Sister Martha Kernodle, wife of R. T. Kernodle, May 9, 1913, we offer the following resolutions of respect and thus record our appreciation of her beautiful life:

1. That in the death of Sister Kernodle the Ladies' Aid Society of Union Christian church has lost a worthy member, and we feel that we have sustained an irreparable loss.

2. That her exemplary Christian life, her faith in God, her humility, her meekness, her charity, attributes of Christian character, so beautifully combined in her life, shall be cherished and honored in our lives.

3. That we seek so far as possible to emulate her Christian example.

4. That we extend to all those who are grief-stricken by this sad dispensation of Divine Providence, our deepest sympathy. May they look up to our Heavenly Father, who doeth all things well, and thus be drawn nearer to Him.

5. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, praying the Father's sustaining grace upon them in their afflictions, also that a copy be sent to The Christian Sun for publication, and a copy spread upon our minutes.

THE SELF-PLAYER PIANO.

The value of a piano in the home is proportional to the amount of pleasure and entertainment which the family as a whole derives from it. If only one member of the family can play, the instrument will be idle the larger part of the time. If no one can play, then the piano is simply an ornament.

That is why the self-player piano is so popular. Every member of the family can play it and the more you use it, the more you enjoy it, for it educates and cultivates your taste for music. It is without question the greatest entertainer of the age.

The Christian Sun Piano Club brings the best self-player piano within easy reach. The big saving in price and the convenient terms make it easy for you to own one. Write for a copy of the Club's illustrated catalog of pianos and self-player pianos. You will be surprised and delighted with the plan. Address the Managers, Ludden & Bates, Christian Sun Piano Club Dept., Atlanta, Ga. Advt.

PAYING THE MILEAGE.

To bring a girl who lives 519 miles from Los Angeles to the Convention at Los Angeles society drew a map showing the stations between the girl's home and the Convention city. The approximate cost of bringing this Endeavorer to Los Angeles is about five cents a mile, and each Endeavorer was asked to contribute the expenses for as many miles as he could. The members eagerly watched the progress, and the way in which the miles were eaten up.

SUPERB EQUIPMENT.

If every parent who reads this paper could but inspect the splendid equipment of Oak Ridge Institute, North Carolina's widely-known preparatory school for boys, there would not be room enough at this school for one-tenth of next season's students.

One glance would suffice to fall completely in love with the handsome, elaborately furnished buildings. A round of the beautiful grounds of one one hundred and fifty acres of hill, trees, grass, gravel, athletic grounds, race track, baseball and football grounds, tennis courts, etc., would convince anyone that this school is eminently fitted to develop physical health as well as mental soundness.

To converse with its faculty of college-bred Christian men would only strengthen one's confidence in entrusting Oak Ridge Institute with the care and training of a growing boy.

A complete story of this school's success in preparing young men for college, life and business is fully told in its illustrated catalogue which the management will gladly send free to any one interested. Address J. A. and M. H. Holt, Proprietors, Oak Ridge, N. C. Advt.

- (5.) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

Editorial Briefs

When In Doubt—

There are times of doubt and darkness to all of us. We hardly know, in such times, what to believe, and what not to believe. We seem benumbed, chilled through and through, halted, and without a pilot. Possibly in such experiences, Spurgeon's remedy is the safest: "One thing I have made up my mind to; whether I find present joy or present sorrow, present commendation or present censure, I will be faithful to my Lord."

Riches and Religion.

Many regard their religion very much as some regard their riches, a thing to be laid aside and kept to be drawn on at some future date. And as many defer using their riches till too late, so some defer using their religion till it becomes worthless. Riches and religion are for use, and are only valuable when in use. Only that part of a man's wealth ever benefits him which he puts into service. So there is no hoarding of religion; only that is of any value to a man which he puts into service.

Real Benefactors.

Those who have lived to bless man-kind, and make the world better and happier for their living, have not sought to live in luxury and die rich. John Wesley, who made the world his debtor for all time, said: "Money must needs pass through my hands, but I will take care it shall not rest there. If I leave behind me above ten pounds ($50.00), bear witness that I lived and died a thief and a robber." Wealth is for use, not abuse; and all of it belongs to God our Creator. We are but stewards in His employ and to Him must one day give an account for every dollar that comes to our hands.

The Source of Happiness.

Big salaries, high honors, lucrative positions, electric fans, marble floors, elegant offices, easy places cannot bring peace of mind, nor happiness of heart. These may contribute to one's comfort, and satisfy one's sense of pride; but the source of happiness must be sought elsewhere. Goethe well declared, "He is happiest, be he king or peasant, who finds peace in his own home." Where there is domestic infelicity there are not enough millions on earth to purchase peace of mind and joy of heart. Home is the real fountain from which flow the sweets, or the bitters, of life. Solomon was a philosopher when he wrote

(Prov. 15:17) "Better is a dinner of herbs where love is, than stalled ox and hatred therewith."

Nickels.

How the nickles swell into dollars, and the dollars into millions is demonstrated by the moving picture "shows." During the past year, officials say, $319,000,000 was taken in, as admittance fees, by the moving picture business, mostly in nickles. There was a total of 3,600,000,000 spectators, which, counting our population at ninety million, would indicate that every one of us went to a moving picture show forty times during the year; and that each of us paid, not $2.00, but nearer $4.00 to see the moving pictures. Suppose we were "assessed" four dollars each for missions, a contribution to assist in bringing the world to a saving knowledge of our Christ? We would cry out that the assessment was "too heavy," and could not be met.

A Praying Pastor.

A contemporary tells of a pastor who had conducted a series of meetings for two weeks with small attendance and no visible results. At the end of that time the meeting closed, and the pastor went home a miserable man. He spent the whole Sunday night in prayer, wrestling with God, begging for souls. Next day the pastor got in his buggy and went through the community telling the people the meetings would begin again immediately. The people came together, the preacher spoke from a burning and burdened heart, pouring out his soul to God in prayer for the unsaved. A revival broke out, swept the entire community and practically every unsaved person in the vicinity was brought into the Kingdom. God yet stands ready, even in this commercial and busy time, to make good his word spoken by our Savior and recorded in Matt. 21:22, "And all things, whatsoever ye shall ask in prayer, believing, ye shall receive."

Keep On.

Christ was a vital artist; He set before us not a fact accomplished, but a life to be attained. He was "the way"—that by which we go, along which we travel. That is an open, not a closed, way. Through it we strive to reach that which we have not yet reached. The Christian invitation is ever that of "Keep on." What we achieve today does not accomplish the journey, but makes that of tomorrow easier, better, happier. No man is as good as he ought to be, as good today as he may be tomorrow. We go from grace to grace, glory to glory. "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy strength, and with all thy mind" (Luke 10:27). That command carries a long way, a way long enough for us to travel all our days. Where is the person who has attained all the fullness of it? The Christian invitation is, "Keep on."

Our Greatest Possessions.

We work, and worry, and strive to attain. Yet our greatest possessions, our most valuable belongings are not acquired; they are bestowed as gifts. In the world of things, God gives us the pure air, the vital sunshine, life-sustaining water. These are not acquired; they are bestowed. So likewise of those possessions that make for future welfare and eternal life. Faith is not an acquirement, it is a gift. If our faith is not strong enough, we should ask that it be made strong. Heb. 12:2 "Jesus the author and finisher of our faith." That newness of life, without which one cannot enter into the Kingdom of God, is not acquired. It is a gift from above. And that wisdom which is most essential cometh down from above. No wonder we are commanded to pray without ceasing. Our richest and best belongings, the ones essential, come to us in answer to prayer—as gifts of our heavenly Father.

Teach Us To Pray.

In one of the denominational papers we find the following "Prayer" credited to Robert Louis Stevenson: "The day returns and brings us the pretty round of irritating concerns and duties. Help us to play the man, help us to perform them with laughter and kind faces, let cheerfulness abound with industry. Give us to go blithely on our business all this day, bring us to our resting beds weary and content, and undishonored, and grant us in the end the gift of sleep, Amen." Besides being execrable English of unpardonable construction that is no prayer at all. We are surprised that a church paper should publish it and send it as such. It is addressed to no Deity, has no reference to heaven, and is not concerned about a hereafter. Any healthy man with a good digestion and a sunny disposition can live out every day to the full all the implication of that "prayer," and have nothing to strive for in the doing. A real prayer confesses our own weakness and insufficiency and makes us reach out and up in an effort to get grace and strength. Real prayer admits that this earth is not what it ought to be, and that Heaven should come in its place, and that we are weak and wayward children and need a Father to help and to guide us. Rather than pray this "prayer" offered by Stephenson and approved by our contemporary one would ten thousand times better do as did the publican in Luke 18:13 "And the publican, standing afar off, would not lift up so much as his eyes unto heaven, but smote upon his breast, saying, God be merciful to me a sinner."

If Christianity had never come to China, the Chinese would still be asleep. Everything seems to be going into the melting-pot and Christianity has an opportunity of making a mold into which a new civilization may be cast. Of all times in history, now is the time for Christian churches to put forth every effort to aid the Chinese in remolding their institutions and shaping their destiny. —BISHOP BASHFORD.

Dirt and filth accumulate. Cleanliness does not. It requires eternal vigilance and labor to maintain clean and healthful surroundings. But it pays to have a clean, attractive neighborhood; pays in dollars and cents and in pride, joy and self-respect.

EDITORIAL

AMONG THE HILLS.

A party of delightful friends came by last week, had compassion on a much perspiring editor, and took him in a speedy and comfortable automobile up to the mountains. Blowing Rock, where the breezes are always brisk and cool, was the objective point. We do not see why every body in the world does not want to go to Blowing Rock, North Carolina, in the hot summer time. It is 4,300 feet above the sea, the atmosphere is cool and crisp, the water is the clearest and coolest we have ever found anywhere, and the scenery cannot be surpassed. If Blowing Rock were as accessible as Asheville or Hendersonville, which it far exceeds in altitude, the houses there would not be able to accommodate the visitors. But it is twenty-three long, high and rugged miles from the nearest railway station, and those miles are every one needed in ascending the mountains that rise hurriedly above you, in that short distance, for 2,000 feet. Blowing Rock presents a panorama, once you have reached its noble heights, the wildest, rarest, most rugged and reckless any where to be found in our Blue Ridge range. The fields of her slopes and foot-hills, unless immediately under the plow, are gorgeous in their profusion of snow-white mountain daisies. The precipitous heights, and the inaccessible far spreading hollows, are glorious in the glimmering, wavy yellow of the chestnut blossoms, while here and there the vigorous green patches of the mountain laurel appear as oases in a setting of gold. In the mountains you wonder and wonder and wonder at the greatness of God, His munificence, His plenty, His prodigality. God seems to have piled the mountains up, in rich and reckless profusion, one upon the other, and just flung them out and strowed them around without regard to quantity, number or abundance. He just made the mountains to be great and their scenery to be gorgeous and grand to look upon. That was sufficient. They were not made for use or wealth or any such thing. God made a great many things in this world just to be looked at, admired, beheld with reverence and with rapture. The mountains are of that class. They stand there, rest and recline there, through sunshine and through shadow, through calm and through storm to simply declare the eternity, the abidingness, the greatness, the glory of God.

Hotel accommodations at Blowing Rock are ample and reasonable, and it is worth all the climbing it requires to reach there to have a ravenous, mountain appetite, and a wholesome mountain meal.

Take a week off, beloved, and fly away to the mountains. It will be worth while in health, happiness, and the brighter hope of a better future. God dwells among the hills, and there restored health is found, a new lease on life is acquired, and a more wholesome outlook on tasks yet to be accomplished is had. The mountains give one a vision of dominion and power and greatness, and we struggling mortals need again and again such a vision.

RALEIGH.

The people of the entire State have an abiding interest in Raleigh, our capital. Other towns may be as beautiful for situation, and as thriving in industries; but all of us experience a feeling of patriotic emotion on visiting Raleigh that we do not experience elsewhere.

Recently this city of our pride has taken on an air of commercial and industrial activity, and improvement, commendable to contemplate and highly in keeping with the progress of our times. Commodious and praiseworthy hotels have been erected, business houses have been enlarged and beautified, the national government is spending a handsome sum on the federal court and post office building, her great banking houses are out-stripping each other in the volume of their business and the magnificence of their sky-scraper buildings, and a hundred tokens tell in unmistakable terms of Raleigh's commercial awakening and material development.

Now is it not singular (or is it the same old story that prosperity hardeneth the heart, and turneth away the minds of the people from their God?) that in the very wake of her wonderful commercial awakening Raleigh is getting a great deal of gratuitous, and not altogether wholesome, advertisement of her disregard for things holy and sacred? If the papers are printing it correctly Raleigh is fast coming to be a wide open town on Sunday, and her Bloombury Park is a flagrant violation of every law of the Sabbath. Games go on unhindered, they say, and the difference between the Sabbath and other days is that more people are there on Sunday, and the desecration is more flagrant. Raleigh is a city of churches, and has enjoyed the enviable reputation of being a God-fearing, Sabbath observing people. If her commercial awakening is to rob her of this fair reputation, then the price of her progress has been high indeed, too high for all time and eternity to compensate.

One other fact is obvious. Churches of different name and faiths in other towns of the State get together, secure the services of some able and efficient evangelist, and all join in the work of creating a religious awakening, having a great and stirring revival now and then. Thousands are brought to higher grounds of Christian living, and the moral tone of a whole city is changed for the better.

Since when has anybody read in the papers of Raleigh, our State capital, calling her people together through her several churches, for the purpose of making a united effort, in Christian service and fellowship, to reach the unreached, and save the unsaved, of the city? No city in our State has a finer opportunity than Raleigh. Her public auditorium is spacious, convenient and magnificent, her own population is ample, near-by towns are numerous, and accessible, and hundreds would be attracted to a Raleigh meeting conducted with unanimity and with power. In short why does not Raleigh, like our other cities, have now and then a great evangelistic meeting; or seek to have such?

These musings and meditations may not be worth much to the capable dwellers at our State capital, but others besides ourselves are thinking and wondering. Meanwhile the city of our common care and pride is getting a lot of advertising of the unenviable and ungodly sort, especially as to her Sabbath desecration and her Bloombury Park.

We are somehow possessed of the notion that a religious awakening is needed at our State capital to put the moral and Christian activity of the city on a par with its now wide awake industrial activity. Commercialism without Christianity is activity turned hellwards.

Don't bolt your noonday lunch. Take time to eat it leisurely and to enjoy it. Food half chewed is hard to digest and does you but little good.

NOTES AND PERSONALS.

—Hillsboro Street Christian church, Raleigh, is now without a pastor, Rev. L. F. Johnson, D. D., having closed his work there last week.

—Our good brother, J. R. Truitt, Greensboro sends $3.00 renewal for two years, (That is the way to make an editor's heart feel good), and then graciously adds, "I appreciate very much the wonderful improvement in THE SUN, and hope you will be able to maintain the high standard for the paper which you have set for it."

—Dr. Job. G. Holland and Bro. I. A. Luke of Holland, Va., lost their handsome residences by fire last Saturday night. Very little furniture was saved. The buildings were only partially insured, and the financial loss to both is heavy. It seems that Holland is fatal for its destructive fires. We sympathize with our good friends in the loss of their homes.

—"The World's Sunday School Convention is in session at Zurich, Switzerland. Did anybody go from North Carolina?" Biblical Recorder, July 16. Why, yes, beloved. Dr. W. C. Wicker, of Elon College, went as a delegate from this State, and we are of the opinion some others also. And, by the way, Dr. Wicker has an interesting letter from his journeyings in this week's SUN.

—Dr. N. G. Newman in deciding to leave the Holland-Holy Neck charge for the work at Defiance, Ohio, writes: "Have had a hard time in consenting to part from people I love as I never expect to love any other. My feelings have all been averse to the change, yet it seemed the only right course and so I am content. One of the best fields in our Southern Convention is on the look-out for a pastor."

—An inviting program has been prepared for the Young People's Convention of the Western N. C. Conference, at Randleman, Friday—Sunday, July 25-27th. Rev. J. F. Morgan is president of the Convention and Prof. R. C. Cox is Secretary. Dr. A. B. Kendall, Burlington, delivers the annual address Friday P. M. at 8 o'clock. Dr. P. H. Fleming, of Burlington, is to preach Sunday A. M. The "best yet" Convention is expected.

—Rev. J. C. Robertson and wife (nee Miss Mary Lou Pitt) who have been at Brevard, N. C., since their marriage in June, are guests of Dr. and Mrs. W. A. Harper at Elon. They go from here to Suffolk where Mr. Robertson is pastor of Oxford Methodist church. Mrs. Robertson is at home at Elon, and when the college opens in September will certainly be missed here where for several years she has been one of our most popular and efficient teachers.

—Rev. H. E. Rountree, Greensboro, June 11: "The excursion run by our Sunday school on the 10th to Mt. Airy and White Sulphur was a complete success. Over five hundred people went with us. A better behaved crowd I never saw. The diversion was a stimulus to us all. Today, everybody is speaking its praise, and congratulating the Committee; S. A. Caveness, Chairman, for the great way in which it was conducted and its great success."

—Greensboro Daily News, July 14:

The second of the series of open air meetings on the corner of Elm and Market streets which are being held in collaboration by the Salvation Army and the churches of the city, was held yesterday afternoon at 6:30 o'clock, the sermon being preached by the Rev. Mr. Rountree, of the Christian church.

A large crowd of about 100 interested auditors were present to attend the service, which was a success in every sense of the word. Rev. Mr. Rountree spoke weightily and appealingly on the subject, "Believe in the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved."

Next Sunday afternoon at the same hour the open air service will be lead by the Rev. Mr. White, of the Moravian church, and the public of Greensboro is cordially invited to be present and join in the service.

—Rev. L. I. Cox, under authority of the North Carolina and Virginia Conference recently conducted a series of meetings at Reidsville, N. C. Dr. A. B. Kendall, of Burlington, and Rev. J. F. Morgan, of Elon College, assisted, and the meetings were highly successful in every particular. As a result of these efforts, and of previous work by Bro. Cox, a Christian church was organized at Reidsville last Monday evening with thirty-one charter members. A suitable building lot has already been purchased and practically paid for and Bro. Cox and the Reidsville people are now anxious that a suitable building be erected at once. The outlook is hopeful, and the prospects for a Christian church there at an early date are very promising.

—We heartily congratulate our beloved friend and brother-in-tribulation, Dr. J. P. Barrett, and his co-laborers on the Herald of Gospel Liberty, in restoring to full size, beauty, and vigor The Herald so soon after being submerged by the Dayton flood. The Herald grows younger and richer with increasing years and Editor Barrett has certainly made the whole denomination his debtor in giving to the world one of the very best church papers published. Every reader of THE CHRISTIAN SUN ought also to be a reader of The Herald of Gospel Liberty to see and realize what the Christians are doing not only in the South, but throughout the whole country. The Herald is a credit to the entire church and is certainly doing a great work in forwarding the Kingdom of Christ.

—Our Eastern Va. Sunday school workers are contemplating a great meeting in their Sunday School Convention at Suffolk next week, beginning Tuesday July 22nd.

—Rev. N. G. Newman, D. D., Holland, Va., has accepted a call to the Defiance church, Defiance, Ohio, and with it the professorship of New Testament Greek and Literature in the Christian Biblical Institute of Defiance College. Dr. Newman is to spend the month of August at the University of Chicago taking the summer course in New Testament Greek and Literature and will begin his work at Defiance about September 1st. Bro. Newman is fitted by training and by temperament for the new position to which he goes and may be counted on to fill the same with distinguished honor and success both to himself and the institution he is to serve. He is a close student by force of habit, and is a graduate both of Elon College and the University of North Carolina, and has had successful experience both in the class room and in the pastorate. But to us it is the most regrettable fact we have published in many a week. Our Southern field needs Dr. N. G. Newman's services exceedingly and must of necessity suffer for his going away. He is pastor of two of our best and most influential churches, Holland and Holy Neck, with a total membership of 863 at the last Conference, preaching at each two Sundays in the month. The salary is $1,000.00 a year and parsonage and there is no better people, more amiable and considerate, any where to be found. This pastorate will have a hard time finding a successor to Bro. Newman whom they will esteem and love as they have him, and fortunate for service is the minister who accepts this charge.

The CHRISTIAN SUN $1.50 a year.

A FEW REMARKS.

—Congressman Hobson, the able and eloquent Congressman from the sixth Alabama district, is a candidate for United States Senator to succeed Senator Johnson.

—The first bale of cotton of the 1913 crop was sold on the New York Cotton Exchange July 14 at 20 cents per pound, the cotton being raised in Cameron county, Texas.

—The formal debate on the new tariff bill will begin in the Senate Thursday the 17th. This will likely be debated for weeks—and then Senators will vote about like they would on the first day, if allowed.

—Militant suffragettes of England seem to have gone stark mad. Recently two big fires were charged upon them, that of Ballikuirain Castle, Scotland, with a damage of $500,000, and a railway station near the castle costing $10,000.

—The fine features of friend Crowson of the Burlington News look out from the front page of the Wilmington Star of July 5. Bro. Crowson made a fine address before the Rural Letter Carriers' Association for which the Association gave him a rising vote of thanks.

—Rev. R. L. Davis, Superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League of this State was found guilty by the superior Court in Raleigh last week of striking Wiley Straughan over the head with a whiskey bottle in an affray at Raleigh some months ago. Davis has taken an appeal to the Supreme Court.

—The Balkan States are still in ferment, and fighting continues. Greece and Servia refuse armistice, and are determined to have vengeance on the Bulgarians who have committed cruelties and crimes of the most revolting character. The Balkan States, in fact, are in a melting pot and have not yet had time to cool off.

—An examination of more than 180,000 men, women, and children in this State has been made for hook-worm disease and more than one third of the number have been found to have the disease. The people who so bitterly censured John D. Rockefeller for making the gift of a few millions to make the treatment of this disease possible ought now to send in apologies.

—Secretary of State William Jennings Bryan was present and made an address at the formal opening of Grove Park Inn, Asheville, the evening of July 12. This is claimed to be the most costly and magnificent hotel in the South. Nothing stronger than grape juice was served at the banquet. Secretary Bryan lectured at Hendersonville Sunday on "The Making of a Man" to an immense audience.

—A man in Pennsylvania paid $3,000 for a German shepherd dog and gave the costly carmine to his wife who is exceedingly fond of dogs. The papers are saying that this money could have been spent to better purpose, and we agree. So let us hope that the party receiving the record sum in exchange for his dog will put it to better use than did the purchaser of the dog. The $3,000 is not lost; it has just changed hands, and maybe for the better.

—The House and Senate both have lobby investigating committees, and people generally have been made aware by recent findings that President Wilson was right in declaring, some weeks ago, that there was "an insidious lobby" at Washington endeavoring to influence tariff legislation. There have already been confessions and revelations that show the "interests" to have been most active indeed, at our nation's capital, in seeking by purchase and "persuasion" to carry legislation their way.

—Four years after the death of her husband, Mrs. Mary Belle Crawford, of Atlanta, Ga., is arrested and placed in a cell, without bond, for alleged murder. Mrs. Crawford was the chief beneficiary of the Crawford estate of $250,000, and heirs-at-law are suing to set the will aside, having had the body of the dead capitalist exhumed after four years interment for medical examination on suspicion. Uneasy lies the body that died leaving an estate to be fussed about, and fought over, by unworthy and would-be heirs.

—We are in receipt of No. 2, Vol. 1, of The Sentinel of Liberty, published at Grand Saline, Texas. From the copy received we judge that this paper is devoted to an attempt to show its readers what the Catholic church stands for, and to reveal the inwardness of that church to the eye of the world. In this issue we find this item of news under the bold face caption: "A Murderous Catholic Mob Attacks J. J. Crowley," to wit:

On the evening of June the 12th at Oelwein, Iowa, a Catholic mob attempted to assassinate Rev. J. J. Crowley. The attempt came very near being successful. One ruffian by the name of Edward Murry struck him over the head with an iron bar. The whole trouble grew out of the fact that Rev. Crowley, an ex-priest, had lectured on the value of our public schools vs. the parochial. If there is one thing above another that Rome hates and is determined to destroy it is the public school. She well knows it is the bulwark of this nation, and that it must first go, before she can enslave us.

This is another time Rome over-stepped herself. As a result of her attack upon this good man's life the whole state of Iowa is aroused, and these ruffians are facing long terms in prison.

It is said the Catholics have one thousand rifles stored in the basement of the church. From all reports the Catholic priest and his cohorts are fearfully frightened, and well they may be.

WANTED—A PREACHER.

(At Hardscrabble Circuit, salary $300 a year.)

Our church wants a preacher, a preacher of fame,
Not too fond of sensation, nor too prosy and tame;
But one who has learning, devotion and skill,
And can live on a pittance, will just fill the bill.

We feel in our hearts we can justly expect
He shall not be too young to command our respect;
Nor yet do we want one decrepit and old,
But one who will add to the strength of the fold.

The pastor we're seeking and hoping to find,
Must be active and earnest and helpful and kind;
Not too conservative—fond of the past—
Nor yet too progressive, too daring, or fast.

The success of our church on the preacher depends,
So we trust he will know how to win hosts of friends.
He must not be frivolous, vapid, or light,
Nor yet be so solemn our souls to affright.

There's one fault that all of our pastors have shown,
They expected that part of the time was their own.
But we have a right, for the money we pay,
To call for their service by night or by day.

In fact we are waiting and hoping, some day
An angelic pastor may wander this way,
Who can live, work and suffer, yet never complain,
If sometimes he fails all his dues to obtain.

Quite humble and meek, not puffed up with pride,
Nor greedy, nor selfish, nor dissatisfied,
But thankful to take what the church may afford,
Knowing patience is always its own best reward.
—Exchange.

NOTICE!

All who expect to attend the Sunday School Convention at St. John's Christian church, Randleman, N. C., July 25 to 27, will please notify C. F. Swaney, Randleman, N. C. The High Point train arrives at Randleman at 9:30 A. M. and 3:30 P. M. Asheboro train, 11:30 A. M. and 4:30 P. M.

Respectfully,

FROM OUR CONTRIBUTORS

TRAVELS ABROAD.

BRO. EDITOR:

In compliance with your request for notes of my voyage to France, Switzerland, Germany, Holland, England, and other places across the Atlantic, I wish to say that we left New York June 24 at 10 o'clock, and was piloted out beyond Sandy Hook under favorable skies and with bright prospect for a prosperous voyage. After passing out into the open sea, the splendid Holland-American steamer, Ryndam, which is 550 feet long and over 60 feet wide, a veritable Leviathan of the sea or a floating palace if you choose, began to throb with power like a thing of life and was soon under full speed. The last thing we saw of American greatness and power, as we left the land of our nativity and childhood, for the old world, was the statue of Liberty which stands like a lone sentinel at the entrance of New York harbor.

In our party to the World's Sunday School Convention, there are delegates from almost every State in the Union, also from British America, Ontario, etc. We soon became acquainted like a great family, and have entered heartily into every phase of a sea voyage life. After the first day the wind began to rise and to rage and the rolling billows to make the voyage more interesting. Many of the passengers became subject to the usual experiences of a sea voyage, and paid tribute to Neptune. It was quite interesting to notice the peculiar effect of the sea upon some people's diaphragms, but fortunately for us this dreadful malady, which never kills, but only makes people wish to die, never struck us. During the second day we saw many interesting specimens of the sea fraternity such as whales, porpoise, and fish and fowl of various kinds. When I saw a whale of such vast dimensions spouting up water into the air, and with prodigality bathing himself luxuriously in mid-ocean, I thought of the editor of THE SUN and Dr. Staley, and wished for them both with their hooks and lines.

The accommodations furnished by the Ryndam which is manned by Holland officers are unsurpassed in quality and abundance. None of the American or European hotels could provide a better, more appetizing or abundant menu, than that provided by this splendid company. During each meal the orchestra renders a splendid program for the entertainment of its guests. Between meals refreshments are frequently served from early in the morning until late at night and band music adds interest to the occasions of the day.

We have held services arranged by Rev. J. A. Alford, General Secretary, of Montana, each day during our voyage. On Sunday morning this writer was requested to conduct the services and in the afternoon Rev. C. P. Hiller of Everett, Mass. The services are well attended, and seem to be much appreciated. We are favored each day with a free copy of The Atlantic Daily News, a paper that publishes aboard ship all the important news of the world. Wireless telegraphy is the medium of communication.

I observe that you are sweltering under the summer heat while I am wearing my heavy winter clothes and have to sit inside during the evening, or wrap up in a heavy steamer rug.

We are having an experience of passing through heavy fog today and tonight and the fog horn sounds every minute to protect the crew and passengers.

Our itinerary will take us through France,

Switzerland, Germany, Holland, and England, and we shall visit some of the most important cities in these countries and the most interesting historical places. We have a guide who knows the countries and can conduct our party so as to get the most good from the trip.

More than 2,00 delegates are expected from North America and all countries where Sunday school work has been introduced will be represented. The two official languages of the Convention will be English and German. I hope to be able to give the readers of THE SUN some interesting news about the Convention and information about some of the good things in the Sunday school world. We as a people are worthy of the best in the whole field of Sunday-school work and while we have been progressive, we might take front rank in this splendid work of the church, if our people would measure up to their capabilities and opportunities. Are we not too much like the man who lay thirty-eight years at the pool of Bethesda? When the waters are troubled we do not step in because others step in before us. Our people should study Sunday school methods. There is no end to the number of good books dealing with all phases of Sunday school work. Why cannot our church develop more Sunday school specialists? We are capable, our people need specialization along aggressive lines and our work could use all the well-qualified leaders that we can prepare. If there are those who would like to specialize in any department of Sunday-school work, in teacher training, school organization, organized class work, home department, cradle roll, or any of the rest I shall be glad to co-operate with them and help them to get in touch with all the help they can use in any of such preparation.

UNION AND EPISCOPALIANS.

IN THE CHRISTIAN SUN of July 2nd is an article by Mr. Gardner, of Gardner, Me., calling attention to the union conversion proposals of the church now called Protestant Episcopal, but that now agitates dropping the "Protestant" part of the name.

One of the curious things in human nature is that many of us seem to think we are most proficient in things we understand the least. Probably every one has read an awful kind of prose from would-be poets. There are many people who think they can sing, and who desire to sing, and who try to sing alone, who make every one but themselves, most miserable. And think of the large number of subscribers who know just how the paper can be improved,—so much better than the editor. And every preacher can give points to the financial interests of the country.

So with our Episcopalian brethren; if there is anything they know little about, it is the common courtesy of fraternity which lies at the basis of union. The Episcopalians have much to teach us in organization, and in beauty of church services, in reaching the children, and in efficiency of placing the clergy. There is not a better organized denomination in America of which I know. Yet the very fact that they have little knowledge of other Protestant denominations, can be seen in their rule that ministers of other churches are not generally allowed to enter the pulpit. There are exceptions to this. I myself have preached in Episcopalian pulpits with and without the consent of the Bishop, here in Fall River. But as a general rule, very few non-conformists have been so treated. At the present time there is a rule to bar Protestant clergymen without special consent out of Episcopal pulpits. The Catholic priest, who would not do so, may enter the pulpit, but not the Protestant ministers, who are now approached and coached by the Commission called Episcopal with the rector of Trinity, which by the way has been a most immoral church corporation in New York City, occupying a prominent seat.

When Dr. Van Allen of Boston, a high churchman, spoke on the subject of the change of name, he said in substance, "Let there be no doubt whether the Episcopal church is Protestant or Catholic. If a Protestant minister joins our church, he must go through the regular orders, and be re-ordained; if a Catholic priest joins us, if he is a good man, he is at once received as a priest."

And yet while Episcopalians by their own church government insist that Protestant ministers are not priests and ministers of the gospel, and that Catholic priests are ministers and priests, they approach the great Protestant bodies and say "to rededicate ourselves to God, free from past prejudices." Our Episcopal friends are rich in the eternal human element of inconsistency.

AMONG OUR CONVENTIONS.

The Young People's Convention of the N. C. and Va. Christian Conference is in session at Haw River this week. A full report of the meeting will be printed next week.

Next Friday, July 25, the Western N. C. Young People's Convention will meet at Randleman. We trust all churches will have delegates.

WANTED AT THE ORPHANAGE.

There is needed at the Christian Orphanage, more help both in the kitchen and house work. The larger girls assist and do much, but women of experience in cooking, in house keeping, in sewing etc., are needed. Applicants should address Rev. E. M. Carter, Supt., Elon College, N. C.

Shall Our Education be Christian or Un-Christian?

BY PRESIDENT W. A. HARPER, LL. D., ELON COLLEGE, N. C.

A Startling Revelation.

The National Educational Association, which is supposed to reflect the educational sentiment of the country as faithfully as such an organization can, has just adjourned. It suggests in its platform many needed reforms and is eloquent in its plea for the rural public school, larger and better school houses, beautification of school grounds, practical education, and kindred themes, but does not even make mention of the religious life as at all within the province of education. O tempora! O mores!

A Study in Values—Weigh Well!

Our various State Constitutions and our Congress by the creation of the Bureau of Education in the Department of Interior recognize that education is the duty of the state. These same instruments, as well as the Constitution of the United States, affirm that the church and state shall be forever separate and distinct in this country. In the popular thought the church has been accepted as the synonym of religion, and so the conclusion has been drawn that there must be no religious instruction in the public schools or the state institutions of higher learning. If it is the duty of the state to educate that its citizens may be intelligent and provide livings for themselves, is it not the duty of the state to provide moral and religious instruction that the graduates of its school system may be law-abiding and upright? Is it worth while to educate a man's head and neglect his conscience? Which is worth more to a state, an intellectual prodigy without character or an intelligent man of character? Is it any more the duty of the state to provide for education than for religion?

A Tremendous Blunder.

But this is not the end of it. Not only have we seen the Bible and prayer excluded from our public schools, but we have seen something positively hurtful to moral and spiritual growth put in its place. In the public school age the pupil is in its own home when not in school and the evil effect of the lack of moral and religious instruction does not appear, the parents' admonition and the home influence acting as a corrective to any moral or spiritual laxness that may tend to develop from the school, but even here teachers whose moral character is low and whose opposition to religion is outspoken have their depressing effects on their pupils. I would like to see the time come when no man who was questionable as to his moral life and hostile in his opinion to the Christian religion should be permitted to teach in our public schools, and the state runs a great risk of immoral infection from this deadly source today. When will a free people in the wild clamor for a false liberty of religious opinion see the fatal error they have committed in not protecting the fountain-head of our public school system from moral pollution?

Religious Divorce Courts Avoid Them!

Even worse does the status of religious instruction become in the institutions of higher learning, worse intrinsically and worse also because of lack of counteracting home influences which serve to nullify the direful effects of irreligion in the public schools of secondary grades. When we send our sons and daughters off to college, they are on their own responsibility. When deadly seeds of unbelief, or infidelity, or skepticism are sown in their hearts, there are no parental words to uproot them. They must be so thoroughly grounded in their religious life that they will be able of their own power to question and disprove to their own satisfaction and destructive teachings of those they are supposed to accept as authorities, or they shall lose their respect for religion. This is not an idle dream; it is a fact, and these statements are made upon a basis of experience and observation. I record with solemn affirmation that I have known many instances where devout Christians have lost their devotion to their church and their God through a false step in the choice of the place of their higher education. They went away religious; they came back irreligious, scoffers. There would be no such objection to state institutions of higher learning as we constantly hear, if they had not really become divorce courts, divorcing their student from religion and marrying them to irreligion.

Religion or Irreligion—Which?

It amounts to just this: Shall our sons and daughters go to institutions where religion or irreligion is taught? There is no midway ground. Religion is not a separate department of life and cannot be set off from other vital questions by strict lines of division. Religion enters into every relation of life and must be provided for at every step. It is impossible to arrange a college curriculum in such way as to exclude religious instruction, so as not to be forced to take position on certain vital religious and spiritual interests. History and the Social Sciences simply cannot be taught without involving instruction favorable or inimical to religious growth. The same is true of Natural Sciences. Literature has a tremendous bearing on the spiritual life, and it makes no difference whether this literature is ancient or modern. Philosophy cannot be touched without involving spiritual interests. Even mathematics has its religious aspect. Since there can be no education that does not have its religious bearing, how can we escape the conclusion that our young people during the fateful four years of college life are developing an intellectual bias for or against the religious life? There is no escape; we are providing them a wholesome religious atmosphere or they are breathing miasmatic germs destructive of the spiritual life. Our education shall be Christian or Un-Christian, and each individual parent shall settle that issue,—it cannot be avoided.

The Free Tuition Bait—A Farce.

What will the outcome be? Will State College push Christian college to the wall? Ostensibly they have the advantage because they can put their hands in my pocket and in yours and take therefrom the money to perpetuate themselves. When they lose a student in open, fair competition, they can carry the contest still further and award scholarships without limit, relying upon the power of taxation within their grasp, and they are doing it every day, though even with free tuition. Ostensibly those scholarships are given to those who expect to teach or to those who deserve them, which latter class are limited in number supposedly, but actually anybody who lets it be known that he will come on no other conditions will find the scholarship "available," and more often they are given to the scions of rich men and politicians than to those who most need them. Shall this public plunder continue forever? Never! But why not? What reason have you to believe that the Christian College shall continue in the face of the tremendous odds against it?

The Christian College is the Place for the Proper Unfolding of Character in Youth!

I believe the Christian College is here to stay and to grow and to increase, because it furnishes that element of life without which there can be no enduring estate or state, character. If the time were ever to come, wherein the great majority of our intellectual men were without character, the death knell of the state would already have been sounded. But that day will not come. I am exceedingly optimistic over the situation. There will always be some to whom the monetary consideration of free tuition in a State College and the false supposition that it will make education cheaper for them, will outweigh the character-developing process in the Christian College, and if the product turned out by the State College could in any way compare with the product in Christian character of the Christian College, it is conceivable that eventually the Christian College would cease to exist. Of those who accept the farcical monetary bait, many will return moral perverts and religious scoffers, and the observation of these unfortunates will steel the unthinking parents round them against any such appeal in their case. The Christian College, the product of Christian hearts for the Christian end of educating the heart as well as the head, is destined to fill a larger place in our educational system and will make our education safely Christian.

Our Education is to be Christian!

But I ought to add, in conclusion, that this optimistic view will not make it less necessary for the friends of Christian Education to do their full duty by their Christian College. The Carnegie Foundation, the Rockefeller Foundation, and scores of rich men, whose hearts are poor, are active to break the power of religion over education. They will succeed, unless the liberality of the Christian world shall exceed the lavishness of these few would-be philanthropists in the educational realm. I have faith and reason to believe that the men and women of the Church of God will rally to the Christian Colleges and will save them from eclipse and to the world's upbuilding. Whether or not our education shall be Christian or un-Christian is to be destined in the support accorded the Christian Colleges by the followers of Christ. I believe they will amply support them, both by gifts and by patronage, and for that reason with confidence I give utterance to the faith that is in me, that Our Education is to be Christian.

Ina came in from the country on her fifth birthday to visit her Cousin May. At night they were put to bed early. An hour passed, when heart-breaking sobs were heard from the children's room.

"What is the matter, children?" asked May's mother, entering the dark room.

From under the bed-clothes Ina sobbed out: "May won't give me any of her peanuts."

"But May has no peanuts," replied her aunt.

"I know that," sobbed Ina, "but she said if she did have peanuts she wouldn't give me any."—Exchange.

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENTS

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The mule is a hybrid from the ass and the horse. The mule has more intelligence than either of his parents. The mule has received the worst treatment of all domestic animals, and has rendered the best service to the human race. No animal is so little thought of, seriously, and no animal deserves more praise.

The race-horse is a thorough bred of great market value and great attraction. Horse-racing attracts vast crowds, is widely published by the press, secures the attention of the reading and sporting public, and the name of the winner at the great races is heralded from one end of the country to the other. Newmarket, Epsom, and Oaks, in England; and Sheepshead, Morris Park, Long Branch, and Gravesend, in the United States, remind the sportsmen of spending money; but it should be kept in mind that most of the money simply changes hands. As a producing animal the race-horse has comparatively small value. The mule is the opposite type of animal. The mule makes no stir in society, excites no newspaper comment, attracts no excited multitudes, provokes no betting; but day in and day out the mule pulls the cotton plow, the log-wagon, and the harrow. In five Southern states more than a million of these burden bearers perform their daily task without comment or reward.

It has come upon me, in the nature of an unfulfilled obligation on the part of human society, to express what all must feel, when they pause to think, some appreciation of this domestic toiler that gets no pay but a poor stall and rough food. The cotton crop alone is worth a billion dollars a year in these Southern states. The mule is a real producer of wealth. The mule is a great asset in the nation's life and prosperity. The mule's life is much longer than the life of the horse; and the life of the race-horse is the shortest of all the horses. It appears in horses, as in men, that regular, honest work means longer life than high pressure sport. The best life is, also, the longest life. Many horses do faithful work and are entitled to praise; but the mule puts in more time, does harder work, gets less credit and more abuse than any of earth's toilers.

In all this, I am not saying anything against thoroughbred horses, under saddle, driven for pleasure, testing their speed; I am simply pleading the rights of the mule. I am writing just what you, dear reader, already know. I am aiming at more than this: I am trying to point out to you that among men, as among animals, the world becomes excited over the wrong man and praises the wrong man and overlooks the men who deserve all praise.

The flashlight man, the loud man, the self-asserting man, the trumpet man, gets into the limelight, into the public gaze, into the papers, has the multitude to follow him, to "hurrah" for him, and the plodder is overlooked. The professional evangelist visits a city, gets all the ministers and all the churches to organize; masses the choirs, advertises, gets the crowd and the big collection; parades numbers and fills the air with blasts of success. The papers praise him. The excitement dies and the regular workers toil on. The current expenses are paid by the quiet faithfuls. The real preaching is done by the unknown pastors. The Sunday school lives because the year-round workers are there. The mule-type, if I may use so homely an illustration, the stay-in-the-field toilers, are the dependables, in Church and everywhere else among men. The brilliants may have their place; but the steady worker, the honest plodder, the obscure faithful must not be overlooked in human appraisal.

WINCHESTER LETTER.

Leaving home June the 24th, I started out for a few days' canvass among the members of our Churches for funds for the Winchester Church. I have been well received everywhere and the people are interested in our Winchester work. As the years pass, the vision of our people broadens and more and more their sympathies and interest are aroused in the field beyond their own local Church. I hear much satisfaction expressed at the progress of the Winchester Church. It is the hope and prayer of the pastor to make this Church a stimulus and a strength to the whole conference. In our preparation for the dedication, Aug. 17th, we need the prayers and help, not only of the conference, but of the brotherhood. We shall close our canvass today and return home. I want to express my affection for the kindness and courtesy shown me everywhere, and I also want to thank the people for the interest in the Winchester Church. I do not think the conference is making any mistake in making an investment there, and I believe the time will soon come when every one who puts a dollar in it, will be grateful that he made the contribution.

A report of subscriptions and collections will be published next week.

Rev. R. L. Williamson filled my appointment at Winchester June 29th, and made a fine impression on the congregation with two excellent sermons.

Bros. Williamson and Andes are both doing good work in their respective fields and are held in high esteem by the people whom they serve.

It was quite a pleasure to me to have the privilege of worshiping with the congregations at Bethlehem and Mayland the 5th Sunday in June. I served both of these Churches as pastor and I was glad to have the opportunity of meeting with them again.

CLIFTON FORGE LETTER.

MY DEAR BROTHER EDITOR:

Through the SUN, dressed in its new and comely gown, which is not only becoming, but attractive indeed, there come to me glad messages weekly. For over eight long years THE SUN has been my only connecting link with a people and a work dear to me.

Many are the sweet memories of other days, of associations and of service rendered and given, covering little less than a hundred different congregations in North Carolina and Virginia. Many changes have taken place. Many have gone to the better land—still their right armor scarred and bent in the struggle for right, is a rich heritage, stimulative to for right, is a rich heritage, stimulative to courage and faithfulness by those of us left behind. But I must not risk myself at this time to write in this strain, but rather to give an account of one of the many incidents of my life in the Y. M. C. A. work. Wednesday, June 25th, 1913, at 6:30 p. m., you would have found me in the Terminal R. R.,

Y. M. C. A., Washington, D. C.

I was there by invitation; so were 499 other men. The occasion was nothing less than the fifth anniversary dinner of the above mentioned Y. M. C. A.

In the mixup of the lobby, while shaking hands with friends and old acquaintances, it was my good pleasure to be introduced to the Hon. Josephus Daniels, Secretary of the Navy. As good fortune decreed, so it was; namely: We were not interrupted for a few minutes. I told Mr. Daniels I was greatly indebted to North Carolina, though born and reared in old Virginia, for the little "learning" I have. His face brightened, if such were possible, then he asked me where I attended college. "Elon College," was my reply. He at once mentioned the names of Drs. Atkinson and Moffitt, and others, and spoke of the splendid work Elon is doing in the educational world. He spoke also of the high standing of Elon in comparison with the other educational institutions of the State.

Well, you know as well as I do, this monopoly on my part could not last long in a crowd of 500. So no less dignitary than William Jennings Bryan, Secretary of State, stepped up, shook my hand and gave Mr. Daniels to understand that they must proceed to the hall door and prepare to shake 500 hands, as the men passed out of the lobby, headed for the gymnasium where the feast awaited.

Before we don the robe of the Epicurean, preparatory to this anticipated feast, indulge a reminiscence. The boys of the early days of dear old Elon, no doubt, well remember our trip to Greensboro, to hear Mr. Bryan speak. At the close of his speech we were determined to shake his hand. The flying wedge of foot ball fame, was in vogue at that time, so with disheveled hair and wilted collars, we of the early nineties put the wedge to working. We reached the platform and shook the coveted hand. The damages to our fellow creatures left in our wake, we will not discuss.

Face about: We are now headed for the gymnasium. Enter; be seated. This room is 196 feet long by 60 feet wide. Arc and incandescent lights vie with one another for supremacy. Ferns and palms, stars and stripes, electric fans, inspire and cool our fevered mind and body. The best possible orchestra soothes our tensioned nerves. Sum all this up, and you will cease to wonder at our enthusiasm. We forget the sweltering world without, the hard problems and worries of every day life, and enter the enchanted oasis of joy and comfort, and of good feeling to all the world; surpassed only by the happy dream of the passenger of the Sahara caravan.

We sang "Blest Be the Tie That Binds." The Orchestra followed with "America," "My Country 'Tis of Thee, Sweet Land of Liberty; of Thee I sing."

Five hundred voices, without a noticeable discord sang: "Auld Lang Syne." The Orchestra answered by playing "Dixie." Old men, young men, strong men, like children at play, stood to a man, waving handkerchief and napkins, and shouted until many were hoarse. Pardon me, but just want to say, I have yet to hear "Dixie" played; and breathe a silent atmosphere. Willie Yank and Johnnie Reb wake up when "Dixie" comes in. My observation covers the most of the large cities in the United States.

Since I spoke of a feast, no doubt you are hungry. If so, help yourself to—cold consomme en tasse, radish, olives, crab flake, lamb, Saratoga chips, chicken salad, potato salad, fruit and cream, cake, coffee. (If Brother Atkinson had been with me we would have had Blue fish on the bill).

Now dear reader, if you have an ear for charming rhetoric and flowing eloquence, sit up and listen. The speakers are no less personages than the Hon. Henry F. Ashurst, Senator from Idaho; Hon. William Jennings Bryan, Secretary of State and Hon. Joseph Daniels, Secretary of the Navy.

These speakers were non-partisan—but they were sectarian all right—I mean they were of the kind that grows out of deep religious training of the evangelical faith in Jesus Christ as the Savior of the world, and God the Father and the Holy Spirit as the Comforter. There was no "Mr. Taft Unitarianism," and Roman Catholicism was made conspicuous by its absolute absence.

Mr. Bryan has been a member of the Y. M. C. A. for 30 years; and it goes without argument that he is one of the association's strongest and most loyal supporters in every possible way.

Mr. Daniels sanctioned the work of the Y. M. C. A. in its administration to men. He expressed a desire to see this association reach more of the boys in blue, declaring himself as being in favor of improving the man behind the gun; in mind, spirit and body, as well as improving the efficiency of the gun.

Dear friends, if this manuscript escapes the waste basket and you like it, I may try to write again. Christian love to every reader. Every family should be a leader of our good Church paper, now ranking with the very best in every way. B. F. BLACK.

HERE AND THERE.

BROTHER EDITOR: With your permission I will try to tell the SUN's readers something of my travels for the CHRISTIAN SUN, and something of my observations while on these trips.

I have been in the fields of Revs. R. H. Peel, W. C. Wicker, C. C. Jones, H. H. Butler, W. H. Denison, I. W. Johnson, C. H. Rowland, A. T. Banks, C. E. Newman, L. F. Johnson, J. Lee Johnson and J. O. Cox. Without an exception, I found these brethren much interested in the SUN's circulation, and all agree that it is a necessary adjunct in enabling our people to understand the importance of the various church enterprises. Our people in Eastern Virginia are waking up to the importance of Missions as they have not done before, and this is adding new life to other lines of church work.

The Memorial Temple of Norfolk is in the lead as a Foreign Mission congregation, and here are some items as gathered from the report of the official board ending with June, 1913: The first year of the labors of Dr. W. H. Denison, 86 members received into fellowship; $1000.00 raised for Foreign Missions, $250.00 paid on parsonage debt, clearing that property of debt, salary and running expenses met, the Sunday school so increased as to make Church enlargement a necessity. This is mentioned to show how increased interest in missions gives life and growth to a Church.

Our people in Berkley are still holding together, notwithstanding that illness has rendered two successive pastors unable to serve out the terms for which they were called. These brethren want, and should have, a live, wide-awake pastor.

The Portsmouth pastor and people are hard at work to finish paying for their house of worship and build the church enterprises. How could it be otherwise under the leadership of Dr. Harrell?

The Suffolk Church, and pastor, who seems to be pastor of the town as well as of his own Church, are yet hard at work and bringing things to pass, not simply along one line, but along all lines.

We found Dr. N. G. Newman both hard at work, and considering a call to Defiance, Ohio, which call, we learn, he has accepted to the regret of his present field and his conference.

Dr. Rowland serves Franklin and Betheny Churches, advances the Church enterprises, grows in grace and becomes more popular all the time.

All the brethren have received me as agent for the SUN, cordially, rendered valuable assistance in doing the work, and extended every hospitality; all of which is highly appreciated and for which all will please accept sincere thanks C. C. PEEL.

ENIGMA, GA.

A great meeting has just closed here, held at the Christian Church, of which Bro. H. W. Elder, of Richland, Ga., is pastor. The meeting began the night of July 5th. Brother Elder had with him Bro. J. V. Knight, a ministerial student of Elon College, N. C.

Brother Knight did all the preaching. He captured the hearts of the people from the start by the earnest, faithful manner in which he preached the truths of the gospel. His preaching had wonderful effect. The church was revived, backsliders reclaimed, and a number of happy souls were brought from sin into marvelous light of the gospel of Christ. As one result fifteen souls were added to the Church. The meeting continued a week, with increasing interest, Brother Knight (having to leave with Brother Elder for Kite, Ga., to conduct another meeting.

This is the sixth year Brother H. W. Elder has preached at this place and this was the best meeting he has ever had here. Brother Knight endeared himself very closely to the hearts of the church people. We heartily commend him as an earnest, faithful servant of God. The people were greatly pleased with his method of conducting the services.

All of us are grateful to God for this good ministry of His servant among us. God bless him in all his work. When he comes this way again he will be sure of a hearty welcome in all of our homes. We hope that it will mark the beginning of better days for Enigma.

ELON COLLEGE NOTES.

Miss Myrtie L. Cox, Columbia, S. C., is on a visit to her parents here, Rev. and Mrs. L. I. Cox.

Rev. R. P. Crumpler, class of '09 filled Rev. J. V. Knight's appointment at Shallow Ford near here last Sunday and spent a few hours in the village with friends. Mr. Crumpler is also engaged in teaching in connection with his preaching.

Mr. J. R. McNally and family are spending a few days in Washington, D. C., and other places north.

Mrs. Laura Lee, Everett, Pa., has accepted a position with the College as matron of the Young Men's Club and will move to this place some time soon. Mrs. Lee will bring with her, her two sons and place them in College.

Preparations are being made looking to the opening in September: All the furniture is being repaired and the buildings put in up-to-date shape. Work also continues on the new building and the tank.

Mr. R. A. Truitt, Summerfield, N. C., has been elected as principal of the graded school for next term.

Rev. J. O. Cox and family, Durham, N. C., are spending a few days with President and Mrs. Harper.

Uncle Wellons returned from a trip to Selma, Smithfield, Fayetteville, and other points Thursday. C. B. B.

THE FIRST SENATOR ELECTED BY DIRECT VOTE.

Senator A. O. Bacon, of Georgia, will have the distinction of being the first United States Senator elected by the direct vote of the people. Several months ago he was nominated in the Democratic primary, it being understood that the choice of the primary be ratified by the legislature when it convened in June. After his nomination, however, the amendment to the Constitution, requiring the direct election of Senators was ratified and formally proclaimed. Senator Bacon must now go before the people in a special election to be called by the Georgia Legislature. For the trouble and expense of an election, the result of which is already known, the Georgia Senator will be compensated in the knowledge of the fact that he will be the first Senator sent to Washington by vote of the people.—Nashville Christian Advocate.

DOUBLE NOTICE.

FIRST: The Sunday School Convention of the Eastern Virginia Christian Conference will meet with the Suffolk Christian Church July 23-25, and we want to make it a great Convention.

This NOTICE is intended to request ALL DELEGATES and VISITORS to notify C. A. Shoop, Chairman of the HOSPITALITY COMMITTEE, SUFFOLK, Va., that you intend to come, so that provision can be made for your entertainment before your arrival. Do not neglect this, as it will help the committee so much in the assignment of homes.

SECOND: The Committee on Education of the Eastern Virginia Christian Conference will meet on Thursday of the Convention, July 24th, and all persons who have business with this Committee will please attend the Convention and meet this Committee.

W. W. STALEY, Pastor of the Church and Ch'm of the Com. on Education. Suffolk, Va.

A PRAYER.

Lord, bless my body, Thou, Lord Jesus, who wast once enshrined in flesh like mine, make me to understand the sacredness of my body. Make me to realize its value, for only as I keep it strong and well can I do good work for Thee. Help me to keep it pure, Lord, for it is a temple of the Holy Ghost. Keep me from injuring myself by carelessness or overwork. Keep me, if it be Thy will, from illness, from the pestilence that walketh in darkness, and from accident, the destruction that wasteth at noonday. And whether I eat or drink, or whatever I do, may it be all for Thy glory.—Lucy Rider Meyer.

FOR SALE.

I offer my two story, six room dwelling, and farm of 53 acres, almost adjacent to College campus, for sale at reasonable price. A fine location for those wishing to educate their children. Correspondence solicited.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON, JULY 20TH.

Subject.—"Moses Called to Deliver Israel."
Exodus 3:1-14.

Time.—About B. C. 1277 (Sayee); 1491 (Usher).

Place.—Midian, Egypt.

Persons.—Moses and his family, the angel of the Lord, Jethro.

Golden Text.—Blessed are the pure in heart: for they shall see God.—Matt. 5:8.

Leading Thought.—The pure in heart see God and his plans.

Purpose of The Lesson.

The purpose of this lesson is to show how, at the age of eighty, Moses was finally outfitted in wisdom and character for the mighty task and definitely called of God to be the human deliverer of Israel from Egyptian bondage.

Lesson in Brief.

"The back of the wilderness," where Moses was keeping Jethro's flocks, was the central uplands of the Sinai peninsula, where there is moisture and where he could find grass. He was in the southern portion, near Mount Horeb, also called Sinai.

The "burning bush" was the thorn bush, the shittim, or acacia, a common desert bush, growing about twenty feet high, with a trunk sometimes two feet in diameter. Its numerous blossoms are a bright yellow. The bush, unconsumed by the fire, was a symbol of the Israelites, not destroyed by the fierce fires of persecution.

Orientalists remove their shoes to this day when entering a church, and Moses was made to feel that the presence of God constituted a church even there in the desert.

The Canaanites and other tribes named in v. 8 were conquered by Joshua, to a great extent, and yet enough of them were allowed to remain in Canaan to poison Hebrew life for many generations.

"A land flowing with milk and honey" (v. 8) is a proverbial expression for a rich and fruitful country.

The fact (v. 12) that Moses would lead his people to the very spot where he had received the command from God to lead them from Egypt would be a confirmation of his course. He would think of this culmination during all the period of stress before him.

In Egypt every god has a name. The Hebrews, worshipping only one God, knew Him by no distinctive name, but referred to Him by His attributes, as Elohim, "Lofty One"; Shaddai, "the Powerful"; Jehovah, "the Existent." Moses (v. 13), knowing that the Hebrews would need to distinguish their God from the many gods of the Egyptians, asked for directions about the name of the Deity. God selected the most vague of all His names, the name that signified mere existence, the fountain of life, Jehovah. By that highly thenceforth known to the Hebrews. spiritual name, above all others, He was Object Lessons.

A piece of electric wire.—Suppose we should say to this wire, "Go light that dark room; go pull a street car up the hill." What might the wire answer? "I cannot. I am not able to do anything alone; but I will try to be a good conductor of electric power, and the electricity will light the room and pull the car."

God said to Moses, "Go, do hard service in Egypt." When Moses said, "I cannot," God gave him a promise of power. He gives the same promise to us. "Certainly, I will be with thee," "Without me, ye can do nothing."

Ask pupils to hold out their hands.—What is in your hand, Anna, and in yours, John, and yours, Alice? You say they are empty. No, each hand holds something different. One has the power to draw pictures, one to sew beautifully, one to make music, another to arrange flowers, another has skill with tools. Every young person has some special thing "in his hand" with which to serve the world. To-day's lesson tells of God sending a man to do a great work with the simple weapon he had in his hand. (Read Ex. 4:2, 3.)

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC FOR JULY 27.

"Missionary Essentials at Home and Abroad.

I. Information." Acts 15:12-18.

This is the first of a series of four meetings on Missionary Essentials, the sub-topics being Information, Prayer, Giving and Going.

Information cannot be said to be greater than the other three essentials, perhaps, because none of the four must be discounted, but without information one cannot give, go or pray intelligently.

This meeting should be a carefully planned one. No one should attempt to talk without preparation on a definite sub-topic.

The leader should give in outline the Missionary conditions and needs of today. Briefly he should tell of what is being done in each of the more important missionary fields. He should be followed by half a dozen others who have been asked a week in advance to have a part, and given subjects.

Get the missionary leaflets of our own denomination. Let one member tell what our church has done for Foreign Missions and another what it has done in the home work.

Give to some Endeavorer an interesting missionary biography and ask him to write a two-minute review of it, incorporating some of the most interesting anecdotes and other details. Insist on brevity, and insist that there is to be no reading from the book in the meeting. Good biographies for this purpose are abundant. Add to those named in the last section those of John Williams, Hannington, Eliot, Gardiner, Miss Fiske, Carey, Mocat, Martyn, Heber, Dug, Taylor, Whitman, Cox, Judson, Boardman, Gilmour, Patterson, Hamlin, Chauffler, Neesima, Cian, McAll, Egede, Crowther, Brainerd.

This topic will be given to some Endeavorer of wide missionary reading, who will speak of missionary books other than biographies. He is not to occupy more than five minutes. He will speak of general accounts of mission countries, such as Dr. Arthur H. Smith's books on China, Dr. Griffiths and Dr. Gordon's books on Japan, Dr. Underwood's and Mr. Gale's books on Korea, and Bishop Hurst's book on India. He will mention specially interesting accounts of missionary adventure, such as Dr. Jacob Chamberlain's. He will speak of historical sketches, such as those by Dr. Pierson, Miss Brain, and Dr. Speer. He will name the Encyclopedia of Missions, and the great reports of the ecumenical missionary conferences, especially the latest, the report of the Edinburgh gathering. The Boxer massacres, the Armenian massacres, the Indians of North America, the women of India, African exploration—all have stipulated many missionary books. The speaker will use his five minutes to try to arouse an interest in the books of this character that he has himself read.

MISSIONARY BRIEFS.

Every Christian Endeavor society should organize each year a mission-study class, if only of two, to study a textbook of missions, and become for the whole society a nucleus of new missionary zeal.

Own missionary books, and make them your own by reading them many times.

The Bible is the greatest of all missionary books. Do all your missionary reading in its light.

The church at Bolenge, Africa, was organized ten years ago and now has 1,300 members. Seventy-six evangelists are sent out from this church of which the congregation supports fifty.

The Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions is planning to send out the largest number of missionaries ever sent out by one society in one year. Already one hundred candidates have been accepted. This large number of new missionaries has been made possible by a bequest to the Board of nearly three millions of dollars.

"Missionary work for Hawaii was started as the result of the finding of Henry Obookiah weeping upon the steps of Yale College. He was longing for an education, and that the true religion might be carried to his native islands. On October 23, 1819, the first missionary party, seventeen persons, including Hiram Bingham and Asa Thurston, set sail from Boston for the Sandwich Islands. They were met on landing by the news that a revolution had overthrown the old gods and that the land was without a religion. The conquest of the islands for Christ was remarkably rapid."

BARACA NATIONAL HYMN.

Tune: My Country 'Tis of Thee

Baraca's name we take,
All forms of sin forsake—
We pledge our word.
We have a common tie,
'Tis love and sympathy;
And by our lives we try
To serve our Lord.

We have no other sword
Than God's own Holy Word.
In which we trust.
It makes us brave and true.
Gives us the Spirit, too,
By which we dare to do
For Jesus Christ.

Then let Baracas cheer
From churches far and near,
All join and sing:
How God hath used our class,
To bring great things to pass,
Until in Heaven en masse
We'll crown Christ King.

MAKES ABOUT $175 FROM EXCURSION.

The Sunday school Excursion to Mt. Airy operated by the First Church, Greensboro, last Wednesday, netted the school about $175, after all expenses were paid. The day passed without a single accident or unpleasant incident. A picnic dinner was served at Mt. Airy. Mr. S. A. Caveness was chairman of the Committee and the success of the Excursion is attributed almost solely to his untiring efforts. The other members of the Committee, who assisted him faithfully, were L. M. Clymer, Jno. R. Foster, C. C. Johnson and H. V. Simpson.

Now is a good time to subscribe.

HAS NOT GOD CALLED?

Do we heed the voice of God calling us to awake from our slowness, dulness and indifference? If so, let us not wait to be ministered unto, but to minister.

The call comes to us with greater power than ever before and we plead with our women to heed this call with Christian hearts, wide open, busy Christian hands. God has given us power and ours is the duty and privilege of using it. He has called us to undertake greater things for him, and while we are planning and working, let us be praying. Prayer is the first and chief method of solving the missionary problem, and we feel that this fundamental need of a new life of prayer in connection with the work of missions should be set before our people in the hope that we may come to God in the devotion of a richer love and fuller faith in the actual practice of believing and persistent prayers. What an inspiration it would be to our missionaries in the thick of the fight if we could get a definite group of people at home to support them by prayer and what a help it would be to us if we would really get to work and by prayer, planning and personal work we could succeed in organizing a Missionary Society in every church within the bounds of the Southern Christian Convention. Let us pray that the voice of God may reach many hearts and touch and tender them for a more faithful loving service.

MRS. W. T. WALTERS.

INTERCESSORY FOREIGN MISSIONARIES.

BY REV. ALFRED E. STREET

For many years a missionary in China.

The following is not a literary presentation of truth, but is designed to be a practical suggestion for work. This purpose has determined the form of presentation. It has grown out of the writer's experience in addressing churches, and the reception that has been accorded the truths here presented has revealed the need of their more general diffusion.

Christ did not command us to pray the Lord of the harvest that He send forth missionaries, but "laborers." The difference is intentional, for there are others just as necessary as missionaries. ("Missionary" is the Latin form of the Greek "Apostle," meaning "One Sent").

Those harvest hands who directly reach the souls of men and save them can be divided into (1) Native Workers, and in all countries the burden of evangelization rests upon them; (2) Missionaries, who are no longer needed when the natives have learned all they can teach (some centuries ago they finished their work among the English); (3) Intercessors, who give their time and strength to the distinct work of definite intercessory prayer.

Of these three classes, if comparison is possible among things all of which are necessary, the Intercessor is most important because he is working at the very root and foundation of all harvest success and in so far as man is responsible, his faithfulness determines the success of all others.

Definition.

An Intercessory Foreign Missionary is a "laborer" who cannot go in person to the foreign field, but who has set himself apart to pray for the definite details of the foreign missionary work. He only is entitled to the name who enters upon an engagement to work for definite fields; an engagement as real as an appointment by a foreign mission board. His striking peculiarities are that he is working in the realm of "the heavens," instead of among visible men, and that there are no restrictions as to the number who can be intercessors, to the place of their residences, or to the variety, sweep and completeness of the results accomplished.

Necessity.

For the Intercessory Foreign Missionaries. That mission field which has the largest number of missionaries (faithful intercessors), whose names are not in the published lists will always be the most successfully harvested. This is so:

(a) Because of the nature of missionary activity. * * * *

(b) Because prayer based on God's Word is the only weapon man can use to touch the invisible foe.

We can reach a Chinaman by speaking face to face with him, but we can strike the spiritual Prince of China only by way of the place "above, where Christ is" ever living to make intercession.

(c) Because the missionary on the field cannot alone do his work.

When the intercessors' hands fall Amalek prevails on the mission field to-day. The enemy is strong. Jesus refused to bow down to Satan, but the heathen bow and worship, therefore the blackness of darkness broods over those lands, a stifling, choking power of death.

In Christian countries prayer is continually offered for the pastor and for every detail of the work of the church, special meetings are held to pray for revival. In open-air meetings, while one is speaking, others are praying. Exactly in the same way one or two missionaries alone among thousands or millions need other persons to pray definitely while they work or speak. Only the need is more urgent, just as there are more deaths, on the "firing line" than in the quiet of the home.

What can be Done by Intercessory Missionaries.

(a) A host of intercessors can be speedily enlisted in this war.

(b) Enough missionaries and money can be found really to accomplish our task.

(c) Suitable men can be sent as missionaries and the unsuitable can be prevented from making the mistake of going. Such mistakes have in the past cost many lives and thousands of dollars. They can be prevented by the Lord of the harvest only when He is asked to do so. Even Christ Himself prayed all night before He chose the first twelve missionaries.

(d) Many urgent questions of general missionary policy can be solved only through much prayer.

(e) Individual heathen can be prayed for by name and thus be saved.

(f) A native ministry can be raised up and maintained.

(g) Revivals can continually spring up on the foreign fields.

(h) Fresh fillings of the Holy Spirit can be given to over-burdened missionaries.

(j) The health and strength of missionaries can be maintained under the severe strain of their physical and social surroundings.

(k) Lonely missionaries, those without many friends, can be cheered and helped until their usefulness is many times multiplied.

Experiences have repeatedly shown that the believing prayer of one humble intercessor at home can bring about a revival on the foreign field and save thousands. The experience of one missionary was that as far as man can see results, he was able to do more for the heathen toiling as an intercessor in America than while he was among the heathen without intercessors pleading for him.

How to do the Work of an Intercessory Missionary.

(a) Decide deliberately that this intercession is to be a regular binding duty.

(b) Select fixed days, hours, times, and make them take precedence, as far as possible, for all other engagements.

(c) Begin humbly, letting experience enlarge and guide.

(d) Wait on the Lord of the harvest for directions as to what part of the field you are to belong to.

(e) Learn the names of all missionaries in your field and pray for them by name.

(f) Do not pity the missionary or console with him, but give him your sympathetic help.

(g) Write to the missionaries you are praying for, asking pointedly what their difficulties and needs are. Tell them you do not want something bright and newsy, but something dark and discouraging, and that when they are worn out you want them to drop you a postal telling you that, so that you can pray them strong again.

(h) Pray for every need or condition that you can learn about. This article is only suggestive.

(j) Form the habit of letting God impress upon you the things to pray for. He will do it.

(k) Not many words are needed, but time must be spent in "waiting" upon Him, the very silence calling for His will to be done. Silence enables one to draw very near to God. "We know not how to pray as we ought," and we must let "the Spirit make intercession."

Warnings.

Some may be tempted to cherish a subtle, hidden feeling that by doing this work they are conferring a favor on some one by helping. Not at all. It is the other way; the unspeakable favor is granted you of sharing the burden of intercession daily carried by the risen Christ Jesus in heaven.

A newly arrived missionary cannot vote for the first year, as so much has to be learned before he can do so intelligently. In the same way, one beginning as an intercessory missionary needs to consider himself as a beginner with much to learn.

When details of mission work begin to come to your knowledge, be exceedingly careful how you judge, condemn or decide in matters that you have never met and that have puzzled the wisest men of many decades.

(1) Indirect Work. Every Christian should do some work as an intercessory missionary, but there are some at home whom the Lord calls to give their daily toils for the salvation of the nations. Many are needed who by teaching, writing and exhorting, shall arouse Christians to a sense of their responsibility for the death of those who perish. Not because they are sinners, but because the salvation prepared for them by Christ has never been offered them by men. In the work here suggested, house to house visitation among the members has been proved most effective in arousing them to their privileges in the foreign fields. A caution is here needed, for such work is only indirect, and most jealous, prayerful care is needed to prevent it from displacing the direct work of intercession. Any work that is visible so appeals to our pride that it is more attractive than is the lonely toil of intercession.

(2) Rejected. It is generally considered that God has not called one to the foreign work because age, health, family relations, rejection by a mission board or other outward circumstances prevent him from going abroad. Such circumstances have no bearing whatever on the question as to whether the Lord wants you to work directly for the salvation of the heathen. God is waiting for you to take your place in this vital, difficult and blessed work of joining Christ in interceding before Him. It is not an evidence of obedience quietly to drift along at ease, letting the far-away, unseen multitudes perish for the lack of your own prayers. Some laborers must not go to the mission fields.

(3) Substitutes. When a draft is made for war service only a limited number of men is called out, and a "substitute" has to be one of those not drafted in his own name. But in this spiritual war every citizen of heaven is drafted, and no substitutes are possible because there are none left undrafted. Victory is impossible unless those at home meet and rout the invisible foe. It is unjust to send a man into the deadly blackness of heathenism without giving your life in intercession for him while he gives his life for the heathen. We must "lay down our lives for the heathen." (1 John 3:16).

(4) Candidates. Beware of ever urging any one to go as a missionary. The Holy Spirit only can do that with safety. We should rather urge that one set his will as flint that he is going to "do the will of my Father in heaven," and that he then pray, "Lord send forth laborers," and if the Lord really wants him in foreign fields, it is only a matter of time when it will be made so plain that there will be no room for doubt.

(5) Rewards. There is a peculiar supplementary reward given for all missionary work. It is in addition to the honors of faithful labor, and is determined not by what is done, but by what is "left." For every comfort of friend that you leave in order to do this work, you will receive one hundred fold (10,000 per cent) of the comfort, rest and satisfaction that they could afford. This is indescribably true of both missionary and intercessor, and is the kind of "joy set before him" that enables Jesus to "endure." The missionary leaves by taking ship, the intercessor leaves by shutting the door of his closet. Attendance at church meetings and conventions becomes a selfish indulgence of religious feelings when it leads to the neglect of the hardest work God wants you to do. Men are dying in agony while you are enjoying a "beautiful" service, and while God is calling you to forget your very existence in watching and praying with groanings that cannot be uttered.—The Christian Missionary.

WHAT HAS ELON DONE FOR THE CHURCH?

(By W. A. HARPER, LL. D.)

It is impossible from a human point of view to tell just what would have happened, if something that did happen had not happened. Life is too complicated to admit of a mathematical determination of the influence of this or that agency. And to argue post hoc ergo propter hoc is to commit a well-know fallacy in logic. These considerations make it difficult therefore for me to write on the theme that heads his article.

And yet we can with confidence in a general way indicate some of the things that have come into the Christian Church, South, attributable in a measure to Elon, if not wholly due to its influence.

And first among these positive goods is that this College gave the Christian Church in the South its first unifying force, not that brotherly love and fellowship did not already obtain, not that, but that this institution calling for united effort on the part of all our people became a centre drawing all hearts to it—it was the beginning of our institutional life. Its success taught its founders their real power and paved the way for other efforts in line with a progressive Christian activity. The Orphanage and the Publishing House have come, but he would have been counted a veritable dreamer who before Elon was founded had been visionary enough to suggest that these two enterprises of the Church would now be serving a people grateful for the burdens they impose. And there is no reason why a movement on behalf of missions should not meet with a similar response and achieve a similar success.

That the College is this unifying power of which I speak is evident further in that both the Orphanage and the Publishing House are located here—that no other place was seriously considered for their location, all eyes turning instinctively to this mecca of our interests. So that Elon is not only our educational centre, but also the centre of all our institutional work.

Nor must it be thought that brotherly love and fellowship one for another on the part of our several congregations and of our individual brethren is any less by reason of the foundation of the College. Those who were prominent in the Church before the days of this institution do not hesitate to say that the College has contributed powerfully in the direction of a closer brotherliness and of a more genuine fellowship among the Churches and among the brethren. It is the mutual burdens we bear that bring us close together and knit our ties of love and sympathy strong. It was the burden that the College imposed that proved to be our deliverance as a people. And that is also the explanation of why the people of the Christian Church are so devoted to Elon. They have borne burdens and travelled in spirit for its success, and never more cheerfully than when about two years ago they responded with open heart to the call for $50,000.00 to place it on its feet financially. Our people are unified in their affection for Elon because in unison they have sacrificed to make it what it is.

A second contribution of the College to its constituency has been the revelation to them of their own ability to do. The Civil war left the Church broken and discouraged. Many Churches never recovered. Many members left our ranks—even our ministry, what was left of it, partially sought other folds. A mere remnant was left, but they were weak and downcast and despondent. Yet in less than a half century after the curtain fell on the scene of carnage, this same remnant has

STORIES are—yes, must be—used by every wide-awake worker among, or leader or teacher of, children.

MISSIONARY STORIES seem to have been the one field well-nigh overlooked until Mrs. Alice Moreton Burnett, Corresponding Secretary for the Woman's Board for Home Missions of the Christian Church, made a compilation of thirty interesting, instructive stories pertaining especially and directly to missions that are sure to be appreciated by workers, teachers, leaders, pastors, fathers, mothers—and the children.

Some of the Important Events of both Home Missions and Foreign Missions are also included, together with Suggestions For Junior Leaders.

They make a book 5 x 7 inches in size, 128 pages, red cloth binding—a handsome, attractive volume. Price 35c per copy postpaid.

ELON COLLEGE, N. C.

wrought more work for the kingdom than the entire Church had in the halcyon days of youth of our vigorous cause and practically all of that achievement has taken place in the latter half of that period and the last ten years of that half century have been more accomplished in growth and expansion than the preceeding four decades. What is the explanation? These people have found themselves—they have learned their strength—they are now ready to grow. In the last ten years the College plant has more than doubled its efficiency and the Orphanage and the Publishing House have come forth as if by magic. All because in the dark and discouraging days of Elon's foundation twenty-five years ago, this plucky Gideon's Band had caught the gleams of a new light and discovered in their weakness a new strength, the strength of sacrifice.

And that brings us face to face with a third great good that we have learned from our College—the duty and the joy of Christian giving. We have not yet measured up to our full duty, but we have learned a great deal. In the early days of our cause it was considered improper for a minister to expect a regular salary from his Church or Churches, as it nearly always was. If they saw fit to give him anything, he should accept it, but to stipulate with a congregation for a salary was to be mercenary. In those days there were no Church enterprises and the Churches gave no money for anything outside their own immediate needs. The joy of Christian giving the Church did not experience. Even when the College was proposed, the first suggestion was for a joint-stock company and all who subscribed were to receive their stock back in tuition for their children or for those designated by them. There was no thought of giving the money outright for the establishment of the College. And that is explanation why the College was talked of for nearly twenty years before it was founded—Colleges are charitable institutions and cannot pay dividends. But in the fullness of time the brethren caught the light and made the sacrifice necessary to erect the College, giving their money with rejoicing to the Church and to the kingdom for whose growth the Church exists.

Since that time every enterprise of the Church has taken on a vigorous virility. The contributions have steadily increased for every call made by the Conferences and the Convention and new calls have been added. The College has been a constant source of expense to the Church, as it ought to have been in order to fulfill its purpose, but the Church has responded nobly and enjoyed the giving—and our College and the sacrifices its founding and maintenance entailed taught us our first lesson in this most Christianlike of all the Christian graces.

Other benefits that have come to us will occur to the thoughtful reader. The blessings common to every Church College have been brought to our people by Elon, but these that I have mentioned are almost peculiar to this institution and so have deserved the fuller statement they have received. The others it shares in company with similar institutions and chief among them is an educated ministry and a trained laity, without which no Church can discharge its obligation to the world. When Elon was founded College graduates in the ministry could be counted on less than the fingers of one hand. There were practically no laymen who had attained to that greatest of all human boons—a College education. Today in our pulpits are found thirty-seven Alumni of Elon College and many others who have had partial College training and as many of our ministry now hold post-graduate degrees as before Elon's birth held any sort of College degree. And the College has placed in our Churches of its full graduates nearly two hundred as consecrated, devoted lay-workers and given a partial training to more than a thousand others who did not graduate, but were given a new impetus for service by coming into contact with the Elon life and spirit.

And what does the future hold for Elon? That depends of course upon the support the church gives it, but there can be no reason to believe that the Church will not respond even more liberally to its needs in the coming years than it has during the quarter century just closing. And the College will continue to serve the Church by uniting it in Christian effort, revealing to it its own deeper powers, teaching it still further lessons in the joy of Christian giving, sending into its pulpits trained ministers that shall be able to handle in masterful way the intricate problems of the Kingdom, and providing a laity developed in intellect and cultured in heart, through the inspiration of these five agencies and the others that in God's providence it shall supply the Church, bringing it into a larger share of service for the Master and obtaining for itself a still stronger hold on the hearts of the membership and working out for itself a still greater "weight of glory."

The moral of this discussion is patent to all who think: Help Elon and build up the Christian Church, at the same time getting full value received for yourself.

Dear Friends:

The first Sunday in this month I was with the good people at Pleasant Grove, Va. As one begins to get into the association of this people he realizes the significance of its name. Not only is this people devoted to their individual church and pastor, but to all the enterprises of the church. The Orphanage has some very warm friends in that section. It is a pleasure to them to hear of the work and to give for its support. One of these friends said that he was going to give the Orphanage a barrel of flour. We will need eighteen barrels more than our crop made, to do us a year. Now, remember, if you give anything to us the railroad will give us free transportation; by applying to your District Freight Agent.

As I make up my report a letter comes from one of our leading Sunday school workers, saying: "Our Missionary Society is making some sheets for the Orphanage and we are going to ask the young ladies' class and girls' class of our Sunday-school to make pillow slips." I certainly appreciate that, for the sheets are needed very badly. I was just planning to go and buy the goods to make them. That is the way I feel the Lord would take care of the work. Just heed what He says; He will not cause you to make a mistake.

It takes eight chickens, fryers, for one meal, at our house. That is another way you could help the cause; a church or society might send a coop of chickens.

We are canning all the berries we can gather, but as for the fruit, we will not have any this time. As we have such a quantity of empty cans, while we are planning to fill them, as nearly as we can, with tomatoes, corn, etc., we will be glad to send some of them to some of our friends, who have the fruit to fill them for us.

The health of our "family" is good and we are getting along nicely. Those who went to the picnic on the 4th, reported a good time.

Sister Elizageth Jane Lester sent us two pairs of pants for the boys. Thank you; it is so kind of you to remember us.

E. M. CARTER, Supt.

Cullman, Ala., R. F. D. 7.

Dear Uncle Emory:

Here comes a little ten-year-old girl from North Alabama who would like to join the band of cousins.

We moved from Randolph Co., Ala., near Roanoke, last fall. Mama and Papa were members of the Christian church at Forest Home. Bro. J. D. Dollar was the pastor. We all liked to hear him preach. I hope he will come up here this summer and preach some for us. There is no Christian church up here. I send a dime, with love to the cousins.

Your niece,

ANNIE PEARL ALMON.

Welcome, Annie Pearl; we are glad to have you join "our band" and trust you may do much good for the Orphanage.

McRae, Ga., June 30, 1913.

Dear Uncle Emory:

We send our dimes, with love to you all at the Orphanage, and love to our Cousin William Staley Cheatam. We feel sorry for him to lose his little Sister.

Not many letters in the Corner these weeks. Do you wish us to stop too? We have written every month of our lives and sent our dimes—Newman, 8 years, S. E., 6 years, Jos. Rabb, 21½ years. We have helped a little with these dimes, and maybe we have inspired some reader. We have helped ourselves a great deal; mamma and papa know.

It is very hot here now, but we have plenty of shade, and figs getting ripe. We spend much time under the big fig tree. Fondly,

JOHN NEWMAN DENTON,

JOS. RABB DENTON.

No; sir, I don't want you to discontinue your letters. I rather wish more of the cousins would write again. I know what you have to enjoy, of the "big fig tree"; but I don't care for them to eat till they are cooked in sugar. Come again.

ONE HUNDRED MILLION RED CROSS SEALS BEING PRINTED FOR 1913.

Orders for printing 100,000,000 Red Cross Christmas seals for use during the holiday season this year have already been placed and preparations for the sale are well under way according to an announcement made from the New York Campaign headquarters to-day.

Over 40,000,000 or $400,000 worth of seals were sold in 1912, a gain of nearly 25 per cent. over the previous year. Because of the deep interest in the anti-tuberculosis movement for which the seals are sold, the American Red Cross and The National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis who conduct the sale, hope to reach the 50,000,000 mark this year, netting $500,000 for the prevention of consumption.

A radical departure from previous seals in the shape and character of the design will be instituted this year. The seal will be rectangular in shape, 1½ inches wide and 1 inch deep. The center of the design will depict Santa Claus with his eight reindeer dashing across a field of snow, and the border will be a brilliant red and green decoration of poinsettias and holly, the Red Cross emblem appearing on either side.

The design was drawn by C. J. Budd of New York, the well known illustrator, who was awarded a prize of $100 for his drawing. The second prize $50 was awarded to R. Foster Worthley of New York and the third to Miss Hazel de Berard of Brooklyn. Miss Sara B. Hill of New York was given honorable mention.

Distribution of the seals will be started about September 1st and by December 1st it is expected that the entire 100,000,000 will be distributed. If more are needed an additional supply will be printed. In addition to the seals themselves, advertising material to the amount of several million pieces is also being prepared. The campaign this year will be organized in almost every city and town of the United States, and no less than 100,000 agents will give their service to the work.

TYPHOID DRINKING WATER.

One of the greatest dangers of the summer vacation is the summer typhoid. People in the cities or elsewhere where the quality of their drinking water is unquestionable, and where some attention is paid to the matter of flies, fall ready victims to summer or vacation typhoid when they go to our various summer resorts, where the sewerage and drinking water are too closely related, and where the flies and food are intimately associated. Either of such combinations is a dangerous proposition. No one knows just how much of our summer typhoid is due to bad water or how much is due to flies.

Now, as to the water question, if there is the slightest doubt as to the quality of the water, the following simple remedy will make it safe. Get a one-pound metal can of chloride of lime, or bleaching powder. Take a level teaspoonful of the powder and a few drops of water to make a thin, smooth paste in a teacup. Then dilute this paste with four cups of water. Place this stock solution in a clean stoppered bottle and keep corked tight. This is enough to disinfect 250 gallons of water. Use a teaspoonful of this stock solution to two gallons of water. Stir well, and use in from a quarter to half an hour. If the water has a slight odor of chlorine, use slightly less of the stock solution. Find out how much stock solution it takes to give a slight odor to the water, then use about one-fourth less than that quantity necessary to produce odors.

Water thus treated is absolutely harmless. The chloride of lime is consumed by the water in ten or fifteen minutes, and even if it were not, in such small quantities it would be harmless.

Fresh stock solution should be made every three or four days, and the powdered lime should be kept in a tightly closed can.

There is little excuse for flies even in summer resorts. The only practical damage done by flies is in polluting food and milk. They can be screened out of kitchens, dining rooms and cook shacks with little expense. Many summer landlords can not be made to appreciate this, but if with a suggestion or two good screens are not forthcoming, the best plan is to patronize the other resort. It will be the cheapest in the long run.—N. C. State Board of Health.

BUY A PIANO FOR YOUR HOME

Even those who think they can not own a piano may own one at a very low cost. As a boy, I longed for music, but had to forego that pleasure because of the high prices charged for pianos. My boyhood home would have been complete had there been a piano in it.

I can sell you a high grade piano with a 10 years guarantee by the Manufacturer, with high grade workmanship and finish for $150.00.

If the piano is not satisfactory after 30 days trial, money will be refunded.

TO BE CHALLENGED.

In every age God has worked with men of force. It is true that He may welcome weaklings into His kingdom, but it is only that He may thereafter make them strong to do His will. Christianity spells not effeminacy, but efficiency. When some one expressed surprise at the energy and initiative displayed by a certain servant of God, the latter explained his course by saying: "When I became converted, I put off the old man; but I did not put on the old woman!" To be a Christian is not to be coddled, petted, or exempted, but to be challenged, demanded, mobilized with others for service. Christianity is not a lullaby or a sleeping potion, but a bugle call summoning to attack and to advance.—Zion's Herald.

A JUDGE'S OPINION OF HORNER.

A Successful Graduate of That School

"It was my good fortune to be prepared for college at the Horner Military School when its principal was Mr. J. H. Horner, who was then regarded as one of the ablest educators in the State. At that time the school ranked easily with the foremost institutions of its kind in the South. Owing to changed conditions, which called for better school facilities, and the consequent development in educational methods, it has steadily and greatly improved in every respect, and now, under the able management of Mr. Jerome C. Horner, a son of the former principal, it is equal to the best. Any boy who enters this institution of learning will always be surrounded by the best influences and advantages for moral, mental and physical training. It is an excellent school and deserves to be strongly commended to public favor and patronage."—Hon. Platt D. Walker, LL. D., Associated Justice Supreme Court of North Carolina.

Horner Military School has for its purpose: (1) The thorough preparation of boys for entrance to colleges, universities, government and technical schools. (2) To give a thorough secondary preparation for a business career. (3) To cultivate, in boys, truthfulness, self-control, a right sense of honor, habits of systematic and close application in the performance of every duty. (4) To help boys to grow physically, mentally and morally into the highest type of Christian Manhood. Does it better today than it ever did.

THE BEST SELLER.

At a recent meeting of the book publishers and dealers in Chicago the announcement was made that for every volume of the "six best sellers" issued each year a carload of Bibles is manufactured. What a tribute to this ancient Book, which so many of us hold in sacred regard! The Bible in the markets of the world stands far to the front. Other books cannot keep in sight of it.—Western Christian Advocate.

Elon College
For Both Men and Women
Elon College, North Carolina

For a quarter century Elon College has rendered the best families of the South a paragon service in providing young men and young women with the best mental, moral and physical training under positive Christian influences, tho entirely free from sectarianism.

Karl Lehman, of Boston, testifies that "of all the Colleges I have visited as International Field Secretary of Christian Endeavor during six years, the spirit of Elon College appeals to me as most genuinely Christian." Elon College is situated in the delightful hill country, a section unsurpassed for beauty, with a climate far-famed for its healthfulness. There is no medical fee, for there is no necessity for it. Its campus, comprising twenty-five acres of native oak and hickory, shrubbery, winding walks and driveways, is one of the most beautiful in the South and, with its two unsurpassed gymnasias, provides abundant opportunity for recreation and relaxation.

The splendid equipment of Elon College was only made possible through liberal endowment. It maintains seven elegant new buildings, especially designed and appointed for college work. These are furnished with every known convenience; steam heat, electric lights, running water, baths and sewerage. The College plant is conservatively valued at $300,000.00.

Elon College is distinctly a high-grade institution, though its charges are moderate. Its graduates are admitted to the graduate departments of all the great universities without examination. Its literary and scientific courses are arranged in various departments which lead to the degrees of Master of Arts, Bachelor of Arts, Bachelor of Science, Bachelor of Philosophy, Bachelor of Pedagogy, and a three-years' course leading to the degree of Licentiate of Instruction, designed especially for teachers. This institution affords special opportunities for training in Piano, Voice, Expression, Fine Arts, Normal Training, Physical Culture and Commercial Practice.

The Faculty consists of twenty-one specialists; men and women selected not only for their superior teaching ability, but also for their exemplary character and manners.

The student body numbers nearly four hundred and comes from thirteen states.

The lowest Rates in the South, only $131 to $191 per College session of ten months. Fall Term always opens the first Wednesday in September. For full descriptive catalogue and view-book, address

HORNER MILITARY SCHOOL

OXFORD, NORTH CAROLINA

Presents a record of 62 years of notable achievement in preparing boys for college, university, scientific and technical schools, the Government academies and life and in assisting youth to develop physically, mentally and morally into the highest type of Christian Manhood. One large, happy family of manly, studious young men.

J. C. Horner

At Horner, the student is surrounded with the refining influences of a well-ordered home. He is in constant and close association with sympathetic instructors who take a personal interest in his progress. Here as nowhere else, are inculcated habits of truthfulness, self-control, a keen sense of honor and systematic and exact application in the performance of all duties. Under firm, but kindly discipline he acquires gentlemanly habits, is taught to forsake all selfish traits, and to be generous and courteous withal.

Your boy will like the life at Horner. He will like the daily Military drills, and they will do him good. He will enjoy the spirit of rivalry existing between the football, baseball and track and field teams of the two Companies. Nine months at Horner will do more to make a boy stronger and healthier physically than anything we know of.

Horner is easily reached and in close connection with all parts of the State. In the beautiful suburbs of Oxford, forty-five miles north of Raleigh, on both the Southern and Seaboard Air Line railways. Six hundred feet above the sea level.

A WONDERFUL INSTRUMENT.

Among the many wonderful inventions of modern times, there is probably none that exerts a more powerful and beneficial influence on the home-life than the self-player piano. As a home-maker and entertainer, it has no equal, but its most valuable feature is its powerful influence in cultivating the tastes and developing the character of young people.

Young people especially crave entertainment. If this is not furnished in the home they will seek it elsewhere. The self-player piano makes home attractive to them, and the influence of good music develops their tastes in the right direction, thereby protecting them against the allurements of the street.

If you are interested in securing the best self-player piano (or a regular piano) write for a copy of the illustrated catalog of the Christian Sun Piano Club. Address the Managers, Ludden & Bates, Christian Sun Piano Club Dept., Atlanta, Ga. Advt.

THE CHRISTIAN AND NATIONAL DEFENSE.

Until we have a permanent court of nations and the great nations committed by arbitration treaties to take all cases to it, a certain amount of armament is of course necessary. Against this reasonable defense the Christian has no quarrel. But the Christian should take the sturdiest stand against the continued attempt to foster a deep-rooted militarism within the nation. He should preach Christ's doctrine of the kingdom of God including all men, regardless of nationality, under a law of love.—Congregationalist.

CLUB MEMBERSHIP INCREASES.

The hot summer weather has failed to diminish the general interest in the Christian Sun Piano Club. New members are joining every day, in fact, the fame of the Club is spreading rapidly, and many are joining as a result of seeing and hearing the superb pianos and player-pianos in the homes of their friends.

The object of the Club is to secure the lowest possible prices on pianos of known and approved quality, and to provide an easy and convenient system of payment for those who do not find it convenient to pay the entire amount at once.

If your home needs a good instrument, you will find the Club a great assistance. Write for illustrated catalog and booklet containing letters from Club members. Address Ludden & Bates, Christian Sun Piano Club Dept., Atlanta, Ga. Advt.

THE CHRISTIAN AS A VOTER.

More and more there is coming to be a distinct feeling that there is a Christian vote apart from the old party vote. The Christian voter is going to vote for the man who has probity and honor, who is committed to the new conception of office as stewardship, whose platform is framed for the betterment of the State, and who does not stoop to petty policies or politics. He will be guided by a cause rather than by a party. He will use his vote as a rebuke to men in high places who have done evil.—Watchman.

WILLING TO TRADE.

A New York lady of breeding and wealth declares that she will give up her husband rather than her welfare work. There are lots of ladies who are ready to contribute their husbands to any good or bad cause which may be willing to take them over.—Houston Post.

SOUTHERN SCHEDULES.

MARRIAGES

Johnson-Holland.

A pretty marriage was solemnized by the writer at the home of Mrs. Mary Holland, near Holland, Va., on June 29, when Miss Frances, her daughter, became the wife of Richard Darden Johnson of Courtland, Va. A large number of relatives and neighbors were present to witness the ceremony which was performed on the lawn in front of the home. The attendants were Johnnie Johnson and Callie Holland, Jodie Howell and Clara Holland, Thomas Owen and Bessie Holland. We wish for these young people a happy and useful life. N. G. NEWMAN.

DEATHS

Holt.

Died, at her home in Burlington, N. C., July 2nd, 1913, Mrs. Margaret Kivet Holt, wife of J. C. Holt, aged 70 years, 9 months and 20 days. Her maiden name was Whitsett. On September 10th 1861 she was united in marriage to J. C. Holt, of Burlington, N. C. In early life sister Holt confessed faith in Christ and united with New Providence Christian Church of which church she remained a loyal and consistent member till death. She was kind, considerate and true to her friends and gladly gave a helping hand to those in need. For some thirty-five years she had been afflicted, which affliction gradually grew worse, notwithstanding the best medical attention, hospital treatment, loving attention of her devoted husband, who, almost heart-broken, mourns her death. The end came quietly. She simply fell asleep to earth and earthly things to awake in the spirit land. She leaves four brothers. We commend those who mourn, to the Father of infinite love who doeth all things well. The funeral services, by the writer, held at New Providence and the interment was made in the church cemetery. The floral tributes were beautiful; the music, tender and consoling. P. H. FLEMING.

Gwaltney.

Mrs. Ada Elizabeth Gwaltney was born March 24, 1884, died June 21, 1913. She was married to J. H. Gwaltney in April, 1901. In early childhood she joined Antioch Christian church and was a faithful member until her death. She leaves a devoted father and mother, a kind and devoted husband, four children ranging from 4 to 11 years, besides a number of friends who are saddened by her death. May the Lord comfort these in their bereavement. Funeral services were conducted by the writer at Antioch Christian Church.

Landing.

Emma Vester Landing was born September 1st, 1876. Died July 2nd, 1913. Since childhood she has been a member of Antioch Church and remained a faithful member until her death.

She leaves to mourn her departure an aged mother, a loving husband, an infant child, one brother, three sisters. May the Lord keep and comfort them in these hours of sadness and may their hearts be cheered with the hope of future meeting.

Funeral services were conducted at Antioch church by the writer.

Turner where she had lived many years. Interment at Union church conducted by Rev. J. W. Holt.

Hailey.

Marvin Augustus Hailey, infant son of E. L. and Fannie M. Hailey, was born August 15th, 1912 and died July 11th, 1913. Funeral and burial at Long's Chapel by Rev. J. W. Holt. May God comfort the bereaved parents. J. W. HOLT.

A SPLENDID FITTING SCHOOL.

Parents who have a son to prepare for college would be making a grave mistake were they not to consider the decided advantages for such work offered by the Oak Ridge Institute, Oak Ridge, N. C. This school is one of the most successful in the South today, and is in a region long noted for its healthfulness. It was established sixty years ago and has been under the present efficient management for 38 years.

The highest moral tone prevades the section and community and is a potent factor in the high type of Christian Manhood which the school turns out. President Elliot of Harvard University said: "Those schools prepare best for college which prepare at the same time for life" and the quality of this school's work is best evidenced by the prominent success which so many of its students have attained in life. A handsome catalog giving full information about its splendid buildings, equipment, courses, faculty, business training department, terms, etc., can be had free by addressing J. A. and M. H. OUR PRINCIPLES.

- (1.) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the church.
- (2.) Christian is a sufficient name for the church.
- (3.) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
- (4.) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of church membership.
- (5.) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

Editorial Briefs

Praying or Paying.

We sometimes think it easy to pray, but hard to pay. The opposite is true. Prof. Warneck of Halle has well said, "It is much more difficult to pray for missions than to give to missions." Thousands, maybe more, throw their dollars, sometimes ten, perhaps twenty, into the missionary collection who really have never prayed for missions in their lives. We do the easiest thing always. It is easier to pay to missions than pray for them. It is always easier to pay, for anything, than pray for it. Prayer means burden, anxiety, deep earnestness, soul-longing. When we pay we give what we have; when we pray we give what we are. It is easier to give ours than to give us.

A Soldier In Training.

We sometimes turn down the best things because they seem commonplace, ordinary, and "don't pay." The following paragraph which comes under our eye from The New York Christian Advocate, illustrates the manner in which God uses the things to most profit which many think are not worth while, and others besides soldiers in training are ready to cast away:

A West Point cadet received a weekly denominational paper by the thoughtfulness of a Christian friend. It did not interest him and was often dropped into the waste-basket unopened. He had decided to ask the publishers to stop sending it when one day his chum, glancing through it, was caught by an article which appealed to young men to invest their lives where they would produce the highest results. That was the beginning of that boy's remarkable career. After a few years of honorable service he resigned from the army, and volunteered to go to Japan as a missionary, becoming one of the most efficient workers in that field. It was "a church paper" that helped to transform this man's life.

Breaking Up The Foundations.

Old views, old beliefs, old alliances, political, social and religious are being broken up. This strenuous time drives us forward at fierce speed. The father is so busy providing luxuries and bodily comforts for himself and household that he no longer finds time to gather his family for daily worship. Family prayers, in the average household, is a lost art, a relic of an historical past. The crowded trains, the thronged high-ways, the street multitudes, the pleasure seekers every where will tell you that the Sabbath is being desecrated to a fearful degree and that the old ideas of the sacredness of the day have passed away. Parents have intrusted to Sunday school teachers the religious instructions of their children; and these teachers, at best, can only supplement, in a thirty minutes a week, that which parents are supposed to teach at home. The very foundations of beliefs, practices, affiliations, social, political, religious are being broken up. Will the foundation being laid by modern society stand the test. "Other foundations can no man lay save that in Jesus Christ."

The Brewer's Wife and Distiller's Daughter.

Superintendent Anderson, of the Anti-Saloon League of Maryland, is of the opinion that there is "an awakened sense of social justice" being experienced just now. But because the Superintendent expressed this view in a rather caustic manner in a Baltimore paper, he was attacked, with a horse-whip, in his private office by the son of a retired distiller, on the ground that he had reflected upon the wives and mothers of brewers and distillers. Superintendent Anderson sends us the words he used, and for which he was brutally attacked. Read them:

Before long, when a brewer buys an automobile, people will figure how many little children were robbed of carfare to the parks before the price of the auto filtered to him in profits. When some distiller contributes to charity, or builds a church, or finances some similar enterprise, folks will begin to wonder how many men were robbed of hope of heaven by the stuff which he sold for profit, knowing it to be injurious, to enable him to pose as a generous patron of the church. When the wife of some distiller or wholesale liquor dealer or prominent grocer who makes a specialty of liquor blossoms out in a diamond necklace at the theater, the margins of programs may be covered with calculations of how many children and mothers have gone without decent clothes in order that she may shine resplendent. And the day is not far distant when the socially prominent wife of a man who has made his money out of the liquor traffic, upon giving some lavish entertainment in a palatial home, will find that even the guests will involuntarily trace the connections between that luxury and the hovels in the slums, and the pitiful sight of household goods on the sidewalk where a drunkard's family has been evicted for non-payment of rent, and regard her as a social parasite.

We note that the Baltimore papers are of the opinion that this brutal attack "in behalf of wives and mothers," by the pampered son of liquor profits and the cherished child of dollars robbed from hungry women and starving children (through the hands of drunken husbands and fathers) has done more harm than good "to the liquor business." Let us hope. If truth and justice prevail in this world the liquor business must be harmed, must be out-lawed, by the help of Almighty God.

The Creator of Evil.

A gentleman recently contended, in our presence, that God was the creator of evil, from His hand evil came, and therefore—mark the conclusion—God was responsible for the evil wrought in the world. Furthermore, the speaker contended that his argument was sustained by plain and direct Bible declaration, citing as proof Isaiah 45:7: "I make peace, and create evil. I the Lord do all these things." There was the simple scriptural declaration and there was no moving the speaker from it. The writer was astounded that one could so distort this Scripture as to make God the creator of all evil wrought at men's hands, and was therefore alone responsible for the evil in the world. The man would not be convinced that sin was one thing, and the evil here spoken of was a consequence, a result, an outcome, of sin. He would not be persuaded that in this sense God was the creator of evil, and that, in this particular, evil was a good, a wise, a beneficent, thing. Evil results as a consequence of sin are provisions for correction, for reproof, and for redemption. Unless there were evil consequences of sin no man need fear sin. One can get the full view point in any one of scores of selections in Scriptures where evil is set forth in its true light. Take Judges 2:13-15: "And they forsook the Lord, and served Baal. And the anger of the Lord was hot against Israel, and he delivered them into the hands of spoilers that spoiled them, and he sold them into the hands of their enemies round about, * * * * Whithersoever they went out, the hand of the Lord was against them for evil, as the Lord had said, and as the Lord had sworn unto them." This was the chastisement, the corrective, the punishment sent upon the sinning Israelites for their own wickedness, even the sin of serving Baal. In this sense, and in this alone does God create evil—as a good that may bring wayward and erring and sinning ones back to the paths of peace and righteousness. Or, our speaker might have been enlightened, to his edification, had he read the whole verse of Isaiah 45:7: "I form the light and create darkness; I make peace and create evil. I the Lord do all these things." Light and peace come first and are in keeping with God's eternal plan of righteousness; darkness and evil, agencies and instrumentalities of correction and purification. Elsewhere in Scripture the word here translated "evil" is translated "sorrow," "wretchedness," "adversity," "afflictions," "calamities," such as man brings upon himself by reckless and wayward living; but no where in Scripture is the word here used translated sin. "God created evil only in the sense that He made sorrow, wretchedness, adversity, etc., to be the sure fruits of sin." Any other position is unscriptural. Our speaker fell into the fatal error of taking a partial, or split off, section of Scripture to fit in with, and justify his own preoccupied position.

"Ye have not yet resisted unto blood, striving against sin" (Heb. 12:4). What is the matter with us? We do not deal with our sins with our strength. We try to blow them away with our breath; we wish them away with our fancy; we dream that they will disappear in our sleep; but we do not go at them with the last ounce of strength in our blood and say, "By the eternal God, and with His help, this cursed thing shall be left behind!" If men would take hold of their sins with all their strength they would strangle them.

"Gentle handed strike a nettle
And it stings you for your pains;
Grasp it like a man of mettle
And it soft as silk remains."

EDITORIAL

IN THE HILL COUNTRY.

(Editorial Correspondence).

WAYNESVILLE, N. C., July 21, 1913.

DEAR CHRISTIAN SUN: Everybody wants to go somewhere. And when everybody gets there everybody wants to go somewhere else. In this world of work, and weariness, and worry, we are certainly on the go. I came to the hills supposedly to rest. I wasn't tired, and so can't rest. And from the stir and movements and go of thousands of others hereabouts I would judge that they can't rest either. But they are paying a dear price for the trying. You pay for rooms here that you wouldn't live in, for beds that you wouldn't sleep on, and for food that you wouldn't eat, at home. But it is all the thing to do you know—and is rest! Possibly so. I have a secret notion though that the real rest comes from the inconveniences that you learn to tolerate, the change from the daily routine, and the exhaustion that ensues so you can rest, and enjoy and appreciate more your home when you get back to it. The best place on earth to rest is at home, if one has the will and the courage equal to it. If your will breaks down on you and you become a slave to your daily grind, or your courage fails and you become a coward before your tasks, then you can't rest at home. This going away business is an admission on our part of our own lack of volition, courage, fortitude. It admits that we were defeated by our daily affairs and have been brought under subjection to them, rather than that we were able to overcome and subdue them. And so we let go, run away, form a perspective at long range, and then go back and take fresh hold. Thus God has mercy on the weakling and the coward, and allows him to take fresh hold, have another chance. In a poetic mood David mused: "When I consider thy heavens, the work of thy fingers, the moon and the stars, what is man that thou art mindful of him?" It takes no poetic musing to use the Psalmist's words for an inverted chain of thought: "When I consider thy mountains, the work of thy hands, the seashore which thou hast made, as places of refuge and new creation for even the timorous and the cowardly, how great is God, and His ways of mercy, pity and indulgence are past finding out."

Waynesville, where I write, is only 2800 feet above sea level; but like all the others of these mountain resorts, with few exceptions, it is not exactly in a valley, but on a plateau between mountains. This must be done, I suppose, for the benefit of liverymen who furnish you carriage or car at nameless expense for an afternoon drive to see the places of interest near by. I went for a carriage drive to Eagle's Nest Saturday afternoon. It is five miles up, every inch of it, but up there you are 5050 feet above sea. Off in the distance is Jones' Knob, 6209 feet in altitude; Wesner Bald, 5570 feet; Lickstone Bald, 5741 feet; Cold Mountain, 6010 feet, and various ranges loom up in the distance, some thirty, some sixty miles away. Practically on the top of Eagle's Nest, as on that of Blowing Rock, and I presume other high peaks as well, you find a spring of the clearest, coolest water to be found anywhere whatsoever. My son could not explain the cooling process, as he couldn't find any ice about, and I couldn't explain it to him, other than that the immense pressure of the great mountains on the struggling stream made it cold and frigid, keeping it locked and hidden from all warming influences of the sun—the sun being the center and source of all heat and warmth.

I was out at Lake Junaluska, three miles from here, awhile ago. This is very interesting, I mean the lake and its history. The Methodist church, people, or corporation, have purchased some twelve or fifteen hundred acres of land, thrown up an immense dam between two neighboring hills, built a lake covering 250 acres, and constructed seven miles of fine road about the lake, erected near it an auditorium capable of seating 3,000 people, built cottages and homes here, there and everywhere, and are now building a great hotel out there. I suppose some two hundred thousand dollars have been spent in all, and if present plans carry, a million dollars will be expended. Our Methodist brethren will use this as an assembly place for their chautauquas, their institutes and their summer camping grounds. It is going to be a great Methodist colony, with splendid grounds, ample buildings, a refreshing lake, and vast mountains, when all is complete. By the way, this idea seems to be spreading here in western North Carolina. The Baptists have a colony, an auditorium, cottages and such over at Ridge Crest, and the Presbyterians at Montreat. The idea is a fine one and grew out of a desire to be in a religious atmosphere even when on a summer's outing. Some people get the idea that in order to rest and have a good time they must get out from under the restraint of moral influence and religious teaching. Nothing is further from the truth, and these church colonies, assembly places, and denominational camping grounds so teach and prove. Good people may enjoy themselves as well as the bad, and better, and may do so without having all manner of evil planted in their faces.

The mountain air is cool and the breezes are bracing and balmy. I see from the papers that it was very warm the past week, particularly last Friday, and that many deaths ensued in the larger cities. It was, so inhabitants here said, the warmest it had been in their memory; still it was not uncomfortable in the day, and the nights were sweet, refreshing, and delightful. Good and glorious night; the holy hours when rest comes, vital sleep enspheres, heavenly silence prevails, and happy forgetfulness of the day's blunders and tomorrow's tasks. Of all the rich provision in this material universe, God never made a wiser or better than the blessed night. Night is to day what the ocean is to the earth, the great wash-pot into which the accumulation and the impurity and the uncleanness are gathered, and all things are made pure and fresh and clean again. The morning atmosphere is as fresh and fragrant and vital now as that which Adam and Eve first breathed in creation's early dawn, and this despite the smoke of a million factories and the vile odor from a thousand furnaces—because God baptizes the busy day into the pure pool of the purifying night. When the day's work is done how sweet indeed is the rest, the recreation of God's good night.

And so I reckon that through the baptism into that mysterious night called Death God takes away the weariness and exhaustion and the unwholesome accumulations of His children, and bring them into the light of Eternity's day, new and re-created creatures, prepared for the perpetual joy of that day that has no end, is clean and pure and perfect, and so shall never need a night, or know an hour's darkness.

Even now while I write the restful night has spread its mantle far and wide. The vast mountains lie sleeping in the distance like some monster giant stretching high and far to ghostly proportions. The wearied and feverish earth has ceased its tossings to and fro. Its parched brow is soothed under the cooling touch of night; and the restless rush and worry, the turmoil and the hurry are content to be still in the silent clutch of Darkness. Ah! well this feverish life shall also go as has gone the day, and the body, worn with the task and travel of the way, shall also be content to lie without murmur or complaint in the narrow confines toward which one and all move with sure and steady tread.

May this day of ours be spent that the night will have for each only the promise of sweet, dreamless, and re-creating sleep. J. O. A.

"SHOULD HE HAVE TOLD?"

When you spring a specific instance of how, or how not, to deal with an erring one, unless of the glaring sort, then you stir up a wasp's nest. Everybody has a separate and distinct idea of how any given moral, or immoral, condition should be dealt with. But every person who ever taught school, or endeavored to manage boys, will be interested in a condition presented by Principal Harlan E. Hall, of a Mansfield, Ohio, high school as follows:

Good and Bad are two boys, each 14 years of age. They attend the same school. One day Bad said to Good, "I am going to throw a snowball through the window." Good made no reply. Bad threw the snowball and broke the window, and Good saw him do it. The next morning at school the teacher asked the pupils singly and privately the questions, "do you know who broke the window?" and "who broke the window?"

1. What should Good say when the teacher asked him "Do you know who broke the window?"

2. What should Good say when she asked him, "Who broke the window?"

3. Should the teacher have asked the boy these questions?

4. Should the teacher have the same right in compelling Good to tell?

5. Modern American schools are rapidly adopting systematic instruction in ethics. In your opinion, should children throughout the public schools be taught that it is their duty to tell the truth about wrong-doing when questioned by a competent authority?

It is useless to say that Principal Hall's queries have elicited hundreds of replies. Men are not agreed in such matters, because no universal law may be laid down to cover every specific case in questionable matters. Even the very plainest questions, involving right and wrong, save those of unusual nature covered by such general and sweeping declarations as are contained in the decalogue, must be answered on their merits, and dealt with in wisdom and prudence according to the situation.

While not answering the questions submitted the finest point we have seen made is that of the National Boy Scout Commander, Mr. Beard, in the following example:

For the last thirty-odd years I have been dealing with boys as one of them, and I am firmly convinced that it is most dangerous to interfere with the established laws of boyhood.

Last summer I had 40 boys under my charge for eight weeks. When an offense similar in character to the one you mention (the snowball incident) was brought to my notice, although I was satisfied as to who the culprit was, I lined the boys up, brought them to attention, then asked that the one who had committed the breach of discipline step three paces to the front. For the first and only time in the eight weeks of experience no one moved from the ranks. I then went along the line and asked each boy if he did it, and received a negative answer from each one. I then addressed the boys somewhat as follows: "Young gentlemen, you know who did this, I do not want you to tell me, but it is evident that you have a liar in your ranks—some one among you who has disgraced you. If I were you, I would not speak to a liar."

Then I dismissed them. The day afterwards, a little fellow asked permission to address the rest of the boys. He stood upon a box and said, "Fellow Woodcrafters, I want to apologize to all of you for lying to our Chief, and for bringing disgrace and dishonor upon this camp, and I ask you to forgive me." Then, turning to me he said: "Please, Mr. Beard, may the boys speak to me now?" I told him that they could do as they chose about it. Thereupon the whole of them came up like little men and shook hands with him and told him it was all right, but not to do it again.

At the end of eight weeks, with 40 boys in camp, boys of all kinds and from all over the United States, I had not one who would lie to me, and I reached this result by referring all matters to the boys themselves.

A FEW REMARKS.

—An attorney of Greensboro, Mr. E. J. Justice, has announced himself a candidate for the United States Senate to succeed Senator Overman, whose term does not expire for nearly two years yet. Mr. Justice's letter of announcement has one commendable feature; he wishes a brief campaign. Let us hope also that it will not be rancorous and personal. It is believed that ex-Governor Glenn will in due time announce himself a candidate for the same position. The ex-Governor has rendered a great service to his State and thousands are anxious to see him back in public life. Senator Overman has proven himself capable and efficient and has a great following in the State. Others may announce their candidacy later, for a seat in the Senate, "the most august assembly in the world" is a prize to be coveted by patriots who desire to serve.

—It is not worth while to worry and fret at the weather. The good and wise Creator of us all, and of this universe, creates and manages that, and we need not worry over that which we can't help or correct. The worrying and the fretting will only make the weather warmer and more intolerable to us. Looking at it all in a good humored way The Charlotte Observer's advice is about the most timely and philosophical:

Suppose it has turned warm again, compensations are numerous enough. The weather has become a joke and we all like jokes. Then there is the pleasure of participation in any breaking of records, with the pleasure of reminiscence in store. Over and above everything else we may reflect that we are going through a process wherein the skin eliminates a hugely increased proportion of the body waste and gives the other organs—which we overworked last Winter and will overwork next Winter—a beneficial rest. We are getting free Turkish baths, more helpful than the artificial kind can ever be. In short, Nature is doing by us, with a little added emphasis, just what she should do for our good at this season of the year. There are also the enjoyable foods and diversions which Summer always brings. If we know how to take care of ourselves and if we take the joke as it should be taken instead of fretting ourselves, we shall get through comfortably enough.

—The following will be read with deep interest, and delight, particularly by those—and who have escaped—who have suffered these years from abnormal and extortionate express rates:

Washington, July 19.—Plans for the extension, improvement and reduction in rates of the Parcel Post were announced today by Postmaster General Burleson. The changes, which are to become effective on August 15, include an increase from 11 pounds to 20 pounds in the maximum weight of parcels; a material reduction in the postage rates in the first and second zones, and the abandonment of the parcel post map as a means of computing rates and the substitution for it of a rate chart individualized to every postoffice in the United States. The plans contemplate the purchase of a large number of automobiles to be used exclusively for the delivery of parcel post matter.

While, for the present, the maximum weight limit of 20 pounds and the reduction in rates will apply only to the first and second zones, from any given postoffice—a distance of about 150 miles—the changes directed today constitute the first long step towards a universal extension of the system and a general reduction in the rates of postage on parcel matter.

"It is my expectation and belief," said Postmaster General Burleson, "that eventually—and it may be 15 or 20 years—the postal service will handle practically all of the small package transportation business in the United States. The maximum weight limit extends now from 11 to 20 pounds. I expect to see increased to 100 pounds, and experience may demonstrate the practicability of handling the parcel business at even lower rates than we now propose."

WHY ELON COLLEGE?

The Christian Church, South, needs Elon College that its young people may be educated beyond the range of the local public schools. What I mean to say is this: that the great majority of the young people of any religious brotherhood would not get the advantages of higher education if it were not for their own denominational College.

It was certainly so in the Christian Church, South, before Elon's foundation. Our ministry did not have College training and our laity did not feel the need of it. The State schools of higher learning and the Colleges of our sister denominations were glad to welcome our young people, but they did not seek admission and did not accept it when offered. We have now in this State three denominations, one of them outnumbering our own by two or three times, which are without a denominational College and whose young people, led by an uneducated ministry, grow up without the development College education guarantees. Most young people who go to College, therefore, do so because their denomination maintains a College for them, which as an enterprise of the Church they feel obligated to attend and support.

And the reason for this is plain: thoughtful Christian parents are unwilling to send their immature children to higher institutions of learning supported by the State and where their religious culture is almost entirely neglected. They know that the State school professes to be non-religious, but that there is no such possible position. They know that religion is not a separate department of life, but an atmosphere that colors all departments of it, and that religion or irreligion, not non-religion, must be the resultant of every College course. They are not willing that it should be irreligion and that is what it most often is in the product of the so-called non-religious institution. The few exceptions are not sufficient assurance to them that their child will not follow the way of the majority and be divorced from his interest in things religious. They are unwilling to patronize an institution whose atmosphere is not distinctly religious, where religion is an incident and not a prime object, and so they keep their children at home, with the consequent narrowing of life and dwarfing of its possibilities of lasting achievements.

But why not send them to the denominational Colleges? The reason here is again easy: the man who feels so keenly the need for the religious atmosphere for the education of his children and for lack of it will not patronize the State school is so firmly fixed in his devotion to the principles of his own denomination that almost invariably he is unwilling to send his children to a College whose religious life is colored by sectarian tenets to which he cannot subscribe. He is not ambitious to build up the other denomination at the expense of his own. The result is, as before, that the great majority do not give their children the advantages of higher education, so needful to individual and racial uplift.

The brethren some times seem to think that the denominational Colleges make too large drafts upon the Church, but if they will consider that they are the price we must pay to help the mass of the promising young people of the Church toward the blessings of higher education, they should give thanks for the obligations and burdens they impose. And that is what they of the South are doing in reference to Elon. They recall that the motion that led to its foundation stated that its purpose should be "to furnish young men and young women, on equal terms, with most thorough instruction under positive moral and religious influences." Twenty-four years' faithful adherence to this ideal has taught the Church that these influences cannot be dispensed with and for that reason they are gladly, hilariously rallying to the needs and necessities of the situation and giving Elon the support, moral and financial as well as in patronage, it must have in order to serve its high mission of redeeming the promising young people of the Christian Church, South, from ignorance and saving them to lives of vastly greater service in society and in the Church.

NOT OF THE WORLD.

In Christ's wonderful prayer, as recorded in the sixteenth chapter of the gospel according to John, there are many most remarkable words. The more that one meditates upon them, the more deeply and thoughtfully is he impressed by them. In referring to His spiritual disciples, He said: "They are not of the world, even as I am not of the world." Probably all of us have read those words a number of times—some of us have read them many times—but did we ever stop to think of the largeness of their meaning? We can readily understand the truth that Christ was not of this world for He came down from heaven. It was very difficult for the most of His disciples to grasp the truth that He came from heaven, and therefore was not of this world, either in existence or in character. This is true of many in our land today. But Christ said that His converted disciples were not of this world. How could that be so? They had not yet been in heaven, and hence they could not have come down from heaven; how, then, could it be that they were not of the world? In what sense was this true? It was true in the sense that the spiritual life which they were then living was from above, even from heaven. Christ had given them eternal life. A new creation had taken place in them. Their present life was different from what their former life was. Though still on earth heavenly life was within them. Not being of this world, they were living differently from the way that people of this world live. There was a line of distinction running between them. Is not this true of Christ's people today? It must be true of all who are genuinely Christian people. They are much fewer than mere church members are. Not all who call Christ "Lord" are His spiritual brethren and sisters. You profess to be a Christian. Are you showing by your spiritual manner of life that you are not of this world? what do worldly people think of you. C. H. WETHERBE.

"This is the disciple which testifieth of these things, and wrote these things: and we know that his testimony is true" (John 21:24). There is nothing more beautiful in Christian history than the quiet witness of the Apostle John. He knew and stated the deep things, but there was no life of tumult for him. When others were fighting for the Master, he was content to be there to share in the suffering, but he took no credit to himself. Wherever Peter stands up boldly to speak the truth about his Master, John stands as near to him as possible, saying nothing, but living it all.—R. J. CAMPBELL.

LITTLE JOURNEYS INTO MISSION LANDS.

II. South America.

South America is a very large country lying southeast of North America. A north and south line drawn along the eastern edge of Florida would strike the western edge of South America, so the entire continent may be said to lie east of Florida. Supposing the Panama Canal finished and we were to sail from the city of Panama at the southeast end of the canal and on the Pacific side, and make a coastwise trip around the continent, we would find the Pacific Coast of South America presenting a succession of magnificent and varied scenery. At first the shores would present abundant tropical appearance with grand mountain scenery in the background. After passing the United States of Columbia and Ecuador, we would find a vast stretch of coast utterly barren, a parched desert plain forty miles wide in many places and the barrenness extending far up the slopes of the lofty mountains in the misty distance. Finally we would come along the coast of Chili. Now we are getting far beyond the equator and our shadows are cast southwards. The coast which has hitherto been open, becomes thickly studded with islands shooting up out of the water like the peaks of submerged mountains. The picturesque Andes that have paralleled our journey for thousands of miles still rise grandly from the ocean's brink until their lofty peaks are capped with perpetual snow. We round Cape Horn and head homeward up the eastern coast. Although it is summer at home it is winter in these distant southern climes and the weather is bitter cold. Until we get by the coast of the Argentine Republic, a country big enough to make nearly twenty-five states the size of Virginia, the shores are comparatively low. But in the four thousand miles along the shores of Brazil, the shores gradually change from the appearance of a temperate climate to that of the tropics and for a long distance before coming into the region of the Amazon river the coast rises, in places abruptly from one to two thousand feet. So far all the countries we have passed on our long voyage have independent governments, but after Brazil, we come to Guiana, three colonies by that name, the first under the French government the second under the Dutch, and the third under English rule. Here the shores are crowded with tropical vegetation, with grand mountain scenery in the background. In British Guiana, we should stop at Georgetown, the capital of the colony, a beautiful city with wide, clean streets laid out at right angles, for it is here the American Christian Convention has begun a mission work. Pursuing our journey along the coast to Venezuela and the United States of Columbia, we come at last through the Panama Canal to our starting point after a voyage of ten thousand miles.

History.

South America was discovered before North America was. It therefore attracted the Spanish explorers, while English, Dutch, and French explorers were attracted to North America. But for a flight of parrots southwestward, it is thought that Columbus, who followed the birds, would have come into the Gulf Stream and landed in North America perhaps about Hatteras or Virginia, instead of one of the West India Islands. South America thus became Spanish in government and Roman Catholic in religion, while North America became English in government and Protestant in Religion. The Spanish found a race of Indians similar to those in North America, but highly civilized and living under a well-ordered government. Prescott's "Conquest of Peru" is a fascinating story of how the Spaniard, greedy for gold, and carrying the Christian religion into a heathen country, conquered the Peruvians, perhaps the most powerful of all the South American Indian nations at that time. All of South America soon became Spanish. The Portuguese, lovers of the wide seas and persistent colonizers, gained a footing on the eastern coasts. Brazil, now the largest and most important republic of the eastern continent, grew out of that Portuguese colony. In the first half of the nineteenth century the various colonies, both Spanish and Portuguese, won their independence and set up constitutional governments, all of them patterned after that of the United States. Then followed a period of revolutions and inefficiency in government, as has always been the case in the Spanish countries of the New World where the great majority of the people have been kept in ignorance. As in North America, South America was cursed by the introduction of slavery. It existed even in Brazil until as late as 1888 when all slaves were set free, about 500,000 of them, although a law had been passed by the Brazilian parliament in 1871 setting free all children born of slaves after that date. The next year after the freeing of the slaves—that is, 1889—Brazil, which has been styled an empire since its freedom from Portugal in 1822, became a republic. The Argentine Republic and Chili greatly impoverished each other through a succession of wars over the boundary lines between them. These have finally been settled and Argentina, next in size to Brazil, is fast becoming a great country so far as material development goes. The Spanish stamp in religion and in the effort to keep the people in ignorance is strong upon Argentina as well as upon all other republics of the continent, and the Spanish is the language everywhere, except among the Indians. These Indians use the Indian dialects just as those of North America, do.

The People.

The people of South America are composed of three races: Indians, Africans, and Europeans. These have intermarried so that the present population is a motley mixture of various colors from the white European to the blackest African. In Brazil and the Argentine Republic are thousands of Chinese also. This intermixing of races has largely eliminated race hatred among the masses. There is therefore no separate schools and separate churches and other race distinction as in the South between the negro and the white man, or in California between the Japanese and the white race. The ruling class is, as a rule, wealthy, and few in number compared to the masses, who are hopelessly poor and heavily burdened with taxes. Just as Pizarro and other Spanish explorers and conquerors heartlessly robbed the native Indians of all their wealth in sight, so the crafty money gatherer to-day regards many parts of South America as a fruitful field where shrewdness and oppression in business methods will yield abundant money harvests. The Indian was nominally through fear of punishment, converted to Christianity, but really remained heathen in his religion. The Roman Catholic religion, a form of Christianity without the substance, has failed shamefully as attested by the moral and social degradation. The vast field, therefore, offers abundant opportunity for real Christian examples of living in business men, lawyers, doctors, teachers, and preachers.

Missions.

Bishop E. R. Hendrix, in an address delivered a few weeks ago at a conference in New York, spoke in a statesman-like manner on "Why Send Missionaries to South America." Some of the reasons given for sending missionaries to a country already nominally Christian are: first, that sacerdotalism as taught and practiced by the Roman Catholic church is a form of idolatry harmful to both priest and people; secondly, that the failure of self-government and the consequent insecurity of life and property is largely due to an inferior religion, that democracy is a destructive failure in America when harnessed with the Roman Catholic church as in the case in South America; thirdly, that intellectual stagnation is the result of four hundred years of Spanish ideals and Roman Catholic religion, that both spiritual and intellectual darkness reign where Christian light might be expected; and fourthly, that the Bible is known neither to priest nor people as the book of life and light.

Honorable James Brice, after travels through Mexico and South America and especially in Brazil and the Argentine Republic, speaks of the conditions as follows: "Both the intellectual and ethical standards of conduct * * * seem to be entirely divorced from religion. The women are almost universally the 'practicing' Catholics and so are the peasantry, though the Christianity of the Indian bears only a distant resemblance to that of Europe. But men of the upper or educated class appear wholly indifferent to theology and to Christian worship. It has no interest for them. They are seldom actively hostile to Christianity, much less are they offensive when they speak of it, but they think it does not concern them, and may be left to women and peasants. * * * In the more advanced parts of South America it (the Roman Catholic church) seems to be regarded merely as a harmless Old World affair, which belongs to the past order of things just as much as does the rule of Spain, but which may, so long as it does not interfere with politics, be treated with the respect which its antiquity commands. * * * The phenomenon is all the more remarkable because in the days when America began to be settled there was no part of Europe where religion had so strong a hold on the people as it had in Spain and Portugal." It appears therefore, that the opportunity of Protestantism is to carry a living, vital religion into a vast territory now famishing religiously, on a dry and shriveled form of Christianity. The opposition of the existing Roman Catholic church and the indifference of prominent intelligent men and the illiteracy of the masses are the chief obstacles in the way of Protestantism. Protestant missionary societies are planting missions in South America. The following organizations have missions there: Canadian Baptist; Seventh Day Adventists; National Baptist Convention; Christian Woman's Board; Methodist Episcopal; Methodist Episcopal, South; African Methodist Episcopal; Presbyterian Church; Protestant Episcopal Church; Presbyterian Church, South; American Bible Society; Christian and Missionary Alliance; Foreign Department, Y. M. C. A.; Y. M. C. A., For work; Christian Missions in Many Lands (British); Christian Church; Moravian Church (German). These seventeen organizations with from one to six missions can have but a small influence in so large a country as South America. Their number need to be increased, missions multiplied, and strengthened. If South America is to become vitally Christian, Protestant North America must perform that duty.

VISIT TO VERSAILLES.

Saturday morning, July 5, our party was taken on an excursion from Paris to Versailles. There are about seventy-five in the party which came together on the steamer Ryndam from New York to Europe. We decided to drive on this excursion and secured wagons with five fine French horses, and an excellent French driver of each wagon and our guides to conduct us on this trip. We had to drive about eleven miles over some of the finest roads and through the finest country (almost city) that I have visited on my trip.

We first passed through the woods of Boulogne, which is one of the finest and most frequented promenades in France. Broad streets connect it with the Champs Elysees. The Avenue of the woods of Boulogne and the Avenue Henri Martin are the chief entrances of the woods. The most frequented avenue is the one leading to Porte Dauphine. The woods is most crowded in spring and autumn between 4 and 7 P. M. All the fashionable society of Paris are to be seen here. The "Garden of Acclimatization," situated in the Boulevard Marlot, was laid out in 1860 for the acclimatization of useful plants and animals from abroad. Park Monceau, laid out by Carmotel, was acquired by the father of Louis Philippe in 1778 and opened to the public under Napoleon III. The artificial grottoes in the rockier hill, the pyramid and the Naumachine, a half ruined colonnade partly surrounding a basin of water,—these with the delightful shady walks make the park most romantic. Foreign trees and shrubs are especially plentiful, and there are many monuments, amongst others one to the novelist Guy de Maupassant.

We passed St. Cloud, a town of 6,000 inhabitants, picturesquely situated on a wooded hill standing on the banks of the Seine. The ruins of the Royal Chateau, the former summer residence of Napoleon III., are now completely broken up and removed. None of the suburbs of Paris suffered so much in 1871 as St. Cloud. The town was swept by Mont Valerien to prevent the German troops from taking shelter there. Only 123 of the 624 houses were left standing. Traces of the devastation remain even yet. The park, at present undergoing restoration, is famous for its beauty, reaching out as far as Sevres. The countless fountains play on the second Sunday of every month, and also on the last three Sundays of September. The great cascade is fed by huge spouts issuing from statues representing the Seine and Marne, and descends by nine channels, each broken by nine terraces, unto the lower basin. To the right one may see the grand fountain with figures of dolphins and sea monsters.

Versailles is the next place we reached. Here we took our luncheon and began sight-seeing in earnest. This is a regularly built town of 52,000 inhabitants. The Chateau built under Louis XIV. was the residence of the kings of France till 1789. In 1837 Louis Philippe founded the famous historical museum here which is open daily except Mondays. The gardens are open the entire day and the grand fountains play on the first Sunday of every month as a rule from May to October at a cost of from 8,000 to 10,000 francs ($1,600.00 to $2,000.00) each time. Announcements are made a week beforehand throughout Paris. The smaller fountains generally begin at 4 P. M., the larger ones at 5 P. M.; as the latter play only twenty minutes, one should be in good time. The gardens of Versailles are laid in French style and are the work of Le Notre (died 1700). The alleys are decorated with a great number of statues of every kind; a view over a large part of the whole is commanded by the Chateau Terrace. Thoroughfares to the Gardens pass close to the Chapel and the Court of the Princes.

The Museum of the Revolution, opened in July, 1899, occupies rooms 174 and 175 of the second story, and contains a very interesting collection of paintings, prints, drawings, and sculptures. Special attention should be given to the bust of Desienne of the son of Louis XVI. This bust was thrown from a window in the storming of the Tuilleries, and was tolerably restored though broken to pieces. Two other busts of interest may be seen—those of Mirabeau and Lafayette, by Houdan. Other interesting objects are the portraits of Mirabeau and Robespierre; Meul, in the costume of the director of the Conservatoire, the Duke of Brunswick, the negro-deputy Belley from San Domingo, one of Gerodet's first works, Marat with the death mark by David, and Charlotte Corday; three pictures of the Bond of Amity, the taking of the Tuilleries by Duplessis—Berteaux, a portrait of Louis XVI. in a red coat and mounted on a white horse by Car-teaux, later one of the Republican Generals. We also visited the Rococo department, which occupies ten rooms formerly the apartments of Danphin and his Consort.

We visited the Trianons. The Grand Trianon takes its name from the village near by. The Chateau was built in horse shoe shape by Louis XVI. for Madame de Mamtanon. The architect was named Mansard. In the rooms may be seen the valuable portraits of Madame de Mamtanon, Marie Therese, Marie Antoinette, Louis XVI. and others. The Petit Trianon is a few hundred yards to the north, and was built by Louis XV. for his mistress, Madame du Barry. It was also the favorite dwelling place of Marie Antoinette, of Marie Louise, and of Helen, Duchess of Orleans. A sheep farm and a beautiful park were added by Marie Antoinette.

We visited a number of other places of interest during the trip to Versailles, but of these I shall write at a later date. I am now at Zurich and shall attend the first session of the World's Sunday School Convention this afternoon.

DR. MORRILL'S VISIT TO JAPAN.

BY E. K. M'CORD.

Dr. Morrill has been the rounds of all our churches and has visited no small number of our outposts, even to those in more remote farmhouses.

The writer has purposely delayed writing to the Christian Missionary about the Doctor's trip until this time, that he might be able to tell of the reception which he received and the work which he might do.

He was with the writer in the bounds of the Sendai Station about three weeks. Together we visited all the churches in the Station—Sendai, Ichinoseki, Tsukidate, Wakuya, and Iwaideyama.

The welcome given him everywhere was in keeping with the earnestness with which the brethren had urged his coming to Japan, and does not abate as they become more thoroughly acquainted with him.

With one exception (and in that case the sickness of the pastor was the preventing cause) each church in the Station held a special welcome service for him, and at one place the town made him a public reception, the mayor heading the reception committee and presiding at the reception, giving him a beautifully written copy of his address of welcome. At this reception the Doctor was accorded the privilege of speaking for nearly an hour before the high functionaries of the town, such as the mayor, chief of police, the head of the post-office, the leading surgeon of the county (who happens to be a Christian), the chief of the county tax office (also a Christian), the richest merchant in the town (another Christian), and several members of the town council.

At another town, on the day that we were to arrive, there was to be an all-day's conference of representatives from the fifty young men's organizations throughout the county, and the county chief, hearing of the possible coming of Dr. Morrill, sent a request that he give an hour's address at that conference, and was afterwards so pleased with the address that he sent a letter to our pastor in that town asking him to express to the Doctor his very special thanks for it.

This address was taken in shorthand by the county stenographer and inserted in serial form in the leading county newspaper.

As representatives of the young men from all over the county, and all the town chiefs, the principals of grammar and primary schools were present at that meeting, wherever we went in that county (and even in the neighboring county) the people were waiting for him in great expectation. At one place the grammar school teachers were planning to have him speak to the children in the higher grades and manifested no little disappointment when our arrival was delayed until after closing time for the school.

But the teachers (ten in number) were waiting, and requested him to address them for an hour, which he did. That evening the principal and two of the teachers came to our meeting, and to the after-meeting to talk with the Doctor, and showed great pleasure when we told them that we could take time to address the school the next morning before leaving the town. When we reached the schoolyard the next morning we found the scholars all drawn up in military array to receive him. The boys of the three higher grades were soon crowded into the largest room at the school (there were about two hundred of them) to hear the address, and the Doctor seems to know just as well how to interest the children as he does how to win the ear of the chief men.

At one place he visited, and preached in, and spent the night at, a farm-house. Here he had a fine audience of young men, and the young men heard a fine sermon on the fundamental principles of life.

One day while riding on the train we met a blind Christian who is a member of the church at Wakayanagi, and as this man would have no other opportunity to hear the Doctor's message, he requested that the Doctor preach him a sermon then and there. So as the noisy train (for it was a mixed freight and passenger train and we were in a rattling, shaking third-class car) sped along, the Doctor and his interpreter put their heads close to the poor old sightless man and told him the sweet old story that has brought peace and joy through all the ages to those who sat in greater darkness than that which results from sightless eyes.

And so he has gone on, with no rest, giving out his message of redeeming love. At times our conscience has pricked us as we have overloaded his program and subjected him to all kinds of new and strange conditions until our Japanese pastors have chided us a bit for being too hard on him; but we have always answered "He doesn't complain, and

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The tithe is the tenth part of anything; but it is used to describe a tax paid for public use. The payment of tithes in kind was generally practiced in ancient times, for both civil and ecclesiastical purposes. In ancient times most exchanges were made in kind, as money was in little use. This is still the method of taxation for all purposes in Mohammedan countries. It was a regulation practiced among the Jews; it was revived for the support of the church by Charlemagne about the beginning of the nineteenth century. They still practice the tithe system, for the support of the church, in Great Britain, unless abolished in very recent years. The tithing system is in operation in some churches in the United States where church members give a tenth to the Lord. Envelopes are provided, the contribution is put therein and the offering is made without any name on the envelope. No contributor knows what any other contributor gives, so that comparisons and insidious distinctions are unknown. Each one works out the problem of his tenth and gives his tenth, none knowing but the giver and the Lord, either the sum or how it is determined. It is purely a religious act on the part of the giver with no chance for show.

But I have started out to say that most of our churches practice tithing without intending it, or even thinking of it. I mean to say that most churches tithe the members instead of tithing their income. That is to say, when put in different form, one tenth of the members, in the average church, carry the financial burdens of the congregation. Go into any church and inquire who supports the church, who supports missions, who supports the benevolences of the church, and the answer comes back to the question, "Only a small number of our members pay to all the calls upon our church. This kind of thing is not scriptural, not businesslike, not equitable, not efficient. The only excuse that has any claim to recognition is inability. Where there is absolutely no earning capacity, and no means in possession, the member may be excused from giving; but that number is so small in the average church as to be a negligible quantity. This tithing of the members and not of the income of the members works a double unsatisfactory result. It dissatisfies the ten per cent. who carry the burden of the church, and prevents real liberality on their part. They perform their part as a task, feeling that others are not doing their part; whereas, it often is true that even those who do give are not doing their duty. Where only a few work those few feel that they have to do too much; where all work none feels that he does enough. All giving inspires those who are disposed to give to give more liberally. The rich will never give what they ought till the poor all give some to support the work. The other result is, that those who do not give are never satisfied in the church. They really lose the benefit of church membership. The member of a family who does nothing never feels quite at home. I have been to a country home in midsummer. I have seen the gentleman son in the shade. I have seen the brownfaced brother come in from the field. There was an air of manhood, a real son-look and tone in the one from the field that the idler could not command. You instinctively ask the overall man about the crop, the farm, the neighborhood.

There ought to be some remedy for church members who do give as the Lord has prospered them. If anything is to be tithed, it should be the income of the church and not the membership of the church. The modern church has certainly made a wrong application of the tithing system. Ten per cent. of the members ought not to do a hundred per cent. of the work. As a matter of fact, they do not; they only do ten per cent. of the work and the ninety per cent. is left undone. When the small givers all give, the large givers will give more.

W. W. STALEY.

NORFOLK LETTER.

As the years come and go, carrying us all inevitably onward toward the period of the "sere and yellow leaf," one of the most vexing problems which we have to face is that of keeping young and elastic in heart and mind. Although the body may and will grow infirm and decrepit and incapable of that ready adaptation to changed conditions which characterized it in youthful days, we should at least seek to remain fresh and adaptable in spirit, and in cheerful sympathy with the new, young life about us.

In the evolution of society, it is but natural that the ways and doings and customs of the generation just coming upon the stage will be, in important respects, different from the ways and customs and doings of those of us who are, perhaps, preparing to retire therefrom. This being true, it may happen that our toleration will be taxed, and our generosity drawn upon in our efforts to yield cheerfully to a changed order of things. And, unless we be very careful, we may not be able to accept, with good grace, the new status of affairs. But unless we do, we may acquire a reputation for sourness and "grouchiness" which will impair the influence which older persons are privileged to exert over their juniors, and we shall earn the appellation of those who have outlived their time, a thing which none of us covets.

"Good, but terribly narrow" was the answer given me by a young friend of mine in response to some remark which I made with regard to another, and elderly, party with whom we were both acquainted. Within my heart I had to acknowledge, to my regret, the truthfulness and accuracy of the arraignment. Perhaps no really better person lives, nor is there one characterized by greater effort at vital piety, than he of whom we were speaking, and yet much of his fine character is marred by reason of his restricted sympathy with any and all who cannot see as he sees. He has not changed with changing times and conditions, but looks still at life through the same glass with which he beheld it fifty years ago. In much which is accepted by those of a new generation, as being altogether devoid of harm, he can see only the most appalling iniquity. He was not used to these things in his day and time, that's all. And for him and all who have remained unchanged and unsympathetic, as he has, anything which is new is wrong.

It seems to me that if we would be happy ourselves, to say nothing of helping others, we should seek to keep in youthful accord, at least, with our young friends who are coming on after us, and reconcile ourselves, as best we may, to the passing of much to which we ourselves have become accustomed.

Time waits nor halts for any of us. Changes in manners, habits, forms of amusement, dress, conversation and all other things are inevitable from generation to generation. Whether we like it or not, coming generations will have their ways as we had ours. No doubt, much to which we gave ourselves over in amusements, dress, and otherwise in our own early days shocked our elders beyond measure. They probably shook their wise heads and prophesied untold calamities for their children, and all but abandoned hope of the future for the human race. But, we are still "on the job" despite the doleful predictions of these dear, good ancestors of ours, and we feel, no doubt, that we are doing pretty well. In truth, we probably slyly think, and occasionally confide to one another, that, all things considered, we have reason to be proud of ourselves, considering the fact that, upon the other hand our forbears were such a bunch of "old fogies." And, thus the world wags.

Let us grow old gracefully and generously. Let us seek to place ourselves in sympathy with changed circumstances, and the strong, virile, vigorous tide of young life that ebbs and flows about us. Let us keep broad and tolerant of all that is not evidently hurtful and we shall come much nearer being in a position to help than we could be otherwise.

HENRY SPENCER BOOTH.

CONSHOHOKEN LETTER.

Since my last to THE SUN the interest of the Gulph Church has steadily advanced. Our Men's Bible class, organized last December and now with an enrollment of one hundred and forty, has come to be quite a factor in our work. Two Sabbaths ago there were about one hundred and seventy-five men present at the class meeting and the Sabbath two weeks previously there were one hundred and three present. The community is feeling, decidedly, its influence and blessing. There are instances in which men have been signally helped. On next Sunday the class will meet in connection with our evening church service, and the teacher, Mr. L. J. Palmer, will participate in the service, with the pastor. The Square Deal Bible Class has a membership of about fifty—composed almost entirely of ladies and taught by the pastor. This class, too, seems to be doing excellent work, while our main school in charge of deacon George Nogle is active and aggressive.

Our Ladies' Aid Society has a membership of about sixty and at their last meeting reported $323.00 on hand. They are having the inside walls of the Church improved and a new carpet put in. We have recently had with the Men's Bible Class, for the second time, Hon. W. W. MacLree, former District Attorney of Chester, who has been such a foe to the saloons of that section and the leading spirit in closing many of them. On his recent visit to our class he spoke on "Three Days in the Life of Paul." First, the day he saw the face of Christ and heard the call to surrender. Second, the day he heard the call, later in life, of Macedonia, or the call of humanity. Third, the day he heard the final call, or the call of eternity. He made a profound impression and not only moved men to tears, but to serious consideration. It was a real message, and in it he made some fine points and emphasis for foreign missions. Our congregations are normal, and sometimes better than that for hot weather.

It was my privilege to attend the last session of the New Jersey Conference at Johnsbury in May. Rev. John Blood is the president and so directed the matters of conference as to give much time to devotional services which were deeply spiritual and impressive. In that respect at least it was possibly ahead of any conference I ever attended. I would add a line for the Delmonia Conference, but Dr. Staley, whose presence and work added so much, has already reported that session to THE SUN. I will possibly have something to say later about that field and organization.

Our Sunday school will hold its annual picnic on the Church ground next Saturday, and preparations are now going on on that account. I am getting to feel at home this way; but "home-sickness" will creep on occasionally. People are exceedingly kind to us. A friend, not a member of the Church, sent us a heavy load of hay yesterday with a message that he would send another soon. We have received many such kind and generous expressions. Here are our best wishes and kind regards to our friends of the South. Will spend my vacation about the parsonage and worship in the old Gulph Church.

Sincerely,

MURDOCK W. BUTLER.

ELON COLLEGE NOTES.

Mr. J. J. Lambeth is erecting a nice residence near the home of Mr. W. C. Michael.

Dr. E. E. Randolph, who was once a professor in the College, has decided to return and was on Friday evening of last week elected by the Executive Board of Trustees. Dr. Randolph will teach French and German. Since Dr. Randolph's first connection with Elon, he has been connected with Erskine College, Due West, S. C.

Mr. E. L. Daughtrey, of the class of '12, has been elected instructor in the English Department of the College and will enter upon his duties at the opening in September. Mr. Daughtrey took a high stand in his class and last year taught successfully at Lake Park, Ga.

President Harper is spending a few days in Eastern Virginia in the interest of the College, also attending the S. S. Convention of the Eastern Va. Conference.

The efforts of friends are being told by the goodly number of applications coming into the President's office from many sections.

Miss Carrie Boyd, News Ferry, Va., class of '10, and Miss Maud J. Pritchard, Chapel Hill, N. C., class of '09, are visiting Misses Alma and Lila Newman. Misses Boyd and Pritchard are in the teaching business, and meeting with eminent success.

Miss Mary Parks, Ramseur, N. C., a former Elon student, is visiting in the home of Mr. T. J. Green.

Mr. D. Boone, Durham, N. C., was in town Monday with his father looking after the interest of their property. Uncle At is now making his home in Durham with his children.

A gas producer is being installed in connection with the new laboratory in the basement of the Alumni Building and will furnish heat and gas to the students in chemical classes without the use of the usual torch lamps.

Mr. B. M. Williams, a ministerial student of the M. P. Church, who is a student of the College, and who is spending his vacation in South Carolina, was here Sunday to see his people.

We are sorry to note that Mr. Carl Herndon is very unwell at his father's home here.

The town commissioners met Monday night and fixed the tax rate for the town the coming year, and planned to have the next legislature amend the Charter of the town so as to give authorities privilege to enlarge the corporate limits and make street extensions.

ANTIOCH (C.)

MY DEAR CHRISTIAN FRIENDS:

I am writing to you through the CHRISTIAN

SUN to give you an opportunity of helping us to repair the church at Antioch. This is one of the oldest Christian churches of Chatham county, having been organized before the war. At present our building is too small. We are planning to build larger, erect a vestibule, and paint it before Conference. We have collected about one-sixth of the amount it will take to complete this work. Last Saturday we held a Sunday school rally and collected what we could. I find those good Christian people of Chatham very liberal in responding as we gave opportunity; but we need outside help. We do not want to ask help of Conference because we want to do the work right away. We are doing better this year than we did last. We are going to bring our Conference apportionments up in full; but we are badly in need of help financially now.

Anyone who feels they can help us from one dime up to ten dollars will please send what amount they can to Miss Eva Dowdy, Goldston, N. C.

I am humbly yours for Christian service,

B. J. EARP, Pastor.

AN IDEAL COLLEGE.

Visitors to Elon College, N. C., are commonly heard to remark that Nature has done more to make Elon College beautiful than any other College campus in the South. There is a deal of truth in this as one would readily appreciate were he to view the magnificent campus of twenty-five acres covered with its wealth of stalwart oaks and hickories. But to the bounty of Nature have been added many other features that make Elon College not only one of the most beautiful, but also one of the most wholesome educational institutions in the South.

Beautiful winding walks and promenades and ornamental shrubbery help to make the charm of the campus complete. A massive administration building, of model appointment, magnificent dormitories, equipped with steam heat, electric lights, baths and sewerage, two unexcelled gymnasias, and the co-operative boarding facilities for both men and women reducing the cost of living to a minimum, mark the College as one of the best.

Elon College is located to ideal advantage, combining all the advantages of city life, with none of its disadvantages, and parents desiring safety in a College for their sons and daughters, as well as high-class instruction should investigate. A descriptive catalogue may be had from President W. A. Harper, Elon College, N. C. Advt.

LOST—A BOY.

Not kidnapped by bandits and hidden in a cave to weep and starve and rouse a nation to frenzied searching! Were that the case, one hundred thousand men would rise to the rescue if need be. Unfortunately the losing of the lad is without any dramatic excitement, though very sad and very real. The fact is, his father lost him! Being too busy to sit with him at the fireside and answer trivial questions during the years when fathers are the great and only heroes of boys, he let go his hold upon him. Yes, his mother lost him! Being much engrossed in her teas, dinners, and club programs, she let the maid hear the boy say his prayers and thus her grip slipped and the boy was lost to the home. Aye, his Church lost him! Being so much occupied with sermons for the wise and elderly who pay the bills, and having good care for dignity, the minister and elder were unmindful of the human feelings of the boy in the pew, and made no provision in sermon or song or manly sport for his boyishness, and so the Church and many sad-hearted parents are now looking earnestly for the lost boy.

He must be found! He can be found—found just where those two careless but pious parents en route from whorship in Jerusalem found their lost Boy; in that particular spot in the Church where interested men were willing to meet him and answer in simple fashion the direct questions of his awakening manhood concerning the realities of life and duty. Here is where the lost boy will be found by men who are willing to look for him!—Men at Work.

WANTED AT THE ORPHANAGE.

There is needed at the Christian Orphanage, more help both in the kitchen and house work. The larger girls assist and do much, but women of experience in cooking, in house keeping, in sewing etc., are needed. Applicants should address Rev. E. M. Carter, Supt., Elon College, N. C.

Approaching his Bible with a student's equipment, the Christian should bring also a student's attitude. He desires to learn, to progress in the way of life, and not test or prove out certain preconceived theories of his own, or indeed those of others as humanly fallible as himself. The Bible is God's revelation of Himself to man and through its pages each must, in the last analysis, trace for himself the divine lessons. An open mind, an honest will and a reverent heart, these three lead to sovereign power in Bible study. —GEO. J. ANDERSON.

FOR SALE.

I offer my two story, six room dwelling, and farm of 53 acres, almost adjacent to College campus, for sale at reasonable price. A fine location for those wishing to educate their children. Correspondence solicited.

J. J. LAMBETH, Elon College, N. C.

NOT FOR HOME USE.

"Learn to pity everything and everybody but yourself," says an earnest writer. "Many must walk a path that cuts the feet and makes life a via dolorosa, but since they must walk that path, to probe daily into wounds will not lessen but increase the pain. To look up and ahead is the only safe rule. And if one looks up one will see that this road, too, winds upward, and when it ends—as all roads must—it will end on a mountain top where at last light and peace may be found."

Self-pity never helps and always hinders. It steals the strength, adds to the burden and weakens the character. "It's not so much the hard work we do, as our thinkin' about it that wears us out," said a wise old Irish woman, and the same is true of our troubles. It is not so much what we have to endure as our frettings and resentments at being forced to bear it that makes the load, whether we discern the weight upon other shoulders or not, it is still true that sooner or later every life must bear its burdens—cares, sorrows and crosses not of its own choosing. It is the manner in which these things are borne that makes the difference in lives—the dignity, strength and sweetness of some, the weakness and failure of others. Sympathy given to our neighbor may be balm to the receiver, and blessing to the giver; sympathy turned upon ourselves becomes a poison that slowly saps courage and power, and destroys the beauty and usefulness of life.—Forward.

HELPS ON SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Subject for July 27, "Moses' Request Refused."
Ex. 5: 1-14.

The miracles that Moses worked to convince the people of his authority and power were symbolic. The serpent into which his staff was changed was emblematic of the poisonous, deadly Egyptian taskmasters; but Moses conquered the serpent. The leprous hand was the symbol of the cure that had fallen on the Israelites; but Moses removed the plague.

The Israelites in Goshen were exposed to inroads from the desert tribes near by on the east; they may also have been attacked by some pestilence. Moses' request that they be permitted to withdraw and pray God for relief from these perils was natural. If the permission had been given the people, they would have done as Moses said—but would not have returned.

When Moses said that his God had "met with" the Hebrews, he meant that God had manifested Himself to them and placed a command of worship on them.

Straw, chopped fine, was used in Egypt to bind together the clay to make bricks. The Hebrews were no longer provided with this, but were compelled to go here and there throughout the harvest fields and gather the straw. At the same time the tale, that is, the number, of the bricks they were required to furnish was not diminished.

The Teachings.

Moses told the truth to Pharaoh, but he was not required to tell the whole truth. Pharaoh by his unjust dealings had made it perfectly right for the Hebrews to get away from him as best they could.

The plagues were not sent upon Egypt till her rulers had had the best of chances to do right. God never uses the sword if the beckoning finger will serve.

Moses, who forty years before had fled from Egypt, now ventures to confront Pharaoh with the most imperious demands. In the one case he was not under divine commission, and now he is; that makes all the difference in a man's courage.

It is always easier for the time to endure evils than to rebel against them; but the world's great men are those that have been glad to endure present toil and peril for the sake of the glorious future.

"Tis Darkest Just Before the Dawn."—Cook.

OBJECT LESSON.

An iron object and a steel one, such as an iron nail and a finely tempered steel knife.—The only difference between iron and steel is the difference in the way they have been treated. The steel is more useful, has more resistance, is more flexible than the iron. Its value is very much greater. Yet it has gained its value by the severe process of tempering. It has passed through fires until it became white hot, and then it has been hammered and heated again.

This bit of iron could be made into fine steel if it were put through the same process of tempering. So the fires of temptation, trouble and hardships, which God lets His children pass through, are not meant to hurt them, but to change their iron to steel. To-day's lesson tells of the Hebrew slaves in Egypt suffering hardships that were really the making of their nation.

LESSON ANNOUNCEMENT.

To-day's lesson told of Moses asking the king to let the people have a three-day vacation. Next Sunday's lesson tells of the strange things which happened in Egypt because Pharaoh increased the hardships of the Hebrews. It is the story of a great contest between the king of a great rich nation and Moses who was God's champion of a nation of slaves.

A contest is always exciting. This is the story of a contest in which insects, reptiles, cyclones, hail, lightning, sand-clouds and locusts were used as weapons.

I wish the boys would try to find any story in history where God used the forces of nature to help the side of right. I wish the girls would ask questions or find out by reading and thinking what forces God is using to-day to help right conquer wrong.—Hageman.

FOR THE ENDEAVOR PRAYER MEETING.

"The Ideal Christian. VIII. His Perseverance. Heb. 6:10-20 (Consecration Meeting for August 3.)"

It is suggested that the roll of members be written or stenciled in large letters on a blackboard or sheet of paper and place at the front of the room so that all can see that each member take a part in the discussion in the order their names appear without having to be called.

Before this have the scripture lesson read, and the leader's talk made. Let the opening exercises be brief but appropriate. Those who take part in the opening exercises may be excused from the general discussion to prevent prolonging the meeting.

About Perseverance.

An old colored preacher once said that perseverance "means first to take hold, secondly to hold on, and thirdly and lastly, to never leave go."

An apple tree will not bear fruit the first year, nor the second, but time and care, patience and perseverance, will bring the results.

The coral islands are not made up in a day, but little by little, day after day, for years and centuries, the small workers keep busy, and finally an island smiles on a surprised world.

The tortoise beat the hare in the fabled race because he kept moving. Clever people are often outstripped by the "thick-headed" ones because the latter know no better than to stick to their work.

A man starts to build a house, finishes the frame work and stops. You say he is a fool. Yet you build a part of the structure of Christian character and stop. What is the difference between you and the man building the house.

Tell something of the persistence of the following:

Cyrus Field, who laid the Atlantic cable; Livingstone, the great explorer; Admiral Peary, seeking the north pole; Elias Howe, inventor of the sewing machine; Christopher Columbus; other Christian workers, inventors and discoverers.

THE HAW RIVER CONVENTION.

North Carolina and Virginia S. S. and C. E. Folks Have Annual Session.

The two days' session of the North Carolina and Virginia Conference Sunday School and Christian Endeavor workers at Haw River, Tuesday and Wednesday of last week, was a very interesting and practical gathering. Progress was shown by the reports and plans were outlined for definite, progressive work during the coming year. The hospitality of the people of Haw River church was of that kind that makes one glad to have been there.

It is a fact, however, that the attendance was not so large as it should have been. Less than half of the Sunday schools had delegates in attendance and only about one-half sent reports to the convention. This shows that work is needed to arouse greater enthusiasm and interest in our conventions.

The election of Rev. H. E. Rountree as corresponding secretary it is thought will mean that our folks shall be aroused in this work. The next convention will go to Greensboro and pastor Rountree and Superintendent Hines of the First Christian Church are pledged to have a big convention, an excellent program and cordial entertainment. This Sunday school was awarded the banner for the best report to the convention.

Officers elected are: Rev. J. O. Cox, Durham, president; J. W. Johnson, Haw River, and Rev. B. J. Earp, Semora, vice-presidents; R. A. Truitt, Summerfield, secretary; Rev. H. E. Rountree, Greensboro, corresponding secretary.

"Standing committees" were made to go away back and sit down; and substituted for them are departmental secretaries, as follows:

Christian Endeavor—H. S. Smith.
Organized Classes—Charles A. Hines.
Teacher Training—Dr. W. A. Harper.
Home Department—Mrs. Jas. T. Anthony.
Cradle Roll—Mrs. J. W. Patton.
Missions—Rev. L. I. Cox.
Elementary Grades—Mrs. R. I. Williams.

The principal addresses of the convention were: Dr. W. P. Lawrence, "The Great Purpose of the Sunday School;" Rev. H. E. Rountree, "The Modern Sunday School in Action;" H. S. Smith, "Bringing in The Sheaves"; Charles A. Hines, "The Organized Class Idea"; Dr. W. A. Harper, "Educated Teachers vs. Trained Teachers"; D. R. Fonville, "Men and Missions."

Tuesday night Rev. A. B. Kendall preached a forceful sermon on "The Whys of the Christian Church," and Wednesday night the convention closed with a strong address by Dr. J. O. Atkinson on "Reaching the Reached and Saving the Saved."

Rev. L. I. Cox reported to the convention the recent organization of the Reidsville Christian church with 31 members, and the need of a church there; and it was decided to ask conference to appropriate all of the Sunday school home mission fund to this point.

The report of the committee on statistics was necessarily incomplete and we will not publish it until more of the schools have sent in reports.

The discussions were interesting and at all times free from feeling. It was an enjoyable gathering, but its pleasures should have been more generally shared.

THE HOMEOPATHIC CHURCH.

BY REV. JAMES I. VANCE, D. D.

One Sunday morning, during my ministry in the North Reformed Church of Newark, in the primary class of five or six hundred little children who were being taught the Apostles' Creed, the teacher asked: "Can any one recite the Creed?" Among those whose hands were lifted, the leader singled out a bright-faced little girl, who, in a clear, shrill child's voice said: "I believe in the homeopathic church." It was a new version of the ancient symbol. And yet I wonder, if the truth were known, whether the child did not inadvertently proclaim, not the creed that is professed, but the creed that is practiced by a large number of church members, who, by the way they live, and by their treatment of the Church and all it stands for, say: "We believe, not in the holy Catholic, but in the homeopathic church?"

Let me not be understood as in any sense reflecting on that school or medicine which calls itself "homeopathy." I am not qualified to pass on the respective merits of the allopath and the homeopath and isteopath and the neuropath. Mark Twain used to say that all "paths" led to the grave. But I am told that one of the strong features of homeopathy is to give mild drugs in minute doses. Perhaps there are times when the homeopath does not practice strictly what he preaches. Desperate cases require desperate treatment. But the rule is sugar-coated pellets and small doses, and this may suggest what I would have you understand by my subject.

The homeopathic church is a church which takes its religion sugar-coated and in small doses. It looks on religion as a sick man looks on a drug as a necessary evil. It is the church whose piety is attenuated, whose religion is so denuded that it is hard to tell the difference between it and the world. The homeopathic church is a club, a mutual admiration society, an organization with the form of godliness, but not its power; with the signs of religion, but not its experience; with the tones and phrases and postures of piety, but not its character. Is the Christian Church of today anything like this? Is the twentieth century church homeopathic? Is the twentieth century Christian one who has forms, but lacks power?

Paul wrote Timothy that this type would show itself in the last times. He was not an alarmist, but he lifts the curtain, and looks down the coming centuries, and says to his young friend Timothy: "Don't imagine that the Christian Church is going to run smoothly, or that Christianity is going to be a gradual evolution. It has got to be a revolution, for perilous times are ahead." Whether or not the last times are on us, I do not know, but when we consider the small part religion plays in the life of the average Christian, his disinclination to service, the small regard he has for prayer, and the Bible, and the Church, the little time he gives to private devotion, the ease with which he escapes all sense of religious obligation, his tendency to confound privilege and duty, his skepticism about great Christian truths, and his few features of dissimilarity to the worldling, we are strongly disposed to feel that the perilous times are at hand, and that we are living in the days of the homeopathic church.

It is easy to criticise the Church. Nothing is cheaper, and nothing costs less. Nothing performs with a smaller capital to a bigger audience. When one has nothing else to do, he criticises the Church. When anything is wrong with society, he criticises the Church. When the Government is corrupt, the business life rotten, and society lascivious, the Church falls heir to the blame.

Nevertheless, all criticism is an indirect compliment. It is a way society has of saying that it really expects a great deal of the Church. It expects the Church to save the world, to correct crooked business and purify dirty politics, to rebuke and redeem and elevate a low-down social life. The Church has not played out. It is not a fossil. It has not gone out of business. It is not ready for the ritual: "Earth to earth, ashes to ashes, dust to dust."

It is not so much, however, the value, as it is the mission and business of the Church, on which the doctors split. What is the Church for? What is it in the world to do? Every faddist and theorist thinks the Church should espouse his cause. One man wants the Church to preach prohibition. Another wants the Church to let politics severely alone, and just preach the "plain, simple gospel." One man thinks the Church should espouse the cause of organized labor, and another that it should be dumb on anything that is a living issue. Some think the Church should say less about sin and more about injustice, less about divine sovereignty and more about the sovereignty of the people, less about the holy Trinity and more about the human trinity.

It is evident that if the Church were to try to follow everybody who knows what it ought to do, it would never get anywhere. If it is to endeavor to be an ally to every man who is cocksure his scheme is going to bring about millennial dawn, the Church will soon be dismembered. The Church is not a mere annex to anything. It is the main building. It is not a tail to somebody's political kite, a donkey to be packed and ridden and driven at the behest of every project that finds itself without better transportation facilities. The Church itself has a mission, a business. There is nothing bigger or more important, and the Church cannot afford to forsake it for anything.

The mission of the church is to the spiritual part of man, which means that it is to the man, and not to his baggage, for man is far more than a clothes-line, or a wage earner, or a bread winner. Man is essentially spirit. Some day he will shake off all the rest, as the tree sheds leaves in autumn, but he will remain. But you say: "Did not Christ look after the physical, as well as the spiritual? Did He not feed the hungry and heal the sick, and work miracles?" Yes, but with a sort of protest, insisting that His kingdom was spiritual.

The Church must care for everybody, and in everything. It must have compassion. It is a poor Church that cannot weep over Jerusalem, that is not stirred by the spectacle of human need, that is not indignant over lawlessness, that is not aroused by the evils of child labor, that has no interest in the drink problem, or the social evil, that is not out against everything that is corrupt, that is not the friend of the people and the champion of democracy, and that does not in every act of its life and article of its creed fight that man may be free.

The Church is out for emancipation. It has been setting people free ever since it started in business. Do not think that our century is the only one that has ever had a philanthropic impulse or a humanitarian thought. Other centuries have done something for the progress of the race, and the Church has been always on the spot. It has had a hand in striking off every shackle that has fallen from the wrists and ankles of a slave. Talk about the sovereignty of the people! It would never have been heard of but for the fact that the world has had some heroic souls like William of Orange and Oliver Cromwell and John Calvin and the Scotch Covenanters and French Huguenots, who believed in the sovereignty of God.

The Church cares, but it must do more than care. It must cure. It proposes to cure, not by some raw scheme of social or political or industrial reform, but by putting man where he belongs, by making him spiritual, so that he is controlled from within. The purpose of religion is to supply human life with a motive big enough to drive it up hill, to so tie up the individual to God that whatever he does, he will do it in a godly way, and with godly power—that is, as God would do the thing were He on the spot. It does not undertake to boost labor union, but to make the laborer a Christian wage earner. It does not try to espouse the cause of the capitalist, but to teach him what it means to be a Christian employer. Do you tell me that this is weak and evasive? I tell you it goes straight to the root of the trouble. The Church with a spiritual mission is not a dead Church. It is the most dynamic thing on earth.

The Church, therefore, is primarily and fundamentally in the business of making people godly, of bringing them into vital relations with God, or changing their characters, of giving them the kind of character God has, so that they will do as He does. If the Church is not making people better, it is a failure. It is to improve institutions, to be sure, but must improve people in order to improve institutions? Institutions are only one of the by-products of civilization. In order to improve laws, you must first improve the people. Laws are a by-product of society, and society does not grind out of the mill anything better than goes in. If we try to improve institutions without improving the stock of people, institutions will go to smash. Socialism is a beautiful dream. There is only one thing in the way of its realization—People. If people were what they should be, it would be feasible; but if people are what they should be, there will be no need of Socialism, for every ill of which it complains will have ceased to exist. And so the Church is not falling down in the game when it insists that its mission is spiritual.

But our real concern should be, not what is the value of the Church, nor yet what is its mission, but is it fulfilling its mission? Is it doing the thing it was built to do? Is it a spiritual force today, or just a homeopathic church? Is it doing a lot of little things, but falling short in the one supreme thing? It may nurse all sorts of sick reforms that cry for milk, and say mean things about the Church when it fails to give them cream, but if it fails to lead men to know God in the pardon of their sins, it fails.

If the Church fails, it fails largely because the people who compose it are themselves not spiritual. Here is where we are weak. The trouble with the Church is not that it is behind the times, that it preaches the dead doctrines, that it is not interested in present day movements, that it does not tie up to prohibition or progressive legislation, that it does not preach the initiative and referendum, or espouse an employer's liability act, but that its membership is composed, not entirely, thank God, but entirely too largely, of people who have no religious experience, and no personal acquaintance with God. Religion does not grip them. It merely sugar-coats them. They go through the forms, perhaps, but they know nothing of that power of God in their lives which rides down expediency, popularity, and gain, and all baser motives. They probably conform to the forms of religion, but the forms are not enough. Putty has form. Dough has form. Sawdust may have form, but no power. A Greek statute, a cold cadaver, has form, but no life.

It goes without saying that even the Almighty could not save the world with that kind of a crowd. Let us get into the game. What would you think of a homeopathic Board of Trade, a homeopathic foot ball team, or a homeopathic army? They are in something more than good form. They have power. Church members must quit playing with the mission of the Church. It is not more members, but a better brand, that we need. We need Christians who put themselves into the mission of the Church; a dozen people who hate nothing but sin, who fear nothing but hell, who believe in nothing but righteousness, and who live for nothing but God's glory, are worth more in the war against evil than herds and swarms of spiritual aenemies who are in the pantomime business.—Christian Intelligence.

THE CALL OF THE KINGDOM.

(From an address on "Putting the Kingdom First," by President William Lewis Poteat, of Wake Forest College.)

"The call of the Kingdom is a call from the endless logomachies which have absorbed too much of Christian energy these centuries. It is a call from the battle of Christian sect against Christian sect. 'Do you ask us to surrender our convictions?' By no means. Hold on to your convictions. Advance them as you have opportunity. But let one of them be this: 'People may disagree with me, and yet be Christians.' Let me remind you, if I may without offense, of what Oliver Cromwell said to the Presbyterians of Scotland, 'Pray God,' said he, 'to teach you that it is possible for you to be mistaken!' The only Christianity which is socially effective is, indeed, organized Christianity. But we do not have to agree in opinions before we combine for service. In this sense, the battle of the sects has been the shame and often the defeat of Christianity. The call is to quit fighting one another and together fight the devil. The Kingdom calls you from your smug aloofness, your cushioned pews, your starched and decorous manners, your beautiful anthems, your polished, harmless sermons, to grapple with sin and need among the wretched and defeated about you. Into the arena with you, men! Carry the war into Africa!

But you warn me to have a care, and in the words of the recent critic protest that Christianity has always preached social justice, but that this proposed descent into the arena will compromise its dignity and authority; and once in the arena, there is no help for it! I beg to reply that a name of great prestige in the history of Christianity is associated with just such an arena struggle. Certain vested interests in Ephesus combined against the Gospel which Paul preached, and when in the after time he recalled the struggle which ensued he spoke of fighting beasts in the Ephesus arena.

I will name you some of these beasts of the arena into which you are called. Here is corporate wealth gripping the throat of the helpless poor. Here is business with its ignoble motto, "business is business," with its near cuts and sharp practice denominated "enterprise," with investments in a racial poison and the specious plea of "personal liberty" on its lip whenever a hand is put forth to check or destroy the iniquity. And here are ghastly little hells of vice where landlords fatten and humanity rots at the roots. Here is that old dragon, disease, with poisonous breath and fiery tongue, spreading throughout the shining ranks of every new generation of little children, which is God's fresh and undiscouraged effort to save the world. Here is your motley, progressive, yellow journalism. The colors of the spectrum, let me say, pass into one another by all but insensible degrees: white, "all the news that's fit to print," cream, buff, lemon, yellow, yaller." This yellow journalism is "feeding the budding rose of boyhood with the drainage of your sewer," at once providing an efficient school of crime and poisoning the fountains of the national morality. And there, do you see that socialist banner bearing the legend, "No God, no Master?" Oh, it is a free, fierce life, this life of our time, when any man may preach what he will and a following, betrayed by misery, will gather to his standard, even if it be blood-red with prophecy of social disintegration and destruction! And here is Secularism rising in purple and gold like a new god, claiming all the kingdoms of life, heading a general rebellion against all the high virtues of the race, threatening the integrity and worth of the soul itself. And you, from your lofty tier in the amphitheatre, watch with hardly so much as an inverted thumb the pageant of sin and suffering on the sands below. To the arena, men! To the arena!

Every suggestion of obedience to the Lord of your life commands you. Every consideration of loyalty to the infinite Friend who won your redemption beyond the gates of death calls you out into the struggle. Off with your prim dignity. Wade in. No other cause is worth while. Nothing else is worthy of your intelligent, whole-hearted enthusiasm. Repent of past coldness and preoccupation with secondary things. Put the first thing first.

You have been engrossed in the great game of Money. The stake is large and the excitement is high. Repent, for the Kingdom of Heaven is at hand.

And you have been fascinated by the call of ambition, and day and night without weariness you have struggled toward that star which burns on the summit of human power. Repent, for the Kingdom of Heaven is at hand.

You have builded you houses and planted vineyards, bought you men-servants and maidens, and whatsoever your eyes desired you have not kept from them; you have not withheld your heart from any joy. Repent,

Children's Missionary Stories

STORIES are—yes, must be—used by every wide-awake worker among, or leader or teacher of, children.

MISSIONARY STORIES seem to have been the one field well-nigh overlooked until Mrs. Alice Moreton Burnett, Corresponding Secretary for the Woman's Board for Home Missions of the Christian Church, made a compilation of thirty interesting, instructive stories pertaining especially and directly to missions that are sure to be appreciated by workers, teachers, leaders, pastors, fathers, mothers—and the children.

Some of the Important Events of both Home Missions and Foreign Missions are also included, together with Suggestions For Junior Leaders.

They make a book 5 x 7 inches in size, 128 pages, red cloth binding—a handsome, attractive volume. Price 35c per copy postpaid.

for the Kingdom of Heaven is at hand.

You rejoice in the wife of your youth and the children who as beautiful columns support the house of your life. Beyond its bright precincts you hear no call, you find no task. Repent, for the Kingdom of Heaven en is at hand.

You are content and secure on the high bastions of traditional belief which no heresy can undermine, whence no rampant enemy of the life of man can tempt you to sally forth to battle. Repent, for the Kingdom of Heaven is at hand.

Our Lord is mobilizing his forces for a new campaign. Men of light with little companies of helpers have here and there on restricted fields beaten back the enemies of the Kingdom and set up its banners. But the Kingdom delays its coming, and he is weary of picket lines, far-flung and scant, or skirmishes and duels. He is calling in the pickets, he is combining guerilla bands, he is calling out reserves. He is gathering them together into the place which is called Armageddon, unto the war of the great day of God, the Almighty. He asks for the consecration of time, of energy, of treasure. He calls for volunteers, not mercenaries; for men, not puppets; for heroes, not poltroons. This is enlistment day. Hand up to him now without delay your name on your heart. For if we fight all and fight unto blood following his shining form, come but another morrow or two, then cometh victory.

DR. MORRILL'S VISIT TO JAPAN.

the time that we can have him is so short, we must make the most of him while we have him."

Aside from the churches mentioned, he has visited a number of outposts, preaching to all classes of people, and in all kinds of places.

He has done us great good. His coming has been to us a blessing and a benediction, as the coming of Dr. Bishop was eleven years ago. Such visits could be made more frequently with actual money profit to the cause of missions among us.

The ringing messages which he has given our brethren here, backed up by his official authority, will surely stir them to greater things along the lines of self-support; and the clearer vision of the Japan work, of its dire need and of its great possibilities which he will carry to his home constituency will place at their disposal knowledge which should clarify the home vision as to the Japan Mission, its scope, its needs, and its worthiness.

And one missionary, at least, has gripped his problems with a firmer hold, gathered new courage for the fray, shook his fist more squarely at his discouragements, and set his back more squarely to the wall as a result of the Doctor's visit.

To all those who have had a part in sending him, we join with our Japanese friends in a very profound bow and say, "Thank you."—The Christian Missionary.

SANTA ISABEL.

Santa Isabel is a splendid village of several hundred inhabitants of well-to-do people. It is about twelve miles from Ponce, and about five from Arus. The work was begun here by Rev. Mr. Barrett in 1902. Rev. Mr. White was on the field about five months, and Miss Mishler spent two years in the village. We have here a church organization, Sunday school, Christian Endeavor society, and a building which, while not at all adequate to the demands of the work, answers the purpose for the present. We own the lot adjoining us on the west side, and on it there should be erected a meeting-house, and that, too, within a very short time. We cannot expect our people to worship in dilapidated, ill-fitted houses, while others are worshipping in modern and well-equipped buildings. We may expect them to do it, but they won't. Since last October the work at Santa Isabel has been cared for by Juan Romero. Mr. Romero is doing well, and is to be congratulated upon his efficiency and faithfulness.

Connected with the work at Santa Isabel, and not far distant is the village of Jauca. It, like Santa Isabel, Arus, and Salinas, is on the main thoroughfare, and here we once had a good church organization, which is not now effective. We still hold the field, and Mr. Romero conducts public services there on Wednesday evenings, and the re-establishment of the church is at least a possibility. The following-named meeting-places have been connected with Santa Isabel, but at present no work is being done: La Playa, Paso Seco, and Valenquez. It need not be said that the harvest is great, but the laborers are few.—J. F. Burnett, in Christian Missionary.

I wonder why it is we are not all kinder than we are? How much the world needs it! How easily it is done! How infallibly it is remembered! How superabundantly it pays itself back! For there is no debtor in the world so honorable, so superbly honorable, as love. "Love never faileth."—PROFESSOR DRUMMOND.

Our boys are getting through with their farm work for this time, but the girls say their work is never done. When I was at home and my sisters would say that, I didn't understand it. But one reason was, I suppose, I didn't want to. There is one thing about it—the girls are not troubled about a job, for they have gone over and over it so many times they know just what to do; they only tire of having to do the same thing so many times.

Mary Webster is spending her vacation with her people at News Ferry, Va., and Iola Jacobs returned the first of the week from her vacation with her people at Merry Oaks, N. C.

We are enrolling another school for monthly offering. Those who are trying this find it a real pleasure instead of a burden. Why not your school try it? I am sure you would find it equally as pleasant.

I am glad to notice that the Sunday school and Christian Endeavor Convention of the N. C. and Va. Conference passed a resolution for each school to take the monthly offering. This is good. From the fifty schools enrolled we are receiving an average of $55.00 a week. We have two hundred schools in the Southern Convention (some of those enrolled are of the Northern Conventions) and if we could enroll them all, how much more easily the work would go. Let's try it!

We have succeeded at last in negotiating a loan amounting to $625.00 to pay for fixtures and plumbing for the water and sewerage. We had much rather not to have had this to do, but we are looking to you for it yet. The reason for my letting you know of this is, because it is your business and you want to know what is being done.

Dear Uncle Emory:

As I am just one year old today, I thought I would write and tell you about today being my birthday. I certainly appreciate the nice birthday presents I have received. I have been sick for about three weeks with Bronchitis, but I am a little better now. Here's my dime for July.

Love to you and all the cousins.

We have frequently called attention to the fact that everyone who has secured a piano or self-player piano through the Christian Sun Piano Club has been pleased and that not a single case of dissatisfaction has occurred. That is a remarkable record.

What is the cause?

The explanation is very simple. The Club is so organized that dissatisfaction is absolutely impossible. The privileges given to Club members protect them perfectly against every form of dissatisfaction. As a result every member is pleased, or as most of them express it, "Delighted."

The great saving in price which is made possible by uniting our interests in a Club of one hundred buyers is a big feature, but only one of the many attractions to the Club. Write for a copy of the illustrated catalog and study the plan. It will save you upwards of one hundred dollars and will insure absolute satisfaction. Address Ludden & Bates, Christian Sun Piano Club Dept., Atlanta, Ga. Advt.

WORK FOR FOREIGNERS.

Thirty missionaries speaking twenty-four languages have been employed during the fiscal year by the Chicago Tract Society to work among the foreign-born in Chicago, according to a report just published by the Society. There were held 1,170 public meetings, 72,770 homes were visited, 13,695,440 pages of literature printed in thirty-seven languages were distributed, and $20,377.27 was spent during the year.—The Advance.

EVEN IN SCOTLAND.

The movement toward Church union scored a significant victory in the meetings this year of the Assemblies of the Established Church of Scotland and the United Free Church. These Assemblies meet annually in Edinburgh at the same time, and they have been talking Church union in a somewhat canny fashion for some years now. This year, however, the attitude on the part of both bodies has been much more outspoken, and the conviction was freely expressed on both sides that union at an early date was inevitable. Discussions of the union question were carried on with great enthusiasm, and union committees were continued. The Established Church, which for forty years has had an annual average increase of 7,000 members, this year shows a falling off of 1,066. But many other items in the statistical returns were very encouraging.—Christian Guardian.

A VISIT TO OAK RIDGE, N. C.

To go to this quiet little village is merely to visit the Oak Ridge Institute, for this popular school is the one big, dominant feature and the pride of Oak Ridge. And indeed, it is justly so. We doubt if there is another preparatory school for boys in the entire South with handsomer grounds, more magnificent buildings, or better equipped in any way, or better known than Oak Ridge Institute.

For sixty long years it has been a bright light in this state's educational work. As a training school for colleges and technical colleges it has long been noted as the best, and no less successful is it in the preparation it offers for life's work.

One of the distinct features of Oak Ridge Institute is the Business College Department in which it teaches Bookkeeping, Law, Shorthand, Telegraphy and Typewriting in a thorough manner, and fits young men to maintain various lucrative positions in the business world. It is truly a great school, and the boy who enters and graduates there is fortunate. Profs. J. A. and M. H. Holt, Proprietors, Oak Ridge, N. C., cordially invite correspondence from parents and will send catalog free to those who write. Advt.

The Presbyterian Standard tells of a Scotchman who had started a new church and when a friend asked how much the church was prospering, he replied: "All were unsound and expelled except Sandy and me, and I have my suspicions of Sandy!"

FRECKLES

Now is the Time to Get Rid of These Ugly Spots.

There's no longer the slightest need of feeling ashamed of your freckles, as the prescription othine—double strength—is guaranteed to remove these homely spots.

Simply get an ounce of othine—double strength—from your druggist, and apply a little of it night and morning and you should soon see that even the worst freckles have begun to disappear, while the lighter ones have vanished entirely. It is seldom that more than an ounce is needed to completely clear the skin and gain a beautiful clear complexion.

Be sure to ask for the double strength othine as this is sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove freckles.

BEECHER DECORATION DAY PRAYER.

The prayers of Henry Ward Beecher were equal if not superior to his sermons. Many of them were taken down in shorthand and printed in the volumes containing his sermons. Many, however, were not so taken down and, therefore, could not be reproduced. It is said that an army officer asked the great preacher for a copy of the prayer he made on Decoration Day in 1878. The following was Mr. Beecher's reply: "You request me to send you my prayer made on Decoration Day. If you will send me the notes of the oriole that whistled from the top of my trees last June, or the iridescent globes that came in by millions on the last waves that rolled in on the beach yesterday, or a segment of the rainbow of last week, or the perfume of the first violet that blossomed last May, I will also send you the prayer that rose to my lips on that occasion, and left me forever."—Biblical Recorder.

THE FIRST THING.

This nation obtained both liberty and equality, and she struggles to maintain it. There is another quality without which neither of these others can be maintained; that quality is righteousness. We have put equality and liberty first; this reverses the true order. Righteousness comes first. A people can never have equality and liberty soundly and truly established until they have righteousness. We have overlooked this order, and have neglected righteousness. But the time is now at hand when we must emphasize righteousness or perish.—Presbyterian.

THE SELF-PLAYER PIANO.

The value of a piano in the home is proportional to the amount of pleasure and entertainment which the family as a whole derives from it. If only one member of the family can play, the instrument will be idle the larger part of the time. If no one can play, then the piano is simply an ornament.

That is why the self-player piano is so popular. Every member of the family can play it and the more you use it, the more you enjoy it, for it educates and cultivates your taste for music. It is without question the greatest entertainer of the age.

The Christian Sun Piano Club brings the best self-player piano within easy reach. The big saving in price and the convenient terms make it easy for you to own one. Write for a copy of the Club's illustrated catalog of pianos and self-player pianos. You will be surprised and delighted with the plan. Address the Managers, Ludden & Bates, Christian Sun Piano Club Dept., Atlanta, Ga.

EDUCATING THE BOY.

The years from 10 to 18 may well be termed the critical years of a boy's life. This is the formative period—the age of development in youth. Habits, fancies and ambitions formed during this period of his life will guide him through the years to come. Whether they will take him along the straight and narrow path to success and honor, or lead him through the uncertain by-ways of life, and perhaps, to failure, depends to a great extent upon his social surroundings and mental and moral training.

The question of school training is all important. Where can the faithful father and loving mother safely send their boy? Of the many good schools throughout the country there is probably none better fitted or more entitled to be entrusted with the care and education of the boy than Horner Military School, Oxford, N. C. For 62 years it has stood a monument to the cause of Christian education—in assisting youth to develop physically, mentally and morally into the highest type of Christian Manhood.

Horner Military School is noted for its beautiful location, delightful climate and excellent health record. Its competent faculty and strong curriculum are the most thorough. The kind but firm military discipline teaches neatness, punctuality, order, and develops manly and noble instincts. The Bible course is bright, practical and aggressive, designed to acquaint the boy with the wonderful things of the Word of God and to help him in his life. The teachers are constantly with the student, continually encouraging and urging him along.

Rev. St. Clair Hester, D. D., of New York, says: "Among the pleasantest remembrances of my youth are the years passed as a student at the Horner Military School. The habits of study, manners, methods, estimates of character and worth acquired there not only gave me a start in life but have been contributing ever since to my success and happiness. I can wish for a boy no better thing than the opportunity to begin his education at this school."

A handsomely illustrated catalogue showing views and giving full particulars of Horner's advantages, will be sent to anyone addressing Prof. J. C. Horner, B. A., M. A., Principal, Oxford, N. C.

"TO KNOW GOD."

Knowledge of God is not a mental expertness in the unlocking and understanding of mysteries. It is not a wealth of discovery made by the implements of logic. Logic may help to give a man theology. It will never give him a religion. Mental conclusions and spiritual experiences are quite two different things. Reason may gather piles of knowledge concerning the historic Jesus, but reason alone will give me nothing about the risen Christ. I want to know the Jesus of history, but I want to have communion with the Christ of faith. Such knowledge of the Lord comes to us through the act and attitude of faith. Faith is more than a mental decision; it is a surrender of the will. It is more than a verdict; it is the execution of the verdict. It is of momentous importance to remember that the very core of faith is motion—a movement of the will toward the holy Lord. The act of faith is the yielding of the personal life to the God who is revealed to us in Jesus Christ our Lord. And the life of faith is the constant repetition of that act of surrender until the repeated acts become an attitude and every choice and will in life is stamped with the pleasure and fear of God.—J. H. Jowett.

SOUTHERN SCHEDULES.

EVEN IN A PALACE.

The German Kaiser's kindly anniversary gift of a seaside rest home for city children suggests the great sentence of another Caesar, the Roman Marcus Aurelius Antoninus, the thoughts of whose pagan mind have helped some Christians to calmer views of life. In the poet's rephrasing it runs:

Even in a palace life may be led well.

The Kaiser and his consort have more than once merited the praise of those who have followed the incidents of their career. It is worth much to a nation to have its chief citizen—for that, in American parlance at least, is the Emperor's position—exemplifying the domestic virtues in his family life, preaching and practicing temperance in palace and camp, and standing resolutely and loyally by the historic religious faith of Lutheran Germany. It should mark the anniversary of his accession to the throne by this expression of the spirit of Christ to "these little ones."

America now has its palaces, which vie with those of the Old World in splendor. Those who dwell in them are beset with all the temptations and none of the divinity that "doth hedge a king." The stripling, for example, who has just come into the princely lands and houses of the Astor realm, represents a dynasty founded in the eighteenth century by a German immigrant whose shrewdness and energy, as a peddler, laid the foundations of the first American fortune of regal proportions. This youthful millionaire has notified the New York Children's Aid Society—one of the most beneficent of the city's many great charities—that he will bear the expense of taking five hundred of the children of the tenements for an all-day excursion by steamboat on the rivers and bay every Saturday of the summer.

The remark is anticipated that to give a single day's outing to five thousand children is not so fine a service on the part of New York's chief landlord as would be a thorough-going policy of improving the housing conditions under which so many tenement dwellers must now live and die. Granted. But let us not fail to recognize that in what he has done, and in his project for a children's home, designed as a memorial to his father who went down with the Titanic, this heir of the Astors is giving expression to the spirit of Christian service (call it "altruism" if you begrudge the Master the fruit of His teachings! which is the ozone of nineteenth century air. Neither Hohenzollern nor Astor is immune from the kindly contagion of "doing good." Even in a palace—Potsdam or Rhinebeck—life may be lived well.—N. Y. Christian Advocate.

Elon College

For Both Men and Women

Elon College, North Carolina

For a quarter century Elon College has rendered the best families of the South a paragon service in providing young men and young women with the best mental, moral and physical training under positive Christian influences, tho entirely free from sectarianism.

Karl Lehman, of Boston, testifies that "of all the Colleges I have visited as International Field Secretary of Christian Endeavor during six years, the spirit of Elon College appeals to me as most genuinely Christian." Elon College is situated in the delightful hill country, a section unsurpassed for beauty, with a climate far-famed for its healthfulness. There is no medical fee, for there is no necessity for it. Its campus, comprising twenty-five acres of native oak and hickory, shrubbery, winding walks and driveways, is one of the most beautiful in the South and, with its two unsurpassed gymnasias, provides abundant opportunity for recreation and relaxation.

The splendid equipment of Elon College was only made possible through liberal endowment. It maintains seven elegant new buildings, especially designed and appointed for college work. These are furnished with every known convenience; steam heat, electric lights, running water, baths and sewerage. The College plant is conservatively valued at $300,000.00.

Elon College is distinctly a high-grade institution, though its charges are moderate. Its graduates are admitted to the graduate departments of all the great universities without examination. Its literary and scientific courses are arranged in various departments which lead to the degrees of Master of Arts, Bachelor of Arts, Bachelor of Science, Bachelor of Philosophy, Bachelor of Pedagogy, and a three-years' course leading to the degree of Licentiate of Instruction, designed especially for teachers. This institution affords special opportunities for training in Piano, Voice, Expression, Fine Arts, Normal Training, Physical Culture and Commercial Practice.

The Faculty consists of twenty-one specialists; men and women selected not only for their superior teaching ability, but also for their exemplary character and manners.

The student body numbers nearly four hundred and comes from thirteen states.

The lowest Rates in the South, only $131 to $191 per College session of ten months. Fall Term always opens the first Wednesday in September. For full descriptive catalogue and view-book, address

CHRIST A MISSIONARY.

Christ was a Home Missionary in the house of Lazarus.

Christ was a Foreign Missionary when the Greeks came to Him.

Christ was a City Missionary when He taught in Samaria.

Christ was a Sunday School Missionary when He opened up the Scriptures and set men to studying the Word of God.

Christ was a children's Missionary when He took them in His arms and blessed them.

Christ was a Missionary to the poor when He opened the eyes of the blind beggar.

Christ was a Missionary to the rich when he opened the spiritual eyes of Zaccheus.—Selected.

The goal of the Christian life is the period when days of loyalty have ceased to alternate with days of love, and all a man's life is dominated by the love of Christ. This is personal sainthood. It does not mean a perpetual high-tide of emotions. Sometimes the feelings are as quiet as a lake in the moonlight on a summer's night. But even then there is a certain spiritual depth to the life which is different from a deed of driven loyalty. The activity is not the activity of a conscious emotion, but it is the activity of love. Then, again, the flood gates of feeling open and a great consciousness of God's presence sweeps over the life. The deeds surge with the dynamic of a wonderful gladness surging through them. Love is now not only deep in the motive but possessingly present in the consciousness. Sometimes there are physical reactions and dire conflicts with nerves, but this storm on the surface of the ocean leaves the depths untouched. The saint personally experiences the ocean of the love of God.—Lynn Harold Hough, in The Theology of a Preacher.

I was a saloon keeper, a tobacco fiend, a blasphemer, and a gambler, up to eleven years ago. At that time a band of Methodists held some meetings in a little schoolhouse in the north woods, where I held forth; and I was converted to the Lord Jesus Christ. Since then I have been rejoicing in Him. I have seen all three saloons in my place go out of business, and helped build a chapel for the worship of the Lord. I am rejoicing every day in the power of Jesus Christ to save. What little ability I have I am devoting to the spread of the gospel in the small and dark places in the north wood section of our State.—John Weightman.

The early patriarchs do not impress us by perfection of their characters. If we look for that we are sadly disappointed, for we find them "subject to like passions," and living in a time when spiritual light was dim and difficulties were great. But they were men who "by faith" overcame difficulties and won victories. Therefore it is worth our while to study them as examples; worth while to make every endeavor to strike deeper than they because of our larger opportunity, the roots of that faith in God and His Son, the Christ, which overcomes all obstacles the world can present, and enables us to make progress in the divine life toward "the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ."—Exchange.

On July 12 Henry Lane Wilson, the American ambassador in the City of Mexico, protested to the Minister of Foreign Affairs against further anti-American demonstrations there, such demonstrations having lately grown to what are considered serious proportions. On that date an anonymous letter threatening to blow up the American embassy was received by Ambassador Wilson. Many Mexican newspapers are openly encouraging this adverse American sentiment. An alleged plot to assassinate President Huerta, General Felix Diaz, and General Blanquet has been frustrated by the arrest of one deputy and ten other persons in the City of Mexico.—Exchange.

It is said that when Father Taylor, near the end of his long career, went to Europe, he said to his people in his farewell sermon: "I know you are going to quarrel about something—you can't help that—and I want you to begin to quarrel with your sins and keep it up until I come back!"—Biblical Recorder.

More Russian barbarities against the Jews are reported from Kieff, where officials are expelling them from the city in no gentle manner. The expulsion is said to have assumed the "shape of a Jew hunt of mediaeval ferocity," houses suspected of harboring them being searched nightly and all Jews found being crowded into police stations like criminals pending their exile.—Exchange.

MARRIAGES

Henderson-Kernodle.

Mr. John Jay Henderson, of Ohio, and Miss June Ray Kernodle, daughter of J. D. Kernodle, of Graham, N. C., were united in marriage June 24th, 1913, in the Christian church in Graham, N. C., by the writer.

The bride received many valuable and beautiful presents.

W. S. LONG.

Ward-Yow.

At the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Yow, July 16, Mr. J. E. Ward and Miss Maie Yow were happily married. The attendants were Mr. E. C. Craver with Miss Laura Yow; Mr. H. C. Ward with Miss Blanche Caviness. A number of relatives and friends were present and the occasion was exceedingly enjoyable. After the ceremony a sumptuous supper was served. The day following the party took a long drive to visit relatives of the groom. Their future home will be in the country, near Coleridge. This writer, who performed the ceremony and thoroughly enjoyed the occasion, joins their many friends in wishing them a happy married life.

DEATHS

Burns.

Mrs. Annie Burns, wife of Mr. Curtis Burns, and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. G. Sharp, was called to her reward July 1, 1913, aged twenty-four years, six months and twelve days. She was a member of Antioch Christian church, Chatham county, N. C., and lived a faithful, consecrated Christian life and died trusting in Jesus. Funeral service was conducted by Rev. Mr. Gyles, pastor of the M. E. church, Goldston, N. C. God bless the bereaved ones.

B. J. EARP.

Davis.

Martisha Allen Davis was born November 16, 1851, and died July 8, 1913, in her sixty-second year. She married John M. Davis, who died in 1890. She was left a widow with six children, but with undaunted courage she reared and trained them well. Three of her children had already preceded her, and she was accustomed to say that her family was evenly divided—half on earth, and half in Heaven. She was a faithful member of Pleasant Ridge church, and during her last sickness expressed her willingness and readiness to die. She was buried at Holy Springs, where her husband and three children had been buried. She is survived by three brothers: J. J., S. E., and B. N. Allen; two sons, W. W. and Rossie Davis, and one daughter, Mrs. Ida Davis Cox, of Kansas.

A good woman is gone, and her children, neighbors and friends are sad. May God sustain them in their bereavement.

T. E. WHITE.

Lavinia Katherine Truitt.

Whereas, our Heavenly Father has seen fit in His alwise Providence to take from our midst our sister and friend and co-worker, Lavinia Katherine Truitt.

And, whereas, she was a devout Christian, ardent lover of God, untiring in her services for church and Sunday school, and invaluable to all phases of church work:

And whereas, in her death we have lost a most faithful friend, member and untiring helper:

Be it resolved:

1. That we bow in humble submission to the Lord's will, believing that His will is best, for He doeth all things well "To those that love and serve Him."

2. That the church feels their loss as keenly (if possible) as the members of her own family and extends to them unceasing sympathy and comfort in their irreparable loss.

3. To the members of the church, of the Sunday school, her Sunday school class, and all others, we commend her example in loyalty to God, to the church and Christian duty, believing that in that example was the type of Christ, and today her influence still lives with us and will do so untold years to come.

4. That as we cherish her memory dear to us, we shall ever take pride in honoring her name among the noble workers of the past and shall listen for the counsel of the voice that is still, yet speaking.

5. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family of the deceased, to The Christian Sun, and one be spread upon our records.

NOTHING BUT MONEY.

A correspondent tells of a conversation with a fellow traveler. The latter once had a wife, but she had passed away. He had a son who was a fine fellow, but in a business which kept him away from his father. He had nothing much else but money, and was almost constantly traveling to find some satisfaction in life; and, as he himself put it, he was "playing the game hard," but found little real satisfaction. If only he had a great purpose, a great task to work out, how much more enjoyable would be his lot! There is no satisfaction except in service.—Presbyterian Examiner.

"IN ESSENTIALS UNITY, IN NON-ESSENTIALS LIBERTY, IN ALL THINGS CHARITY."

OUR PRINCIPLES.

- (1.) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the church.
- (2.) Christian is a sufficient name for the church.
- (3.) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
- (4.) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of church membership.
- (5.) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

Editorial Briefs

Little Leaks.

In this prodigal and extravagant age we are not taking to heart Benjamin Franklin's wise counsel: Beware of little expenses; a little leak will sink a big ship.

High Cost of Living.

The cost of living is high. Extravagance, prodigality, an unbridled appetite for indulgence and intemperance have helped to make it so. Our national drink bill, liquors, wines, distilled spirits, last year amounted to $1,888,527,914, nearly double, to the users, of the "high cost" of their food. Has not our nation gone drink wild, indulgence crazy, and extravagance mad?

Power, Wisdom, Undertaking.

It has been thousands of years since the prophet Jeremiah uttered those sublime words "He (God) hath made the earth by his power, he hath established the world by his wisdom, and hath stretched out the heaven by his understanding" (Jer. 51:15), and no person can deny the truth thereof. Yet there are millions of men who neither fear that power, seek that wisdom, nor strive for that understanding.

The Swill of Life.

The kindly, the courteous, the affable seem often to lose out in the immediate scramble; but they are sure to win out in the final. It pays to be a gentleman, a lady, everywhere and always. Courtesy is a good asset; good manners a noble heritage. Recently in the letters, of wide publication, from a prudent Father to His Freshman Son these wise words appear:

"In the details of life, in the public vehicles, in crowds, and in all situations where the demand presses hard on supply, what you get by hogging is incomparably less than what you get by courtesy. The things you just scramble and elbow for are not worth having; not one of them. They are the swill of life, my son, leave them to the swine."

Present Sufferings.

Our troubles, and our afflictions, if carried to God, become, not burdens to bar us from attainment, but blessings to bear us up to higher living. Goethe, the great poet, wrote "I never had an affliction which did not turn into a poem." How often do we, in our ignorance and narrow vision, turn our afflictions into frowns, hard-heartedness, tears, unhappiness. "The sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory which shall be revealed in us" (Rom. 8:18). And the suffering comes that the glory may be brighter and better upon the day when revelation dawns. Sufferings borne in rebellion against God are the scourge of God; sufferings borne in obedience and submission to God are the blessings of God,—often in disguise.

The Other Person.

The New York Papers tell of a man who, "wearing shabby clothes and the general aspect of the defeated" sat on the river pier contemplating suicide. Of a sudden came a scream from a child near by that had in its play, been pushed overboard. The despondent man leaped to the rescue, plunged into the river and after nearly half-hour of desperate struggle brought the drowning child to safety. The successful effort in saving another drove away the man's fit of despondency and so saved two. In one of his books Jacob A. Riis tells how he himself was saved from suicide by the presence of his faithful dog which would be left without a master in case he committed the rash act. Psalm 9:9 "The Lord also will be a refuge in time of trouble."

A Golden Cup.

We strain to keep up. Our neighbor's outward prosperity drives us to unreasonable emulation. His automobile, purchased out of plenty, or with the last dollar of credit, drives us to strain our credit, risk our good standing at the bank. Holy emulation has led to many a joy and unexpected triumph. Unholy emulation has broken many a heart and sold under mortgage many a home. There never was a baser slogan for a moral standard than "When in Rome do as Rome does." Rome stands for cruelty, luxury, debauchery, fast living. It was, like Babylon, a golden cup in the hand of the Lord to work confusion and madness to a people wild with the love of the unseemly. "Babylon hath been a golden cup in the Lord's hand, that made all the earth drunken; the nations have drunken of her wine; therefore the nations are mad." (Jeremiah 51:s).

Real Prayer Is Costly.

Prayer has cost many a man hours of entreaty while others were asleep; it cost Jacob a whole night of struggle and wrestling; it cost our Savior drops of blood through hours of agony; it sometimes costs houses, property, giving up home, privilege, native land and loved ones. The Maritime Baptist relates:

"I want you to spend fifteen minutes every day praying for foreign missions," said the pastor to some young people in his congregation. "But beware how you pray, for I warn you that it is a very costly experiment."

"Costly," they asked in surprise. "Ay, costly," he cried. "When Carey began to pray for the conversion of the world, it cost him himself, and it cost those who prayed with him very much. Brainerd prayed for the dark-skinned savages, and after two years of blessed work, it cost him his life. Two students in Mr. Moody's summer school began to pray the Lord of the harvest to send forth more servants into his harvest; and lo! it is going to cost our country five thousand young men and women, who have, in answer to this prayer, pledged themselves to the work. Be sure it is a dangerous thing to pray in earnest for this work; you will find that you can not pray and withhold your labor, or pray and withhold your money; nay, that your life will no longer be your own, when your prayers begin to be answered."

Happy or Miserable.

Whether we shall be happy or miserable depends upon our mind in the matter. It is more of a mental and moral condition than a physical one. There are miserable rich people and happy poor ones; there are unhappy cultured people and happy illiterate ones. "I have learned," says Paul. It requires mental and moral and physical effort to learn. It takes schooling; and Paul had now been through the schooling. "I have learned, in whatsoever state I am therewith to be content" (Phil. 4:11). Contentment is a large element in happiness. "If you wish to be miserable," once wrote Charles Kingsley, think about yourself, about what you want, what you like, what respect people ought to pay you; and then to you nothing will be pure." If one will think on the good that has come his way, the blessing, benefits and joys of life, one may manage to be tolerably happy in any condition.

Our Code of Morals.

President Woodrow Wilson is a busy man with Congress, the tariff, Mexico, the Panama Canal et cetera; but he does not forget that a people's morals are a nation's greatest asset. He sent the following letter to be read before the World's Sunday School Convention at Zurich, Switzerland, the other day: "No study is more important to a child than the study of the Bible and the truths it teaches, and there is no more effective agency for such study than the Sunday school. It certainly is one of the greatest factors in our lives in the building up of character and the development of moral fibre, for its influence begins almost as soon as the child is able to talk, and continues throughout life.

The Sunday school lesson of today is the code of morals of tomorrow. Too much attention cannot be paid to the work which the Sunday school is doing."

A certain jurist in North Carolina awhile ago said he had never yet had to send to prison a boy who attended Sunday school. And another of our judges recently sentenced a lad "to six months attendance every Sunday at Sunday school," with the order that at the end of the six months the youthful criminal should report back to the court for further sentence and instruction. "The Sunday school lesson of today is the code of morals of to-morrow."

—Congressman Hobson of Alabama is a candidate for the United States Senate and if the present incumbent doesn't look to his laurels Hobson will come in for a long count on finals. Educator, orator, soldier, patriot, a temperance advocate with few equals if any superiors in all the land, Congressman Hobson is known in all parts of our Nation, and is esteemed and beloved by thousands.

EDITORIAL

IN THE HILL COUNTRY.
(Editorial Correspondence.)

ASHEVILLE, N. C., July 25th.

DEAR CHRISTIAN SUN:

Western North Carolina has a fortune in her climate. When Asheville was a city of ten thousand people it was declared there was sufficient climate here for a population ten times that size, and now that the city is much larger Ashevilleans claim that their climate has increased and diversified even more rapidly than their beautiful city. There is virtue in the atmosphere, or people would find it out and quit coming. Instead they crowd here more and more every season. This whole range of mountains, every nook, corner and crevice of it, is literally a-swarm with teeming thousands seeking rest, recreation and health. The atmosphere is different here, not that you can see, taste, touch, or in anywise discover the difference; but after being here a few days you begin to feel better, get hungry, and gain weight. We mortals hurry and elbow and scramble and make a noise to do our little work; not so our Creator; He works in quiet, stillness and solitude to achieve that which is good, great, and gracious.

I expect, if figures were known, tourists bring more money into Western North Carolina than is realized from all the other industries and enterprises combined. These hills and valleys are green with abundant grazing and rich crops of corn and grain; but the greatest asset of this "land of the sky" is the climate, the wild, rugged, restful scenery thrown in.

The Press Association.

For two or three days the North Carolina Press Association has been in session here. The editors with their wives, daughters, sisters, sons, and sweethearts have come up. The association with these men and women, who do more to mould public opinion than any other equal number of citizens in the State, is delightful, and their fellowship is wholesome and refreshing. It is an honest, courageous, kindly company, and there is information, as well as inspiration, to be had from the meeting and the mingling with them. I do not believe there is a cowardly editor, nor a traitor, nor a weakling in the whole fraternity.

The Langren.

We are entertained at the Langren Hotel. This is a massive concrete and stone structure standing eight stories upon one of the highest points in the city, and the panoramic view from its delightful Roof Garden is unsurpassed for its grandeur and pleasing variety. Our more than a hundred editors are only a small fraction of those who are entertained here, there being sleeping apartments for more than five hundred guests, and the parlors, dining rooms, and lobby being ample to accommodate a thousand, and then not be crowded. Our Association holds its sessions up in the Assembly Hall on the eighth floor of the building, this hall being large enough to seat, with ease, almost any church congregation into which THE CHRISTIAN SUN goes from week to week. It cost a handsome fortune to erect this splendid structure, and another one to furnish it. And it takes another one still to operate it. The pay roll for its employees is over a thousand dollars a week; its supplies and running expenses nearly $4,000; its laundry bill over a hundred dollars a week. And this is not counting insurance and taxes, and repairs, and new equipment. We have not anywhere found a more pleasant and agreeable and congenial management than in this immense and splendidly kept hotel. The Press Association has certainly never found better quarter and accommodations for its annual session than the Langren.

The Grove Park Inn.

You may read all you will about the Grove Park Inn and then you will be left to wonder and amazement when you see it. This is called the finest tourist hotel in the world. It is certainly the most novel and unique. There is, we are sure, no other hotel of its kind on the earth. It is the creation of a rich man's fancy, a skilled architect's dream, and a workman's imagination. If you were to take a giant whale from the sea and fling him face down along a mountain side and allow him to expand, toad-line, to abnormal proportions you would have a faint suggestion of the shape of this marvelous structure.

Mr. Grove—you know him of chill- tonic fame—sent workmen into the side of Sunset Mountain, dragged out the stones and boulders of all shapes and sizes and piled them, rough and unhewn, into this building—under the careful hand of the skilled architect and designers. All these massive walls, five feet thick, these great porches thirty feet wide, these ample halls, these generous guest chambers, all built of stone as they came from nature, as the gift of nature's God. The work of nature and the art of man have blended to make this poem in stone, this structure of crag and granite, for the comfort and habitation of man. Everything is here to make you think of the quaint days of your great-grandfather, and of the peaceful, restful times of the past. Everything your eye turns to says, "Stop a moment and rest." For instance there are great fire-places at either end of the lobby, or rather the big room, which you first enter from front or rear. The distance from outside to outside of the chimney jams is 30 feet, and it will take logs 12 feet long to reach comfortably across the fire places. You go to a place that looks like the entrance to a cave, or a refuge in the mountains; but press a button and soon a boy from a noiseless elevator will invite you to enter, and closing the door behind you without a jar or quiver or sound of any sort you are carried to the stories above or below as you may direct. This Inn gave the 125 editors a dinner. It took us from 8 till 10:30 P. M. to consume it, and to feast our eyes on the wonder and the fancy around about us; and this number only occupied one section of the dining room. The service is elaborate, costly, elegant, simple, inviting, wholesome. I am not surprised that Secretary of State Bryan, Senator Luke Lea, and other notables came to the opening of this hotel July 15. It is one of the notable buildings of the earth, and Mr. Grove, the founder, and Mr. Seeley, his son-in-law, the designer, have built for themselves a monument that will endure with time and abide to eternity. In every room of this building, rooms furnished for rest, comfort, convenience, is a copy of the Bible, in large print and inviting type, bound in the colors of the building and fashioned in durable leather.

The editors called on Mr. Seeley for "a speech." He was once an editor; but he did not talk about newspapers or hotels; but about putting the convicts of the State to building public roads. Mr. Seeley, this master-build, believes that those who by wilful violation have tried to tear down the laws of the commonwealth should be put on the roads to build up the strongholds and thoroughfares of the State's progress, strength and development. The subject of good roads is now the absorbing theme, and we of the South are beginning to learn that good country roads are as necessary to trade, travel, and commerce as railroads.

We have had a wholesome and happy and restful time among the hills. The tide of life seems to have arisen higher for us, and the tasks of the future call us. With a firmer hand, by the help of Him who made these vast hills, we hope to grasp the problems that await us and the duties that lie before. Man seems small in the presence of these hills, and as nothing in the hands of the God who made them. And yet man uses them for his health and happiness, and turns their vast resources into provision for his body, mind and soul.

The mountains are a rebuke to man's haste, worry, weakness and cowardice. They are restful, composed, quiet, stalwart, strong and brave. They obey and abide. Man disobeys and passes away.

I reckon when we weaklings come into the presence of our God and see Him face to face, we too will obey His will, and abide in His strength and in His presence throughout all eternity, and the strength of the hills now His will be ours to share with Him.

J. O. A.

PLAYING A LOSING GAME.

The esteemed Raleigh News and Observer has sailed into the Bloomsbury Park situation, and from now on till things change for the better there will be something doing. When our Raleigh contemporary takes a stand, and you may count on it to be on the right side of every moral issue, it does not relinquish till matters are remedied. In its Sunday issue was this editorial utterance:

Another Sunday. And still no word from the management of Bloomsbury Park that its "wide open" Sabbath desecration is to stop. Even as a matter of policy we are inclined to believe that the park people are playing a losing game. Do the right thing and put an end to the "amusement" Sunday. It don't pay either for good morals or for good dollars.

Which position is pre-eminently correct. Bad morals mean ultimately bad dollars. We will yet learn in this world that God made and governs, that immoral dollars are a bad asset, and that which is wrong does not pay.

WHAT YOUR BOY READS.

The other day a youthful criminal, Ray M. Stewart, aged eighteen, under trial in Washington fired three shots at the presiding judge, jury and members at the bar, in an attempt to "shoot up the court." Fortunately for the boy his aim was poor, and by dodging, scrambling and the quick work of a near by witness in seizing he would-be murderer, no one was killed. Young Stewart was under arrest, and on trial, for holding up a man in the suburbs of Washington last December. As the judge uttered the final word in passing sentence the boy began to shoot.

What was the matter with the boy? Hear what his attorneys said: "Stewart is unbalanced as the result of reading cheap literature. The hold up for which the boy was being sentenced had many features of the dime novel variety." What is your boy reading?

An organization has been formed out in Ohio looking to "better meals for the hard-working farmer." A prize is to be given to the wife who prepares and serves the best meals throughout the month of August to her husband and family. So far as possible the meals are to be prepared from food-stuffs grown on the contestant's farm. Conditions in Ohio may differ from those in North Carolina, but to our thinking the organization most needed is one giving a prize to the farmer-husband who will provide the best and most conveniences for his wife and daughters who prepare his daily meals. The world's wonder is that our women do as well as they do with the poor preparation and inconveniences they daily battle against; a neglected garden, no wood or poor wood to cook with, a worn out stove to cook on, a house not screened to fight flies in, a weary wife to do a thousand things beside prepare her husband's meals.

That the people of Elon College town believe in high thinking and plain living is evidenced by the fact that there is not a man of the bunch able to own an automobile, and that not one has strained his credit to the breaking point trying to make believe he was able. We notice that papers in near-by cities rasp their townsmen who are not able to indulge the expensive luxury of a car for aping those who are able, and for breaking their necks in the wild procession to keep up. Come to Elon College, beloved, where you can get butter-milk, and home-raised vegetables, and fried chicken and fresh eggs from your own crops every day; and where the people have got too many good books to read to take time to indulge in whispered talk about their neighbors, and where you will find people busied with their own affairs in the week and enjoying the plain gospel on Sundays.

Agitation brings organization, and organization action. Our Virginia brethren are agitating the temperance question. The Eastern Virginia Sunday-school Convention in Suffolk last week passed this resolution, which sounds like ancient history in North Carolina: "Resolved, that this Convention respectfully request the officials of the Virginia State Fair Association not to permit the sale of any form of intoxicating liquors within the limits of the fair grounds and that the Secretary send a copy of this official action to the proper officials." The sale of liquor at a State Fair in North Carolina now would be an abomination, a nuisance and an abnormality that the people would not put up with two hours. When you do move forward morally you wonder that former immoralities could ever have been tolerated.

North Carolinians have something to be thankful for every day they live now, namely that Hon. Locke Craig, a Christian gentleman, a Sunday-school teacher, a cultured scholar, a conservative and patriotic statesman is Governor of the State, and that the curse from the base intemperance of Bleas-ism of South Carolina and O'Nealism of Alabama is not ours. During two years of administration Governor Bleas has pardoned nearly seven hundred persons under sentence, and Governor O'Neal has been busy defending the liquor interests, making speeches at Liquor Dealer's Associations, and elevating to positions of place and privilege saloon-men and their sort. The intelligence, sobriety, morality and good sense of the people of the two afflicted States will not always submit to that which it now endures.

The Chinese certainly seem to be in dead earnest about ridding their country of the curse of the opium habit. Amid great rejoicing they burned $60,000 worth of the dope at Tientsin July 8. When we of the United States get in as dead earnest about ridding our land of the legalized saloon as the Chinese are about freeing themselves from opium we shall witness the passing of our most deadly and destructive foe.

NOTES AND PERSONALS.

—There is deep and wide spread regret that Dr. N. G. Newman, of Holland, Va., is to leave his native beath and take up work in Ohio. The Buckeye State gains here at Virginia's loss.

—The Sunday school workers of the Eastern Virginia Sunday School Convention are planning to hold a Chautauqua at Virginia Beach next summer. The plan should carry for there is much to be gained by such a movement.

—Rev. L. I. Cox assisted pastor J. W. Patton in a successful revival at Lebanon, Se-mora, N. C., last week. The church was much revived and there were some fifteen conversions. Rev. H. W. Elder, Richland, Ga., is this week assisting pastor L. I. Cox at Apples Chapel.

—We regret that our delightful friend and good brother, Capt. J. A. Turrentine has been quite ill at his home in Burlington most of the time since his return from the Gettysburg reunion. He is improved now. The heat and strain of the trip was rather too much for our affable Captain.

—The brilliant and very timely article in THE SUN recently from the pen of President W. A. Harper, LL. D., of Elon College, on the topic Shall Our Education Be Christian or Unchristian, appeared in full in the Raleigh Christian Advocate and several other papers. Evidently Dr. Harper struck the key note of a real situation in that able production.

—Rev. N. G. Newman D. D., who is to take up his professorship and pastorate in Defiance College in September is at 28 North Hall, University of Chicago, Chicago, Ill "Am here getting some of the benefits of John D. Rockefeller's millions—no room rent, no tuition. I am grateful to the "oil king" and all others who have made this possible."

—Dr. Edward P. Odend'hal, Victoria, Va., who believes in neat stationery and artistic work in printing, has given our Publishing House more than one order for which we are grateful. Writing July 26, the Doctor says, "I am enclosing check for amount of recent bill. I thank you for the prompt execution of the order, and want to say that I am much pleased with the work your House does."

—Mr. J. Beale Johnson, of Cardenas, was a pleasant visitor Monday afternoon. Friend Johnson was recently appointed a member of the Finance Committee of the North Carolina Railway and was in the first meeting of the new Board at Burlington Monday. Governor Craig knew his man when he named J. Beale Johnson to help in checking up the State's interest in this enormous property.

—The Richmond, Va., papers carrying a cut of the fine face of Miss Jennie Godwin, speak in high praise of her as an accession to the faculty of the Appomattox Agricultural High School. Miss Godwin is an A. B., and first honor graduate of Elon College and is a successful teacher. She is now in Europe on an extensive trip, but is to return in September, time enough to take up her duties at Appomattox.

—Our brethren of the Virginia Valley Central Conference have provided what seems to be an excellent and attractive program for their annual Conference to be held at Winchester, Va., August 14-17. Among the speakers outside the conference we note Dr. J. P. Barrett and Mr. Netum Rathbun, of Dayton, Ohio; Rev. W. G. Clements of Morrisville, N. C.; President W. A. Harper, Superintendent E. M. Carter, and J. O. Atkinson of THE CHRISTIAN SUN, Elon College.

—Rev. C. E. Newman, Henderson, N. C., has accepted a call to the pastorate of Hillsboro Street Christian Church, Raleigh, and is to enter on his duties with the close of the present Conference year. Brother Newman is a man of consecration and devotion to duty; is a pleasing speaker, a close student and a popular preacher. We congratulate our Raleigh brethren in securing the services of this good man.

—The regular reading of the Bible in the public schools is forbidden by law in nine States, viz: California, Minnesota, Arizona, Montana, Illinois, Nevada, Washington, Missouri and Wisconsin; and in these nine States the most numerous religious body is the Roman Catholic Church. There is nothing Catholics fear more than the open Bible, and they fight with bitterness every movement to give it to the people.

—We deplore a break down and an unavoidable delay which makes the paper late again this week. We are doing our best to get the paper mailed Wednesday of each week, and will, we trust, bring it to that shortly. That many of our patrons do not get the paper till the week after that in which it is issued is a source of constant strain, embarrassment and regret on our part. Kindly bear with us a few more issues and we promise more promptness in delivering the paper to our subscribers.

—In the Central Highway Good Roads' procession of automobiles which passed Elon College Tuesday morning there was a smash-up of one car, with considerable shock and some injury to its occupants, out three-quarters of a mile west of here. Mr. Albert Kernodle was driving the car and seems to have suffered the worst injury. The other occupants were Hon. W. H. Carroll, Editor O. F. Crowson and Mr. John W. Cates, all of Burlington. Messrs. Carroll and Cates were cut about the face and head, Mr. Crowson alone escaping unhurt. In passing a car the driver lost control, the steering gear of his car not working well, and sudden contact with a tree smashed the front wheels of the car and threw the occupants out. It was a narrow escape and came near being serious indeed.

—The SUN's editor feels the keenest regret, and to the bereaved family expresses his deepest sympathy, at the untimely death, by his own hand, of Dr. John McPherson of Burlington and Durham. Dr. McPherson was one of the noblest hearted of men, and gave with a most liberal hand to those in need. The tragic death occurred at his father's, Bro. Sam McPherson's, of the Snow Camp community, early Monday morning, after a family reunion on Sunday, and burial was on Tuesday, Rev. W. G. Clements of Morrisville conducting the funeral from Spring Hill Church. Dr. McPherson was an old Elon student who had made good in his profession, having possibly the largest practice of any physician in the county. Family troubles are said to have been the cause which drove him to temporary insanity in a fit of which he took his life. May God rest him.

—It will be a source of universal regret to SUN readers to learn that Carl H. Herndon, son of Dr. W. T. Herndon, died at the parental home here this (Thursday) A. M., July 31. Carl has scores of friends and was exceedingly popular wherever known. He was taken ill at Zebulon, N. C., last Spring, being partially paralyzed, was brought here and has been under the constant care of a physician and the best of nursing ever since. His condition gradually grew worse and the end came peacefully, even as a worn and weary

THREE CONVENTIONS ATTENDED.

I was fortunate to find time to attend three of our Sunday school and Christian Endeavor Conventions this summer and had hoped to attend the fourth. There is a sort of sameness about these gatherings, and yet each differs from the other. So that he who is able to visit all is also able to enjoy all.

The N. C. and Va. Convention met in Haw River. The session was for two days, but they were full days. Every phase of the Sunday school and Christian Endeavor work was amply treated and much good was accomplished. About the best thing done, however, was the election of Rev. H. E. Roundtree as Corresponding Secretary. In a similar position he did a great work for the Eastern Virginia Convention. He hopes to do as well for this body and will if he is co-operated with.

The Eastern North Carolina Convention met at Pope's Chapel, three miles from Franklinton, in a two days' session of intense interest and large promise of fruitfulness. This is a prosperous farming section, which does not realize its power for the Kingdom. From this church came the beloved Prof. Howard B. Holmes, the only Elon Professor in a quarter century to be called from life to the better home. His aged father spoke tenderly of him and regretted that God had need of him before he had served his church to better acceptance. There should certainly be a Christian church in Franklinton, and the Eastern Conference will lose a great opportunity unless it avails itself of this promising opening.

The Eastern Virginia Sunday school hosts assembled in Suffolk, the fullest assembling place in our Southern Convention. This Convention is not excelled by any Sunday school gathering known to me. I have attended State Conventions that did not equal it and none that surpassed it. With our educated ministry devoted to its work and a cultured laity of equal devotion, its program glitters with the very latest themes engaging the Sunday school world. Nor is it a radical body. It weighs every problem judiciously and is eminently sane in the measures it adopts. Every speaker comes prepared and the delegates came not for social discussion, but for real work. The exhibit room was the best I have ever seen. This Convention decided to establish a Sunday school Chautauqua to meet at Virginia Beach next summer and to continue for ten days. All the Conventions will be invited to send delegates and speakers and I hope that all will. The best talent in our church will be present. Eventually the general Sunday school and Christian Endeavor Convention will become identified with this Chautauqua and so will serve a better purpose than at present.

At each of these Conventions I found the brethren cordial and devoted in their advocacy of the College and hopeful of its outlook. The idea seems to be gaining ground that the welfare of our church is intimately wrapped up in the College and that it is the privilege and the duty of each church member to support it not only with praise and money, but also with patronage. I am sure this idea is well-founded and assures the brethren that the College is theirs and theirs to serve. When Elon ceases to serve our church, our church should call it to account, but that day will never come.

It is worth while to be privileged to go off to the mountains to rest and there to be forced to accept accommodations which you would not be content with at home, and I wish more of our brethren could have this treat, but it is better to mingle with the various Sunday school and Christian Endeavor workers of our brotherhood, gain inspiration for better service, and enjoy such hospitality among God's people as makes home a dull sort of place when you return. I am glad Dr. Atkinson went to the mountains: he deserved to go. But I am sure I enjoyed the fellowship of the brethren and their gracious and generous hospitality more than I ever could a vacation spent in any other way, better even than a mountain vacation.

W. A. HARPER.

OUR RESPONSIBILITY TO THE WORK.

The cause of Foreign Missions makes strong appeal to every heart that is loyal to Jesus Christ. "Go ye into all the world and preach the Gospel" is imperative, and again Jesus taught us what we were to pray and labor for; "Thy kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven."

How can we pray this prayer unless we are interested in the kingdom, both at home and abroad? When we read the sad stories of darkness, sin, and crime against God's helpless children, and when we know that nothing but the transforming power of the gospel can ever bring light to countries which are dominated by ignorance and superstition we should all feel the personal responsibility of assisting and praying for our "missionaries" who have gone forth into fields white with the harvest, to carry the gospel message and obey our Master's commands.

We cannot be brought face to face with conditions in the foreign fields until through prayer and faith, we wake from our lethargy and begin to feel that our commission is not complete unless we are helping to spread the gospel and that it is "more blessed to give than to receive."

We ought to praise God for the privilege of having something that we can give to others. Let us pray, but as we pray let us remember we cannot pray earnestly for any cause without a desire to be the means of helping that cause.

A few striking mottoes used by the Laymen's Missionary Movement will prove a help to all who read them.

1. Not how much money will I give to God, but how much of God's money will I keep for myself?
2. God's plan depends upon man.
3. Love never asks how much must I do, but how much can I do?
4. The more religion we export, the more we possess—Love grows by exercise.
5. The goal of history is the redemption of the world.
6. The mission of the Church is Missions.

Let us realize that every dollar we give away to convert the heathen abroad, God gives us ten dollars worth of purpose to deal with the heathen at home. May God strengthen our faith and make us true followers and doers of His word.

MRS. ROBT. WILLIAMS.

First Christian Church, Greensboro, N. C.

HEBRON, VA.

Our revival meeting began at this church on the third Sunday in July, and closed on the following Thursday, with two services each day. Rev. G. R. Underwood did the preaching after Sunday. His forceful sermons and impressive manner greatly impressed the large congregation and endeared him to the people.

There were ten confessions of faith in Christ and one renewal, and eleven additions to the church membership. The church now seems more united than for quite a while. This church has been in quite a torn-up condition of late, having the very unpleasant duty of dealing with some of the members; but that is over and the church still moves on.

During the meeting this writer was called upon to conduct the funeral services of the twin children of Mr. Lankford Elliott and wife, Lydia Grason and Willie Mason. They lived only about four months, but long enough to endear themselves to papa and mama.

May the Lord bless them, and lead them in the way to meet the departed children.

A LITTLE STORY OF NONESUCH.

BY REV. EDWARD O. GUERRANT, D. D.

Along the highlands, bordering the deep canyon of the Kentucky river, there was a little settlement known as Nonesuch. Of course, that might mean Nonesuch as good, but it really meant Nonesuch as bad.

There had once been a church in the neighborhood, but for some reason it had been abandoned and was being used, at the time, for a stable.

There was no preaching, no Sabbath school and no religious influences for a multitude of people. The Sabbaths were generally spent in fishing, and shooting, and card-playing, etc. I concluded that the only hope, and the sufficient remedy for that condition of things was the Gospel. So I ventured down to Nonesuch and hitched my horse where I could watch him, and keep the boys from shaving off his mane and tail.

I preached in a grove of walnut trees to a little company sitting on the ground. After that, I moved up to a little school house at the cross-roads. God sent a great blessing upon the community, and about one hundred souls confessed Christ, including many old men and women, and scores of young men, women and children. Indeed nearly the whole community was brought into the church, which was duly organized after a while, with some excellent men as officers, including the saloon-keeper, who was made an elder. And I don't think I ever knew a more faithful, consecrated man.

Yesterday, I preached at Nonesuch in a beautiful church, crowded to the doors, with as orderly and respectable a congregation as could be found anywhere. It would have stirred the heart of some of our city churches to have heard them sing.

The church house occupies a high hill in a picturesque grove overlooking the broad valley of Clear Creek, one of the most beautiful I know in Kentucky. The house has just received a handsome new coat of paper at the hands of the devoted women of the Church. Dr. Rout, of Versailles, some years ago dedicated the building in the presence of a thousand people, and "Uncle Joe" Hopper and Mr. Logan and many faithful servants of God have preached there to His glory. Rev. Hunt Doak now serves the Church acceptably. This is but one instance of many of the transforming power of the Gospel.—Presbyterian Standard.

—Governor Craig has named Wednesday, September 24, as the date on which the Legislature is to meet in extra session to receive the report of the Constitutional Committee and to take up the matter of better freight rates for North Carolina.

70 Countries Represented by 2,600 Delegates at Zurich

THE WORLD'S SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION

One of the Most Remarkable Religious Gatherings
In the History of the World.

ZURICH, SWITZERLAND, July 15, 1913.

Twenty-six hundred registered delegates, representing seventy countries, with thousands of unregistered visitors, have made earth's ends meet at the World's seventh Sunday School Convention which closed its work to-night, and have contributed to the great success of one of the most remarkable religious gatherings in the history of the world.

North America sent 1344 accredited representatives, a thousand of whom came on steamers of "The World's Convention fleet." The allotment for Continental Europe was 500 Delegates, but the enrollment was 728. Every state except Utah and New Mexico and every Canadian Province except Manitoba were represented. The Pennsylvania Delegation with 175 members led the list, followed by New York 125 and Illinois 120.

The Convention has been a remarkable one in many respects, not only in an unparalleled attendance, but in its personnel; in the tremendous importance of the messages which have been delivered; in the high intellectual and spiritual quality of the presentations; in the enthusiastic interest manifested in each of the 45 sessions of the eight days; in the participation of 240 splendidly equipped men and women, Sunday School Specialists, Missionaries, Pastors, Publicists and other leaders from many lands who have contributed to a program of rare quality, inspiration and helpfulness; and in the impress which has been made by the Convention, not alone upon the delegates, but upon the City of Zurich.

An attractive feature has been the bilingual character of the program proceedings. The program has been given in English, for the most part, and then translated into German, the language spoken by 71 per cent. of the Swiss people. The German contingent of the Convention is very large, the interpreter, a remarkable linguist, is Prof. H. L. E. Luring, of Frankfort, a man who speaks fluently and intelligently 27 languages.

The Missionary emphasis has been the dominant note of the convention, and the reports of the six great commissions, appointed many months ago to study the present conditions, needs and opportunities of Sunday school work among all people, and on every continent, have proven a great incentive to the planning of marked advances in the work during the coming triennium.

The reports will be published in the official book of the Convention proceedings, edited by Mr. Charles G. Trumbull of Philadelphia, and will make a most helpful contribution to Christian literature.

The Convention has been held in the state-ly Tonhalle, which is located in the midst of a beautiful garden overlooking the picturesque Lake Zurich. The Committee provided attractive yet simple decorations. Above the platform was suspended a large globe to remind the audience of the World-scope of the Association's endeavors, and above the globe was a blood-red cross, which, when lighted was a most inspiring sight. Back of the platform and against the organ in the center was the white Cross flag of Switzerland; with the flags of America and Great Britain on either side.—Two large pictures, of the Zwingli and the Pestalozzi monuments were striking reminders that Zurich was the scene of the great labors of Ulrich Zwingli the Reformer, and the birthplace of Pestalozzi, the founder of modern educational methods.

One of the most helpful features of the Convention period has been the daily morning "message from God's Word", presented by Dr. F. B. Meyer of London.

The Convention placed in the hands of the Executive committee pledges amounting to $125,000 for the expanding and important work of the Association which, it is declared by President Bailey, "represents large constituency, covers a more extensive territory, and has a wider reach of influence than any other Association of men and women the world has ever known."

The Sunday school army of 28,700,000 in 298,000 Sunday schools is the largest Christian army in the world marching under one banner.

The children were largely in evidence on Sunday when a great meeting was held at the Tonhalle, participated in by fully two thousand children followed by an open air meeting in the park when they sang familiar hymns to the delight and profit of many thousands who gathered to hear them.

Saturday afternoon occurred a great concert, given by a chorus of 450 voices, under the direction of Prof. A. J. Bucher of Cincinnati—a native of Zurich, and the director of the Convention Music. The chorus sang in German and were assisted by the Tonhalle orchestra of 42 pieces, one of the finest Symphony orchestras in Europe, and by other artists including a company of ten Swiss Yodlers, who gave several selections that created wild enthusiasm.

The Convention with great interest and unanimity elected Sir Robert Laidlaw of London President for the coming three years, and Mr. H. J. Heinz of Pittsburg, Penn., chairman of the executive committee, with Mr. Marion Lawrence of Chicago, and Rev. Carey Bonner of London, Joint Secretaries and Frank L. Brown, Brooklyn, N. Y., Field Secretary. An executive committee of representative men of many lands will direct the work, which promises to be the most important and extensive yet undertaken by the Association. Sir Robert Laidlaw, the new President, is a man of large affairs, with extensive business interests in England and India. He is a princely giver, deeply interested in Sunday school, and for a long time has been one of the leaders of the organized work in Great Britain. He is a Congregationalist.

We have had a most wonderful Convention. The greatest thing in the Convention was the evident presence of the Holy Spirit in every session and in every address. There were no discordant notes from any country or from any speaker. The messages from God's Word presented by Rev. F. B. Meyer, D. D., of London, at the beginning of each service took us to the Mount of Transfiguration and inspired us to see "Jesus only." The predominant note of the Convention was unity and brotherly love. The motto of the Convention was "The Sunday school and the great Commission." Reports of heroic work were heard from many mission fields and the marvelous approval of God was evident in the great world-wide work of the Kingdom. A request came from the High Priest of Samaria for the World's Sunday School Convention to remember that people. An enthusiastic invitation came from Japan, endorsed by the highest officials in the country and in the city of Tokio, as well as by the churches of all denominations represented there, to hold the next World's Convention in 1916 at Tokio, and the invitation was unanimously and enthusiastically accepted. This Convention will mean wonderful things for Christianity in the Orient in general and for our missionary work in particular. Our people should begin planning now to have a good delegation in this Convention. Such meetings give us a larger vision of the world, of the kingdom and of Christ.

TO THE CHURCHES OF THE VIRGINIA VALLEY CENTRAL CONFERENCE.

Feeling that the members of the churches are interested in the work being done, by the direction of the conference, at Winchester, I want to present a few facts about the situation here. The Winchester Christian Church was organized October 15, 1911, with 17 charter members. The present membership is 52. Of this number 56 per cent. are heads of families and 61 per cent. own their own real estate. The Sunday school enrollment in all departments is over 200 and the average of the regular school this year has been over 100. More than 100 families are represented in the various departments of the church work. Since its organization 21 months ago, the Church has raised at Winchester (not including the amounts raised by the Sunday school and Christian Endeavor Society), the sum of $1,605.12 or $30.87 per member for our present membership. This does not include the amounts received from members of the other churches of the conference or the money contributed by people in other sections. We set these facts before you because we want you to know something of the results of your investment here, and we believe that our people will give more liberally where they see that something is being accomplished and where the local church is trying to do something to supplement the work being done by the conference. When the numerical and financial strength of our conference is taken into consideration and the fact that the conference has never tried anything of the kind before; the response to the appeals to the Winchester Church has been liberal, and in behalf of our people here, I want to thank every one for the interest manifested.

As pastor in charge of the work, I have this final proposition to make to you before the dedication of the church, August the 17th.

If the members of the churches comprising this conference will each subscribe $3.00 or average that from every church, paying $1.00 now and the other two in annual payments of $1.00 each, and will send the subscription and the first payment so it will reach me not later than August the 14th; the Winchester Church will obligate itself to pay the remainder, which will be $23.00 per member, in the three years and we will dedicate the church without calling for a cent at the time. This proposition is not unreasonable. Two cents per week will pay it.

Talk the matter over with the brethren and sisters in your church and see how many of them will join you in this good work, and may the Lord direct you in making your decision on this proposition. This does not include amounts already subscribed.

It will be better if we can secure the subscriptions before hand and have nothing to do but dedicate when the hour comes and we can do this if you will help, and then we want you to come to the conference and dedication. We want you to see the Church and meet our people. Send all subscriptions and contributions to the writer.

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENTS

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The Forty-Fourth Annual session of the Eastern Virginia Christian Sunday School Convention was held with the Suffolk Christian Church July 23-25, 1913.

Mayor J. E. B. Holladay delivered address of welcome on the part of the City; Rev. J. F. Coleman, Rector of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, delivered the address of welcome on the part of the city churches; Senator J. E. West welcomed the Convention on the part of the Suffolk Church; and Judge J. F. West of Waverly, Va., made the Response for the Convention. These addresses were all timely and enthusiastically received.

The Annual Address—"The Keynote of The Convention"—by Rev. W. D. Harward of Newport News, was a spiritual and Biblical message of unusual force and fitness. Bro. Harward was chosen President to succeed Rev. H. E. Rountree who is now pastor of the First Christian Church in Greensboro, N. C.

Nearly two hundred delegates and visitors attended the Convention, and the congregations were good to the close. Ample entertainment was provided and the Hospitality Committee, C. A. Shoop, R. C. Harrell, John King, attended to the location and comfort of the guests with personal interest and success.

Dr. W. A. Harper, President of Elon College, was present and added to the value of the session by his wise utterances in public address; and got some applications for students to enter Elon this fall.

Rev. Y. Manakuchi, a Japanese preacher, spoke on "The Pre-eminence of Jesus" on Thursday night. This address was very fine and greatly enjoyed. He will preach for this congregation on the first Sunday in August—morning and night.

The "Exhibit Room" was an attractive feature of this session. In this room was a display of modern Sunday school literature of all forms—leaflets, cards, mottos, charts, quarterlies, books, and pictures; sample packages for free distribution, and lectures by Mrs. Bullock of Waverly in the exhibit room. This display was arranged by James H. Blanchard as chairman of a committee with other helpers and was superior to some State Association displays. Brother Blanchard was a Suffolk boy in our Sunday school and we feel proud of his work. He is now of the Memorial Temple in Norfolk.

Prof. S. M. Smith, as General Secretary, had prepared a big wall chart which was a statistical table of the past year's work. This attracted much attention as a splendid piece of work and drew from the people commendation on every hand. The program, also, was well prepared and well carried out.

A committee was created for the purpose of making arrangements to hold a "Seaside Chautauqua of the Christian Church" at Virginia Beach for one week next summer. The plan is to secure the use of the Baptist equipment of Auditorium, tents, etc., and hold the meeting at the same time in July as our Convention now meets. If this plan is carried out, this Convention will meet at Virginia Beach next year during the Chautauqua. Big men from far and near will be engaged to deliver addresses and courses of lectures; women, also, will be engaged for platform and illustrative work; and the purpose will include the latest methods, the best speakers, an up-to-date religious week. We will try to enlist the co-operation of Sunday school workers and active church people throughout our entire brotherhood, especially in the Southern Convention. It will offer a fine opportunity for an outing by the sea and a week of rare intellectual and spiritual privilege.

The Convention made a most favorable impression upon Suffolk and we are glad to have entertained the good people who came and seemed to enjoy their stay.

ELON COLLEGE NOTES.

When we take up our pen to write the Elon College Notes we wonder if what we are about to do means the filling up of space only, or if it meets the desires and needs of SUN readers. Our Notes are doubtless of very little interest to many SUN readers, but those who have come this way and know the place and people are glad and anxious to hear "what's doing" about the village, or at least this is what they tell us.

Those who have not been here in some time would be amazed at the changes and improvements. Just now our mind goes back one year ago and we hear the talk of a gymnasium and new dormitory for the young men. We saw the plans, and today from the window where we write these lines, we see a magnificent building towering over all the other College buildings, as a real monument to the untiring efforts of those who manage and to those friends of the institution who have its interest at heart. One year ago this week the plans were made for the Ladies' Hall and the project launched with a trial for its success; it was successful without a doubt. This scribe had the honor and privilege of being book-keeper for this institution and we well know that each of the twenty young women who occupied the Hall last year paid us $70.70 and we settled all our bills for ten months. The clatter of the mason's trowel and the hum of the carpenter's saw is heard these warm days as the walls of a comfortable building go up to meet the demands of the people for the co-operative plan of board at cost. A building for the Men's Club has also been built during the year and this department placed on a solid basis. A half dozen handsome buildings have gone up during the last year and two more are now in building. To those who did not enjoy the mud in the rainy season, or the dust in the dry season, about the business section of the town, we have for them fine concrete side walks.

A plot of land near the bank was sheeted this time last year with weeds and bushes only; but now on this same spot stands a commodious building made of fine brick, two stories high; the upper story being used for bed rooms for the students and also the editor's office; on the first floor THE SUN has its new home and seven men are busy every day setting type, running presses, mailing and shipping out work. Mr. Montgomery the manager of the business is an artist and gives you just what you want by doing it better than you expected.

Many minor changes and improvements have been made, all of which has been done to make the place more adapted to student life and habits of cultural development. With these outside changes and growths in and about the village, the enrollment of the College steadily advances and gives promise for a continued growth, and cannot be otherwise as long as friends in all sections keep Elon's interest at heart.

GULPH MILLS LETTER.

Yesterday was another day of interest at the Gulph Mills church. The attendance at the forenoon session was good and we noted several strangers in the audience. The Sunday school was at flood-tide. The Men's Bible Class met with our evening church service which gave us an unusually large audience and offering. Mr. Louis J. Palmer, teacher, and the pastor of the church each addressed the meeting. Mr. Palmer is an active lawyer and seems perfectly at home in the pulpit and before a Bible class. Our Sunday school pic-nic was held Saturday on the church grounds and school yard adjoining. Large numbers attended and all seemed to enjoy the occasion. A number of strong swings and other similar means of enjoyment for the children and young people had been provided. At noon and evening all assembled in the basement of the church for luncheon, where an abundance of good things were served. We had a pleasant call to-day by Rev. W. H. Hainer, D. D., of Irvington, N. J., and his brother, Rev. W. L. Hainer, D. D., of Morristown, Pa. The latter was giving one of his Sabbath school classes an outing and selected the Gulph Mills church as one of the most picturesque and inviting places in this section for such an outing. These are popular brethren in their respective fields and denominations.

I feel more keenly with the passing days that I am in the midst of, and serving, one of the best people of our brotherhood. I have just read with live interest Dr. Staley's letter of last week on "Muleology," and have passed it down as one of the best I ever read from the gifted pen of the great thinker and writer.

Mrs. Butler and her daughter leave this week for Virginia, and the writer will take his vacation about the Gulph some time during August; possibly on the banks of a stream near by where trout and bass seem to play hide and peep among the rocks beneath the dashing chrystal waters.

M. W. BUTLER.

SHOULD HE HAVE TOLD?

Nothing has attracted more attention, among teachers, since the close of the last presidential campaign, than the discussion of this subject in "The Outlook" of July 12th, 1913, to which THE SUN's editor referred in his issue of July 23.

No axiom in geometry is more certain than that confederates to do wrong can never safely put trust in each other.

When a boy, or man, puts a pad-lock on his lips to conceal wrong, because he fears the false code, which says it is cowardly to tell, and neither my parents, nor teachers, who stand in loco parentis, have a right to ask me to tell, that boy, or man, shows clearly that he is in a lying state of mind.

How shocking to see such a distinguished list of educators defending a false code of honor. Wrong to tell! How can that be a noble code whose very basis is falsehood and prevarication? I have always noticed that the boys who were most reticent to report, or struck dumb, when they saw others destroy windows, dropped the pad-lock quickest, from their tired tongues, when a complaint was made against a parent, or teacher, who has attempted to prevent the destruction of other people's property.

Nothing is said about the two fourteen year old boys, to show that either one was a "Care Cry." No one should have a word of apology for a tell-tale eaves-dropper. Yet, if John Doe sees Richard Roe engaging in anything which, if all should engage in the same (for this is the test), would lead to disorder or mutiny, who does not say that it would not be right for John Doe to report?

All innocent boys feel a common interest to arrest the career of guilty boys. All guilty boys feel a common interest that all should be honest, except themselves and their accomplices. They brand with vile names, and vulgar epithets, those who see them break the windows and report their wrong doings. But think of "The Outlook" publishing the classical apologies of distinguished educators who indoctrinate the minds of the American youth with the idea that "Good" should not tell!

It is a false sympathy for John Doe to permit Richard Poe to break the windows in his presence, without a protest, then to screen the offender, and by such screening, encourage him to a repetition of the throwing of more snowballs for the breaking of many windows and the telling and acting of many lies.

The soldier who sees the sentinel desert, and does not report the same at once, is a lying traitor to his country, whatever code may be in the army. The man who sees and knows that another is passing counterfeit money, and does not report, is a lying cheat and fraud, whatever code may be defended on the market. The boy who sees another boy stealing his neighbor's pig, or breaking his window, and refuses to tell, is at heart a lying coward and sneak thief, and if he keeps on that road, all the apologies and excuses rendered by ethical teachers, for concealing wrong doing, will not keep him from going to an early grave with the brand of infamy on his brow, and the scowl of despair on his soul. It is a fearful thing for the leading teachers of Ethics to impress the rising generation with the idea that they have neither the right to ask, nor the authority to make them tell—and to look with scorn upon those who "do tell." It is alarming to know how much of the ethical teaching of this country is covered with the dry rot of immorality.

LAME CHRISTIANS.

Men may look for wisdom, courage and strength to schools, books, experience and example, and they may find hints, suggestions, reminders and exhortations that will aid them, but if the pursuit is for a godly life that insures comfort, hope and peace for the life that now is, and for the life to come, all looking is vain, except looking unto Jesus, the author and finisher of our faith, who for the joy that was set before Him endured the cross, despising the shame and is set down at the right hand of the throne of God. Here is the example, as well as the inspiration, the model and the helper, the sufferer and the Savior. We may overcome by following the example of Christ who bids us to be of good cheer, because He overcame. The church is full of lame Christians, whose incompetence for either example or service comes from failure to look to Jesus for the grace that bringeth salvation, and for the power that is irresistible in the work of salvation. When we cease to look to Jesus we have ceased to look to the place from whence our help can come.—Meth- odist Protestant.

SIGNS OF SUCCESS.

"What makes you think that Frank will succeed?" said one business man to another, who had just lent a lad of nineteen some money to set him up in a small way. "Well, they used to live back of our house," replied the other, "and he was the only child. His mother was taken ill, and was an invalid for several years. Frank went to work after school hours every day, and washed dishes and cooked and even sewed in order to save his mother's strength. The other boys made fun of him, but he set his teeth and stood it, and came out at the head of his class besides. I'd be willing to back him up twice as heavily as I have done, for he's clear grit right through." The result showed that the speaker was right, for Frank is now one of the most successful young men in the little town.—The Comrade.

AN IDEAL COLLEGE.

Visitors to Elon College, N. C., are commonly heard to remark that Nature has done more to make Elon College beautiful than any other College campus in the South. There is a deal of truth in this as one would readily appreciate were he to view the magnificent campus of twenty-five acres covered with its wealth of stalwart oaks and hickories. But to the bounty of Nature have been added many other features that make Elon College not only one of the most beautiful, but also one of the most wholesome educational institutions in the South.

Beautiful winding walks and promenades and ornamental shrubbery help to make the charm of the campus complete. A massive administration building, of model appointment, magnificent dormitories, equipped with steam heat, electric lights, baths and sewerage, two unexcelled gymnasias, and the co-operative boarding facilities for both men and women reducing the cost of living to a minimum, mark the College as one of the best.

Elon College is located to ideal advantage, combining all the advantages of city life, with none of its disadvantages, and parents desiring safety in a College for their sons and daughters, as well as high-class instruction should investigate. A descriptive catalogue may be had from President W. A. Harper, Elon College, N. C. Advt.

WITNESSING.

Life, entire life, is a period of witnessing. By act, by omission, by speech, by silence, whether you will or not, you are forever testifying. Hour by hour you are testifying sometimes much more loudly than by words, either for or against your Master. To be firm for Christ, when all the tide of opinion, business, pleasure, runs the other way, you need courage which will never come to you except upon your knees. If you only have His spirit, if His life flows into you, if, believing on and clinging to Him, you have inward pulses which keep time with His heart, you will stand in the evil day, you will win souls, you will recommend the Gospel, you will live teaching and die witnessing.—J. W. ALEXANDER.

NOTICE!

The Virginia Valley Central Conference meets at Winchester, Va., August the 14th at 10 A. M., and will remain in session three days, followed by the dedication of the Winchester Christian church the 17th.

All ministers, delegates and visitors expecting to attend, please notify the pastor, Rev. W. T. Walters, Winchester, Va. Those who come from Harrisonburg and other points—on the Southern Railway will reach Winchester at 9:28 A. M. Those who come on Norfolk and Western should get off at Boyce and come by stage to Winchester. Stage accommodations will be provided for all who send a notice of their coming. W. T. WALTERS.

BE CONTENT.

When a man has nothing more to lose; when his hopes are all beyond the grave; when we listen without terror to the ebbings and flowings of the tide of life, and the rush of its storms—then, and after the night, to us, the day will come back, and after the tempest a great calm. We know then, that all our life is guided by Him, so that we find consolation and contentment. And if we have these two things with us, consolation in all our sorrows and contentment in any loss, we have the richest blessings that God can give us.—Fredrick Farrar.

FOR SALE.

I offer my two story, six room dwelling, and farm of 53 acres, almost adjacent to College campus, for sale at reasonable price. A fine location for those wishing to educate their children. Correspondence solicited.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON: AUG. 3

Subject—"The Plagues of Egypt." Psalms 105: 23-36.

To-day we study about how Pharaoh changed his mind and was led to desperately urge the Israelites to hasten to get out of Egypt under circumstances that indicated that they were never expected to return.

Pharaoh, representing his people, believed in the gods of Egypt and despised Jehovah who was worshiped by his slaves, and he was unwilling to learn anything of Him only at the hardest. Suffering taught him some things.

Really these plagues constituted a mighty conflict between the false faith of Egypt and the one true faith of Israel.

First Plague: Changing the water of river and pool into the color and constituency of blood, so that the sacred fish therein died. Thus Egypt's sacred Nile was smitten by Israel's God.

Second Plague: Frogs innumerable swarmed everywhere. Egyptians worshipped a frog-headed goddess, and dared not kill a frog.

Third Plague: The dust of the land brought forth lice, which inflicted pollution upon priests, people and sacred animals. Thus Israel's God smote the dust of the sacred soil of Egypt.

Fourth Plague: Grievous swarms of flies, or beetles, invaded every place. The beetle (scarabaeus) was considered an incarnation of the sun-god.

Fifth Plague: A malignant disease, murrain, attacked domestic animals. White cows were sacred to Isis, goats to Amon, and sheep also were held sacred.

Sixth Plague: When Moses sprinkled toward heaven ashes from a furnace, boils and blains broke forth upon the flesh of man and beast. Egyptian priests yearly sprinkled the ashes of human bodies to propitiate Set, the god of evil.

Seventh Plague: A terrific hailstorm destroyed the crops. Israel's God rules the elements.

Eighth Plague: Swarms of locusts devoured the springing grain. Israel's God revealed his wrath in a mode believed to be peculiar to the gods of Egypt.

Ninth Plague: Dense darkness enveloped the land three days. Egypt's sun-god proved impotent.

Tenth Plague: Death of the first-born of man and beast. (See Lesson 6.)

OBJECT LESSONS.

An apple with one side rotten. (Show the good side first.) How many would enjoy an apple like this? (Show rotten side.) Now how many of you would like it? When you find it is rotten, no one wants it. There are many things people desire that are like this apple. They seem worth while until we investigate, and then we find them worthless. The Egyptians of Moses' time had false gods and religious customs which were really corrupt. To-day's story tells about one lesson after another sent to show them how false and disgusting were their gods.

A piece of brick and a flower. The same sunshine that makes this flower so sweet and bright makes the brick harder and harder. Why? The flower responds to the sunshine, the brick does not. The difference is all in the way the two objects receive the sunshine. God's signs and wonders made the Israelites trust Him and at the same time hardened the hearts of the Egyptians. He was the same loving heavenly Father to both. The difference was in the people themselves. His love still shines alike on all. Whether we are hardened or helped depends on ourselves.—Bertha D. Hageman.

LESSON ANNOUNCEMENT.

Every orthodox Jewish family of the present day, celebrates a certain great feast each Spring. It is the birthday festival of the Jewish nation, and it dates back thirty-four centuries. One thing which is always a part of the modern Jewish feast is eating roast lamb and unleavened bread. Next Sunday's lesson is about the night, centuries ago in Egypt, when this feast was first celebrated and the Hebrews became free.

I would like to have the girls find out this week all they can about the preparations Jewish house-keepers make for the Passover feast. I would like the boys to find out when it occurs each year and in what ways it is like our Easter.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR LESSON, AUGUST 10.

Topic—"Heroes and Heroines of the Temperance Cause." Dan. 1:8-17.

Leaders dread the temperance lesson, yet it can be made most interesting. Here are some suggestions: 1. Practical illustration of wars and sorrows caused by drink. 2. Practical illustrations of the contentions caused by drink. 3. Illustrations of crime committed because of drink. 4. Illustrations of evil effects upon health. 5. Proofs that drink causes other evils. 6. How may men be freed from chains of drink? No theory to be given, but facts.

The Christian Endeavor World gives the names and a brief sketch of thirteen leading temperance workers. These may be given out to as many members, while older members may be required to look for something else. The thirteen names given are: Benjamin Rush, Lyman Beecher, Justice Edwards, Neal Dow, Father Matthew, John B. Gough, Francis Murphy, Mother Stewart, Elija J. Thompson, Francis E. Willard, Mary H. Hunt, Mary Clement Leavitt, George B. Cheaver.

There are many others. How about Glenn and Jarvis in North Carolina? Aren't there other local workers?

SOME TEMPERANCE THOUGHTS.

Chicago drinks enough liquor in a year to float the biggest ship on the lakes.

New Zealand votes on prohibition every three years, the law requiring a three-fifths majority for the abolition of the traffic. Twice the majority vote has been for prohibition, and it is expected that this year (1911), in November, prohibition will triumph completely.

China is making heroic efforts to do away with the use of opium, and has cut down the production of the drug more than one-half. It calls urgently upon Great Britain to stop the exportation of it from India.

Emperor William has recently urged temperance repeatedly upon Germany, even insisting upon the harmfulness of the national beverage, beer.

The King of Denmark has recently declared himself in favor of national prohibition.

A recent premier of France, M. Briand, asserted that the drink traffic was a national peril, and that temperance was the leading issue before the people. France is carrying on a vigorous campaign by means of striking placards.

The Italian government has directed the Secretary of the Interior to investigate the liquor traffic and its results.

Sweden has taken a popular vote on prohibition, which carried more than thirty to one.

Hon. Richmond Pearson Hobson, the hero of the Merrimac, member of Congress from Alabama, is an ardent advocate of temperance. He obtained the printing in The Congressional Record of his long and eloquent address on prohibition.

Boston is making the experiment of separating the "bottle business" from the business of selling liquor to be drunk on the premises, and as a result it will not be so easy to prolong sprees all night and Sunday.

There are now nine prohibition States: Maine, North Dakota, Kansas, Oklahoma, Tennessee, Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia, and North Carolina. An equal number of States are nearly in the prohibition column, and probably will soon pass over the line.

EASTERN N. C. CONVENTION.

The Sunday school and Christian Endeavor Convention of the Eastern North Carolina Christian Conference met with Pope's Chapel, near Franklinton, last Tuesday and Wednesday, and had a most interesting and instructive gathering. The prosperity of the people of the community was an outstanding feature.

Officers were elected as follows: Chas. H. Stephenson, of Raleigh, president; Prof. J. O. Stuart, of Aurelian Springs, secretary; Rev. H. E. Scholz, treasurer. The address at the opening by retiring president Scholz was greatly enjoyed.

Rev. C. E. Newman presented the report on Sunday school and Christian Endeavor Literature, which was adopted.

Mr. Geo. M. McCullers, of McCullers, reported on music and deplored the poor quality of singing in churches generally. Prof. J. H. Moring, of Morrisville, read a beautiful paper on the value of religious music.

Rev. A. T. Banks, of Henderson spoke beautifully on the relation of the child and the kingdom. He was followed by Rev. C. E. Newman who spoke on Teacher Training. President Harper, of Elon College, spoke on the need of preparation on the part of Sunday school teachers.

Excellent reports on home department and cradle roll work were submitted by Mrs. C. E. Newman, of Henderson, and by Mrs. O. W. Mayo.

Rev. W. G. Clements, Morrisville, made the closing address and pleaded for sacrifice in religious work.

Wednesday morning President Charles H. Stephenson then called for verbal three-minute reports from the forty-one Sunday schools represented in the convention's membership. This was a most pleasing exercise and showed the schools to be in fine condition and with a prosperous program of future action.

Rev. W. G. Clements, Morrisville, read the report on organization and expansion, which showed that the Chapel Hill church, the convention's special missionary enterprise, is nearly completed at a cost of $6,000.

Rev. E. M. Carter, superintendent of the Christian Orphanage at Elon College, made a telling address for his institution. Several schools reported the raising of monthly offerings for the orphanage of more than $50 during the year.

THE PLACE OF PRAYER.
The place of prayer is recognized by almost every one as being one of the most—if not the most—indispensable practices or habit of the Christian life. Yet as a simple matter of fact, it is one of the most neglected in the Church and in the life of Christians. Why is this? Is it not because we do not earnestly believe in the reality of prayer and are not willing to learn to pray? Perhaps when we first became Christians we felt prayer to have a real place and to be a vital force. God did seem to be listening then, and we felt ourselves in His presence. But as days passed by, the glory faded away and we seemed to be speaking aimlessly into the air. What is the trouble now—were we mistaken in our glad new faith or has God changed? Is it not rather that we have failed to go on from our first lesson to the new lessons required for an enlarging and developing life?

We can get a glimpse of God as lightning and this we have done, but have we always a vision of God which is necessary if we would grow to be like Him? Is this vision not as necessary as the steady sunshine for the growth of the plant? We would be conscious of God's guidance and protection even when the hardest criticisms are hurled at us and our faith. There will come, if not already, a tempest of sorrow or trouble which will tear the very cover of our tents from over our heads, which will blow out our only little light, and the waters of which may wash away the main corner-stone of our hope. This is when we need to be steady, to be calm, to be patient until we have become accustomed to the larger world, the rougher world that will in time prove a blessing to us. Is this possible, though, if we cannot get the vision of our Father, God; if we have not those spiritual acquaintances with Him? "Spiritual growth is only the becoming responsive and sensitive to God"; said a very devout man, but is it possible through any other means than prayer as taught in the school of the Master?

Prayer is as much a matter of schooling as Bible study. The disciples knew that it was not a chance thing, but an education—and they came to Jesus, saying, "Lord, teach us to pray." We may be sure both from what we know of Him and what we see in their lives, that Jesus began the class and taught them as He is willing to teach us now, if we wish to learn.

We must first enter Christ's school; the school in which He is the teacher and where the scholars learn of Him. Study His life and ways of prayer. He prayed without ceasing. He prepared for the crisis and duties of life by prayer. The great crises of His life and the out-pouring of His spirit and power were preceded by prayer. The choice of the twelve and the sermon on the Mount were preceded by prayer—a night of prayer. Luke 6: 12-13. The transfiguration was a phenomenon of prayer. This is the time and the only time that many of us Christians pray and then think we have done our duty because we were forced by some crisis staring us in the face, to seek a divine power, a higher power without ourselves. We now rest contentedly again upon our own strength. Did Jesus do this or did He follow the great events of His life by prayer?

Much of the prayer of the Master was for others than Himself. How much time do we spend in prayer for others? Such was His confidence in His prayers that He gave thanks publicly for God's goodness in hearing Him before He had received an answer to His prayer. John 11: 41-42. Do we pray believing, or are we sometimes ashamed to say that we have prayed for something for fear that our prayers will not be answered? The busier Jesus was, the more earnestly He seemed to have given Himself in prayer. Mark 1: 35. Do we deem it worth while to pause often in reading or writing or at our work, in the office, on the farm, in the house, to look up and say, "Our Father." The prayer life of the Master was natural and true because He abode in The Father. Has He not told us that we may have this natural relationship, if we abide in Him?

Was not Jesus Himself that we might be like Him? Yet we can be in His school and see His life and still not be like Him, still not learn to pray as He did. We must practice what we see in Him and one of the most noticeable things in the life of Christ was His intercessory prayer. Then why not begin there? Can we not make the stumbling of some needy one an occasion of prayer for us, rather than an occasion of sneers and merriment?

We know that the time spent in school is not easy, some of it is very hard—that that is most worth while is usually the hardest, is it not? And yet it is not possible to live without school. "All life is discipline," and the discipline of prayer takes time, takes courage, takes patience, takes faith. It will come faster and more gloriously to us as we give time consciously for it. Jesus gave evening, morning, and whole nights to it. Jesus never drifted into the mood nor went to a place where He could not congenially face God with open eyes and open heart. Is this true of us?

Neither can we read the Bible without recognizing that the Bible regards prayer as a real power. "Whatsoever ye shall ask in prayer, believing, ye shall receive," says Jesus. "Prayer is," as Austin Phelps says, "a power, has a power not subjective merely." So any unpurverted mind will conceive of the Scriptural idea of prayer as that of one of the most downright, sturdy realities of the universe. Right in the heart of God's plan of government it is lodged as a power. Amidst the conflicts which are going on in the evolution of that plan it stands as a power. Into all the intricacies of divine working and the mysteries of divine decrees it reaches out silently as a power. In the mind of God, we may be assured, the conception of prayer is no fiction, whatever men may think of it. Prayer is the mightiest power in our hands today, for the winning of the world for Christ. Christians, let us use it.

MITE BOX OPENING AT BETHANY, (E. Va.)

At the beginning of the conference year, mite-boxes were distributed among the women of Bethany Church and the first opening of these was on Sunday afternoon, July 13th. An interesting program had been arranged and this took the place of the regular service. The attendance was good and, it is hoped that greater interest was aroused in the mission cause. The amount from the mite boxes was $7.04; the public collection was $334, making a total of $10.38. This is not a bad beginning when the fewness of the congregation at this place is considered. It also shows that, if there is "a mind to work", even a small number can accomplish something. There will be another opening of the boxes before the close of the Conference year. Miss Virginia Ellis was appointed as Mite-Box Secretary.

There should be a number of country churches to adopt this form of the work, where the membership is scattered and where the regular monthly meetings seem almost impossible.

MISSIONARY SOCIETY MET.

Suffolk, Va., July 15.—The Girls' Missionary Society of the Christian Church met Monday night in the Church. Miss Inez King read "The Father Wants You," Miss Mamie Holind read a letter from Dr. J. P. Barrett, on the Porto Rican work. Also a letter from Juanito R. Romeo, a native missionary in the Santa Isabell field. Miss Mary Andrews read several notes on world-wide missions.

It was decided that the society would have no meeting in August, but would resume its work in September.—Virginian Pilot.

Chain of prayers for our Missionaries.
Essay: "What use should we make of our Missionary Information?"
Song.
Mizpah Benediction.

The American Embassy in London was startled a few days ago by the behavior of one of our citizens who requested a passport to Russia. When the clerk was filling out the form used in granting this application he asked the man's height, an item required to be inserted in the document. The reply was: "O, anywhere between five feet nine inches and six feet one inch." When the astonished officer demanded an explanation the visitor exhibited his ability to grow a few inches in as many minutes. It turned out that he is a man who makes his living by publicly showing his strange gift of extending or contracting his height at will, and who is known as "WILLARD, the Man who Grows." His minimum height was recorded, and he agreed to make himself as short as possible when crossing the Russian frontier. All have known men who seem smaller on certain occasions than at other times.—N. Y. Advocate.

one falls quietly and sweetly to sleep. His wife was constantly with him and is heart broken at her great loss. The bereaved ones have our sympathy in their sorrow. The funeral is to be at the family residence and the interment in the Elon College cemetery Friday P. M., August 1.

—The Bulletin No. 1, Vol. IX, New Series, of Elon College is from the press of The Southern Christian Publishing Company, and is not only a most creditable creation of the printer's art, but its contents are rich and exceedingly creditable to the contributors and to the institution it represents. The frontispiece is a cut of Rev. W. W. Staley, D. D., who furnishes for the number a very able and discriminating article on "Christian Education." Dr. Staley is at his best and his production is a classic. The introduction, also the opening and closing articles, are by President W. A. Harper LL D., who writes on "The Use of Talent," and "The Ingredients of True Living," and these themes are treated in a most brilliant and inspiring manner. There are many beautiful views of College and campus scenes. The Bulletin is dedicated to the class of 1913, and stamped on its outside cover with old gold, and bound in blue, the class colors. The Bulletin, a beautiful souvenir, is for free distribution and can be had by addressing a request to President Harper.

A FEW REMARKS.

—Our courteous friend of the Seaboard Railway, Mr. Harry S. Leard, Division Passenger Agent, Raleigh, N. C., goes to Norfolk to become General Passenger Agent for the Norfolk Southern. This is a deserved promotion and Mr. Leard will add weight and efficiency to the rapidly developing system of which he becomes a factor.

—The Baptist Chronicle, of Louisiana, is one of the few religious papers that still carries an advertisement of Coca Cola. Everybody knows this is a dope and it is so called in the drug stores by the thousands who desire a dope; and it is rather singular that a denominational paper will carry the advertisement. THE SUN has had all sorts of offers, persuasions and inducements to advertise this drug, but has persistently declined to fall in.

Friendship always implies the willingness to sacrifice self for the sake of the one loved. "It should never be a main question what our friends can do for us, but what we can do for them. We want to be the givers, like kings; the helpers, like Hercules; the saviors, like Christ. A French writer says, "To love is to be a candidate for sorrow." He should have said, to be a candidate for sacrifices that ennoble others and glorify one's self. Christ was a measureless lover, and hence glorified above every other."—Bishop Warren.

"In tuning an instrument, the musician must set at least one string right and then adjust the others to it. If that one be wrong, all the others will be wrong. If it have not the pitch to make it agree with other instruments, it will be clear out of harmony. The instrument may do a little for itself, but it cannot take part in the concert. To make heavenly music, each of us must be attuned to Christ—one standard, and, to his life, one key. If out of harmony with him we are out of harmony with one another."

Children's Missionary Stories

STORIES are—yes, must be—used by every wide-awake worker among, or leader or teacher of, children.

MISSIONARY STORIES seem to have been the one field well-nigh overlooked until Mrs. Alice Moreton Burnett, Corresponding Secretary for the Woman's Board for Home Missions of the Christian Church, made a compilation of thirty interesting, instructive stories pertaining especially and directly to missions that are sure to be appreciated by workers, teachers, leaders, pastors, fathers, mothers—and the children.

Some of the Important Events of both Home Missions and Foreign Missions are also included, together with Suggestions For Junior Leaders.

They make a book 5 x 7 inches in size, 128 pages, red cloth binding—a handsome, attractive volume. Price 35c per copy postpaid.

EASTERN N. C. CONVENTION.

ing the year and others resolved to do likewise for the future.

Rev. C. E. Newman, Henderson, pastor-elect of the Raleigh Christian church, spoke eloquently of the great objective of the Sunday school—which he declared is spiritual life and growth and development.

Rev. A. T. Banks, Henderson, and Miss Lillian Long, Lillington, presented the reports of the committees on Christian Endeavor and on Primary work. Both reports showed commendable progress and exhibited a hopeful outlook.

Rev. J. Lee Johnson, Cardenas, presented the report on organized classes. The report showed many active classes and many more in process of organization.

Under this report President Harper, of Elon College, spoke on "The Organized Class," in which he traced the wonderful growth of the movement and showed its wonderful possibilities of usefulness when properly manned and operated.

The convention decided to meet with the Sanford Christian church next year on Tuesday after the second Sunday in August.

SOME TEMPERANCE THOUGHTS.

Chicago drinks enough liquor in a year to float the biggest ship on the lakes.

New Zealand votes on prohibition every three years, the law requiring a three-fifths majority for the abolition of the traffic. Twice the majority vote has been for prohibition, and it is expected that this year (1911), in November, prohibition will triumph completely.

China is making heroic efforts to do away with the use of opium, and has cut down the production of the drug more than one-half. It calls urgently upon Great Britain to stop the exportation of it from India.

Emperor William has recently urged temperance repeatedly upon Germany, even insisting upon the harmfulness of the national beverage, beer.

The King of Denmark has recently declared himself in favor of national prohibition.

A recent premier of France, M. Briand, asserted that the drink traffic was a national peril, and that temperance was the leading issue before the people. France is carrying on a vigorous campaign by means of striking placards.

The Italian government has directed the Secretary of the Interior to investigate the liquor traffic and its results.

Sweden has taken a popular vote on prohibition, which carried more than thirty to one.

Hon. Richmond Pearson Hobson, the hero of the Merrimac, member of Congress from Alabama, is an ardent advocate of temperance. He obtained the printing in The Congressional Record of his long and eloquent address on prohibition.

Boston is making the experiment of separating the "bottle business" from the business of selling liquor to be drunk on the premises, and as a result it will not be so easy to prolong sprees all night and Sunday.

There are now nine prohibition States: Maine, North Dakota, Kansas, Oklahoma, Tennessee, Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia, and North Carolina. An equal number of States are nearly in the prohibition column, and probably will soon pass over the line.

To many Sunday is a day of labor. To many others it is a day of roistering and debauchery. To some it is a day of idleness and thoughtless pleasure. To others it is a day of devotion and worship. But whatever we, as individuals, may do with the day, the deserted streets, the silent shops, the empty offices, evidence to the world that this day is not as other days, and gives recognition to Christianity and religion.

There are three handsome dwellings and a large College building now going up in our good town of Elon College. Next year this time we expect to see twice that number in building. No wonder, this is about the best place to live anywhere to be found on the American continent, and as rapidly as people find out how delightful it is they naturally want a home here.

The class of "Little Workers," Waverly, Va., sent a very valuable box to George Haithecock, containing 3 suits of clothes, 1 pair shoes, 2 suits underwear, 2 shirts, 2 pair hose, 2 ties, 1 cap. Mrs. Geo. H. Frey, of the Berkley church, gave us 9 pieces of underwear for small children. Thank you.

I was with the people of the Berkley church the 20th. I had a very pleasant time and, tho' the church has been without pastor for quite a while, there are many of them loyal to their church. To say the least of it, they are doing well. They are also, good friends of the Orphanage.

From Berkley, I came to the Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention of the Eastern North Carolina Conference. Bro. Stephenson, of the Raleigh church, was the presiding officer and knows how to get the folks to work and carry on business. They were having a pleasant session. I am disappointed because we are having three of the conventions this week. Because of this, and in order to get out my report, I am unable to attend but two of them. I am so anxious to reach the people and to see them become interested in the work. We must remove the barrier and cause the institution to grow, that we may be able to meet the demands that are being made upon it.

The Christian Endeavor Society of the Wentworth church is bearing the expense of writing to the schools of the Eastern conference that are not giving a monthly collection. This shows the interest they have in us. Let me say here: It is best for the work of the schools to have a definite work. It doesn't cost much to care for one of the children here; and many of the schools can do this, and it will be better for them, too. I have a letter on my desk now from the Ladies' Aid Society of one of our leading churches, asking me to name a girl whom they may clothe. I will gladly do that and am writing for more enquiries of the same kind.

For the best interest if the institution, I am,

Fondly,

Dear Uncle Emory:

Here comes another little cousin who wishes to join the band of cousins. I am a little girl, ten years old, but I am the baby here. My sisters and brothers call me Bob. Guess they wish I was a boy. I wish I could come to see you and all the little cousins at the Orphanage. When sister stayed at the orphanage I used to beg her to take me up there to stay with her. She would tell me all about the cousins. Inclosed you will find a dime with love to you and all the cousins.

Your niece,
CLARICE REBECKAH SIMON.
I am very glad to welcome you into our Corner. Wish more of the children would write. Those of the Home are all well and having a good time.

PARENTS! CAN HE TROT?

Birth once fixed the station in life in this country, but no such accident does now. Training fixes it. The question of your son's future success will not be "Who was his sire?" but "Can he trot?" To possess the ability to "do" he must have a strong body and a strong mind.

The fitting school makes both possible. It paves the way for a successful career at college, university or in life. It is an invaluable step between boyhood and manhood.

Probably the most widely known fitting school in the Southeast and the leading one in the state is the Oak Ridge Institute, located 17 miles northwest of Greensboro, in Guilford County. The work of this school is unusually high in preparing for colleges, technical schools and life. It admits to the State University without examination and graduates of its Business College Department are found in every part of the country. It appeals strongly to parents who want the best. A beautiful catalog can be had by addressing J. A. and M. H. Holt, Proprietors, Oak Ridge, N. C.—Advertisement.

PREPARE TO MEET THY GOD.

While thinking of the goodness of God and His great love for us, the precious command came to my mind, Prepare to meet thy God. I was so impressed with the great necessity of this preparation that so many people are neglecting thought I would try and write a few lines on how important it is to make this one preparation, for this will be the greatest meeting that we ever will have here or hereafter. For we know that this meeting will surely come and all will have to appear before our God and King, there to receive the gladsome news, Come ye blessed of my Father and inherit the Kingdom prepared for you; or hear the sad doom, depart from me; now we know and realize that this is a busy age in which we live and every living being is making earthly preparations, and that is all right; but be careful of the way you make your living; for we are told that we are judged by the deeds done in the body. So, I say then, let us make an extra effort to have our deeds good and not evil. I fear that we are not as busy as we should be in making this great, important, preparation. It seems to me that we are too busy looking after the perishable things and forget the things that count for time. I was talking with a lady the other day about churches and church work and she said that she had not heard but two sermons this year at her church. I asked her why. She said that it all was money lectures all the while. This lady seems to think that all the churches were alike in just worrying the members about money. If this is your experience, I would say as a remedy for this to go to God in earnest prayer and ask Him to show you your duty as a member of your church and what he lays on your heart and mind to do. Do it with a whole heart as unto the Lord and the blessings will be yours. I trust that we will get busy and not be as the five foolish virgins, but that we will have our lamps full of oil, trimmed and burning, that those around about us who are still in the darkness of sin may see our good works and prepare to meet their God.

A WONDERFUL INSTRUMENT.

Among the many wonderful inventions of modern times, there is probably none that exerts a more powerful and beneficial influence on the home-life than the self-player piano. As a home-maker and entertainer, it has no equal, but its most valuable feature is its powerful influence in cultivating the tastes and developing the character of young people.

Young people especially crave entertainment. If this is not furnished in the home they will seek it elsewhere. The self-player piano makes home attractive to them, and the influence of good music develops their tastes in the right direction, thereby protecting them against the allurements of the street.

If you are interested in securing the best self-player piano (or a regular piano) write for a copy of the illustrated catalog of the Christian Sun Piano Club. Address the Managers, Ludden & Bates, Christian Sun Piano Club Dept., Atlanta, Ga. Advt.

Now is the Time to Get Rid of These Ugly Spots.

There's no longer the slightest need of feeling ashamed of your freckles, as the prescription othine—double strength—is guaranteed to remove these homely spots.

Simply get an ounce of othine—double strength—from your druggist, and apply a little of it night and morning and you should soon see that even the worst freckles have begun to disappear, while the lighter ones have vanished entirely. It is seldom that more than an ounce is needed to completely clear the skin and gain a beautiful clear complexion.

Be sure to ask for the double strength othine as this is sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove freckles.

TWENTY-SIXTH INTERNATIONAL CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR CONVENTION.

The Twenty-sixth International Christian Endeavor Convention is now a matter of history, but it will rank in results accomplished, and new movements inaugurated, with the best of the great series of conventions held by this world-wide organization.

The Setting.

Los Angeles furnished an ideal setting for the convention.

The weather, although considered unusually hot for Los Angeles, was, with cool nights, a refreshing contrast to the intense heat in the Middle and Eastern States.

No hall in the city could accommodate the crowds expected, so the large-visioned committee put a canvas roof over Fiesta Park, making two auditoriums accommodating nearly twenty thousand people. One was used as headquarters for the States and the other for the great mass meetings. In addition simultaneous meetings were held in the Temple Auditorium and a score of churches.

In spite of the ample provisions made overflow meetings were necessary to accommodate the tens of thousands who sought opportunity to gain the inspiration of the great meetings, and the second day of the convention the supply of programs and badges was exhausted.

Features.

The music of the Convention, led by a great chorus of one thousand voices trained by Prof. Peckham, and an orchestra of fifty voices, with talented soloists, was superb in quality. "Service Songs," the new hymn book, was used for the first time and became instantly popular. Prof. Percy S. Foster led the great audience in his inimitable way.

The street parade was a new feature and as the marching thousands of happy young people with music and song passed by, they made a profound impression on tens of thousands of spectators who crowded the sidewalks.

The committee under the leadership of Mr. Leonard Merrill provided for every need, and the immense crowds were handled as easily and the meetings were as orderly as in an ordinary sized convention. The spirit of devotion and enthusiasm was contagious. The denominational rallies were more largely attended and successful than in any recent convention.

A Varied Program.

Every phase of religious activity was considered in practical conferences or inspirational addresses.

President Henry Churchill King, LL. D., of Oberlin College, one of our clearest and best balanced thinkers, led the great throng that met him each morning at 6:30 into the real meaning of "Life's Values."

Rev. John Balcom Shaw, D. D., conducted a most helpful series on "The Use of the Bible for Personal Growth and Service."

Rev. A. L. Phillips, D. D., opened up the vast field of missions at home and abroad, and challenged the church of the future to plan adequately for the task committed to it.

Rev. Charles M. Sheldon, D. D., had three sessions with pastors and older leaders to discuss the application of the "Old Gospel to New World Conditions."

Social purity work for men was most effectively presented by Rev. E. A. King, author of "Clean and Strong," and for women by Mrs. J. S. Norvell.

Practical conferences on every phase of Christian Endeavor work were conducted by General Secretary William Shaw, Field Secretary Karl Lehmann and a score of Christian Endeavor expert workers.

Enormous crowds attended the four noon-day meetings in the Temple Auditorium, when vital questions relating to our civic, social and religious conditions were discussed by Dr. Ira Landrith, Hon. J. A. MacDonald, Rev. John Balcom Shaw, D. D., and "Billy" Sunday.

Fellowship among the denominations, world peace, and the attitude of Christian people toward those of a different race were ably presented by Rev. C. W. Recard, D. D., Rev. Frank M. Goodchild, D. D., Bishop Alex. Walters and Hon. John A. MacDonald.

The appeal to social service, the place of the Sabbath in present day civilization, and the spiritual dynamic necessary to all permanent moral reform were handled in an inspiring way by Rev. Claude E. Hill, Rev. William Patterson, D. D., of Ireland, Rev. Arthur B. Patten, D. D., Rev. G. E. Burlingame, D. D., Rev. W. T. Johnson, D. D., Rev. Julian C. Caldwell, D. D., Rev. J. Percival Huget, Rev. E. A. Watkins, D. D., and Rev. R. B. Perry, D. D.

The Home, the School and the Church, their place and power in character building were emphasized by Rev. Robert F. Coyle, D. D., President John Willis Baer and Dr. J. T. McCroy.

Evangelistic Endeavors.

Rev. "Billy" Sunday conducted seven great evangelistic services. This much-criticized, but most popular and successful evangelist, won the hearts of those who were able to get into the auditorium. Hundreds were converted and thousands of Christians were quickened and inspired to more consistent living and larger service.

Street meetings in many languages to reach the cosmopolitan population were held every day with most encouraging results.

Please send your subscription to THE SUN. We need it now.

CLUB MEMBERSHIP INCREASES.

The hot summer weather has failed to diminish the general interest in the Christian Sun Piano Club. New members are joining every day, in fact, the fame of the Club is spreading rapidly, and many are joining as a result of seeing and hearing the superb pianos and player-pianos in the homes of their friends.

The object of the Club is to secure the lowest possible prices on pianos of known and approved quality, and to provide an easy and convenient system of payment for those who do not find it convenient to pay the entire amount at once.

If your home needs a good instrument, you will find the Club a great assistance. Write for illustrated catalog and booklet containing letters from Club members. Address Ludden & Bates, Christian Sun Piano Club Dept., Atlanta, Ga. Advt.

HOW ABOUT JONAH AND THE WHALE?

Do you believe that story? Yes. What makes you believe it?

Because, Jesus believed it, and as a Christian I believe it too! See?

How about the Queen of Sheba and the wisdom of Solomon?

I believe that too, for Jesus refers to both Jonah and the Queen of Sheba. Read it for yourself in Matthew 12:40-42 inclusive.

But someone says it seems impossible. Of course it does, but the carping is all from our lack of knowledge. What is impossible with men is possible with God.

A lady just said to me, "I am a quiet Christian. Some time ago there was a revival in our church and after the preaching the pastor wanted everybody to gather around the altar. I dared not go for I wanted to keep my seat. After nearly everybody had surrounded the altar a sister called my name publicly and wanted me to come too. I did not go, and it has been over two years since I have been in a church. She had no business to insist."

"Well," I replied, "the Devil will get us going and coming. He is so wily and subtle that he can find us at our weakest point and defeat us in our effort to do right. The only way to defeat him is to kick him out and keep on kicking him."

How many start to follow Jesus and promise never to forsake Him, but when the way grows heavy and burdensome go back and follow Him no more. God help us to get to the place in our Christian experience where the Psalmist had gotten when he said: "Great peace have they that love Thy law, and nothing shall offend them." While it is a fact that no man is out of gunshot of the devil it is also a fact that Jesus will keep us if we make Him our refuge. Oh, what can separate us from His mighty love and power but our own vile selves? A little more closet prayer, a little more saving faith, more love for God and truth and righteousness will help us defeat the devil every time. He is a liar, a deceiver and has been from the beginning. The true Christian will not underestimate the power of the devil but meet that power with a still greater power—the power of Almighty God. "He who is for us is more than all that can come against us."—Eben N. Baldwin, in Methodist Protestant.

Here is an excellent breathing exercise that should be indulged in at least twice a day. Stand before an open window, or better, in the open air, and raise the arms above the head, stretching up as far as possible. Take a long, deep breath while doing so, and without bending the knees, grasp the ankles. Then straighten and repeat the operation, say ten times each performance.—N. C. State Board of Health.

Elon College

For Both Men and Women

Elon College, North Carolina

For a quarter century Elon College has rendered the best families of the South a paragon service in providing young men and young women with the best mental, moral and physical training under positive Christian influences, tho entirely free from sectarianism.

Karl Lehman, of Boston, testifies that "of all the Colleges I have visited as International Field Secretary of Christian Endeavor during six years, the spirit of Elon College appeals to me as most genuinely Christian." Elon College is situated in the delightful hill country, a section unsurpassed for beauty, with a climate far-famed for its healthfulness. There is no medical fee, for there is no necessity for it. Its campus, comprising twenty-five acres of native oak and hickory, shrubbery, winding walks and driveways, is one of the most beautiful in the South and, with its two unsurpassed gymnasias, provides abundant opportunity for recreation and relaxation.

The splendid equipment of Elon College was only made possible through liberal endowment. It maintains seven elegant new buildings, especially designed and appointed for college work. These are furnished with every known convenience; steam heat, electric lights, running water, baths and sewerage. The College plant is conservatively valued at $300,000.00.

Elon College is distinctly a high-grade institution, though its charges are moderate. Its graduates are admitted to the graduate departments of all the great universities without examination. Its literary and scientific courses are arranged in various departments which lead to the degrees of Master of Arts, Bachelor of Arts, Bachelor of Science, Bachelor of Philosophy, Bachelor of Pedagogy, and a three-years' course leading to the degree of Licentiate of Instruction, especially for teachers. This institution affords special opportunities for training in Piano, Voice, Expression, Fine Arts, Normal Training, Physical Culture and Commercial Practice.

The Faculty consists of twenty-one specialists; men and women selected not only for their superior teaching ability, but also for their exemplary character and manners.

The student body numbers nearly four hundred and comes from thirteen states.

The lowest Rates in the South, only $131 to $191 per College session of ten months. Fall Term always opens the first Wednesday in September. For full descriptive catalogue and view-book, address

MEXICO.

Poor priest-ridden Mexico continues in the throes of revolution and rebellion. It is said that Huerta's government is tottering to a fall, and the lives and property of thousands of Americans and Europeans are in jeopardy. This is the country dominated by the Romish Church, whose priests burn Bibles and persecute missionaries, and where the church raffles whiskey and beer to bolster up its finances. What Mexico is, this country would be if the priests dared to burn our Bibles, close our public schools, and dominate our affairs. Wherever Rome rules the drift is toward anarchy. It cannot live in an atmosphere of liberty, culture and piety.—Metho-dist Protestant.

CLUB MEMBERSHIP INCREASES.

The hot summer weather has failed to diminish the general interest in the Christian Sun Piano Club. New members are joining every day, in fact, the fame of the Club is spreading rapidly, and many are joining as a result of seeing and hearing the superb pianos and player-pianos in the homes of their friends.

The object of the Club is to secure the lowest possible prices on pianos of known and approved quality, and to provide an easy and convenient system of payment for those who do not find it convenient to pay the entire amount at once.

If your home needs a good instrument, you will find the Club a great assistance. Write for illustrated catalog and booklet containing letters from Club members. Address Ludden & Bates, Christian Sun Piano Club Dept., Atlanta, Ga. Advt.

PARENTS! CAN HE TROT?

Birth once fixed the station in life in this country, but no such accident does now. Training fixes it. The question of your son's future success will not be "Who was his sire?" but "Can he trot?" To possess the ability to "do" he must have a strong body and a strong mind.

The fitting school makes both possible. It paves the way for a successful career at college, university or in life. It is an invaluable step between boyhood and manhood.

Probably the most widely known fitting school in the Southeast and the leading one in the state is the Oak Ridge Institute, located 17 miles northwest of Greensboro, in Guilford County. The work of this school is unusually high in preparing for colleges, technical schools and life. It admits to the State University without examination and graduates of its Business College Department are found in every part of the country. It appeals strongly to parents who want the best. A beautiful catalog can be had by addressing J. A. and M. H. Holt, Proprietors, Oak Ridge, N. C.—Advertisement.

DEATHS

McHenry.

Sarah McHenry died December, 1912, aged about 87 years. As I was absent at the time, the funeral was indefinitely postponed, and on Sunday, July 6, 1913, I preached the funeral sermon at Palmyra, of which church the deceased was a faithful member. Two daughters in the neighborhood are left to mourn her departure. May God comfort the bereaved.

Keister.

Joseph Keister was born May 14, 1884, and died July 3, 1913 aged 29 years, 1 month, 19 days. The deceased was an employee on the Southern Pacific railroad, and was killed in California. The body was shipped to his old home near Harrisonburg, Va., and interment made at Weaver's Menonite church on July 16. He is survived by his father and four brothers, his mother having died about 29 years ago. Surely in this life there are many things that teach us to be ready always. Funeral services were conducted by the writer.

ATTENTION BRETHREN!

Our Song Books teach the Gospel as fully in Song as our Preachers do in Sermon.

FLAVIL HALL F. L. ROWE S. H. HALL

THE GOSPEL MESSAGE IN SONG

Revised and enlarged by FLAVIL HALL and S. H. HALL

This book has 205 hymns. The thought of a reformation in song book making prompted its compilation. In it the Gospel is taught as fully in song as the disciples endeavor to teach in sermon. No other such book before it had been published, nor has any other such yet been published, except our other new book mentioned below. The words and music are high class, and as sweet, inspiring and soul-stirring as any published. Published in both round and shaped notes. Out five years and over 60,000 copies sold. Endorsed by leading men and women in the Christian Church. Beautifully bound and printed.

YOUR ORDERS WILL BE GRATEFULLY APPRECIATED AT THE FOLLOWING PRICES: 30 cents per copy, prepaid; $3.00 per dozen, not prepaid; $3.50 per dozen, prepaid; $20.00 per hundred, not prepaid; 50 at the hundred rate.

REDEMPTIONS WAY IN SONG

By F. H. HALL, FLAVIL HALL, and F. L. ROWE

This book contains 115 songs as sweet, uplifting and soul-stirring as ever filled the hearts of the devotees of our "Risen Lord". True to its title—Redemption's Way, in its fullness, fearlessly and specifically presented. Convenient in size for Evangelist in Gospel tent work. The best book for any and all purposes. Published in both notations.

PRICES IN REACH OF ALL: 15 cents per copy, prepaid; $1.40 per dozen, not prepaid; $1.60 per dozen, prepaid; $10.00 per hundred not prepaid; 50 at the hundred rate.

VOCAL MUSIC LESSONS

BY FLAVIL HALL

This book has 25 pages of plain, practical rudiments, and 28 pages of soul-stirring music. These songs are selected with a view to having practice material. Teachers of vocal music should, by all means, have this book for their classes. Besides theory, it contains some very important lessons for the church regarding Vocal Music. Prices: 10 cents per copy; $1.00 per dozen.

"IN ESSENTIALS UNITY, IN NON-ESSENTIALS LIBERTY, IN ALL THINGS CHARITY."

OUR PRINCIPLES.

- (1.) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the church.
- (2.) Christian is a sufficient name for the church.
- (3.) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
- (4.) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of church membership.
- (5.) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

Editorial Briefs

Lean Christians.

Some one has defined lean Christians as those people who, being in the church, own Bibles, but do their daily reading in the newspapers.

Books and Bombs.

On Sunday, July 20, the police of Lisbon frustrated in that city an organized attempt at bomb throwing. Since then about 1,600 bombs have been found in and about the streets. The police and others seeking for a cause found that a book recently published, and much read, gave directions for manufacturing and placing the weapons. Not infrequently have bad books had worse effect than a hundred bombs. The thought of to-day is the father of the deed to-morrow. Bad books are like bombs: You never know where they are going to hit nor how many they are going to hurt.

Endowing Large Families.

Immorality and vice have so decreased the birth rate and the size of the family in France that conditions have become alarming and the Government has decided to take a hand in the endeavor to stem the evil tendency. A bill has recently passed both its Senate and Chamber of Deputies providing "that needy French parents with more than three children below the age of thirteen may receive from a municipal authority an annual grant varying from twelve to eighteen dollars for each child beyond that number." Widowers with two children less than thirteen may claim the grant, and widows with one child one year of age and up may become the beneficiary of the law. The law will entail an expense of $10,000,000 a year to carry out its provisions.

Onward.

No, he had not done much. His life was rather ordinary. He was neither rich, learned, nor famous. He went about his daily task in the ordinary way. On the Sabbath he was found in Sunday school, either in class or teaching. He heard the singing and the sermon through. He had not attained. He would not tell you he had not attained, and that he did not think his life had amounted to a great deal. In this he was more mistaken than in all the other matters of judgment he had to deal with. Hear! It is not what a man has reached that counts and tells for eternity? It is which way he is going, the direction in which he is pressing.

Listen at one of the world's greatest preachers: "We press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus." Pressing toward; that is what counts; pressing towards.

Ready.

What a blessed word is that: Ready. It conveys the idea of preparation fully made, willingness to go, submissiveness to the call. Ready: It sounds like a great word, fraught with meaning, might and majesty. The other day a reporter called on Cardinal Gibbons, now seventy-nine years of age, but still active. "No, I do not expect to live much longer, though active and in good health, I think my end will be sudden. Almighty God has blessed me with a long life, and I am ready to answer whenever He sees fit to call me to render an account of my stewardship." One is reminded of our Savior's words in Matt. 24:44. "Be ye also ready: for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of man cometh." If the call were to come this hour we wonder how many of those who read these lines could say: "Ready."

For Economic Reasons.

Recently a brilliant newspaper man said the saloon was doomed, and must be outlawed because of the bad economy or the lack of any economy in keeping it as an institution. Its waste of money in destroying the earning capacity of men was something fearful to contemplate. "Here is a bright fellow who can earn several thousand a year. He takes to the saloon and soon his earning capacity is done for." Recently Mr. Armour was the guest of the Emperor of Germany. Refusing to drink anything stronger than lemonade Armour explained: "I am a teetotler, and I will tell you why. By not smoking and by refraining from the use of all liquors I save a thousand dollars every day." This is not the highest ground upon which one should refrain, but many men lose a thousand dollars a day by drinking, and then later lose body and soul.

The Best Friend.

Chancellor Kirkland, who so much desires Carnegie's millions for Vanderbilt University, even to the extent of relinquishing all denomination control, is credited with saying years ago, "The best friend a university ever had is gold." We quote that for the amount of truth it does not contain. The best friend a university or college, like any individual, ever had, is that one of whom David wrote in Psalms 27:10: "When my father and my mother forsake me, then the Lord will take me up." And the best earthly friend a university or a college ever had is a constituency of men and women who place their love and loyalty for their educational institutions along with their love and loyalty for the church. Even a university or a college would far better have a thousand dollars consecrated to the service of Almighty by prayer and service and sacrifice than to have ten times that much of tainted, sacrilegious or skeptical money.

Reform or Redemption.

A multitude of scholars and teachers are trying to save the world by reforming it; by setting up a high moral standard; by cultivating the aesthetic taste; by inculcating ethics. They will never succeed. Men and women are not saved by being reformed; they are saved by being redeemed. One of the greatest social and benevolent workers on earth among women is Lady Henry Somerset. She has set forth the line of distinction in a recent article in "The Constructive Quarterly" which we wish all social workers and reformers would read, assimilate and inwardly digest. Here is a sentence that is to the point:

I speak after years of deliberate thought when I say that if we aim at reform, we fail. If we aim at redemption, we succeed. By reform I mean the endeavor to patch up the material that is there, content to send it out into the highways of life, shabby from the past and the worse for wear, but mended in the best way we can. By redemption I mean the realization that there is something in everyone that is of God, and belongs to God, and to us is given the joyous task to try to bring it back to the One to whom it belongs, to hand it over to God, so that His Spirit may possess that life again and the penitent soul be set free to start afresh.

Bible or Newspaper.

The claim has gone forth that men read their daily newspapers much more than they do the Bible. If this be true it is a sad comment. The daily paper is, at best, but light reading. It is quickly gotten up; it deals with matters of passing interest; its style is poor. The Bible has stood the test of ages, is the best of good reading; its style is the purest and most sublime. It deals with that which abides in time and for eternity. The London Christian raises a warning cry for England. We wonder if such conditions obtain in this country.

"The gradual and insidious way in which the daily newspapers are superseding all serious reading on the part of many professing Christians is a fact fraught with serious and lamentable consequences. The Bible is fast becoming the most be-praised and the least be-read book in the world. Its august message, its spiritual appeal, its open windows of insight into the mysteries of redemption are little known to the rising generation compared with those of days gone by. Religious people of old knew their Bibles from cover to cover; nowadays many who would be shocked not to be called Christians know it only at second hand and that very imperfectly."

These remind one of the teachings of Jesus when He said, John 3:3: "Verily, verily I say unto thee, except a man be born again, he cannot see the Kingdom of God."

TO OUR SUBSCRIBERS.

Owing to the accidental breaking of a part of the engine which supplies the power to run the presses in THE SUN office, just as we were about to print THE SUN last week, we were delayed until Monday of this week in getting out that issue, which accounts for the non-appearance of the paper last week. However, the damaged part has now been replaced and the presses are running as usual and we trust that in future we will be able to avoid a like delay.

EDITORIAL

THE OUTSIDE CHRISTIAN.

Here is a question propounded by The Lutheran: "Can a man be a Christian without joining the church?" Of course The Lutheran's question is easy of answer. The Continent thus replies: "Yes, to be sure. But what's the use of being that kind of a Christian? It is queer how industrious some people are in figuring religion down to the minimum." There may be found, here and there, a fairly good maximum Christian not a member of the church; but they are few and far between, we are inclined to think.

But, again the question recurs: What is the use? The moving power in the world for Christ is the Church. The Church supplies preaching, sustains the gospel, provides places of worship, supports missionaries, builds Christian colleges, erects orphanages, directs benevolent enterprises, manages the affairs of the Kingdom of righteousness. What are the people doing who are not members of any church?

First of all, the Christian needs the fellowship, the counsel, the sustaining strength of the church. One may attend church every Sunday, but unless one is a member of that church one does not feel as much at home there, does not take to himself the obligations and responsibilities he would if he were a member. What is the use of being a mere onlooker when by voluntary act one may become a member of a great business undertaking and enterprise? Why remain a tenant and a renter when by free offering one may become a land-lord and occupant? Church membership carries one into activity, and co-operation makes one responsible and gives weight and worth to character, conduct and life.

Then, the church needs every Christian; needs his influence, the weight of his counsel, companionship and co-operation. The church is undertaking the most stupendous task ever undertaken by any organization on earth. Its burdens are heavier, its tasks are greater, its problems more complex, than those of any other organization among men. On this account it needs every man and woman, boy and girl, who have given their hearts to God and are seeking to do His will.

God is working with the church and through the church to save the world, to redeem men from their sins and bring them to safety and security. This is His chosen medium for carrying on in the world that work against which the gates of hell shall not prevail. Man needs to feel, every one needs to feel, that God wants to use him to carry forward His work in the world. No one can feel this fully and wholly who is not in the church. Every Christian who means to be a Christian and do the will of God should be a member of the church. God wants him there and the Church needs him there.

ENOUGH DEGENERATES.

The American Tobacco Company, we see by the dispatches, is to greatly enlarge its plant at Durham, especially in the cigarette industry. Machines are to be installed that will turn out ready-made, seven million cigarettes daily. This, of course, means an increased money outlay for Durham, and for the State, and it means that we are to have the biggest cigarette manufactory on earth. Because of this, millions of dollars will flow into the State. But, after all, one wonders if this is a real asset to the State. We sometimes get money, and build up industries, at too dear a cost of character and manhood. May it not be that we are to pay a very dear price, in the rich blood, in the nerve and sinew and muscle and morals of our boys for this great commercial enterprise?

Some time ago Thomas A. Edison was asked if he smoked cigarettes. The great inventor replied: "I never smoked one in my life, and no man or boy who smokes cigarettes can work in my laboratory. In my opinion there are enough degenerates in the world without manufacturing any more by means of cigarettes."

Scientists and moralists generally are agreed that the smoking of cigarettes makes degenerates. That being so, we are purchasing a big industry at an enormous and fearful price.

NOTES AND PERSONALS.

—Rev. H. E. Rountree, Greensboro, and THE SUN's editor are in a revival this week at Pleasant Grove, Halifax County, Va.

—Write to THE SUN, brother pastor, and let our readers have the news from your churches—especially that now from the many good revivals.

—We wonder why more of our pastors do not join with Rev. W.D. Harward in sending in at least one new subscriber per week. This would help both THE SUN and the pastor in his work.

—The State of Texas recently fined the Standard Oil Company $500,000 for violating its anti-trust laws. The fine was made to the State Treasurer at Austin on July 23, $450,000 in bills, $50,000 in gold.

—Rev. H. W. Elder, Richland, Ga., was a visitor at Elon last week, having closed a meeting at Apples Chapel Thursday afternoon. Bro. Elder is engaged to assist in several meetings in North Carolina within the next few weeks.

—Rev. W. L. Wells, Columbus, Ga., is on a visit with his wife at Raleigh, where Mrs. Wells' people reside. Bro. Wells spent a night at Elon last week. He reports the work at Columbus as progressing and in good shape. Bro. Wells is one of our most consecrated and successful pastors.

—We might as well begin to look and long and pray for a saloonless nation. The idea is getting prevalent everywhere. A nationwide campaign against the liquor traffic was planned by the Christian Endeavor Convention at Los Angeles recently, and this motto was enthusiastically adopted: "A Saloonless United States by 1920."

—We understand that Rev. D. A. Keys, South Norfolk, Va., will not accept a call to his present pastorate for next Conference year. Bro. Keys is an exceedingly consecrated man and an able expounder of the Word. Here is indeed a fine opportunity for some of our pastorless churches to secure the services of an able preacher, a successful pastor and a good man.

—Rev. W. D. Harward, Newport News, Va., was given a month's vacation by his church and three weeks of the good time is being spent at Northfield, in the Bible Conference. Dr. J. U. Newman, of Elon College, is also at Northfield—the most helpful and inspiring place for a preacher to spend his vacation we know anything about.

—Rev. Carlyle Summerbell, D. D., Fall River, Mass., rejoices in the publication of The Occasional Visitor, No. 1, Vol. 1 of which is to hand. The delightful brother advises in his salutatory that The Occasional Visitor is published for the fun of it; issued every now and then. No subscription prices furnished." Dr. Summerbell advises his readers and the beloved generally to "cheer up. There is fun for you." We wish our brother all the fun in editing his delightful paper that his sense of humor desires.

NEWS ITEMS.

—A mixed train fell through a trestle 52 feet high into a creek near Lancaster, S. C., July 30, killing two passengers and injuring 50 others. There were in all 140 passengers and it was a miracle that the number killed and injured was so small.

—In Wisconsin now, by recent enactment of the Legislature, a health certificate must accompany every application for a marriage. We wish our legislators were as anxious for good morals as they seem to be of late for sound bodies. If they were the saloon would be out-lawed in every State of the Union before January 1.

—Administrations at Washington come and go, but Miss Emma R. Graves, a high employee in the United States Treasury Department, abides. This remarkable woman, an expert counter of money, has served out nearly fifty years of service, being now past eighty-one. She entered the Treasury Department at the beginning of the Civil War and has been on the job there ever since. She is still active and was recently promoted.

—Under the new suffrage law in Illinois the women of Cook County (Chicago) registered for the first time on July 26. Those who could not leave their babies at home carried them along to the polls, one woman carrying her grand child. This may seem like some other history than our own, but we might as well begin to get used to it—for the dear women have made up their minds to vote, and what they go after they generally get.

—Brother Archibald Johnson, of Charity and Children, extended the Press Convention an invitation on the part of its owner, to meet next year at Kanuga Lake, near Hendersonville. If the lake is half as inviting as its cut in Bro. Johnson's paper would indicate, we should make the vote unanimous, with thanks. Add Kanuga to your list of places—they are multiplying rapidly—worth seeing and summerizing at in Western North Carolina.

THE SALESMAN'S CREED.

I believe in the goods I am selling, in the firm I am working for, and in my ability to get "results."

I believe that honest goods can be sold to honest men by honest methods.

I believe in working, not waiting; in laughing, not weeping; in boosting, not knocking; and in the pleasure of selling goods.

I believe that a man gets what he goes after; that one order today is worth two orders tomorrow, and that no man is down-and-out until he has lost faith in himself.

I believe in to-day and the work I am doing, in tomorrow and the work I hope to do, and in the sure reward which the future holds.

I believe in courtesy, in kindness, in generosity, in good cheer, in friendship and honest competition.

I believe there is an order somewhere for every man ready to take one.

I believe I am ready—right now.—Edwin Osgood Grover, in N. Y. Christian Advocate.

THE BEAUTY OF HOMELY THINGS.

Not all prose is prosaic, and not all poetry is poetic. In the same sense, many of the most common things of life are pregnant with deep and beautiful meaning, and some so-called great things are but empty forms. We have to train the tongue to speak its native language, the hand to do the most simple task; so must we train the eye to see the beautiful, the ear to hear the harmonies of sound, and the heart to respond to noble emotion. The rich are not always the wealthy, nor are on the theory of life is called prominent, and she is accredited with doing great things, but what about the mother who really lives with her children as they pass through the various stages of development; who can tell stories that will hold the attention and train the faculties of the little ones, and who frankly meets the issues of life with the other ones. Is not the latter doing the truly great thing, and does it not require the greatest skill to do them well?

the penniless of necessity poor. I have in mind two young children of about the same age. One lives in a large city, on a good residence street, in a fine house. Her mother spends most of her time in the pursuits of pleasure and in "keeping up" her social standing. The child has about everything she asks for, but what does she crave? Rich food, showy clothes, expensive toys and excitement. She has never seen a bird's nest, only knows violets by the heavy-scented hot-house kind, and never pushed her bare, pink toes into the soft mud.

The other girl lives with her parents in a comfortable country home. She wears simple clothes, eats plain food, plays rollicking games, and she knows most of the birds and flowers about her by name. She listens for the first notes of the returned bobolink, blue-bird and song sparrow with the keenest delight; almost hourly searches for the unfolding blossoms of early spring, and reverently takes in her hand the first little baby chick. She is familiar with the changing and ever wonderful phenomena of sunrise and sunset and knows many nature poems that mean much to her because she is able to apply them. The one bears the husk of life, the other enfolds the germ that is life.

It is a great thing to be able to do little things that are a necessity in the routine of the common day and to do them well. The mother who makes a light, tender loaf of bread with her own hands for the sustenance of her own family has done a great thing, and if she has trained herself to enjoy doing it, and has worked out an answer to some of the whys, she has added materially to her bank account of individuality. Any woman can wear a pretty gown after it is made, but what a fine thing to have made it! Girls used to be taught these accomplishments at home; now much of it is left for the teachers of domestic science in our colleges.

FOR OLD BILL.

A stall six feet by nine—or more;
Well-aired and light! An even floor!
Give him no musty grain or hay.
His food—that is his only pay.
Give water the last thing at night,
And first of all at morning-light.
When loads are hard, rest him at will,
And block the wheels if it's uphill.
And, O, the collar should be right;
A good close fit but never tight!
He needs the force of all his weight.
May checkreins soon be "out of date."
More power lies in a firm, kind tone,
Than all the whips which you could own.
A sugar-lump, a pat or two
Will show him what he means to you.
Say to him, "You're a prize, Old Bill."
He'll understand; of course he will!
Give him the treatment you would choose,
If you were in a horse's shoes.

—Our Dumb Animals.

The class had been discussing recent affairs in China. A few days later the fate of a man who was eaten by his savage enemies was referred to. Anxious to enlarge the limited vocabulary of the children, the teacher asked what name was given to men who ate other human beings.

"Savages" and "man-eaters" were the only words most of them could give. At last the eagerness of a bright-eyed boy indicated that he thought he had a better word. He had. It was "Manchus."—Exchange.

Our dead are with the undying Love, and moving on with him. This is part of our faith.—Stopford Brooks.

WANTED, A MINISTER'S WIFE.

Wanted, a perfect lady,
Delicate, gentle, and refined,
With every beauty of person
And every endowment of mind;
Fitted by early culture
To move in fashionable life.
Please notice our advertisement—
"Wanted, a minister's wife."

Wanted, a thoroughbred worker,
Who well to her husband looks (Shall we see our money wasted
By extravagant, stupid cooks?)
Who cuts the daily expenses
With economy sharp as a knife,
And washes and scrubs in the kitchen—
"Wanted, a minister's wife."

A very domestic person;
To callers she must not be "out;"
It has such a bad appearance
For her to be getting about.
Only to visit the parish
Every year of her life,
And attend the funerals and weddings—
"Wanted, a minister's wife."

To conduct the ladies' meeting,
The sewing circle attend;
And when we work for the needy
Her ready assistance to lend;
To clothe the destitute children
When sorrow and want are rife;
To hunt up Sabbath School scholars—
"Wanted, a minister's wife."

Careful to entertain strangers,
Traveling agents, and such;
Of this kind of "angel visits"
The leaders have had so much
As to prove a perfect nuisance,
And "hope these plagues of their life
Can soon be sent to their parson's"—
"Wanted, a minister's wife."

A perfect pattern of prudence
To all others spending less.
But never disgracing the parish
By looking shabby in dress;
Playing the organ on Sunday
Would aid our laudable strife
So save the societies' money—
"Wanted, a minister's wife."

A clergyman, called suddenly away and unable to officiate at the Christmast service in his own church, entrusted his new curate with the duty. On his return home he asked his wife what she thought of the curate's sermon.

"The poorest I ever heard," she declared; "nothing in it at all."

Later in the day the clergyman, meeting his curate, asked him how he had got along.

"Finely, sir, finely," replied the curate. "I didn't have time to prepare anything myself; so I preached one of your sermons."—Exchange.

FROM OUR CONTRIBUTORS

THE OFFICE OF DEACON.

Amidst all the persecution that the early church endured, the Christian community had to exult in the most rapid extension of its limits. When the church came to consist of many people so that it was out of the question for them to assemble in one place they distributed themselves into classes or congregations for worship.

The apostles superintended the work and next under them were men of approved authority called presbyters, elders, bishops, all of equal rank, and identical, and had varied functions.

As the work grew and the number of the disciples multiplied a division of labor was demanded and a new office grew out of this necessity, called deacons. In the New Testament measures of church administration are planned and set in operation as needed by actual occasion. This principle should govern all our church officers and organizations now: viz., that such organizations and officers, with numbers, length of terms, organizations as are needed for the largest efficiency and should be discontinued when not needed. If we would remember that in the new testament measures of church administration are planned and set in operation as called for by actual occasion.

Deacons.

Read Acts 6:1-7. Notice that the number of the disciples was multiplying; that some of the work was being neglected, and the apostolic institution of this office seemed to grow naturally out of a providential occasion. The occasion illustrated what was likely to be a common and permanent need of the church as foreseen by those inspired men.

Seven deacons were chosen and some churches have always thought they had to have the same number no matter whether they needed more or less. But the number chosen, seven, was not a fixed number. It is probable that seven were chosen because there were seven classes, or congregations, or sections in the city. The church of Rome elected seven always for the first few centuries but the needs of the churches soon superseded all such restrictions. Your church may need more or less than mine. The whole spirit of the new testament church is to meet the needs as they arise. There is no reference to any mystical, or bible number of seven.

In general the duties have been those of caring for the poor, assistants to the minister looking after the spiritual interests of the congregation. At least two of the first board of deacons preached, Philip and Stephen. We read of Philip baptizing. It was their duty to give attention to both spiritual and temporal needs. They were to look after many things that the ministers might have more time for study, prayer, preaching. They were set apart, consecrated, to a certain work and mission.

The church had the full matter in its hands, the number, the work, the term. The church has all these things to determine. Deacons are deacons under the church only that elects them and its ministers. A deacon in one church may not be a suitable deacon in another church at all. When we understand the principle that the church has full authority and control of all these things according to its needs and wishes it will be seen that the church has power to choose as many as it wishes, for as long a term as it desires, and to assign such duties as will assist in the work of the church, primarily spiritual duties, and the needs of the minister that he may give himself sufficient time for study, prayer, preaching.

It is perfectly proper, therefore, for the minister to call upon a deacon to assist him in any work needing to be done for the church. I have used my deacons to assist in baptism by leading the candidate into and out from the river, and to help baptize them when two friends or relatives were baptized in the same act. I would feel perfectly justified to call them if I should be taken ill so I could not baptize at the moment. I have used them to conduct burial services at the cemetery when I have had several funerals the same day and services overlapped so that I could not go a long distance for the burial.

"The Popular and Critical Bible Encyclopedia" and "Mosheim's History of Christianity" for the first three centuries and others note the different duties assigned by the church according to needs of the times and the occasions. The primary meaning of "diakonia" is that of servant, minister, messenger. One of the first deacons was the first Christian martyr. Observation and experience have taught me that as a rule it is far better to elect deacons for a term of years rather than for a life period. Most other denominations elect them for a term of years.

With the right kind of deacons as the helpers of the minister I am convinced that it will be as of old when the word of God increased; and the number of disciples multiplied exceedingly; and a great company of the priests were obedient to the faith.

What Manner of Persons Should be Chosen Deacons?

Acts 6:3 and I Timothy chapter 3: "Of good report." Not every good person is suited for every office. There should be fitness for the special office. Good report means of good repute and held in general esteem, unquestionable integrity, and of private character that wins confidence and respect. "Full of the Holy Spirit," that is persons of active piety, spiritual, with warmth and fervor of devotion, of Christian experience, persons who know what the Christian life is, self denying in their labors for the welfare of their fellowmen and for the spread of the gospel. The power of the Holy Spirit makes strong to instruct, convince, persuade. All this is necessary in order to deal wisely with the sick, poor, lost, indifferent. There must be the inner communion.

"Full of Wisdom." Wise. Having skill for the kind of work necessary; with goodness and sense combined; neither weakly good men, nor men with sense, shrewdness, ability without goodness.

"Grave." Earnest and feel the responsibility of the Christian life; realize the practical power of Christianity.

"Not double tongued, not given to much wine, not greedy of filthy lucre; holding the mystery of faith in a pure conscience; husband of one wife; ruling their children and their own houses well."

They should therefore be persons of high personal character, goodness, judgment. Persons who may be trusted with money matters, with impartial dealing, just decisions, beyond suspicion of interested motive.

Many churches therefore require that any grievances in the church must be carried before the deacons first.

"They that have served well as deacons gain to themselves a good standing, and great boldness in the faith which is in Christ Jesus."

The right kind of persons do not seek the office of deacon; but when they are sought out by their brethren and counted worthy it is a serious matter to refuse. Counted worthy by your brethren to serve is a Christian's supreme honor.

It is their duty to admonish the congregation and watch for their souls and the congregation's duty to esteem them highly for the office and work's sake.

Without the confidence and esteem of their brethren they could not make a good beginning; without a Christian character they would be out of place altogether; without understanding and disposition they would not make a good ending.

Deaconess.

A female person occupying the office of deacon is called a deaconess. That the order of deaconess existed in the early church even in apostolic days is evident from Romans 16:1, 2. The earliest fathers of the church speak of such. The best evidence shows that they were set apart as deacons were by the imposition of hands. Many historians have given the duties that have devolved upon the women who have served in this office, varying as in the case of deacons with the different centuries. There are early records that show that they existed in the churches of Bythia as early as 100 A. D. More of our churches would be blessed by the choosing of some women to the office of deacon.

CHURCH NEWS.

The Second Sunday in July was a good day at Wentworth Christian church. It was "Music Day." The program was as follows:

Morning.

- 10:00 o'clock—Praise Service, Baraca Class. Music.
- 10:30—Address: "Music in Our Sunday Schools," Rev. J. E. Hemphill. Music.
- 11:00—Sermon and Communion Service, Rev. J. W. Patton, Pastor. Music.
- Offering for Orphanage.
- Dinner.

Afternoon.

- 1:30—Special Concert.
- 1:45—Address: "The Kingdom and the Child," J. W. Bailey, Raleigh. Music.
- 3:00—The C. E. Society—The Sunday School. The Baraca—The Community. The Philathea—The Individual, R.N. Simms. Fifteen minutes closing exercises with the classes.

Special.

The praise service was conducted by Bro. T. B. Eldridge, of the M. E. church, Raleigh. He read and emphasized the Sunday school lesson for the day. His remarks were very appropriate.

Rev. J. E. Hemphill, Presbyterian, of Raleigh, earnestly plead for Christian men and women to be at the head of church music. He spoke of a quartette, non-professors, who were paid four thousand dollars a year, and after they had done their singing and while the minister was preaching, they were behind drawn curtains playing cards. He placed music, and very aptly too, as important as any other part of the religious service. Music is not simply to fill in, but to inspire, to worship, to introduce and preserve the continuity of thought as presented in the other part of the service.

The sermon was to the subject, "The End of Faith," based upon I Peter 1:8-9: "Whom having not seen, ye love; in whom, though now ye see Him not, yet believing, ye rejoice with joy unspeakable and full of glory: receiving the end of your faith, even the salvation of your souls."

A WORD TO AMBITIOUS YOUNG PEOPLE.

Special Advantages Offered by Elon College.—
Fine Religious Atmosphere.

1. A $300,000 plant, modern in every particular, electric lights, baths, steam heat, deep well water, etc.

2. A Faculty of 21 specialists from the greatest universities, such as Yale, Harvard, Johns Hopkins, Chicago.

3. Unsurpassed special departments in piano, voice, harmony, expression, fine arts, normal training, physical culture, and commercial practice.

4. Use of two excellent gymnasias, one for young ladies in the annex of the West Dormitory, and one for young men in the Alumni Building, costing $26,000 and regarded as the peer of any gymnasium in the Southern States. The directors of these gymnasias came from the finest training schools on the continent.

5. Laboratories of most modern appointment, excellent library and reading room facilities, three literary societies far-famed for their excellency, fine athletic grounds, beautiful campus and natural surroundings, a strictly high-toned college community, with tele-

9. The Elon Spirit, which even the casual visitor must feel and enjoy—the Spirit of fair play, of gentility in all things, of moderation and temperance, of mutual helpfulness and brotherliness, of equality and fraternity and manliness and womanly gracefulness, of emulation in right doing, of respect for the College mates, of deep and vital piety, of consecrated religious and Christian character. This fine spirit has rendered hazing absolutely impossible here, the student body living in fellowship and affection like one great family.

10. An ideal commercial course without cost to those matriculated in the literary department, supplying the needed technical training and giving a solid foundation in general culture, the lack of which in the so-called business colleges renders their graduates incapable of anything but the cheapest sort of service. You can't grow anything but a squash in six months and the school which proposes to educate for anything but failure in that time is not worthy of respect.

11. A climate of unequaled healthfulness. No medical fee is laid, because it is unnecessary. During a quarter century there has never been a serious instance of sickness. There has not been a death here in a student tions beyond the obligation to be a gentleman, a lady, and that rarely fails to develop the best in the lives of those that come here.

18. With the whole controlled by an earnest spirit of vital Christian living. So impressed with this characteristic of Elon was Mr. Karl Lehmann, the noted religious traveler of Boston, that after visiting the College, he wrote for public print these fine words, unsolicited,—“Of all the Colleges I have visited in six years as International Field Secretary of Christian Endeavor, the spirit of Elon College appeals to me as most genuinely Christian.”

IN TRAINING.

New York City, July 30.—In my letter to the readers of THE CHRISTIAN SUN, published in June, I said it was my purpose to enter Summer School in New York City early in July. I have been blessed with the privilege, for which I feel very grateful. I am in the Bible Teacher's Training School, conducted by Dr. Wilber White. The school is located at the corner of Lexington Avenue and 49th Street, a handsome building with splendid equipment. The teachers in the school are among the very best the country has; very devout men and women. They bring to us a ripe experience from many lands. I count it a great privilege to sit at their feet as a learner. There are no high pressure methods used here. The school seems to be conservative and thorough in its methods of work.

This is a great city, too, packed full of interest by day and by night—sleep has no charm for me since here I have been. Something new every day, every hour, always something new and exciting—it is a city beautiful, when one comes to think of all of its natural and artificial advantages. Its public buildings, parks and people interest me more than all the other objects of interest, except the schools and the churches. Here one is privileged to hear the greatest preachers on earth. I have heard excellent men from five of the greater countries as well as some of the great men of our own country. Last Sabbath I worshiped with our own church, 678 Leonard Street. I heard a good sermon, good music and received a hearty welcome. My good friend, W. W. Elder, who is connected with the Naval Y. M. C. A., conducted me to our place of worship. He is a loyal subject of the Christian Church, a devout young man. He has shown me great favors during my stay in the city, for which I am truly grateful.

Letters from friends bring good news from the Raleigh Church, which I have tried to serve for the past five years. My heart is interested in every forward step the church may take. The outlook in Raleigh seems brighter to me than ever. I shall hope and pray that good may come to all the members, and that the church may succeed as never before.

Many good wishes for THE SUN and all its readers.

Sincerely,

L. F. JOHNSON

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENTS

ELON COLLEGE NOTES.

Miss Sudie McConley, Chapel Hill, N. C., the newly elected matron and teacher of the Orphanage, began her duties Friday last. On Saturday she and Superintendent Carter took fifteen of the orphans on a picnic tour to Boynes Store in Caswell County. About a thousand people were present and nearly $150 was raised for the Orphanage. The writer, who was present, heard only words of praise for the orphans and the entertainment they gave.

Mr. Carl H. Herndon was buried on Friday last from his father's residence here. Dr. Atkinson officiated and was assisted by Dr. Wellons and the pastor of the Zebulon Methodist Church, where Mr. Herndon had been teaching a Sunday school class for the past two years. Mr. Herndon's many Elon friends of former days will mourn over his taking off in the prime of life.

Dr. J. W. Wellons leaves Thursday of this week for Mt. Auburn where he is to assist in a protracted service.

The SUN's Editor this week is engaged in revivalistic services at News Ferry, Va. He is being assisted by Rev. H. E. Rountree.

Several persons have been here the past few days investigating the College and seeking houses to move into near the College. We need many houses here to rent. Could we have them, the patronage of the College would rapidly increase.

Mr. R. O. Tate, of Norfolk, Va., a successful Christian business man of that city, is visiting his mother and sister here this week. Mr. Tate is in the real estate business, but sticks to the truth nevertheless. He is a tither and enjoys helping the Lord's work with his money. Is that why he is prospering? The reason why some of us are so poor is that we are not willing to take the Lord at his word. He says He will open the windows of Heaven and pour us out a blessing such that we cannot receive it, if we will pay our tithes.

The new West Dormitory roof is being put on this week. It will take hard work to finish it by the opening, but we hope to have it ready. The steel tank and tower is on the way and is expected any day.

The prospect for the opening continues bright. Our friends are working for us as never before. If they keep it up, and they will, we shall have the largest enrollment of Elon's successful history. C. B. R.

TWO FAREWELLS.

Saying farewell is never a pleasure to me, but under some conditions it is more difficult than it would be otherwise. It was peculiarly hard to take leave of the brethren in Japan, to say good-bye to the missionaries, the pastors, and some of the others, with whom I had been enjoying pleasant and helpful fellowship. But "what can't be cured must be endured," and the word of parting had to be said.

At Sendai the Northern Quarterly Conference held a session immediately following the annual Mission Meeting, and an evening was devoted to a farewell service. Pastor Kitans with deep feeling addressed the Foreign Secretary, expressing the sentiments of the brethren, and presenting a memento as a permanent reminder of the weeks we had spent together in the Master's work. Opportunity was then given the Secretary for a final word. Service closed, a photograph of the gathering was taken, tea and cakes were passed, and we bowed our adieu (you can hardly imagine most of the Japanese sisters doing anything so vulgar as shaking hands). The pastors remained a day or two longer until the Secretary left the city to bid him God-speed on his journey. The Japanese people are great folks to say good-bye. Every day in the year they would pay one cent a head for platform tickets allowing them to pass through the wicket with departing guests, stand beside the train and bow friends out of town. When I left Sendai a considerable group of people went to the station with me, and there the more serious aspect of the parting came over me, and I found it exceedingly hard to keep up my acquired tea-smile.

At Tokyo, just before my sailing date, the Quanto (or southern) Quarterly Conference held a session and farewell meeting, very much like that at Sendai; then quite a large company performed the usual act of friendship at the railway station, and ten or a dozen went to Yokohama and to the steamship with me. As the "Empress of Japan" swung out into the harbor and headed toward the ocean, the missionaries and Japanese brethren waved farewell as long as we could distinguish one another, and I really felt as if I would like to get ashore again and remain a little longer. I shall always be thankful for the fellowship enjoyed in Japan; that was quite sufficient compensation for any discomforts attending the long journey. I wish that every reader of this might have a deepened sense of fellowship with the brethren in Japan, and shall hope to help some of you to that realization.

M. T. MORRILL.

"JOY THE HERITAGE OF GOD'S CHILDREN."

This thought is found both in the Old and New Testaments. Nehemiah tells us that, "The joy of the Lord is your strength" (8:10). In Psalms 16:1 David tells us, "In thy presence is fullness of joy." In Isaiah 35:10 we read, "And the ransomed of the Lord shall return and come to Zion with songs and everlasting joy upon their heads; they shall obtain joy and gladness, and sorrowing and sighing shall flee away." Luke tells us in 24:51 "And just before Jesus ascended to his Father he led the Disciples out to Bethany and there he was taken up to Heaven, and they worshipped him and returned to Jerusalem with great joy." God intends that his joy shall remain in us, and that our joy might be full, Jesus said in John 15:11: "These things have I spoken unto you, that my joy might remain in you and that your joy might be full." We read in I Peter 1:8, "Whom having not seen, ye love; in whom, though now ye see Him not, yet believing, ye rejoice with joy unspeakable and full of Glory." Paul says in I Thes. 5:16, "Rejoice evermore," and he says elsewhere, "And again I say rejoice." When the angels from heaven broke the news on earth, that a Savior was born, the proclamation was made with joy, viz: "And the angels said unto them, Fear not, for, behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy."

When a sinner repents of, confesses, and forsakes his sins that fact is made known in heaven with joy. Luke 15:17. And one of the first evidences of a sinner's pardon is joy in his soul. Could it be possible that a sinner, saved from his sins, would have no joy? I can conceive that a sinner may have good ideas, good intentions, and even shake the preacher's hand, or sign a card or do both and have no perfect joy. But I declare that the sinner cannot be born into the kingdom of God and have no joy. I fear very much that this cheap hand shaking and card signing, man made plan, will give the devil a good chance to mislead many souls. I was in a meeting not long since where hundreds claimed to accept Christ as their personal Savior and I didn't see one who seemed to have any joy. Joy is hard to hide. I was in another meeting, when I saw some 15 or 20 shake the preacher's hand and one broke down and wept over her sins, and another one fixed the placket of her dress while she shook the preacher's hand; now could she have been meeting the awful conditions and accept Christ as her personal Savior and at the same time study about her dress? We used to see joyful Christians, but where are they today? We cannot insist too strongly upon the experience of real joy, as an evidence of one's being a child of God.

In this day since decision is being substituted for repentance; resolutions, for salvation; profession of religion for the possession of vital Godliness, leaving the soul void of joy, peace, love or any other of the evidences of the new birth, it is high time that the people were undeceived and made to know that when a poor condemned sinner prays through and gets news from heaven that he has been received into God's family, I firmly believe he will have a joy that he will not want to smother, nor keep from making it known. David in Psalms 66:16 said; "Come and hear, all ye that fear God, and I will declare what he hath done for my soul." I believe that when a sinner is born into the Kingdom of God he will have joy and will declare it.

Yours for a joyful religion,

P. T. KLAPP.

HOME READING.

The earliest years of one's life are of intense and immense importance. The moral influences of one's home go far toward the making of personal character. Of course, they are not the whole thing. Hereditary tendencies have a great bearing on the formation of one's character and life. And yet it must be said that much can be done in one's early home life that will counteract and control one's natural and evil tendencies. Reading is one of the agencies and instrumentalities. The habit of reading good literature is one of the very best things that a youth can have. If the mind be filled with the thoughts and truths which pure reading furnishes, it will go far toward making good character and a useful life. On the other hand, the effects of reading bad literature are exceedingly injurious to one's mind and moral character. From an editorial in "The American Messenger," I take the following words: "The moral character of the literature which enters our homes is a matter of transcendent importance—while good reading ennobles, bad reading degrades and destroys the spiritual life of young and old alike. The human soul cannot feed upon that which is evil in literature and expect that the results will be anything but bad. The periodical press constitutes a very large portion of the reading matter that enters the great majority of homes at the present time. In selecting a paper for the family circle, it is, therefore, desirable to secure the best that can be obtained, for the repeated visits of a periodical contribute one of the most potent moulding influences at work in the home." True indeed. Christian parents should carefully observe what their children read. I urge them to take and read their own church paper. Too many parents entirely neglect this matter. It is not enough that you have a merely religious paper of some kind, for some kinds are very unsound and unsafe. You may say that you cannot afford to pay two dollars a year for a Christian newspaper. Why, man, that is very cheap. It is worth more than ten times that price to your home.

DEDICATION OF ST. PAUL'S CHURCH.

The dedication of the new church at Wyoming, Del., the St. Paul's Christian Church, of which Rev. R. S. Stephens is the present pastor, took place last Sunday. It was an ideal Summer dedication day. Dr. Stephens introduced as the speakers and officiating clergymen of the day, Dr. O. W. Powers, of Dayton, Ohio, Home Mission secretary of the Christian Church; Rev. Andrew B. Wood, of Baltimore, formerly of Dover and son of Magistrate E. F. Wood, of Dover; and Dr. A. W. Lightbourne, D. D., of Dover.

In fine voice, displaying rare gifts as a preacher and exhorter, Mr. Wood preached the morning sermon upon the text: "This is my Beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased."

The principles of the Christian Church and the broader essentials of the Christian life formed the theme of the afternoon sermon, preached by Dr. Powers. The preacher is a strong man of 50, in love with the people and his work among them, and an earnest speaker.

The dedicatory service followed the afternoon sermon, Dr. Powers dedicating the church and Dr. Lightbourne assisting. During the dedication, the glee club of Dover sang seven selections appropriate to the spirit of the day.

In the evening, Dr. Powers preached the closing sermon of dedication day, from the text: John, 3: 16, "God so loved the world." This sermon was rich in lessons and exhortations.

Dr. Stephens reports that during the day the people gave for their new church $425 in cash and subscriptions, which was better than expected, in these days of vacation and closed churches. The new church is situated on the corner of Mechanic and Walnut streets, Wyoming, a town that is laid out to become an influential Delaware city some day. This is a handsome little church and will seat 200 worshippers. The pastor sends out an appeal to the people of town and country who have no church relations to come and interest themselves in this household of faith for the young and old.—Delaware State News.

JESUS OF NAZARETH.

And so we have Him, a Galilean carpenter, not a physician, but the master of all human ills; not a lawyer, but the expounder of the elemental principle of all law; not an author, but the inspirer of the living literature of the world; not a musician, but the soul and inspiration of all song, and all music; not an artist, but the unfailing light of the great masters, old and new; not an architect, but the soul transformer and the character builder of all time; not a statesman, but the state and institution founder of the race, and, more wonderful than all, a man blameless and unscarred by sin or taint of wrong. Before a mind like that, in the presence of such amazing intellectual powers, and a character so faultless and so perfect, I am awed and humbled. Face to face with this lowly born but transcendent and omniscient Jew, I find in Him enough of the marvelous and inexplicable to convince me of itself of His supernaturalness and divinity. And when I contemplate the admitted facts of His wondrous life, His death on the cross at three and thirty, the effects of His brief ministry and the results of His work, so vast, so far-reaching and so abiding, and consider his all-pervasive and omniscient personality, my exultant soul slips its agnostic bands, leaps the shrinking chasm of its doubt, breaks through every hindering quibble, falls at His nail-pierced feet, and in glad recognition cries out its joy, "MY LORD AND SAVIOR JESUS CHRIST!" He was not a man. He is Deity itself, God made manifest.—Governor Frank Hanly, in Methodist Protestant.

SOUTHERN FARM PRODUCTS

Will be Exhibited at Fairs in a Number of Northern States This Fall.

Washington, D. C., August 5.—Splendid exhibits of Southern farm products, showing the alluring agricultural opportunities awaiting industrious settlers in the territory along their lines, will be made by the Southern Railway and affiliated companies, (including the Mobile & Ohio, the Georgia, Southern & Florida, the Alabama Great Southern, the Cincinnati, New Orleans, and Texas Pacific, and the Virginia & Southwestern) at three great expositions and thirty-five district and county fairs in the North and Middle West during the late summer and fall. This is the most extensive campaign of this character ever undertaken for attracting settlers to the Southern States and will place their advantages in the most striking way before thousands of sturdy farmers of just the type that is desired in the South.

Special exhibits will be made at the Canadian National Exhibition at Toronto, August 23 to September 8, the attendance of which touches the million mark, the famous dairy show at Waterloo, Iowa, in November, and the International Live Stock Exposition in Chicago during November and December. Exhibits at district and county fairs in New York, Connecticut, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Michigan, Indiana, Illinois, Wisconsin, Iowa, and Minnesota, have been arranged in four circuits, running from August 5 to late in October.

The work of preparing these exhibits has been under way since the close of the fair season in 1912. Since the beginning of the new crop season, agents have been at work with the result that from every state on the lines of the Southern System, there have come most representative collections of agricultural products, including grains, grasses, vegetables, and fruit. Large photographs showing farm and other views in the South will also be used. The exhibits will be in charge of agents who are thoroughly familiar with conditions in the South and who will be on hand constantly to give information desired about any locality. Special leaflets and booklets have been prepared and several hundred thousand will be placed in the hands of prospective settlers.

These exhibits are being made entirely at the expense of the Southern Railway and affiliated lines. The territory served by them and the whole Southeast will be given wide advertising which should be productive of much good for the section.

In addition to this series of exhibits at Northern fairs and expositions, the Southern Railway and affiliated lines will make educational exhibits at a large number of fairs throughout the South, detailed announcement of which will be made later.

Some one has defined lean Christians as those people who, being in the church, own Bibles, but do their daily reading in the newspapers.

A LIQUORIZED PRESS.

We wonder how many of our readers have thought seriously of the universal truth of the following article from The Methodist Protestant, of Baltimore, and the blighting effect on the thousands, yea the millions of readers into whose homes these papers go daily; and into many of whose homes practically no other reading matter finds its way:

"Is it not strange that the whiskey-ruled press never finds news notes like the following of sufficient interest to print. The following dispatch is from Norfolk, Va.: 'Isle of Wight county, Virginia, having a population of 15,000, claims the record for law and order. No grand jury has been necessary for the consideration of criminal business thus far during the year 1913, and Judge B. D. White, of the circuit court, said to-day the county jail was empty and practically for rent. Civil business alone keeps the court alive.' We will venture to say that if some heartless fabricator of the whiskey ring said something like the following it would be taken by the Associated Press and scattered to the four corners of the globe: 'The Isle of Wight county temperance law is a failure. There are more trials than under the license system and more liquor drank now than ever before.' That it was said by some nobody, whose word would hardly be taken by his own mother, would make no difference. It would be damaging to the cause of temperance, and it would squint an approval of the saloon business and that would be altogether sufficient to justify the publication of the falsehood. And yet the press wants to be considered the purveyor of truth and virtue to the public."—The Golden Age.

AN IDEAL COLLEGE.

Visitors to Elon College, N. C., are commonly heard to remark that Nature has done more to make Elon College beautiful than any other College campus in the South. There is a deal of truth in this as one would readily appreciate were he to view the magnificent campus of twenty-five acres covered with its wealth of stalwart oaks and hickories. But to the bounty of Nature have been added many other features that make Elon College not only one of the most beautiful, but also one of the most wholesome educational institutions in the South.

Beautiful winding walks and promenades and ornamental shrubbery help to make the charm of the campus complete. A massive administration building, of model appointment, magnificent dormitories, equipped with steam heat, electric lights, baths and sewerage, two unexcelled gymnasias, and the co-operative boarding facilities for both men and women reducing the cost of living to a minimum, mark the College as one of the best.

Elon College is located to ideal advantage, combining all the advantages of city life, with none of its disadvantages, and parents desiring safety in a College for their sons and daughters, as well as high-class instruction should investigate. A descriptive catalogue may be had from President W. A. Harper, Elon College, N. C. Advt.

We have the same teaching in the word "comfort" itself, whose meaning is oft-times greatly misunderstood. Many persons looking for comfort in sorrow expect that the bitter cup will be taken away, or, at least, that its bitterness will be alleviated. But the word comfort is from a root which means to strengthen. Hence it contains no promise that in any way the burden will be made lighter, or the grief less poignant. God comforts us by giving us strength to endure our trial.—Ministry of Comfort.

Sunday Schools and Christian Endeavor

CHARLES A. HINES, Editorial and Field Secretary, Greensboro, N. C.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON, AUG. 10.

Subject.—“The Passover.” Text: Exodus 12:21-31.

Time.—Same as last lesson.

Place.—Egypt.

Persons.—Moses, Aaron, Elders, Israelites, Pharaoh, Egyptians.

Golden Text.—The Son of man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give his life a ransom for us.—Matt. 20:28.

Leading Thought.—Jesus came to help and to save.

The purpose of this lesson is (1) to show how Israel was liberated from Egyptian bondage after the tenth plague; (2) to show the original significance of the Passover feast and how and why it has been observed as a memorial; (3) to show how the Passover lamb was prophetic of the Christ, the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world.

In our study of the plagues, last Sunday, the lesson closed with a brief notice of the tenth. To-day we have a detailed study of that last, awful plague. Our attention is called both to how it affected the Egyptians, and to what it meant to the Israelites.

The word, Passover, means the same in the Hebrew and Greek that it means in English, namely, to pass over in mercy, to allow to escape danger, as the death angel passed over the houses protected by the blood of the lamb on the door-posts.

The hyssop was a bushy herb, perhaps any bushy herb that could be used for sprinkling.

The feast which the Israelites were to eat in connection with the Passover had originally the sensible purpose of fortifying them for the long and difficult journey that was before them. In our communion service one of the thoughts is the same, though in our case it is spiritual and not material food that we take chiefly.

Thousands in the East have been carried off in a single day by one of the fierce pestilences that rage there. The death of the first-born was a miracle, but it may have moved along the lines of one of these dire visitations.

The first-born would in most cases be grown men, and among them would be a large number of Egyptian taskmasters whose cruelty had caused untold suffering to the patient Hebrews.

The jewels and raiment which the Egyptians gave freely and eagerly to the departing Israelites were not booty, but were only a very small part of their just wages.

LESSON ANNOUNCEMENT.

We have learned to-day how the Hebrews finally got Pharaoh's permission to leave Egypt. Next Sunday's lesson tells what happened when Pharaoh changed his mind and wanted his Hebrew workmen back again. If they had gone straight through the nearest gate in the great Wall and out upon the caravan road, it would not have been hard for Pharaoh's soldiers to bring them back. But instead of going the way that looked easiest, they were guided in another direction into what looked like a trap. Next Sunday's lesson tells how they got out of Egypt and why Pharaoh did not persist in sending his army after them.

It is a noble and great thing to cover the blemishes and to excuse the feelings of a friend; to draw a curtain before his starrings; and to display his perfections; to bury his weakness in silence, but to proclaim his virtues upon the house-top.—Robert South.

NOTES ON C. E. TOPIC FOR AUGUST 17.

Subject.—“Lesson From the Forest and Fields.” Psalms 104:1-35. (An Outdoor Meeting if Convenient.)

Make much of this meeting; make it novel; advertise it well; have a fixed and definite program; all speeches short and on the subject. Sing nature songs. Let the leader and prayer meeting committee face the audience. Have members bring objects to the meeting to talk about. Have some appropriate poem recited. Have mountain scenes some have visited described.

THE WESTERN N. C. CONVENTION.

The Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention for Western North Carolina was held with the Randleman Christian church, Friday to Sunday, July 25-27. The hospitality of Randleman and the enthusiasm of the officers made the occasion one well worth while and wholly enjoyable, despite a very small attendance.

Rev. J. F. Morgan, the efficient and untiring president of the convention, was re-elected and C. B. Riddle was chosen secretary to succeed Prof. R. C. Cox.

The Friday afternoon session was called to order by the president and was given over to enrollment of delegates, report of executive and entertainment committees, election of officers and appointment of committees.

Friday evening the address of welcome was made by the pastor, with responses by Messrs. E. W. Brown and Hiram Freeman. Rev. A. B. Kendall delivered the annual address, which was generally conceded to be the feature of the convention.

Saturday morning the committee on Sunday school made its report. Addresses were made by Mr. Kendall on the Home Department and H. S. Smith on “The Value of a Vision.” These talks were followed by a round table on Sunday school work. It developed in this discussion that several schools in the conference are not using our denomination's literature. Efforts will be made to correct this and we trust they will succeed.

Saturday afternoon the Organized Class was the topic for discussion. A paper on “The Value of the Organized Class” was read by Miss Annie Williams, and Charles A. Hines, editorial and field secretary of the General Convention, talked on “The Organized Class at Work.” The report of the Teacher Training committee was submitted and adopted.

The convention closed Saturday evening with the discussion of the Christian Endeavor report and the consideration of miscellaneous business. Mr. C. B. Riddle made an interesting address on “The Challenge to our Young People.”

NEWS AND VIEWS OF THE WORK.

The First Christian Sunday school, Greensboro, has an architect at work upon plans for a new $10,000 Sunday school building, which it is proposed to erect within the next two years. The movement for it was started by the Philathea class.

Since the Charlotte convention, 125 new Baraca and Philathea classes have been organized in North Carolina. The Christian denomination has two or three of these, but should have more.

The current number of the Baraca-Philathea Herald has a fine cut of the New Providence class, of Graham, of which Miss Annie Williams is teacher. The class has 20 members, has pledged $10 to the state work and takes 20 copies of the Herald. We wonder how many copies of THE CHRISTIAN SUN its members take. The officers are: President, A. H. Bean; Secretary, J. A. Bayliff; Treasurer, Richard Whitfield. The class had two delegates at Randleman convention.

The following from the Baraca-Philathea Herald tells what one class in Brother Cox's church at Durham is doing:

The Junior Philatheas have 52 members and have set as their goal 100. They organized six months ago with 8 members. How many Junior classes have made a record like this? The secret we have found in a letter from the class president. She says: “We are all busy. We haven't forgotten our motto. We have class meetings every month. Recently we had forty present at my home and at the last meeting we gave a penny party, with a nice program.” Nearly 200 were present at this social, the principal address being delivered by Mr. E. J. Schantz, which was enjoyed to the fullest extent. He was presented with a large bunch of carnations from the class. Following the program the Juniors served delightful refreshments to the interested audience. They take 30 copies of The Herald. Mr. C. C. Mulhalland is teacher, and Miss Minnie Carden, president.

WHO WANTS TO HAVE A PART?

The Winchester Christian Church will be dedicated August the 17th. To date $6,600 has been paid on the church and that much more will have to be secured before the dedication. Much interest has been manifested in our work here, by the brethren and sisters in all parts of our Zion. We are under deep obligations to the brotherhood for the many substantial evidences of interest. Perhaps there are others who would like to have a part in this good work. If so you may make your contribution or subscription now and it will be announced on the day of dedication and counted as a part of that day's contributions. Distance and other circumstances are such that you cannot all attend, but you can have a part in the work of the day. We need your help. Our little band has struggled nobly and faithfully to make the work a success and the Lord has blessed our efforts. Let me repeat a few facts which I gave in last week's letter: Winchester Christian church was organized October the 15th, 1911, with 17 charter members. The present membership is 52. The Sunday school enrollment is over 200 with an average attendance this year of over 100. More than 100 families are represented in the various organizations of the church.

The Virginia Valley Central Conference is the connecting link between the Christian Church in the South and in the North and West. The Winchester church, located in a city of 8,000 inhabitants, is the only city church in the conference. The whole denomination should be interested in these links that tie the different sections of our work together. We want the following for the dedication:

1. Cash contributions.
2. Subscriptions to be paid by October 15th.
3. Subscriptions to run five years with annual payments due October 15th of each year.

We shall appreciate anything that you may do for us, whether the amount is large or small. We want you to have a part. Send all contributions and subscriptions so they will reach me not later than the 16th of August.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY WORK IN THE EASTERN VIRGINIA CONFERENCE.

Again, as last year, through the kindness of the program committee, the Woman's Missionary Board of the Eastern Virginia Conference, were given a place on the program of the Sunday School Convention for a Missionary Conference. This was conducted in the Christian church while the men held a similar meeting in the Baptist church at the same hour. Dr. I. W. Johnson gave an address on "Our Neglected Opportunity," in which he showed that the work must be supported and upheld by the prayers of the church. Miss Margaret Brickhouse gave an interesting account of the Santa Isabel work, reading greetings from the pastor, Juan Rowero, and several of the members. This field is the special of the young people. Mrs. W. H. Dick read a report of the work done by the societies for the three quarters of the present Conference year. Mrs. Denison gave an instructive talk on "Our Sunday School Work in Japan," reading extracts from letters from some of our Missionaries.

At the close of the Conference, the Woman's Board had a hurried meeting and attended to some important business, appointing Miss Mamie Holland Superintendent of Young People's Work of the Conference, and Mrs. J. W. Harrell Superintendent of Literature and Mite Boxes. Both of these women are greatly interested in the work and we can look for something doing along their lines of work.

FROM THE FIELD.

Our protracted services at Union closed August 31st. Rev. A. B. Kendall did all the preaching and did it with power. The congregation was good all the way through, notwithstanding the weather was very warm. Much interest was manifested from the beginning. The church was greatly revived and twelve accessions to the church. Our hearts rejoice in the great work done. Bro. Kendall and his wife won their way into the hearts of our people by their earnest work in the meeting. We expect to protract at Long's Chapel from the first Sunday in August and at Bethlehem from the third Sunday in August.

J. W. HOLT.

High ideals are to be used as guiding stars, not as stumbling blocks in our pathway. That is what a man always does when he knows so well what ought to be done that he is not willing to attempt anything. Every man owes it to God, and to all other men to use his little knowledge as truly as a genius is bound to use his genius.

Figures are published showing the gains in Young Men's Christian Association work in North America during the past decade. During the period the number of Associations has increased from 1,575 to 2,195; membership from 323,224 to 556,101; buildings from 414 to 756; value of property from $28,500,000 to $81,000,000; students in Bible classes from 31,385 to 103,600. The Y. M. C. A. of North America is now carrying on work in eighteen foreign countries, employing 127 foreign secretaries.—Biblical Recorder.

When certain States of Christian (?) America are banishing the Bible from the public schools, it is interesting to learn that the government of Egypt, through its Minister of Education, recently ordered 460 Bibles, 400 New Testaments, twenty reference Bibles, and twenty copies of the Concordance for their schools. It is stated that this is the first time the Bible has been introduced into the government schools of Egypt.—Biblical Recorder.

GEMS FROM THE POETS.

"Isn't it wonderful when you think
How the creeping grasses grow,
High on the mountain's rocky brink,
In the valleys down below?
A common thing is a grass blade small,
Crushed by the feet that pass;
But all the dwarfs and giants tall,
Working till doomsday shadows fall,
Can't make a blade of grass."

Gleaners of Christ, in your lonely toil,
When weary, and fain to yield,
Take comfort here, though the work is great,
"Ye toil in your Father's field."

And the Father's house lies over the hill,
Where the sun of life goes down;
There shall be rest, and the Father's smile
Forever your work shall crown.

CHURCH NEWS.

The three leading thoughts emphasized were: (1) Faith in God; (2) Loving God whom we have not seen; (3) The End of Faith in God.

God has, for the centuries, been demonstrating and manifesting Himself to the world through (a) nature, (b) the endowment of man and (c) the church of Christ.

The most powerful forces with which we have to do are the unseen. Faith passes through the valley of the shadow of death, then lost in sight; hope ends in fruition in heaven, and love continues through eternity. Powerful factors, these, and yet each invisible.

The address, "The Kingdom and the Child," by Rev. J. W. Bailey (Baptist), of Raleigh, was worth while. In his preliminary remarks he alluded to the large number of young men present and the finely gowned ladies, of the splendid audience of the day.

The child, said he, God has hedged about as He has none else. To harm the child, means to overpower the parents, to break up the home, to arouse the community and move the heart of God. The hope of the Kingdom is the child. Christ plead for them to come to Him, for He knew there was very little hope for the man who has spent his days in sin, and followed the ways of the world.

The last speaker, Bro. R. N. Simms (Baptist), of Raleigh, spoke to the C. E., Baraca and Philathea movements. He said the idea running through these societies is "A Plan." He was much impressed in his preparation for the day, by studying the Christian Endeavor plan for work.

The Christian Endeavor Society presented a Bible to their teacher, Mr. Nat Stephenson and the Philathea to their's, Mrs. Geo. M. McCullers. Hon. R. N. Simms presented these Bibles.

Brother Geo. M. McCullers is the man who planned the work of the day. He secured the speakers and looked after the music.

Mrs. Numa Turner presided at the organ. I never heard better music. It was such as appealed to the soul, and therefore did good. Brother McCullers had some invited friends who were fine singers and aided much in the music of the day.

May the richest of blessings attend all these good people.

My protracted meeting at Wentworth includes the second Sunday in August, with Rev. P. H. Flemming, D. D., aiding.

AUSTIN CRAIG ON WATER BAPTISM.

From "Life and Letters of Austin Craig," page 126.

"I do not occupy much of my time in preaching about baptism; nor do I wish to write about it. God sent me not to baptize, but to preach the Gospel. I tell people to study the Scriptures prayerfully, and when they become convinced that it is their duty to become immersed in the name of Jesus, to submit readily and heartily. For my own part, I wish to leave the word of the beginning to Christ and go on unto perfection, not laying again the foundation of repentance from dead works, and to faith toward God, of the doctrine of baptism and of the laying on of hands, etc., etc. I think Christian peoples have been throwing water at each other on the shores of Jordan quite long enough. Let us now go up, and possess the spiritual Canaan. There are things more important, certainly, than the mode of baptism.

"THE LORD SHALL HAVE THEM IN DERISION."

An occurrence of this week in Tacoma ought to interest Christian people everywhere, for it is an almost startling instance of what, in the mid-Victorian age, would have been called an act of Providence. Tacoma has an annual festival, of six days' duration. This year the festa committee scheduled auto races for Sabbath. The Ministerial Alliance and the churches protested. The festa committee told them to raise $12,500 for them and they would postpone to Monday. Some ministers raised a third of that and it was scorned, the committee refusing them a second audience. The Ledger hooted in big headlines at "the church crowd" for trying to deprive the people of their amusements. Rev. Robert Lamont Hay, pastor of the First Tacoma, preached to a full house on keeping the Sabbath day holy, and made a ringing denunciation of the committee's insult to the churches, and their lack of what Lincoln called "a becoming deference to the best sentiment of a Christian people, and a due regard for the Divine will." Union meetings were held at the hour set for the races. Now observe: The rains descended on Sabbath morning. The races were postponed from 2:00 until 4:30, but the tracks were so slippery that it was re-postponed to Monday. Many demands from out-of-town ticket-holders were made for the return of their money. It was a fiasco, a bitter disappointment and a loss. Is it old-fashioned to see God's handwriting in this? The church people were sad, they were almost submerged by the powers of evil; they did all they could to prevent the desecration, then God took it into His own hands. Blessed be His holy name.—United Presbyterian.

A soldier crossing the barrack square with a pail met a sergeant, who noticed that Pat was wearing a very disreputable pair of trousers. Intending to report him for unsoldierly appearance, he stopped him and asked:

"Where are you going?"

"To get some water, sor," answered Pat.

"What, in those trousers?"

"No, sor, in the pail."—Ex.

A CROW STORY.

People who don't know the crow may find difficulty in believing the following anecdote, though Anglo-Indians will accept it without hesitation.

A dog of my acquaintance, a fox terrier of long Eastern experience, was one morning eating a chicken bone on the veranda, when two crows happened to pass, and, observing the dog and his bone, wheeled down and lit on the veranda railing, when they set to work croaking to induce him to drop his breakfast. Under ordinary circumstances an English dog will fly at a crow the minute he appears; but on this occasion Jack simply looked up, growled, and continued gnawing. The crows ceased croaking and consulted together for a moment, then one of the pair dropped onto the veranda a few yards behind the dog and croaked at him again, once more obtaining no answer but a growl. After strolling casually round the veranda for a minute, to let Jack settle down, the bird hopped up silently and swiftly and gave the dog's tail a cruel nip. That was too much. With a howl of pain Jack turned upon his tormentor, and crow No. 2, who had been patiently waiting this opportunity, swooped down upon the bone and carried it off.

You never saw a dog wear a look of such abject humiliation as Jack wore when he recognized how he had been fooled.—Illustrated Weekly.

KIPLING'S QUEER CONDUCT.

At a tea the other day, a woman heard the following remark made about her favorite author. She turned to listen, amazed by the eccentricities of conduct narrated.

"Yes you know," the hostess was saying; "Kipling came in and behaved so strangely! At luncheon he suddenly sprang up and wouldn't let the waitress come near the table. Every time that she tried to come near he would jump at her.

"He made a dive for the cake which was on the lower shelf of the sideboard, and took it into the parlor to eat it. He got the crumbs all over the sofa and the beautiful rug.

"When he had finished his cake he simply sat and glared at us."

The visitor finally could not control herself, and asked: "Excuse me, but are you speaking of Mr. Rudyard Kipling?"

"Mr. Rudyard Kipling?" echoed the hostess. "Oh, no; Kipling is our dog!"—New York Sun.

ELIZABETH KNEW.

Uncle Jack, who was visiting them for the Christmas holidays from the West, says the Christian World, wished to talk to Elizabeth's father at his office. He could not find the telephone directory and thus appealed to 3-year old Elizabeth for information regarding the telephone number:

"Elizabeth, what does mother ask for when she talks to daddy at his office?"

Elizabeth was wise for her days. "Money," she lisped.

Moral courage is nothing in the world but just the capacity for doing what we know we ought to do. Give that to every man, and only think with what a stir of eager and vivacious interest this dull world in which we are living would wake and start.—Phillips Brooks.

Children's Missionary Stories

STORIES are—yes, must be—used by every wide-awake worker among, or leader or teacher of, children.

MISSIONARY STORIES seem to have been the one field well-nigh overlooked until Mrs. Alice Moreton Burnett, Corresponding Secretary for the Woman's Board for Home Missions of the Christian Church, made a compilation of thirty interesting, instructive stories pertaining especially and directly to missions that are sure to be appreciated by workers, teachers, leaders, pastors, fathers, mothers—and the children.

Some of the Important Events of both Home Missions and Foreign Missions are also included, together with Suggestions For Junior Leaders.

They make a book 5 x 7 inches in size, 128 pages, red cloth binding—a handsome, attractive volume. Price 35c per copy postpaid.

NEWPORT NEWS LETTER.

We have recently received two members into our church, husband and wife, on confession of faith, and baptized four by immersion. Our services have been holding up well for these hot Summer days. Last Sunday night we had 120 at our preaching service, and at the prayer meetings last night, the hottest of the season, we had 37 present.

The church voted to give the pastor a vacation, to attend the Christian Workers' Conference, Northfield, Mass. The pastor is now on his way to said Conference, and in the contemplation of a pleasant and profitable trip.

We are hoping to be able to take up the work with renewed energy, on our return, and to share with our people something of the benefits derived from the Conference.

Sincerely, W. D. HARWARD.

To be hindered in the work and yet not be impatient with God's way or doubtful that the work is going on—that was the exile's problem on the little dry island of Patmos. And it has been the problem of many a man who was tempted to think himself forsaken ever since.—Hilton Jones.

It was my privilege to be with the good people of Monticello church last Sunday, their pastor, Rev. J. V. Knight, being away on vacation.

We are having fine showers of rain and the prospects for a good crop are encouraging. Our vegetables are fine except tomatoes and cucumbers. The tomatoes, with which we had expected to fill so many of our empty cans, are decaying before they ripen. That is a very keen disappointment, for it is a very useful article with us. The cucumber vines are dying; so we can't have many pickles.

We are favored with a very fine box, by the Missionary society and Young Ladies' Classes of the Third Church, Norfolk. It contained 17 sheets, 1 pair pillow cases, 55½ yards sheeting and quite a lot of clothing. We call that doing things right. Thank you very much. We have not had a box in a long time that did us so much good as this one. The Lord will always direct you in the right way. Don't you feel that He would have you do something of this kind? As some of our beds are narrow, we can use sheets about sixty-four inches wide.

Another bundle, by parcels post from Mrs. W. W. Staley, comes in as I make out this report. This package contains 18 yards gingham, 2 dozen buttons, 2 spools thread and 1 dozen handkerchiefs.

Thank you.

Mary Webster and Iola Jacobs have returned from their vacation trips and report a good time. All the children are anxious to hear the news of those who come home from their vacation.

Rev. W. F. Wells, of Columbus, Ga., paid us a very pleasant visit this week.

I am receiving quite a number of requests for Mite Boxes and trust those who get them may find it a real pleasure to use them, and that they may be encouraged by the older people in the work.

E. M. CARTER, Supt.

Holland Va., July 22, 1913.

Dear Uncle Emory:

I send ten cents. Please send me a Mite Box and I will try to save some pennies in it for the Orphanage.

We have some little chickens growing for our Christmas money for the Orphanage. We had a hard rain last Saturday night and some of our chickens were drowned, but mama is going to give us some more.

Best wishes to the boys and girls.

HARVEY L. VINCENT.

I am very glad to enroll your name; and, to send the Mite Box. And you have some chickens—Orphanage chickens. That is fine! I hope you will have good luck with them.

Holland Va., July 22, 1913.

Dear Uncle Emory:

I send ten cents. Please send me a Mite Box. We have had a pleasant vacation; but isn't it flying away fast? Last week mama took us to Ocean View and we had a fine time. We were sorry when it got time to go home. We are going to lose our preacher and we are sorry. You know Dr. Newman is going to Defiance, Ohio, so he won't preach for us but one more time.

ELIZABETH VISCENT.

Yes, time flies when we are out of school, but I hope you will be ready for school and do good work. I know Bro. Newman; am sorry he is going to leave the South. Hope you will have good luck with the Mite Box.

A GENTLEMAN'S AGREEMENT.

A well-known Kansas banker told a story the other day about the statute of limitations. There is a smile in it, plus some good philosophy.

One day an old Southerner walked into this banker's office. The Southerner was a typical gentleman of the old school—suave, courteous to the point of punctiliousness, and honorable to a degree of martyrdom.

"What can I do for you?" asked the banker.

"Well," replied the Southerner, "about thirty-five years ago I loaned a man down South some money—not a very big sum. I told him that whenever I should need it I would let him know, and he could pay me the money. I need some money now, so I shall let him know and I would like to have you transact the business for me."

"My good friend," replied the banker, "you have no claim on that money. You can't hold that man to that loan. You say it has been thirty-five years since you loaned it to him. The statute of limitations has run against that loan years and years ago."

"Sir," replied the Southerner, "the man to whom I loaned that money is a gentleman. That statute of limitations never runs against a gentleman."

So the banker sent for the money. And within a reasonable time thereafter the money came. There was a courtly gentleman at the other end of the transaction also.—Kansas City Journal.

Moral courage is nothing in the world but just the capacity for doing what we know we ought to do. Give that to every man, and only think with what a stir of eager and vivacious interest this dull world in which we are living would wake and start.—Phillips Brooks.

The best perfection of a religious man is to do common things in a perfect manner. A constant fidelity in small things is a great and heroic virtue.—S. Bonaventura.

MILITARY-TRAINED BOYS.

Military training and discipline, as practiced by many of the leading schools and colleges of the United States, is, without doubt, of inestimable benefit to boys. Such training inculcates habits of punctuality, order, obedience and self-control. It develops manly traits where these qualities are originally lacking. It develops a higher appreciation of manhood and honor. It gives the boy an erect carriage, with shoulders held back, chest expanded and is productive of general good health.

There are many excellent Military Schools scattered over the country, but it is doubtful whether one could find anywhere, a more popular, more thorough, or more attractively located school than Horner Military School at Oxford, N. C. Since 1851, sixty-two years ago, this school has acceptably served the best families of the South, in giving their sons the very best in the way of education.

The school is really a loveable home. It has a strong graduate faculty of Christian men, giving constant and individual attention to the student, and associating intimately with him. The military discipline is firm yet affectionate, and mutual love always exists between the teacher and cadet. Bible holds an important position in the course of study, and the student is taught the Word of God from beginning to end.

Mr. H. G. Merry, from the far off town of Electric, Montana, writes:—"It affords me pleasure to be favored with an opportunity to express my high opinion of your school, for I believe it ranks as one of the best for mental, moral and physical training for boys. Our two boys have made very satisfactory progress during the three years they have been in your charge, and we have two younger sons whom we hope to enter Horner Military School as soon as they are old enough."

A handsomely illustrated catalogue, showing views and giving full particulars of Horner's advantages will be sent free to anyone writing Prof. J. C. Horner, B. A., M. A., Oxford, N. C.

A SERMON THAT WAS A LIFE LINE.

One Sunday evening, in his own church, Dr. Hall was delivering a written sermon on temptation, and suddenly felt that his address was unlike his usual style, and too argumentative for many of the people. He suddenly paused, looked away from his manuscript, and, appealing with a loud voice to the more distant of his audience, said: "Perhaps among those pressing in at the door there may be some one so miserable as to think of throwing himself over yonder bridge, saying, perhaps, 'It's too late to tell me not to enter into temptation. I have done it; I am in it. There's no hope for me.' Stop! Stop! There is hope. Christ died for thee. He will pardon, He will save, even thee!" A few weeks afterward one of the members of his church told him that he had called to see a woman who had made up her mind to throw herself over Blackfriars Bridge, one Sunday evening, but she thought it was too light and a policeman might stop her; so in order to wait for the darkness she went into the church and stood in the crowd inside the door. Standing there it seemed to her that Dr. Hall had called to her directly to stop, and come to Christ, and she went back to her home to pray, and became a true and happy Christian.—Louis Albert Banks.

THE "CONSCIENCE FUND" WHICH HAS BEEN POURING IN.

The "Conscience Fund" which has been pouring into Uncle Sam's pocket for nearly a hundred years shows a decrease this year. It amounts to a little more than $2,800, which is the lowest aggregate for any year since 1901. The total amount received by the government as conscience contributions through a century is upward of $434,000. The fund is said to have been established during President Madison's administration when the initial contribution of five dollars was received. The largest sum reaching Washington in one year was nearly $36,000, in 1902. The greatest individual contribution was something over $18,000, which was made to the collector of customs in New York over ten years ago by an unknown person. The decline in the conscience fund may indicate either of two things: that the consciences of men who rob the government are less sharp than formerly, or that fewer persons are guilty of stealing from Uncle Sam than was once the case.—N. Y. Advocate.

ALEXANDER H. STEPHENS AS A LAWYER.

In his own profession of the law, Alexander H. Stephens' fine intellectual sincerity stands out fully, and well proves that success requires neither dishonesty nor shuffling. "What business do you follow, Alex?" said his uncle to him in the early days. "I am a lawyer." After an ominous silence the uncle spoke again. "Alex, don't you have to tell lies?" Alex did not have to tell lies. Hear what he says, reviewing his career in old age: "No advocate should ever assert as matter of fact in his client's case what he knows is not such; any code of morals justifying him in this does not deserve the name." And again, more personally, "My rule from the time I was admitted to the bar was: first, to investigate a case submitted to me, to inquire into the facts and the law applicable to it; then, if I did not believe the party entitled to success before the court, I told him so, and declined to appear."—Gamaliel Bradford, Jr., in The Atlantic.

"Keep your fears to yourself, but share your courage with others."

Courage isn't lack of fear; it is standing your ground in spite of fear.—Henry Churchill King.

TINY'S ALARM CLOCK.

Tiny looked up from her slate as her big brother Kent came in one day with an odd-shaped paper bundle in his hands. Tiny ran to meet him.

"O Kent! what is it?" she asked, curiously. "Anything for me?"

"No," said Kent. "Such a wide awake as you are doesn't need aids to early rising," and he untied the strings and opened the package.

"Why, it's a clock!" said Tiny, disappointed. "We've got three clocks now, Kent. What made you bring another?"

Kent began winding the clock. "You just listen," he said.

Whir-r-r! Rattle, rattle, rattle! Whir-r-r! What a way for a clock to strike!

"It's an alarm-clock," explained Kent, smiling at Tiny's wonder. "We can set it so that the alarm will strike at any time of night and wake us. You know I have to leave home before daylight sometimes"—for Kent was a railroad engineer.

"How very funny!" said Tiny, with sparkling eyes. "Goes off all itself, without any one touching it! Oh I wish I had one!"

"There is another funny thing about it," went on Kent. "If people don't mind the alarm when it strikes, but think they will sleep a little longer, they grow less liable to be waked by it, and soon it doesn't make any impression at all."

Tiny considered. "I wish I could have one all my own," she said again. "It must be such fun to hear it go off."

"You have one," said Kent, gravely.

"I? An alarm-clock?"

Kent nodded.

"Where?"

"Right in there," said Kent, with his hand over Tiny's heart.

"Well, I don't believe it ever went off," laughed Tiny.

"Yes, I'm sure it has. Wait till you feel like doing something wrong. That little clock will say: 'Whir! Tiny, don't.' You see if it doesn't."

Tiny laughed and went back to her examples. Soon a call came from the kitchen: "Tiny, dear, I want you."

Tiny's mouth began to pout, but she suddenly called out, cheerily, "Yes, mamma," and danced out of the room, looking back to say: "It went off then, Kent, good and loud."

Kent nodded and smiled. "I thought it would," he said.

And all of you little folks with alarm-clocks must be sure to answer the first call, or they will ring in vain, and you will turn out to be good-for-nothing men and women.—Selected.

Oak Ridge Institute

OAK RIDGE, N.C.

A High-Grade Fitting School For Boys of Character

Dedicated to the Earnest Cultivation in its Pupils of Good Health, Sound Learning and Sincere Manliness.

Whether viewed from the standpoint of health, accessibility, beauty, moral and social surroundings or freedom from evil influences, the location of Oak Ridge Institute is IDEAL. In the Piedmont hills of Guilford county, 1000 feet above sea level, in view of the beautiful Blue Ridge.

It is in "God's country," away from the distractions and temptations of town or city life, while on the other hand, the quietness, high moral tone and wholesome atmosphere of Oak Ridge, combine every incentive to perfect physical, mental and moral development.

The thoroughness and completeness of the School's work needs but little telling; the success of its graduates is its best recommendation. The classical and preparatory courses are arranged to provide every essential for entering college or university life, while the Commercial School has been the leading training school for the business men of North Carolina, Virginia and South Carolina for the last thirty-six years, and has given the business world thousands of young men highly fitted for book-keepers, stenographers, bank clerks and other position of responsibility. Special advantages in music are also offered.

Our faculty is composed of experienced college-bred men, neither too young nor too old to meet the American boy upon a happy footing of mutual helpfulness.

Athletics is a feature. We have 150 acres of campus; trees, grass, gravel, athletic grounds, race track and tennis courts.

Abundance of sunshine, shade and pure, fresh air. Oak Ridge Institute has held the school baseball championship in North Carolina for 30 years practically undisputed. Our buildings are second to none in the state. Two handsome, well arranged study buildings, and three commodious, perfectly ventilated dormitories.

Students may enter at any time. Rate only $250 per session. For illustrated catalog and other literature, address

PROFANITY IN MAGAZINES.

Most of us have noticed the frequent occurrence, in recent years, of profanity in publications supposedly high class and which would therefore be expected to be free from such seriously objectionable matter, and the practice is apparently rapidly increasing.

Is it not high time that a halt was called on this practice, so degrading to all, and especially to youthful readers? If the matter was taken up by ministers' associations, Y. M. C. A.'s, Christian Endeavorers, and other young people's societies, and also men's church organizations, etc., it would not take long to lead publishers to realize that it would be to their interest to leave offensive language out of their publications.

The only excuse that I have ever heard given for its insertion is that it is "realistic." This is lamentably true, but far from sufficient reason for its use. There are many expressions which, if printed would give an article a "realistic" tone, but which would not be tolerated for a moment even by these regardless publishers.

Why should they make an exception of profanity? And why will their readers tolerate it?

If those who do not approve of such language will drop a line to the publishers of any periodical or other publication in which it appears, asking that such language be discontinued, it will probably have a great influence in checking the repulsive evil; and if such mild measures fail to accomplish this result, a few names withdrawn from the subscription lists of such periodicals would be pretty certain to lead even unprincipled publishers to realize that it is more important to make their productions fit to read than it is to make them disgustingly "realistic."—The Continent.

BOUGHT TO KNOW ONE.

A man evidently from the rural districts, stepped up to the ticket seller in the 42nd street subway station and asked:

"Been in town long?"

"Quite a while," replied the ticket seller.

"Know a man named O'Connell?"

"Say," said the ticket seller, impatiently, "there are 5,000,000 people in this city. Do you expect me to know everybody here?"

"No," replied the ruralist, "but I thought you might have seen enough to know one."—New York Telegraph.

A young woman entered a sporting-goods store one morning, and the polite clerk went forward to meet her.

"I want," she said, "to see some golf clubs."

"Certainly," replied the clerk. "About how many do you want?"

"Well, really," she responded slowly, "I scarcely know. You see, I am just learning to play golf, and I do not know much about it as yet. Why, I don't even know which end of the cadie to use."—Lippincott's.

Elon College

For Both Men and Women

Elon College, North Carolina

For a quarter century Elon College has rendered the best families of the South a paragon service in providing young men and young women with the best mental, moral and physical training under positive Christian influences, tho entirely free from sectarianism.

Karl Lehman, of Boston, testifies that "of all the Colleges I have visited as International Field Secretary of Christian Endeavor during six years, the spirit of Elon College appeals to me as most genuinely Christian." Elon College is situated in the delightful hill country, a section unsurpassed for beauty, with a climate far-famed for its healthfulness. There is no medical fee, for there is no necessity for it. Its campus, comprising twenty-five acres of native oak and hickory, shrubbery, winding walks and driveways, is one of the most beautiful in the South and, with its two unsurpassed gymnasias, provides abundant opportunity for recreation and relaxation.

The splendid equipment of Elon College was only made possible through liberal endowment. It maintains seven elegant new buildings, especially designed and appointed for college work. These are furnished with every known convenience; steam heat, electric lights, running water, baths and sewerage. The College plant is conservatively valued at $300,000.00.

Elon College is distinctly a high-grade institution, though its charges are moderate. Its graduates are admitted to the graduate departments of all the great universities without examination. Its literary and scientific courses are arranged in various departments which lead to the degrees of Master of Arts, Bachelor of Arts, Bachelor of Science, Bachelor of Philosophy, Bachelor of Pedagogy, and a three-years' course leading to the degree of Licentiate of Instruction, designed especially for teachers. This institution affords special opportunities for training in Piano, Voice, Expression, Fine Arts, Normal Training, Physical Culture and Commercial Practice.

The Faculty consists of twenty-one specialists; men and women selected not only for their superior teaching ability, but also for their exemplary character and manners.

The student body numbers nearly four hundred and comes from thirteen states.

The lowest Rates in the South, only $131 to $191 per College session of ten months. Fall Term always opens the first Wednesday in September. For full descriptive catalogue and view-book, address

MARRIAGES

On Sunday, July 27, 1913, Mr. Frank H. Turner and Miss Leavener V. Laine, and Mr. Ernest L. Morris and Miss Annie D. Laine were united in marriage at Barrett's church in Southampton County, Va. May their lives be long, happy and useful and very rich blessings attend them in their journey through life.

DEATHS

Kernodle.

Near Altamahaw, N. C., July 25th, 1913, in the 54th year of her age, Mrs. Georgia Ann Kernodle, wife of Andrew B. Kernodle. She leaves a husband, eleven children and one sister. She had been a member of Union Christian church since early life. Her funeral and burial took place at Bethlehem, conducted by the writer. Truly a good woman has been called up higher. May God comfort the bereaved family.

J. W. HOLT.

Kernodle.

James Monroe, son of R. A. C. and Mary A. Kernodle, died August 2, 1913, aged 23 years. For more than twelve years he had been greatly afflicted and doubtless suffered much which he bore with great fortitude.

About four years ago he confessed Christ and lived in hope of life eternal. The funeral services were conducted from the home and the interment was in the cemetery at Elon College. May the healer of broken hearts comfort the bereaved.

P. H. FLEMING.

THANKS!

For the many kindnesses shown us in the sickness and recent death of my dear husband I am exceedingly grateful and take this means of giving public expression to the same. It would have been impossible to bear the burden this great affliction brought but for the tender sympathy and generous helpfulness of the good people of Elon College. And these evidences of Christian, sympathetic fellowship in my sad affliction and bereavement will ever be cherished as oases in life's memory. Mr. Herndon's parents also join me in these expressions of deep gratitude.

MRS. CARL H. HERNDON.

McPherson.

Dr. John W. McPherson was born March the 12th, 1870, and passed into the silence of death, July 23, 1913, aged 43 years, 4 months and 16 days.

He graduated from the Baltimore Medical College in 1889 and was a successful physician with a large and growing practice. In early life he united with Pleasant Hill Christian Church, but later transferred his membership to the Haw River Church. The funeral services were conducted from the parental home and the interment in Pleasant Hill Cemetery. The attendance was large and the floral tributes were beautiful. His many friends mourn his death and sympathize deeply with the bereaved.
